To the fact that a want of tone in the system is the herald of approaching disease, hosts of invalids have adopted that certain means of self-rescue from impending danger, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. This benignant tonic promotes, in no ordinary degree, digestion and assimilation, through which the blood is fertilized and made strength-yielding. Besides this, inactivity of the liver, bowels and kidneys, which impede a gain of vigor, is overcome. Appetite, as well as the ability to gratify it without discomfort, is stimulated by this thorough medicinal cordial, which also has a tranquilizing effect upon nerves weak and unquiet. Food, it should be remembered, only half invigorates the dyspeptic. By the use of the Bitters its nourishing properties are made available. For malaria, rheumatism and the infirmities of age, use the Bitters.

An Arch of Gold Coin.

A novelty in the way of triumphal arches was seen when the Governor-General of India visited Rangoon not long back. One structure, very handsomely decorated to begin with, was still further enriched by being covered with gold mohurs and real sovereigns—valuable coins in India—worth over $50,000, each mohur being equal to fifteen rupees. The coins were stuck to the red cloth with a glue that had been specially prepared for the purpose, and was no doubt sufficiently strong to keep the gold pieces quite safe from all attemps to steal them.

ONE good way of laying up for a rainy day would be to cultivate in your prosperity the kind of people who are friends in adversity.

Valuable Data.

Two Americans (says an exchange,) who were dining at tables in front of a cafe in Paris, near the Seine, noticed high up on the front wall of a building a red mark, and underneath it this inscription: "Inundation of 1875. High-water mark." "Come! Come!" said one of the Americans to the restaurant-keeper: "you don't expect us to believe that the river ever rose as high as that!" "Oh, no," said the proprietor, blandly: "it only came up to here." He made a sort of scratch wich his thumb-nail down near the ground. "But, you see, when the mark was down there, the children rubbed it out so continually that we had to put it up there out of their reach."

CONFIDENCES.

Yes, Jennie, I have noticed it.
I would not speak of it at all
Were it not for the fact
That I know a remedy.

I had the same experience.
Every now and then,
And always at a time
Most inopportune,
One of those little pimple-like blotches
Would appear on my face
And annoy me
Beyond expression.

I haven't had one for six months now.
I have a talisman
That protects me.
I get it at the drug store.

You have seen the advertisement—
I am pretty sure.

THAT'S QUEER!

You say a collar and cuff that are waterproof?

Yes.

And perspiration will not affect them?

Yes.

And when dirty you need only wipe them off with a wet cloth or sponge?

Yes.

Wonderful! How are they made?

A linen collar covered on both sides with waterproof "CELLULOID." Looks exactly like a linen collar.

Is it the only waterproof collar and cuff made?

No, but it is the only one made with the linen interlining and consequently the only one that can give entire satisfaction, because it is the best.

How can I know that I get the right kind?

Because every piece is stamped as follows:

TRADE CELLULOID MARK.

Inquire for that and refuse anything else, or you will be disappointed.

Suppose my dealer does not have them?

He probably has, but if not, send direct to us, enclosing amount. Collars 25c., Cuffs 50c. State size, and whether collar wanted is stand-up or turned-down.

A RETIRED BUSINESS WOMAN.

A Page From Her History.

The important experiences of others are interesting. The following is no exception: "I had been troubled with heart disease 25 years, much of that time very seriously. For five years I was treated by one physician continuously. I was in business, but obliged to retire on account of my health. A physician told my friends that I could not live a month. My feet and limbs were badly swollen, and I was indeed in a serious condition when a gentleman directed my attention to Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and said that his sister, who had been afflicted with heart disease, had been cured by the remedy, and was again a strong, healthy woman. I purchased a bottle of the Heart Cure, and in less than an hour after taking the first dose I could feel a decided improvement in the circulation of my blood. When I had taken three doses I could move my ankles, something I had not done for months, and my limbs had been swollen so long that they seemed almost putrified. Before I had taken one bottle of the New Heart Cure the swelling had all gone down, and I was so much better that I did my own work. On my recommendation six others are taking this valuable remedy."—Mrs. Morgan, 569 W. Harrison St., Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, a discovery of an eminent specialist in heart disease, is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is positively free from all opiates or dangerous drugs.

Good For Burns.

A little boy of Mrs McDonald's, living near here, fell against a red hot stove and was fearfully burned. The pain was terrible, and it was thought the burn was so severe as to scar the child for life. I sold the lady a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which, after greasing the sore, she applied. It soon removed all the fire and eased the pain, and in ten days the boy was well, no trace of the scar remaining. J. D. McLaren, Keysport, Clinton county, Ill. For sale by Robbins & McCord. 39

A Good Thing to Keep at Hand.

From the Troy "Kansas" Chief.

Some years ago we were very much subject to severe spells of cholera morbus; and now when we feel any of the symtoms that usually precede that ailment, such as sickness at the stomach, diarrhœa, etc., we become scary. We have found Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy the very thing to straighten one out in such cases, and always keep it about. We are not writing this for a pay testimonial, but to let our readers know what is a good thing to keep handy in the house For sale by Robbins & McCord. 39

GOVERNOR MATTHEWS' SPEECH.

Democratic Merit Pointed Out and Republican Hypocrisy Exposed.

When the convention had been called to order and the routine completed, State Chairman Thomas Taggart called out Governor Matthews as the permanent chairman. He was greeted with a whirlwind of enthusiastic applause as he came to the front of the stage, and this continued several minutes before the governor could proceed with the following address:

Once again a great party assembles in convention to deliberate upon those questions that concern the welfare of a people, the good of government, and make appeal to the public for a renewal of its support and confidence. It is gratifying to see so many gathered together from all the walks of life, and your enthusiasm gives hopeful sign of coming success. Surely the gloomy forebodings and presages of defeat heralded in the opposition papers has had but little effect. We are met under peculiar conditions, still fighting the battle of the people to relieve them from the burdens of tax and a system of taxation created one generation ago through the necessities of war—burdens then placed under the promise that so soon as peace was restored relief should be given. A party for over 30 years carrying on that policy which was enriching the few at the expense of the many—heaping up fabulous wealth in the hands of one class and sapping the strength and resources of all others to maintain it—begetting extravagances that invaded the administration of government until it was impoverishing the millions to pay tribute to the privileged few. The people at last revolted, and for the first time since 1857 placed all departments of the government in the hands of the Democratic party to free them from these evils and reform the injustice of the past. We came into possession of the government, but with a depleted and empty treasury, made so by the recklessness and profligacy of Republican administration. Not alone was this our inheritance, but crippled and embarrassed through the entailure of extravagant appropriations, reaching beyond the close of Republican control of public affairs and forcing upon their successors the passage of deficiency bills and issuance of bonds to maintain the credit and the honor of the government. These strained and unnatural conditions, resulting from their ruinous policy, deceptive teachings and juggling with the financial and public debt statements of the country, introduced by Mr. Harrison's secretary of the treasury, could not but sooner or later seriously affect the prosperity of the people. Deceptive and corrupt policies and reckless extravagance in the administration of government through public officials seriously affect the morals and integrity of a people, and encourage like conditions in the management of private business affairs of the citizen.

The results have been witnessed in the widespread financial and commercial depression that swept over our country. Great national banks have toppled and fallen, burying too often in disgrace officials of those institutions in the ruins. Forced and unnatural prosperity of commercial and manufacturing enterprises could not meet the day of reckoning. And now we see a once great party seeking to escape public condemnation for their mischievous policy, and still deceive a long suffering people, by charging these results to the accession to power of the Democratic party. How, in the seeming satisfaction with which the Republican press recorded one commercial disaster after another, did history seem to repeat itself when we read that Nero fiddled while Rome was burning. In assuming control of the government no party ever encountered such stupendous difficulties as met the Democratic party, and no greater struggle to fulfill the promises and redeem the pledges it had made in its declaration of principles of 1892.

Pledges Being Redeemed.

One by one these pledges are being redeemed through the heroic efforts of our representatives in congress. The iniquitous and unjust federal election law has fallen beneath our sturdy blows, the promise to repeal the silver purchasing clause of the Sherman act has been fulfilled and the belief enacted into law that no special or privileged class of property shall escape its just share of the burden of tax, even though that be the hitherto hoarded and sacred greenback or national currency. The struggle must be brave and earnest, for the fiercest opposition is to be encountered all along the line. Siege has been laid to the stronghold of Republicanism—its protective tariff—and the day of a broad commercial freedom is surely dawning upon us. Step by step we fight our way, camping on every vantage ground, until we shall stand amid the purpling hights of victory won and success achieved. We will not be content to rest upon the mountain and look into the promised land, but will enter in to take full possession, and leave it as a blessed heritage to our children and they who may come after them. Every point gained is an advance not alone for today, but for the future of the country. There must be no backward step. The cry is "Forward!" We may not in the present measure and through the present congress secure all that may be desired, but it is just as sure as night shall follow day, all legislation that may give relief in the direction of true tariff reform is to remain upon the statutes, fixed and secure. It may be added to and advanced, but it will never more be taken from or moved backward, it matters not whether the Republican or the Democratic party may be in the ascendency. True tariff reform, a broad commercial freedom, a revenue taxation based upon economic expenditure, has come to set its seal upon all future legislation of the government.

No grander opportunity was ever presented to a political party than that placed within the reach of the Democratic party. We shall earnestly oppose and bravely meet an open, honest foe, who by inheritance and teachings may never have been with, of or for us. But those who, marching under the banners of Democracy, abandoning Democratic principles and forgetting the sacred cause of the people, would place obstacles in the way by localizing great national truths of government, let them beware the indignation of an aroused and outraged party. Where President Cleveland, a trusted leader, will be true to lead, we shall be brave enough to follow. The Democratic party has at times suffered defeat in the past, and may meet temporary defeats in the future, but it never surrenders. Surrender will only come when the cause of the people, to which it has ever been true; when representative government, which it has faithfully defended, and the great principles it has advocated shall have been eternally lost. The line marked out by President Cleveland in his message of 1887, his recent letter to Congressman Wilson, the platform in 1892, will be strictly adhered to and followed until a complete revision and reform in national taxation is attained. The masses of the Democratic party are honest and demand that their leaders shall be honest and faithful to trusts imposed upon them. They believe that party platforms and declarations of principles when in convention assembled are made with honest purpose and demand that public promises must be as faithfully observed as individual obligations.

Through storm and through sunshine the Democratic party has been the persistent friend, able advocate and brave defender of silver. I do not believe the day has come when we propose or can afford, in the interests of the people, to turn our backs upon this metal. It is an important product of the country, and from the days of our father down through all the wonderous and amazing growth of our country we have found it a useful, safe, valuable medium of circulation. It was a part of our money through the grandest periods of our prosperity, and its value unquestioned to 1873. In fulfillment of a promise made we repealed the purchasing clause of the Sherman act, hoping for a relief through this, which was not, I regret to say, realized, hampered and embarrassed as we were by Republican legislation. I believed then and believe now that in the repeal of this clause there should have been some measure adopted that would have relieved the doubt and the anxiety of the people as to the future standing of silver as a medium of value and exchange. There is reason to believe that a positive position taken by our government as to the coinage of silver, and a firm declaration that it shall continue to be the money of our people, upon an equal footing with gold or other money, would go far to establish its circulation throughout the commercial world. I have not that faith in international congresses or agreement that would cause me to patiently await such movements. They are too far in the future and too doubtful of coming. I believe the government of the United States, with its 70,000,000 of people, with its commercial enterprise and wonderful resources, is great enough and strong enough to take the lead and map out a way for the world to follow. At least, in the interest of the debtor classes of this country, constituting by far the larger part of our citizens, whose interests should surely be dearer to us than all the world besides, without further delay we should declare our faith in silver, restoring it to its old position prior to its cunning and outrageous dethronement by the Republican party in 1873, and proceed to the coinage of both gold and silver without discriminating against either, "adjusted by such safeguards of legislation as will insure the parity of the two metals."

Attitude Toward Labor.

There is another subject that demands the thoughtful consideration of the public at this time. The Democratic party is today, as it has ever been, the true and tried friend of American labor. Peculiarly a party of and for the people, it has been quick to respond in sympathy with the distress of labor from cruel and unjust imposition. It would shield it from the oppression of unjust law; protect it from the selfish greed of wealth and exacting corporate power; sacredly guard its good name from the ill-considered acts and lawless violence of false or so-called friends, and secure for it those measures that shall best meet worthy needs and honest demands.

Indiana's position is one of pride upon this question, for there is not a law upon our statutes, that has been of real practical benefit and relief to labor, but has been placed there by Democratic hands—protecting the miner, the mechanic, employes of railways, and all labor in their just right and privileges. We recognize that while no class of citizens require fuller protection under the law, there are none who are more directly interested in its enforcement and execution. We have watched with satisfaction the good results accomplished in labor organized, when its best, purest purposes are to be served, and its highest aims will be perfected when it shall realize that peaceful measures under the law must remedy wrongs rather than those of force, when peaceful intervention shall settle differences where resort to extremer methods invite, in the name of labor, a lawless element to commit acts of violence.

The recent disturbance through which we have passed, with its scenes of violence, destruction and bloodshed—conditions which if allowed to continue would have passed into rampant anarchy and ruin, destructive of all government and society, as organized for public good, in the sacred cause of labor more than any other—demanded immediate suppression. However earnest and sincere the effort to redress grievances, and however just the cause of honest labor, just so soon as other means, beyond those provided by law, are resorted to, does a vicious element seize upon it to give vent to their lawless passions and place honest workingmen, through their acts, in the attitude of lawbreakers. In the name of labor, is it not time to stop and ask ourselves the question, if we have not thrown our doors too wide open, received too indiscriminately the unworthy immigrants, and too hastily clothed them with the rights and privileges of citizenship? By far too many have been received of the pauper, criminal and anarchistic class, respecting neither the laws of God nor man; who remain ignorant of our language, laws and institutions; whose only idea of liberty is lawlessness and license, and, hostile to all government, recognizing none save that of force; who can never become assimilated or Americanized, and in their utter disregard of law and civilizing influences degrade the honest labor of the land. I believe the best interests of labor alone demand that this class of immigrants be excluded from our shores, and he who attempts to bring them into competition with the American workingmen here should be held guilty of a high criminal offense.

It was decreed by God and designed by our fathers that America should be the home of civil and religious liberty. This is the great underlying principle in the liberties of a people and of free representative government. It has been not the least of the missions of the Democratic party to zealously guard this sacred privilege in the past, and it shall continue in the future to raise its voice against the unholy and un-American prejudice that would stir up a feeling of hatred, bitterness and animosity toward one religious sect—a feeling that is wholly at war with fraternal charity, Christian sentiment and highest civilization. Such a sentiment can never find a resting place in the bosom of Democracy nor in the hearts of true American citizens. Before this can be, we first must blot out from the pages of our history the glories reflected upon our country by many of its Catholic citizens in the founding of the government, in peaceful legislation and on the fields of battle. We will have to forget that in Catholic Maryland religious tolerance was first proclaimed on the shores of the western continent; strike the name of Catholics from the list of signers to the Declaration of Independence and lose to memory the deeds of Lafayette, Steuben, DeKalb and others; we will have to obliterate from pages of history and song the matchless march of Sherman to the sea and the glory of Sheridan's ride; pass into oblivion the Hero of Gettysburg, forget the last command of the dying Mulligan, falling at the head of his Catholic brigade, "Lay me down and save the flag;" level the graves of the thousands of Catholic patriots who fought so well in defense of the honor of their country and the glory of its flag. No, no, we cannot spare these names and these memories, and the Democratic party shall continue to be the sanctuary where brotherly charity shall continue to dwell—with no restrictions as to religious belief and no standard save that of good citizenship and love of country. The Democratic party was the uncompromising foe of knownothingism, and it shall breath its vengeance on all similar organizations.

The State Questions.

I beg your attention for a few moments to purely state questions. In no state of the Union has Democracy so proud a record as that in Indiana. I make the bold and broad assertion that all the great reform measures that have kept pace with the progress of an enlightened people, every law to relieve the condition of labor and to protect the workingman in his life, his wages and his rights, every means to equally distribute the burdens of taxation upon all the property of the state, to dignify the citizen and guard the purity of the ballot, have been the work of Democratic legislatures. Our party can with pardonable yet enthusiastic pride point to the splendid history of its legislation. By the faithful fulfillment of promises made in party platforms, the Indiana Democrat has been taught to have unswerving faith and confidence in its party declarations and to believe that promises so made were honest and sincere, for all pledges have been redeemed. There is no just reason why the citizen of this state should doubt the sincerity of Democracy in its platforms adopted and, if he approve the principles advocated, why he should not sustain the party with his vote. In the interest of workingmen it gave to our people the mechanics' lien law, and a lien for wages on all property constructed by his labor; the law to protect employes in their labor organizations; to provide for the safety of the miner in his dangerous work and compel the ventilation of mines. It gave the 8-hour labor law; prohibited the blacklisting of employes; the "pluck me store"; the employment of Pinkerton detectives, and importation into the state of alien or foreign contract labor. At all times it has manifested its sympathy and friendliness to labor, and what more could it hope to accomplish through any other instrumentality?

It was a Democratic legislature that first grappled with and won the first great victory for the people over trusts and combinations in the school book law, and thus saving enormous expense to the parents and the children of the state. It was the Democratic party, appreciating the highest responsibility of citizenship, the sacred privilege of suffrage, that guarded the purity of the ballot in its great election law, whereby the humblest citizen may exercise this divine privilege without fear of intimidation or interference.

Through the new tax law the Democratic party remedied a grievous wrong by making it possible to have corporate wealth bear its just proportion of taxation, which had heretofore been escaping. By and through this law you have placed upon the tax duplicates $150,000,000 of property that had not heretofore been properly assessed. This law, like all the great measures adopted by our party, was bitterly opposed by the Republican party, both before and after its adoption. It has stood the test of opposition, been indorsed by the people and sustained by the courts, and is there to stay so long as the Democracy may control the legislation of the state.

At no period in the history of our state have its great institutions been so amply provided for, so efficiently managed and so economically administered. And all this with a lower levy for state purposes and a general reduction throughout the state for all purposes. There is and has been no excuse for an increase of tax anywhere throughout the state except for extraordinary reasons. Our state debt (the largest part of which was incurred by Republican administrations, and difficult to account for, and that part that may be justly attributed to our party going into the construction of necessary state buildings and improvements, and for every dollar of which we can show full value received) is now being diminished. During the but little over 18 months of my administration there has been paid $710,000 of this debt, and I trust before the fiscal year may have closed we may make it an even million. This, too, with the fact that we have lowered the rate of tax, including a levy for a sinking fund to provide for the gradual extinguishment of the state debt. Is it not a magnificent showing, a glorious history of legislation? But, gentlemen of the convention, you have met to perform a responsible and important duty. I trust you may perform your work here today with satisfaction to yourselves and the people whose you represent and [illegible] tives that fill your hearts.

There is nothing to discourage the Democracy of Indiana. Many of you have seen the clouds hang lower than they do today, and yet with the earnest work of a united party, fortified with the consciousness of a righteous cause, these clouds were swept away and the sunshine rested upon your banners, clothed with victory. I have that confidence in the intelligence and justice of our people, that they will again confide the destiny of their state into the hands of a party that has been the party of progress and reform in Indiana and that has proven it can be trusted.

WATERLOO.

Miss Minnie Voss is quite ill with lung fever.

Mr. Harmon of Missouri, a relative of S. Z. Dickinson has been here for awhile. He started home Wednesday.

A procession of our people and those from near here, went over to Butler Wednesday to enjoy the big street fair.

E. P. Dickinson and wife, went to Toledo Tuesday. They take the lake to Detroit and Post Huron before returning.

A party of our young people went to Auburn Monday to attend the musical, but found the church locked and dark. A result of the diphtheria scare.

Mrs. Juliette Dickinson went to Angola Tuesday, accompained by E. P. Dickinson's two children. She goes to visit her daughter, Mrs. Ed. Ettinger.

No services at the churches Sunday, as there were fears of diphtheria, and the schools have been postponed a week. Still, there are doubts if we have had any real diphtheria as yet.

GARRETT.

Mrs. Dr. Hugh is on the sick list.

Repairs are being made on the Episcopal church.

Miss Nellie Bicknell is visiting at Ft. Wayne.

Ira Leeson, of Lodi, Ohio, was in the city last week.

Attorney Sharpless, of Avilla, was in the city Friday.

Laura Clarkson, of Chicago, is visiting friends in the city.

Warren McNabb and family are visiting at Columbia City.

Otto Clark returned Friday from a two weeks' visit in Michigan.

H. F Strouse and "Tooner" Wilcox were at Fort Wayne Monday.

Mrs. Elstoner and daughter, of Baltimore, Md, are visiting relatives here.

Marcus Brown, of Cromwell, was in the city this week, the guest of C. G. Bovee.

Wm. Gill and wife, of Huntington, W. Va., were guests of D. B. Phillips last week.

Edwin Southers in "Faust and Marguerite" Tuesday night drew a large crowd.

The Garrett public schools will begin the 10th inst. The Catholic schools opened the 3d.

The little son of Mr. and Mrs. D. B. VanFleet fell from a porch last week, bruising its face badly.

There is a large sensation in town this week, but not knowing the particulars we are unable to give our readers any account of it.

The item in the COURIER of week before last that the fool killer had overlooked DeKalb county is very true, and when he strikes the county, the first place he should come to is Garrett and get after some of the howlers of free coinage, government ownership of railroads, etc.

Freeman Kelly, the Champion kicker of DeKalb county and whom the democrats have given two terms in the state legislature, was nominated for congress by the populists at Kendallville last Thursday. In his speech before the convention, he said: "Gentlemen, I stand where I always did. I have not left the democratic party; the democratic party has left me." Very lamentable.

D. W. Dare, who has been city marshal of Garrett for the past four years, stepped out of his office last Monday morning and was succeeded by J. J. Schreiner. Mr. Dare has proven himself an excellent official, and whatever business he should embark in, he has the best wishes of many friends. Mr. Schreiner is a young man and will no doubt fill the office with credit to himself and his constituents.

BUTLER.

William Prosser's condition remains nearly the same, with some hopes of recovery.

Theodore Keller, who has been seriously ill for some time, is improving and we hope will soon be out again.

At this writing (Monday) preparations for the fair are being pushed with might and main. The sound of the hammer is heard on every hand and everything betokens a crowd beyond our ability to entertain.

Many of Butler's former residents are coming back, and but a little time and we will have regained our former population.

The postoffice, under its new management, seems to be filling the bill remarkably well for the brief time under Mr. Oberlin's care.

A Mr. Geisinger from near Mooresville, and others are about to start a manufacturing establishment here that will employ a number of hands and will fill a much needed want.

The old foundry on the south side is again resonant with the sound of busy industry. Mr. Crider has opened up a repair shop for all kinds of machinery and is doing quite a business.

Our people were very much surprised last Friday evening to learn of the sudden and unexpected death of Thomas Bubb, who lived two miles south on what was once the Fuedick farm. Mr. Bubb was very well known in Butler, and his unexpected death created a sensible stir in the vicinity of the postoffice where he was almost daily seen. His funeral took place from the U. B. church last Sunday, Rev. Tedro officiating. He leaves a wife and grown up family.

CONCORD.

LAST WEEK

Mabel Culbertson has a new organ.

David Smurr is visiting his brother Will.

J. B. Draggoo is buying candy for another boy.

Henry Baker is making room for his stock of fall goods.

Hugh Watt and Geo. Swinsford have purchased new carriages.

G. W. Draggoo and B. B. Phillips are taking in the Fort Wayne races.

The farmers' potatoes are turning out fine—so many small ones in a hill.

Harry Buchanan, of Mt. Pleasant, Mo., is spending his vacation with his parents.

Ernest Johnson and Cora Draggoo visited a sick friend in Butler last Thursday.

The pioneer meeting of Concord has been postponed till some time in the near future.

Mrs. F. Buchanan, delegate to the annual conference at Fairview, Shelby Co., has returned home.

Mrs. J. C. George was called to Auburn to care for her mother, Mrs. French, who fell and broke her limb.

Rev. W. W. Lineberry is retained another year on the St. Joe circuit. He was the unanimous choice of the four appointments.

Several of Bertha Hennessy's young friends gathered at her home August 26, it being her 17th birthday. Mrs. H. served ice cream and cake.

Henry Milton, J. B. Draggoo, J. W. May and T. J. Krise will attend the G. A. R. Encampment at Pittsburg next month.

The Disciple yearly meeting was largely attended. It was held in the dense grove of J. M. Hamilton. Rev. Sweeney, ex-minister to Turkey, delivered two excellent and instructive sermons. Rev. S. P. Sniff, of Angola, was also in attendance. Rev. Rose is their present minister.

G. W. Draggoo and daughter Alice attended the annual Lutheran picnic at Maysville last Thursday. A bountiful dinner was served by the Lutheran ladies, and one of the leading features of the day was the presence of Grandma Chellis, almost 97 years of age. Four generations sat in her buggy that day. Another feature was the cornet band, consisting of 1 sister and 9 brothers. They are of French origin and it is said there are 15 children in the family.

Ralph W. Cobb, of the Auburn Cyclery, states that Will E. Cohagan, his assistant, will challenge any man in DeKalb county for a century run, and he will give his contestant a start of thirty minutes. Further, he will ride a League Chainless roadster, geared to 63.

Obituary.

Frederick Becker was born in Mogendorf, Nassau, Germany, Sept. 25, 1825; was married August 13, 1854, to Catharine Hoffman. He emigrated to America the same year. In 1864 he settled in DeKalb county. He was the father of ten children, all of whom are living except one son, Herman, who died about three years ago. The most tender and affectionate feeling existed between father and children, as was evidenced on day of burial. Bro. Becker was converted and united with the Reformed church in 1855. He was a good citizen, industrious and a hard worker. He leaves an aged companion, nine children and a host of friends to mourn. He was 68 years, 11 months and 3 days old. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. S. O. Fink, Aug. 30. Interment one mile south of Corunna, Ind.

BUTLER'S BIG SHOW.

Horses, Cattle, Races, Needlework, Manufactures, Art, Business Lines, Etc. All Free.

AMONG the new ideas of a progressive people, the Open Air, Free Street Fair" is one of the latest, and, to many, the most novel and startling. Last year Butler organized and carried out successfully one of these free fairs, and encouraged by their success, they extended the plan for this year into a still wider field. Last Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday were the days set for the show. Of course it rained a little. But it only served to lay the deep dust and kept away but a few of the most timid. Many Auburn people went, especially on Thursday, and were agreeably surprised and greatly pleased. They were able to see races and shows of all kinds, out in the public streets—a novel sight. The crowd in attendance was large, and all were having a good time.

THE RACES.

These were put on on west Depot street, the one next to the railroad grounds. The start was near Broadway and they went west a half mile to the town limits. The street was nearly level and but for the crowd that filled it, the races could have been nicely run. But the enthusiastic people would fill the half mile of street in spite of about forty special police, who were put there to keep them back. Still, when the horses had started, there would be a sudden parting of the long mass of people, so that the horses passed through flying, and no one was killed. But the long black line closed up right after them.

GENTLEMEN'S ROADSTERS.

This was a very deliberate affair in which everyone who had a horse that could pull some sort of a vehicle at a pace faster than a walk, could take part. There was a refreshing absence of that nervousness for which the Americans have such an undesirable reputation. Nobody got excited; no one hurried: there was nothing of the breakneck sort about it. Everything was done decently and in order, though the rumor that the drivers were mostly ministers is not strictly true. It was the pace that deceived people—not by its dash and brilliancy, but by its long drawn-out sweetness. But no one missed the 7 o'clock train by waiting for the finish, after all. Then came the foot races, in which someone participated, somebody won and another somebody beaten with such daredevil promptness that few saw anything except the meteoric flash of the white shirts as they went by.

THE STREET DISPLAYS.

These were more numerous and more elaborate than one would expect. Nearly every business house had erected a booth in front of its sidewalk and filled it with a special line of its choicest goods. This being done on both sides, left but a portion of actual street wide enough to let people and teams pass through. There was a big double arch near the central portion of the street elaborately adorned with grain and other productions. We have room for only a few of the displays.

THE BASKET FACTORY DISPLAY.

This was an elaborate affair. Two large, curving arches made of baskets decreasing in size to the top, were built up from the ground, and crossed at the apex, thus making the four corners of the display. All the other spaces were filled in with baskets of all shapes and sizes, and the space within was also a great variety of the same work. It was a credit to the factory and to the taste of the one who originated it.

THE CANNING FACTORY.

Just by E. C. Miller's grocery was the booth in which the products and material used in the new canning factory were shown. Green corn, tomatoes, and such things were abundant and excellent. Then there were piles of canned fruit, all prepared for shipment or market, the bright new picture labels giving them a look of tempting freshness. This industry promises to be by far the most valuable to Butler and to the people around, of all the enterprises they have started. It has the most valuable elements in it. The last display we mention is the most novel.

J. N. BOYLE'S MODEL FARM.

This was by far the most elaborate, as well as the most ingenious display shown. Mr. Boyle is real estate agent, and no one supposed a business of that sort could be shown in a street fair, or in any display. But Jeff was equal to the occasion. He looked ahead to this fair and got his fields planted in time. On a set of benches, he had a platform made, and earth laid on, and this divided off into available fields, yards, gardens, etc., to make a model farm, to show, in brief, the kind of farms he deals in. There was a field of wheat, one of oats—both ripe of course, but the field of corn was growing, the green rows of plants showing six inches high, and a real for surely "punkin" growing therein. In the wheatfield a dog was going "sled-length" after a rabbit. The discrepancy in their sizes was accounted for by ex-sheriff John Boyle on the theory that it was a "jack rabbit," while the dog was a "flea." This explanation satisfied the crowd, and all took a laugh at the sign by a fence, "No hunting allowed on this farm." In one of his two pasture fields a boy was driving the cow home. There was a neat, modern house, all fitted up with the proper furniture, curtains, and with its porches, flowers growing, maples, birds, yards, etc, it looked very inviting. The barn was a model one, and from the big hay mow, a boy grinned out at the spectators. In front of the building was a nice gravel road, and a wagon loaded with things was being hauled to the "Butler street fair" by a team of toy horses. There was a "Butler windmill" and a steam engine quite ingeniously gotten up. The garden had growing cabbage, potatoes, etc., and there was at one point a mischievous hog trying to get into the cornfield, under the fence. In one corner a bunch of "alfalfa," the new plant that is to take the place of clover. As few of our people had ever seen it, it attracted a good deal of attention. A man from Elkhart stepped up and wanted Mr. Boyle to bring his model farm up to that city, to add to the attractions of a horse trot they are getting up. Jeff politely said, "I am buying and selling real estate, not moving it."

CONCLUSION.

It was all much better than we had expected to see. Even the floral hall and canned fruits were fine. And the people were all good natured and happy. We met many old friends and renewed many acquaintances with those we had not seen for years. We and ours were hospitably cared for by Mr. Murch's family, and that of Samuel Jones and our own spiritual welfare looked after by Brothers Smith and Gardner, both of whom guided our young steps aright, as we meandered through the big crowd. G. W. Swank assisted us to eat his big watermelon, or our life might have been endangered. The base ball games were excellent. The band played. Then we all came home.

THE TWO COXEY'S.

The Jonathan and David of the Populists are Trying to Make Themselves Comfortable by Lying in the Same Bed.

Bliss and Coxey! What a glorious combination; How nicely they match and interlock How naturally one supplements the other "like scarification and cupping." The one scratches and the other draws off the blood. This is as it should be. What would Bliss do without his Coxey and what would Coxey be without his share of Bliss? The combination ought to succeed. Coxey leads hordes of tramps, thieves and hoboes over the country, holds up cities and towns, levying blackmail and forced contributions on them in a way as successful and criminal, though in a safer and more cowardly way than is done by the highway robber the train robber and the bank robber; and Bliss defends him. Yes glorifies him, and shouts aloud for his deluded followers to "come and be like us." The Coxey and Bliss combination of talent, assisted by a few deluded people, fake from the people $125 of money, the honest earnings of the givers. It is transferred to the Coxey end of the combination and becomes not the honest earnings of Coxey, nor as the honest earnings of anyone, but goes to swell that fund that Coxey no doubt had in view when he led his deluded tramps through sufferings and hardships on a wild goose chase that he knew would produce good to no one but himself. Bliss says "Coxey is not a criminal." We have already shown that he is, and that Bliss and his followers condone crime when they defend and follow him. It needs no proof that Coxey led out armies of tramps and thieves to prey upon the country. It is a matter of history. The few men in his "army of the unemployed" who really were workmen, had been induced to leave jobs where they could have earned an honest living, and taken off tramping over the country and make, from the start till now, a burden on the hard earned substance of better men. Men have become idlers and vagabonds who were not such before. Coxey has done all he could to encourage such a condition though he knows that a tramp is an undesirable element of society, and often becomes a dangerous one, for a tramp easily becomes a criminal. Now we are treated to the humiliating spectacle of an organized effort to encourage tramps, and this establish a school for criminals, and finally to make crime respectable. If Coxey "makes so much out of his business" as Bliss says he does, his course is all the more heartless and criminal. Will all this growing wealth and the $100 a day he gets from his deluded followers, why did he make his footsore hoboes walk to Washington in all sorts of roads? Why, when he reached Washington did he not hire for them comfortable quarters, instead of giving them worse shelter and food than he gives his own horses, while he boarded at a high-toned hotel? And why did he abandom them there and go home to get a nomination for congress? Since he abandoned them, the people having got tired of dividing their hard earned substance, with lazy tramps, have had the authorities arrest them, or drive them away to endure further hardships, or have contributed money to send them away. And all this at the very time that Coxey was telling his silly speech to the people at the rate $100 a day. We said Coxey is a tramp. Bliss says he is not. But we insist he is, and have often, called up the facts. The only difference is, that he rode, while his less aristocratic followers walked. We said he is a criminal. Bliss says he is not. But we have shown a series of criminal acts of which he or his followers have been guilty. Who terrorized town and country as they marched like swarms of locusts over the country? Who stole trains. Who ditched trains. What "armies" had its ranks lined with thieves who raiden chicken coops, smoke houses and the like to the loss and terror of good citizens? Coxeys "armies." Who defends all this. C. H. Bliss is at present masquerading for an office, to represent a county of respectable people in the state legislature. Fortunately, he stands no ghost of a chance to get the place and DeKalb county will not feel the humilation of being represented by a man who encourages trampism, law-breaking and crime.

Two other points might be noticed with some advantage to Bliss. One is, he has standing an item that "The circulation of the Times in the county, is larger than any other paper. "This is a square falsehood, and he knows it. At least four county papers have a larger circulation than the Times has, even with its several hundred sent free to unwilling readers, The other point is where he says the COURIER abused Coxey because "a good many subscribers from a distance took occasion that day to stop his paper." And that, "The oldest COURIER subscriber, the first man who ever subscribed for it, quit it on that date, because there was too much lying and abuse in it for him to stand it longer. Now for the facts. (1) The COURIER was not mad. It grieved to see so many otherwise respected people taking their first step on the downward path that leads away from good governments and good citizenship. (2) "A good many of its subscribers from a distance" were not in town, and therefore did not call. Two men only, called that day. Both paid some money on their subscription. Only one stopped his paper, and he took especial pains to express his usual friendship for the paper and high regards for the editor and his family, who have long been friends and are yet. And he did better than some populists have tried to by us. He paid up. He is that kind of a man. But he was not our "oldest subscriber" by several hundred, although he had been on the list a number of years. But that is a small matter. We seldom allude to our personal or business affairs, but we are tired of such barefaced and silly stories—stories, that if true would neither harm nor benefit anyone, and the telling of which merely shows an extremely bad taste and worse judgment.

TROPHIES OF A CHASE

AFTER THE FLEETING ITEMS OF NEWS.

Dalton, Ohio, Entirely Destroyed by Fire—A $30,000 Gold Nugget Found—Monroe Salisbury Expelled from the Turf—A Bridge Destroyed—The Maine Election.

DALTON DESTROYED.

An Ohio Village Swept by a Destructive Fire.

Massillon (Ohio) special: The little village of Dalton, located nine miles north of here, was almost totally destroyed by fire. The fire originated in a stable and while the direct cause of its origin is unknown, it is presumed that it was prompted by tramps taking quarters there for the night.

The entire loss is estimated at $200,000, the heaviest losers being the Royal Insurance Company. The postoffice department and its entire contents were included in the flames

The Canton, Massillon, and Orville fire departments were hastily summoned and responded, but their presence was of no avail, as sufficient water could not be procured to do any good. The citizens are frantic with grief over the loss of their business blocks and residences, and homeless women and children are seen on every corner crying bitterly. All the telegraph wires were burned down and the only communication with the outside world is by train.

BISHOPS MEET.

Important Secret Conclave at Grand Rapids.

Grand Rapids (Mich.) special: Archbishop Elder of Cincinnati, Bishop McCloskey of Louisville, Maes of Covington, Ky.; Rademacher of Fort Wayne, Chatard of Vincennes, Ind.; Horstman of Cleveland; Byrnes of Nashville, Tenn.; and Foley of Detroit, are here and will hold a secret conference with Bishop Richter. The object of the conference cannot be learned, but it is alleged to have been called to pass upon Bishop Richter's attitude to the A. O. H., and Catholic secret societies and his position in regard to Catholics engaged in the liquor traffic. As Bishop Richter is the only bishop who has not complied with the provisions of the council of Baltimore by appointing a certain number of irremovable pastors it is thought this question will also be considered. Bishop Richter positively refused to be interviewed touching the secret conference.

Ruling on Pensioners.

Two decisions, far reaching in their results, have just been rendered by Assistant Secretary Reynolds of the interior department construing the act of June 27, 1890, in its relation to the general pension system as affected by Sec. 4,716 of the revised statutes, which prohibit the payment of money on account of pensions to any person who voluntarily aided or abetted the rebellion. It is held that enlistment in the Confederate army by a prisoner of war was aiding and abetting the rebellion and forfeits the right to pension for disability incurred in prior service in the Union army, unless it be satisfactorily shown that such enlistment was for the purpose of making an escape to the Union lines.

A Rich Nugget.

Advices from Australia by the steamer Warrinoo says that another immense nugget of gold was found at Cool Gardie, eclipsing the famous Londouderry find. The nugget, which has been called the Dunn nugget, after its finder, weighs 1,800 ounces and is worth $30,000. It was taken from a reef, the whole face of which glitters with gold. Tremendous excitement prevails, and since the find property has increased at the diggings 500 per cent.

Bridge Destroyed.

Saginaw (Mich.) special: The Bristol street bridge, over which an electric street car line runs, was blown down during a wind storm just as a loaded car was approaching the bridge. No one was on the structure at the time. Chimneys, roofs, and other portions of a number of mill plants were blown down and other casualties are reported, but there were no injuries to persons or loss of life.

Expelled from the Turf.

The California turfman, Monroe Salisbury, has been expelled from the trotting turf by John D. Barry, Henry Hughes and Thomas K. Egbert, judges of the postponed 2:16 race, which brought the grand circuit trotting meeting in New York to a close. His offense was the alleged removal of the trotting mare, Expressive, from the Fleetwood track without permission of the judges.

Will Surrender Its Charter.

Indianapolis Special: The action of the Supreme Lodge, Knights of Pythias, at Washington, interdicting the German ritual, caused Koerner Lodge No. 6 to vote to immediately withdraw from the order, and turn its property and funds over to some national German benevolent organization.

Maine Election.

The election in Maine resulted in a victory for the Republican state ticket by a majority of over 30,000.

State Officers Arrested.

Jackson (Miss.) special: Warrants have been sworn out for the arrest of J. M. Stone, Governor; W. W. Stone, Auditor, and J. J. Evans, State Treasurer, for alleged violation of the federal internal revenue laws.

A Great Cargo.

The steamship S. S. Curry has arrived at South Chicago with 5,117 net tons of iron ore, the largest cargo ever carried on the great lakes.

A Watermelon Tragedy.

Magnolia (Ark.) special: Near Dykesville, La., just across the Arkansas State line, Clinton Thompson, a farmer, has a fine melon crop. Raids by boys became so frequent the old man put poison in some of the finest melons and awaited the results. The other morning his son Felix, George Bridges, a neighbor's son, and a man named Jacob Muir were found dead in the patch. The neighbor whose son was among the victims was the first to discover the dead bodies and called Thompson out to show him the corpses. When Bridges learned that Thompson had poisoned the melons and caused the death of his son he drew his revolver and shot him dead.

SMASHED AGAIN.

Robert J. Makes a New Record at Indianapolis.

Indianapolis now holds the world's pacing record. Robert J. made the second heat in his match with Joe Patchen for $5,000 in two minutes, two and a half seconds, being the fastest mile ever paced. The three heats averaged in speed, two, three and two-thirds seconds, making them the fastest three heats ever paced. The time by quarters of the second mile was as follows: :30¼, 1:01¼ 1:30¼, 2:02¼. In this heat Joe Patchen went like the wind and forced Robert J. to make a spurt of speed almost at the wire that was phenomenal. Col. Taylor of St. Louis, the owner of the black stallion, had said before the race if the gelding won he would have to beat his time at Fort Wayne, which was 2:03¾. The black came in under the wire in exactly that time. In the first heat he had made the mile in 2:04 flat. The fast pacers scored for the word at 4:05 o'clock, with the track in the pink of condition. Joe Patchen had the pole. They scored once without getting the word, but at the second time they went away with Patchen a little in the lead. Robert J. started at Starter Walker's "Go," and went up in the air. Driver Geers showed his masterly hand in quickly throwing the son of Hartford into his stride by pulling him to the outside of the track. He was then six lengths behind, but he settled down to win the heat. Patchen went the eighth of a mile in sixteen seconds and was still six lengths ahead at the quarter. Jack Curry who was driving him thought he saw victory and a world's record for the black when he passed the half far in the lead. But the gelding was gaining and in the third quarter was nearly at his side. Down the home stretch Patchen still held the lead until the last furlong when the gelding made one of those spurts that not even the liberal use of the whip could make Patchen head off. There was great excitement when it was found that the time of the heat made it up to then the fastest ever paced in a race. The enthusiasm knew no bounds when the next heat showed up with its second and a quarter faster time. In this heat Patchen seemed a winner until almost under the wire, when Robert J. forged a length ahead. Curry tried the whip, but it was plain the black was going his fastest. The performance, however, was so satisfactory to the crowd that both horses and their drivers, their owners and the driving club were give three cheers. The third heat began with a beautiful even start, but the gelding broke at the quarter and lost six lengths again. He settled down and came in winner without seeming to be pushed to his utmost. His winning spurts in the last furlong caused tumultuous cheers. The time by quarters for the three heats was:

First heat—31¼, 1:02¼, 134; 2:03¾.
Second—30¼, 1:01¼, 1:30¼, 2:02¼.
Third—30¼, 1:01¼, 1:33¼, 2:04¼.
Average, 2:03¾.

THE TRADE BULLETIN.

Some Lines Brighten While Others Falter.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says:

"The business outlook is much like an April day, with alternate clouds and sunshine. In some branches strong improvements still continue, while in others, trade is diminishing. In the adjustment to new conditions such conflicting signs are to be expected and the more because the deferred business which had awaited a settlement was by no means, evenly distributed. For some time to come it is likely conditions in different trades and even in different minor branches of the same trade, may vary widely.

"The Government crop report is expected to foreshadow a great loss in corn while other observers believe reports materially exaggerated, and estimates of the yield range all the way from 1,300,000,000 to 1,700,000,000 bushels. The wide uncertainty affects business prospects to some extent and an advance of half a cent the past week has followed receipts not half of those of the same week last year. Wheat receipts have been 5,677,157 bushels against 4,550,337 last year, and yet the price advanced ¼ cent, although Atlantic exports were only 1,158,624 bushels against 2,111,144 last year. Pork advanced 25 cents per barrel, and lard 25 cents per hundred pounds, as small estimates of the corn supply were entertained.

"Failures in August aggregated liabilities of $10,139,477, of which $3,172,330 were in manufacturing and $5,078,153 in trading concerns. During the week the failures were 215 in the United States against 323 last year."

SIDEWALK DROPS.

Thirty-One Women and Children Seriously Hurt.

At Nashville, Mich., while the streets were crowded with people waiting to see an exhibition of rope walking, a twenty-foot section of sidewalk in front of a dry goods store gave way, precipitating thirty-one persons into the area beneath. All the victims of the accident were women and children excepting one man. None were killed, but several were so seriously injured that their lives are despaired of. The most severely injured were Mrs. Albert Mix, both legs broken; Mrs. Y. P. Gassell, skull fractured and internally injured; Mrs. Ball, ribs broken and badly cut; Mrs. F. H. Sprague, severely bruised; Mrs. William Sweezey, badly cut and injured internally; Mrs. Francis Showalter, injured about head and spine. Many others were badly cut and bruised.

A Horrible Find.

Brimfield (Ind.) special: The section men of the Lake Shore found the lacerated remains of a man near Kesler's private crossing, a short distance from this place. The remains were gathered together and brought to the station here by Section Foreman James Loy and men, where Coroner Seymour held an inquest. By papers found in the pockets of the dead man's clothing, his name was found to be Frank Hathaway, whose home was at Chicago. His age was about 40 years. It was a most ghastly find, and one that the section men will ever remember with horror. Excepting the head and shoulders, the body was literally ground into a pulp.

Still Talking.

J. M. Kenney, advance manager for Champion James J. Corbett, is now in Washington. In speaking of Corbett he said: "Champion Jim never looked better in his life than at present. His recent trip was one continuous ovation for him, and made many and lasting friends. I saw him in New York just before I left for this city, and he said then his affair with Peter Jackson would be brought off all right if Jackson really meant business.

Boundary Line Marked.

Col. B. W. Barlow, chief of the American Commission to resurvey and erect monuments on the boundary line between the United States and Mexico, has arrived at San Francisco, having concluded the work in which he has been engaged two and a half years. The distance surveyed was 700 miles from El Paso, on the Rio Grande, to the Pacific. Col. Barlow says that originally fifty-two monuments were erected along the line. The commissioners found that only thirty-eight remained. They rebuilt the others and erected 200, making a total of 258. One place no monuments were found for over 100 miles.

A Mean Trick.

Washington special: The executive committee of the local Knights of Pythias has decided not to pay the prize of $500 offered for the best battalion drill, and which the First Regiment of Indiana won without opposition, on the ground that they had drilled according to the new United States army tactics, which have not yet been officially adopted by the supreme lodge. Colonel Haskell, of the First Indiana, was very angry at the decision and much ill feeling was shown.

Oklahoma Divorces Illegal.

Guthrie, (O. T.) special: A decision of the Supreme Court of the Territory nullifies all divorces granted by Probate Judges in Oklahoma since March, 1893. There have been fully 400 such cases granted, and as a large percentage of persons so divorced have been married since, they are guilty of bigamy. The persons affected are scattered throughout the United States, having taken advantage of the territory's laws, which permit divorce for any one of 13 causes after a residence of 90 days is established.

Arrested Smugglers.

John Jacobs and John Green of Toronto, were arrested at St. Clair, Mich., just after landing from a boat in which was two trunks containing 600 pounds of opium, which was seized. The prisoners had previously arranged for a horse and wagon, which was in waiting to carry away the trunks. The arrest was made by Deputy Customs Collectors Samuel Harkness of St. Clair and John Denneny of Port Huron. The case was worked up by two special detectives.

Fatal Collision.

An east-bound freight train collided with a west-bound work train on a curve about three miles above Lock Haven, Penn. There were fifteen men in the cabin of the work train when the collision occurred. Several of them escaped by jumping, but Jeremiah Sheehan and David Forsht were killed. James Kane had his thigh badly fractured by being caught in the wreck. Seven of the men were slightly injured.

Fighting Tramps.

Valparaiso (Ind.) special: A gang of twenty tramps attempted to board a fast fright train on the Fort Wayne road near Liverpool. The conductor stopped the train and attempted to put them off with the aid of the train crew. The tramps showed fight, and several drew their revolvers and fired, but without effect. The officers were called, and most of the gang were arrested. Three tramps were badly hurt.

Strikers on Trial.

Indianapolis special: Hiram Agler, President of the A. R. U., at Ashley, Ind., where trains were stopped, was found guilty of violating the restraining order of the court. Sentence for contempt of court was suspended. Arthur Desheno, a Chicago man, who led a riot at Hammond during the strike was committed to jail for twenty days and Oscar Larsen, accused of the same offense, was released.

Fatal Train Wreck at Staunton Ill.

Staunton (Ill.) special: The Toledo passenger train going east ran into some coal cars and completely demolished the engine, mail and baggage cars, and one passenger coach, killing two men who were beating their way on the front end of the car and seriously injuring Engineer S. C. Flanning. Fireman C. A. Sammis has received serious but not fatal injuries.

Last Troops Called In.

Gen. Schofield has telegraphed orders for the withdrawal of troops from the Coeur D'Alene mining district, Idaho. They will return to Fort Sherman, Idaho, where they have been regularly stationed. This order retires from special duty the last troops called out to preserve the peace during the railroad strike.

Rains Put Out the Fires.

Reports from Plainfield, Scanaba, Green Lake, Necada, Green Bay, Hurley, Junction City, Cumberland, Grand Rapids and other cities in Wisconsin, indicate that a heavy rainfall effectually quenched the forest fires. The same is reported all over the Michigan peninsula.

Four Hundred Persons Find Work.

Four hundred persons were given work by the starting of the C. H. Over window glass works and the Muncie flint glass works at Muncie, Ind.

Attorney Shot.

In a dispute over a lawsuit Attorney Walle was shot and badly wounded by Attorney Leo Roeder at Chicago. Walle's wound is a dangerous one.

FREE TRADE IN WOOL.

HIGH TAXERS CONFOUNDED AT RECENT DEVELOPMENTS.

Where the American Farmer Sells and Buys—Two Blessings in Disguise—We Are Now Paying Revenue Instead of Blood Money.

Wool Prices Under Free Wool.

The wool market just now affords a good study for the political wool-growers of Ohio. It will pay them to study facts awhile, and to forget their theories and their calamity cries.

In 1890 McKinley listened to the cries of Delano, Harpster and Lawrence, and granted them greatly increased duties on wools in order to raise prices. But prices never declined so much and so rapidly as during the four years of McKinleyism. The decline has been almost steady, except that it was checked for a few months after the election of 1892, and it was changed into an advance during the last two months of McKinleyism. The decline has been from 35 to 60 per cent. High duties on wools, then, have not caused higher prices, as these wool prophets predicted. This is mistake number one.

Nothing was more certain, in the opinion of the Ohio shepherds, than that free wool would greatly reduce prices of domestic wools and ruin the wool and sheep producing industries. For the first time, since 1816, all wools are now free of duty. What now are the facts up to date?

All wools became free on Aug. 28. We quote the following prices of foreign and domestic wools from the American Wool and Cotton Reporter:

Grades.	July 5. Cts.	Aug. 30. Cts.
DOMESTIC.
O., Pa. & W. Va., XX and above	20@..	20@21
O., Pa. & W. Va., No 1	19@20	21@23
Mich., Wis. & N. Y., No. 1	18@19	19@21
California, No. 1 spring, free	12@13	13@16
Texas, fine 12 mos., choice	11@12	12@14
Idaho, fine	9@10	10@12
Montana, fine, med., choice	11@14	13@15
FOREIGN.
Australian, combing, choice	30@31	19@22
Australian, combing, good	29@30	18@19
Australian, clothing	30@32	19@21
Cape and Natal	25@26	14@15
Montevideo	25@27	14@15
English, coarse	35@37	23@25

This is indeed a strange phenomenon for the consideration of national wool growers' associations. Prices of foreign have declined about 40 per cent., while prices of domestic wools have advanced about 10 per cent. during the last two months.

The Reporter of August 30 says that the chief feature of the Boston wool market has been "the purchase of a million and a half pounds of Montana by a manufacturer," and concludes that "it has been, on the whole, a fair week for trade, and wools in general have been sold at as high a price as at any time during the month; medium wools are especially firm. * * * The feeling in general is hopeful." Under New York the Reporter says: "Despite the uncertainty surrounding the markets there is no quotable change in prices. * * * There are a good many arguments favoring a steadiness in prices of domestic for some time to come."

Prices of domestic wools, then, have not tumbled with the adoption of free wool, as was predicted by the Ohio prophets. This is mistake number two. It might be supposed that after such monstrous failures Delano, Lawrence and Harpster would withdraw into their shells and never peep again on the wool question. This is, however, unlikely. The real question now is, will the real wool growers ever again believe these false prophets.

"YOU know, for you have followed with watchful interest the varying history of our attempt at tariff reform. You have followed with rising hopes and hearty approval the action of the House of Representatives in the framing and passage of a measure bearing the badges of Democratic principles and fraught with promised benefits to all the people. You have followed with waning hopes and angry disapproval the tedious and tortuous passage of that bill through the Senate, and seen that, despite a nominal Democratic majority in that body, the great trusts and monopolies were still able to write their taxes as they had done under Republican rule in some of its most important schedules."—William L. Wilson's speech at Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 29.

A Flood of Prosperity.

We had lived but two days under the new tariff law when the Iron Age of Aug. 30 was published. It has always been a strong protection organ and its readers must have been surprised at the following in an editorial entitled, "Improving Trade in the West."

"The West reports considerable improvement in general trade. Merchandise of all kinds is in greater demand, and in some lines the prospects favor the largest movement for years. Railroad traffic has picked up remarkably, and on some lines a shortage of rolling stock is reported. The settlement of the tariff question is assigned as the main reason. Some look forward to an immediate return of prosperity, arguing that an immense volume of business has been dammed up by the long prevailing uncertainty which will now precipitate a flood, with beneficial effects to follow for many days. Others, however, take a less sanguine view of the situation and think that the increased movement will soon spend its force, when trade will relapse into its old state of dullness. But no one can accurately forecast the future. Experience does not teach in this instance, because the conditions recently existing have been unparalleled."

Two Splendid Mistakes.

It now seems probable that two of the mistakes or over-sights in the present tariff bill will prove to be blessings in disguise.

One of these is the "free alcohol in the arts" clause, which passed both houses without much discussion. It, as now seems likely, the Treasury Department can collect the duty on all alcohol not used in the arts no revenue will be lost and the benefits of free alcohol to the chemical industry will be very great. In the opinion of some experts it will revolutionize the whole industry and enable us to become large exporters of chemical products.

Of course the Republicans, who can see the bad, but not the good, effects of free raw materials, are telling us that free alcohol in the mechanical arts will ruin the wood alcohol industry. Suppose it will! Thousands of cabinet and furniture makers who now work in the stinking and deadly fumes of wood alcohol will welcome the change to pure grain alcohol. Wood alcohol is produced at a cost of 50 to 60 cents per gallon, while grain alcohol is produced at only 20 to 25 cents. The tax of 90 cents per gallon on grain alcohol has made a market for the miserable and poisonous substitute of wood alcohol—so poisonous that it cannot be used in medicines or drugs, and therefore has not been taxed. The wood alcohol industry is confined almost entirely to Delaware, Sullivan and Broome Counties, in New York, and to that part of Pennsylvania across the line from these counties. The whole industry amounts to but $2,000,000 or $3,000,000 a year. It is stripping these counties of beech, birch and maple. Many intelligent citizens are prophesying destructive floods in spring and equally disastrous droughts in summer and fall where the forests have been devasted. Thousands of dairymen will not be sorry to see the industry go.

The other oversight is in the sugar schedule. The duty on refined sugar is fixed in the sugar clause at 40 per cent. plus ⅛ of a cent per pound. While the trust was fighting and bribing to have this clause well loaded with protection, it seems not to have noticed that in the candy and confectionery clause, "sugar after being refined, when tinctured, colored, or in any way adulterated," shall be dutiable at only 35 per cent. ad valorem.

If, as seems clear, a slight discoloration or adulteration will save about one-fifth of a cent per pound to the importer we may be sure that ways will be devised of importing refined sugar at 35 per cent duty, and of purifying and clarifying it so that it can compete with the trust's choicest sugars. This would take away over one-half of the trust's hard-earned protection. This weak spot in the sugar schedule has been the cause of considerable decline in the price of sugar stocks and it is certain that sugar trust officials are greatly worried and are kicking themselves for their stupidity. Unless they can obtain rulings from the Treasury Department in their favor, which seems improbable, they are beaten at their own bunco-steering game.

Farmers Take Notes.

Let the farmers make a note of the average McKinley prices for wool. Now is the time to do it. Let them also set down the average prices for lumber, shingles, salt, agricultural implements and woolen goods. Now is the time. At the end of the year they will be able to see how much they have lost in their wool sales, if anything. At the same time they can make a computation of how much they have gained by the lessened prices of articles on which the McKinley duties have been reduced. By comparing their gains and their losses they may be able to find out whether or not they have profited by the tariff changes. A little home cyphering of this kind is worth acres of political haranguing and pamphleteering. — Philadelphia Record.

"NO MAN could fitly undertake to frame a revenue bill for a nation of seventy million people, unsurpassed in wealth and in the magnitude and variety of their industrial and commercial interests; to purge injustice and monopoly from that system, to replace class exaction by public taxation, privilege by equality; to lighten the burden of the people, secure larger rewards for their labor and freer play for their industries, without being appalled by the greatness of the trust committed to him and the thickening difficulties in the way of its successful performance."—William L. Wilson's speech at Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 29.

Founded Upon Sound Principles.

If the Democrats will give us free sugar, iron ore and coal, during the short session of Congress, and abolish the duties that protect the steel rail, starch, borax, and some other of the more obnoxious trusts, they will be forgiven by the people for their shortcomings during the present long and trying session of Congress. The Democratic party is based upon sound principles and it should, and we believe will, become the great party of the future as it has been of the past. If the Democratic masses exercise greater care in choosing leaders, their party will soon have what it has not now, a working majority in both houses.

"THE weapons with which monopoly [the Sugar Trust] has fought us they [the Republican party] have forged and tempered and supplied."—William L. Wilson's speech at Martinsburg, West Va., Aug. 29.

WORK OF DEMOCRACY

CAMPAIGN IN THE SOUTH OPENED AT ATLANTA.

Speaker Crisp and Secretary Smith Fire the First Gun Into the Ranks of the Enemy—Georgians Entreated to Beware of Populist Doctrines.

Crisp Is for Silver.

The Democratic campaign in the South was opened in Atlanta, Ga., by Charles F. Crisp, Speaker of the House of Representatives, and Hoke Smith, Secretary of the Interior. There was an immense crowd at the meeting and much enthusiasm prevailed. Messrs. Crisp and Smith made speeches, which were frequently applauded and listened to intently. The principal features of the speeches were Mr. Crisp's declaration that he was a believer in free silver and Mr. Smith's attacks on Populists and Populism and the 16-to-1 ratio in the coinage of silver. In the course of his talk Mr. Crisp said:

"When the LIIId Congress met in August of last year it was confronted with difficulties which seemed almost insurmountable. Trade was paralyzed, manufacturing had almost ceased, labor was idle, our banking institutions were failing and confidence, life and soul of commerce, was utterly destroyed. In so far as this deplorable condition was attributable to legislation, the Republican party was responsible. For more than thirty years that party had made our financial and economic laws. Until the meeting of the LIIId Congress the Democracy was without power. The condition which confronted us, while not wholly, was very largely due to evil legislation. In 1873 the free coinage of silver had been discontinued and gold became the standard of value; in 1878 partial coinage was resumed. In 1890 this law was repealed and soon thereafter coinage of silver practically ceased. These acts of the Republican party resulted in so lessening the volume of money of final redemption as to decrease the price of all commodities, increase the burden of all debtors and impair the confidence of the people in the power of the Government and of banking institutions to redeem their outstanding obligations.

SPEAKER CRISP.

"For thirty years the Republicans had been building up tariff walls around the country, and in 1890 passed what they termed a 'perfect protective tariff law.' A protective tariff restricts trade and commerce; it limits the market in which we must buy and depresses the market in which we must sell. It is a tax upon a foreign product which the consumer here must pay. By taxing his foreign competitor you enable the domestic manufacturer to increase the price of his wares to the extent of the tax, and this, too, the consumer here must pay. Then you buy foreign goods and pay the duty; it goes into the treasury and is called a 'tax;' when you buy the domestic product and pay the increased price it goes into the pocket of the American manufacturer and is called 'protection.'

"What has the Democratic Congress so far done for the people? The first matter considered was the financial question. What should or could be done on the silver question? We had pledged ourselves against the makeshift Sherman law and in favor of both gold and silver as the standard money of the country. By an agreement arrived at between Democrats we determined to take the sense of the House on the free and unlimited coinage of silver, at several ratios. After full debate a separate vote was had on each, and on the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman act. The result you know.

"While not professing to understand the question fully in all its bearings, I have always been in favor of the free coinage of silver. I am in favor of it now. I believe the fears of our friends who oppose it are largely imaginary, and I believe the enactment of such a law would afford great relief to the people of the country.

"With our great struggle for tariff reform you are familiar. Thirty years of class legislation has built up in this country large trusts, large monopolies and large combinations of capital. All these interests were arrayed against us. Under these conditions our progress was slow. The House framed and passed a tariff bill. This went to the Senate. After a long and tedious struggle the Senate passed this bill, with amendments. Finally the question was presented in such a fashion that we must either accept the Senate amendments or have no bill, thus permitting the odious McKinley law to remain upon the statute books. When we were convinced such was the true situation we did not hesitate a moment; we accepted the Senate amendments, and so the bill became a law. This bill is not all we hoped for. It contains provisions we deplore, provisions which the House by separate bill immediately repealed, and yet, taken as a whole, it goes further in the direction of relief to a tax-ridden people than any bill that has been considered in any Congress since the war."

Secretary Smith's Address.

Secretary Smith in opening his remarks reviewed the financial troubles of the past eighteen months, and congratulated the South, as well as Georgia, upon the excellent showing made. The attention of the commercial world had been attracted, and he predicted for that section a period of development and marked prosperity such as never before experienced. The cotton States and International Exposition would prove of great assistance in this work. But the attention of capital once secured, its confidence must also be won, and it was therefore of the utmost importance to the future welfare of the state that in the coming election the people of Georgia should show the world that the wild theories of the Populists had no foothold among them. Calling attention to the recent experience of the great states of Kansas and Colorado under Populistic rule, the Secretary asked who would wish to see Georgia follow the leadership of a Lewelling or a Waite. Bad as was the record of the third party in the West, the crazy theories of their leaders in Congress were enough to stagger comprehension and shock thoughtful men. They sought disbursements amounting in the aggregate to over $25,000,000,000. The people of Georgia could not afford to indorse such a party. The State would be disorganized locally and discredited before the world if it appeared to have ever listened to their impracticable theories.

SECRETARY SMITH.

Few of their beliefs were worthy of discussion, but there was one which seemed to have appeared attractive, although when carefully investigated it must be classified with their other theories as almost equally wild and impracticable. He referred to the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 by the United States alone, and declared it to be a plan utterly at variance with sound business principles and fraught with incalculable evil. He did not wish his position misunderstood. He was a thorough bimetallist, strong in his faith, and no one could be more unalterably opposed to the adoption of a single gold standard. Such a course would bring about a contraction of the currency calculated to cripple the industries and lessen the demand for supplies.

The injury inflicted by a single-standard currency had been recently demonstrated abroad, and the evil effects had been felt here upon products of this country raised for foreign consumption. He believed these evil effects would be lessened by preserving the present per capita of currency here; but where three-fourths of our great cotton product goes abroad, three-fourths of the injury could not be reached except by the success of bimetallism in the places of consumption. Currency in the United States has not been contracted, but, on the contrary, the per capita to-day was $24.10 as against an average of $14.85 from 1850 to 1860.

The Secretary then described the eight different kinds of money now used in this country and maintained that the instant any one of these went to a premium it would become a commodity for private sale and contraction would follow, but by preserving them upon an equality and by an increase equal to the growth of business and population contraction would be prevented. This could be accomplished, first, by changing the bullion in a silver dollar so as to require 100 cents' worth of silver in every dollar; second, by international agreement, which, if secured, would prevent the necessity of changing the ratio, or, third, by calling in all money of small denominations, say $10 and less, not consisting of silver, and giving silver the right of way. He especially urged the repeal of the 10 per cent. tax on State banks as a remedy within control of the United States.

Mr. Smith closed his speech with an appeal to the voters of the State to remain true to the Democratic principle of sound money inaugurated by Jefferson, supported by Jackson, and preserved by Cleveland.

The Cotton Mills Trouble.

The great strike and lockout in the cotton mills of New Bedford and Fall River are due to a reduction of 10 per cent. in wages by the manufacturers. The public is interested in knowing if this trouble is in any measure due to the new tariff.

The duties on cotton goods in the bill just passed are less, but not much less, than those imposed by the McKinley law. Shirts, in deference to Mr. Murphy, are to pay 50 instead of 35 per cent. Stockings are to pay 30 instead of 35 per cent. There have been slight reductions, however, on other cotton goods, and Senator Aldrich estimated that the average rate of duty on manufactures of cotton under the new law would be about 40 per cent, instead of 57 percent., the average rate under the McKinley act.

The new schedule was accepted as satisfactory to the cotton manufacturers. Their Senators did not offer a word of opposition while it was passing the Senate, and were twitted on their silence by Senators Dolph and Teller. Senator Aldrich, in reply, said that the schedule was "prepared by the manufacturers of Fall River, so far as the price of cloth is concerned," and added that it "is perhaps the most scientific schedule that has ever been prepared upon the subject." He further said: "I think the committee deserves the thanks of the cotton manufacturers of the country." Senator Hoar also expressed his satisfaction. Certainly the new tariff bill cannot account for the proposed reduction of wages.

According to a correspondent of the Evening Post, writing from New Bedford, wages have been reduced and increased there without regard to the tariff. This statement is verified by a recent report of the Massachusetts Bureau of Statistics. In ten years reductions of wages of cotton operatives in these two cities have aggregated about 35 per cent. and increases have aggregated 22½ per cent. Therefore, notwithstanding the Republican tariffs of 1883 and 1890, wages have gone down in the cotton mills of Fall River and New Bedford about 12½ per cent.

Another strange fact in connection with this proposed decrease of wages is that, according to the American Wool and Cotton Reporter of Aug. 23, there is "a perceptible improvement in the demand" for cotton goods. This journal advises against a reduction of wages, and truly says: "The cotton goods market as a whole is rather independent of tariff legislation." This is in line with Secretary Blaine's report that the labor cost in manufactured cottons is less in this country than in England.

According to the annual report of the Bureau of Statistics of Massachusetts for 1893, just published, the business of making cottons was about the most prosperous of all the industries of the State for that year. It used more raw material than in 1892. The value of its goods fell off less than 3 per cent. The number of persons employed decreased about one-quarter of 1 per cent., the amount of earnings .97 of 1 per cent., and the average earnings .69 of 1 per cent.

The explanation of the proposed reduction in wages remains to be made. Certainly the tariff bugaboo cannot be raised when wages fell 10 per cent. under the McKinley law, as they did last September, and when they increased 10 per cent. after the great tariff reform victory of 1890.—New York World.

A Familiar Parrot Cry.

One would suppose that after all the howling of the Republican organs about sugar tax that they would cease to claim that tariff taxes are paid by the foreigners. But the Manufacturer of Philadelphia still continues to utter this old parrot cry. On August 18, it said under the McKinley tariff the foreigner has been compelled to pay a tribute which the new act decreases or removes." Hence "the proposition that the act will fulfill the promise to relieve the nation from taxation is absolutely without warrant in fact." It is only McKinley who can get a curve onto a tariff bill so that the tax will miss the American consumer and hit the foreign producer. It is, therefore, impossible for Democrats to make a tariff bill to please Republicans, all of whom believe in the golden rule and shift their taxes onto the poor overtaxed and half-starved foreigners.

"I AM not sure that this very failure may be the harbinger and assurance of the speedier and more complete triumph of commercial freedom than the smooth and unobstructed passage of the House bill would have been. The American people are aroused as hardly anything else could have aroused them to the deadly menace that protection begets to the purity and very existence of free government."—William L. Wilson's speech at Martinsburg, West Va., Aug. 29.

"WITH all its manifold failures, its final retention of many protective duties, its objectionable sugar schedule, and its excessive duties on cottons and woolens and metals, the new bill carries in it substantial relief to the American people, and must be accepted as a substantial beginning to thorough and progressive tariff reform."—William L. Wilson's speech at Martinsburg, West Va., Aug. 29.

"WHEN the sugar trust thus challenges the American people to a contest of strength, its days are numbered, its temporary triumph is its speedier and more complete overthrow, and with its overthrow will vanish its sister brood of monopolies that are strong through its support."—William L. Wilson's speech at Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 29

UNITED AT LAST

MISS M E BRADDON

CHAPTER XXV.

READY FOR THE WORST.

June roses were opening in the flower-garden at Davenant, and Gilbert Sinclair had been leading a life of the purest domesticity for the last three weeks. It hung rather heavily upon him, that domestic life, for, though he loved his wife after his own fashion, he was not fond of home joys or exclusively feminine society. But what will not a jealous man endure when once his suspicions are aroused? Patient as the spider watching his prey, he waits for the unguarded moment which shall betray the horrid secret he fears yet longs to discover.

Except to see Goblin win the Derby—a feat which that estimable animal performed with honor to himself and satisfaction to every one save the bookmen—Gilbert had not been away from Davenant since the Two Thousand. He had been told to look for treachery at home, and he was there ready to seize the traitor. No mouchard in the secret service of the Parisian police was ever a closer spy than the husband who doubts yet dotes, suspects yet fondly loves.

That he had seen nothing in all this time to confirm his doubts was not enough to convince Mr. Sinclair that those doubts were baseless. He was willing to imagine profoundest hypocrisy in the wife of his bosom, a brazen front under the semblance of a pure and innocent brow. Even the devotion to her child might be a cover for a guiltier love. Her happiness, her tranquility, gave him new ground for suspicion. Was there not some secret well-spring of contentment, some hidden source of delight, masked behind this fair show of maternal affection?

These were the doubts which Gilbert Sinclair was perpetually revolving in his mind during this period of domestic bliss, and this was the aspect of affairs up to June 15. Ascot races were to begin on the 16th, and Goblin was to fulfill his third great engagement. This was an occasion before which even a husband's jealous fears must give way, and Gilbert had made up his mind to see the horse run. He had not carried out his idea of selling Goblin after the Derby. Jackson, the trainer, had protested vehemently against such a breach of faith with him, who had made the horse.

"That there 'oss is to win the Leger," said the indignant Jackson. "If he don't I'll eat him, pig-skin and all."

Gilbert felt that to part with such a horse for ever so high a price would be to cut up the goose that laid the golden eggs.

"A horse can't go on winning great races forever, though. There must come a turn in the tide," suggested Gilbert, sagely. "We should get a pot of money for him now."

"A gentleman couldn't sell a 'oss that had just won him the blue ribbon of the turf," replied Jackson, with a burst of chivalrous feeling. "It would be too mean."

Gilbert gave way to the finer feelings of his trainer, and took no step toward cutting short his career on the turf. Things were looking livelier in the coal-pit district, he told himself, and a few thousand a year more or less could not hurt him. He would carry out his original idea, take a place somewhere near Newmarket, and establish his wife and—the child there.

Under ordinary circumstances he would have taken a house at Ascot during the race week for the accommodation of himself and a selection of choice spirits with sporting tastes, where the nights might have been enlivened by blind hookey, or poker, or some equally enlightened recreation. But on this occasion Mr. Sinclair made no such comfortable arrangement, and determined to sleep at his hotel in town on the night after the race.

He was smoking his after-dinner cigar on the evening of the 15th, pacing slowly up and down the terrace in front of the open drawing-room windows, when a servant brought him his letters.

The first opened was from his trainer, who was in high spirits about Goblin. The next two or three were business letters of no importance. The last was in a strange hand, a niggling, scratchy little hand, which, if there be any expression in penmanship, was suggestive of a mean and crafty nature in the writer.

Gilbert tore open the envelope, expecting to find some insinuating "tip" from a gentleman of the genus "tout;" but the letter was not even so honest as a tip: it was that snake in the grass, an anonymous warning:

"If Mr. Sinclaire is away to-moro nite he wil mis an oportunitie to learn sumthing he ouht to kno. If he want's to kno a secret let im wattch the balconie of is wif's room betwin tenn and leven to-moro nite. A FRIEND."

Such a letter falling into the hands of a generous-minded man would have aroused only contempt: but coming to a man who had given himself up as a prey to suspicion and jealousy, who had long been on the watch for domestic treachery, even this venomous scrawl became significant as the voice of Fate—an oracle to be obeyed at any cost.

"She has taken advantage of my intended absence already, and has made an appointment with her lover," thought Gilbert Sinclair. "This warning comes from one of my servants, I dare say, some scullery-maid, who has found out my wife's infamy, and pities the deluded husband. Rather hard to swallow pity from that quarter."

Then came the natural reaction.

"Is it a hoax, I wonder—a trick played upon me by some dismissed underling? Yet how should any one know how to put his finger on the spot that galls? Unless it were that scoundrel Wyatt, who hates me like poison. Well, at least, I can take the hint, and be on the watch. God help Cyprian Davenant if he crosses my threshold with evil intent. He may have deceived me once. He shall not deceive me again."

Mr. Sinclair went to Ascot next day as he had intended. Any change in his plans would have put his wife upon her guard. He went to the races, looking uncommonly glum, as his friends informed him; so gloomy, indeed, were his looks that some of his intimates made haste to hedge their bets about Goblin, making very sure that the Derby winner had been seized by some sudden indisposition. The event rewarded their caution, for Goblin, although brought up to the starting-post in magnificent condition, failed to get a place. Gilbert bore his disappointment with supreme stoicism. Goblin's victory would not have made him smile: his failure hardly touched him. It was provoking, of course, but Destiny and Mr. Sinclair had long been at odds; it was only another item added to an old account.

He drove to the station directly Goblin's race was over, and as there was another race to come, he got a place in the train easily. It started immediately, and he was in London before 7 o'clock, and on his way to Davenant at 8. He had not stopped to dine. A biscuit and a glass of brandy and soda was all he cared to take in his present frame of mind.

It was striking nine as he left the quiet little Kentish station, not quite clear as to what his next step ought to be. He had been told to watch his wife's room between 10 and 11. To do this with any effect, he must get into the house unobserved or find a safe post of observation in the garden. To announce his return home would be, of course, to destroy his chance of making any discovery; and by this time he had made up his mind that there was domestic treachery to be discovered. As to the means, he cared little or nothing. To meet treachery with treachery could be no dishonor.

It was dusk, the sweet summer dusk, when he entered the park through a gate seldom used by any one but the gamekeepers or servants. The nightingales were breaking out into sudden gushes of melody, calling and answering one another from distant clumps of chestnut or beach, but Mr. Sinclair took no heed of the nightingales. In his happiest frame of mind that melodious jug-juggling would have made no particular impression upon his unsensitive ear; to-night all senses were in more or less abeyance. He found his way along the narrow footpath mechanically, looking neither to the right nor to the left, and only roused himself when he came within sight of the house.

How to get in unobserved and reach his room without meeting any of the servants was the question.

A moment's reflection showed him that this ought to be easy enough. Half-past nine o'clock was the servants' supper hour at Davenant, and meals in the servants' hall are an institution which even domestic convulsions leave unshaken. A funeral makes no difference in the divine right of servants to dine and sup at a certain hour; a wedding may cause some supererogatory feasting, but can hardly overthrow the regular order of the daily meals. Mr. Sinclair had no fear, therefore, of any alteration in the routine of the household, and he knew by experience that his servants liked to take their time at the social evening meal.

It was twenty minutes to ten when he stopped for a minute or so in the shrubbery to consider his plans. Between ten and eleven, said the anonymous letter. He had no time to lose.

He skirted the lawn in front of the drawing room windows, keeping in the shadow of the trees. The windows were all open, and he could see the whole of the room. Lamps were burning on the table, candles on the piano, but his wife was not there. He went in at one of the windows. The child's toys were lying on the floor by Constance's favorite chair, and an open work basket a little pile of books on a gypsy table, showed that the room had been lately occupied.

"She has gone to the balcony-room to keep her appointment," he thought, savagely, for by this time he had accepted the anonymous warning as a truth.

The hall was as empty as the drawing-room, the lamps burned dimly, being the last invention in lamps that do not illuminate. Gilbert went softly up the shallow old staircase to the corridor which ran the length of the house, and ended at the door of his own snuggery. He reached this door without meeting any one, went quietly into the room, and locked the door. The oriel-window of this room commanded the balcony room, which was recessed in the southern front, between two projecting wings. There could be no better post of observation for the man who had been told to watch the garden approach to his wife's rooms.

There were matches and candles on the mantel-piece, but to strike a light would be to make his presence known to any one in the balcony room, so Gilbert waited quietly in the half darkness of a summer night, and found what he wanted easily enough by the sense of touch. There was no moon yet, but a few stars were shining faintly in the calm gray sky. The windows of the balcony room were dark, and one stood open—the one nearest the iron stair. Gilbert observed this.

"She is sitting there in the dark," he thought, "waiting for him. That dark room, that open window, look like guilt. Why has she not her lamp lighted, and her music or her books? No: she has something else to think of."

His guns were arranged in artistic order above the chimney-piece—a costly collection, with all the latest improvements in sporting guns. His hands wandered here and there among the stocks till they came to a favorite rifle, the lightest in his collection and one of the surest. He had shot many a royal stag with it beyond the Tweed. He took down this gun, went to a drawer where he kept ammunition, and selected it and loaded his gun in a steady, business-like manner. There was no faltering of the hand that dropped the cartridge into its place, though that hand meant murder.

"He refused to fight me," Gilbert Sinclair said to himself. "He lied to me until I was fool enough to believe his lies. I gave him fair warning. He has tricked and insulted me in the face of that warning. He has entered my house once as an impostor and a liar. If he tries to enter it a second time as a thief and a seducer, his blood be upon his own head."

CHAPTER XXVI.

CAUGHT IN THE TOILS.

Ten o'clock struck with sweet and solemn chime from the old square tower of the parish church, as Gilbert Sinclair opened the lattice and stood by the open window of the dressing-room, waiting. There was not a leaf stirring in the garden, not a shadow save the motionless shadows of the trees. No light in the windows of the balcony room. The stars brightened in the clear gray, and in the soft twilight of summer all things were dimly defined—not dark, but shadowy.

The quarter chimed from the church tower behind the trees yonder, and still there was no movement in the garden. Gilbert stood motionless, his watch divided between the old Dutch garden with its geometrical flower-beds and stone sun-dial, and the windows of the balcony room. As the sound of the church clock dwindled slowly into silence, a light appeared in the center window, a candle held in a woman's hand, and raised above her head. Gilbert could but faintly distinguish the dark figure in the feeble glimmer of that single candle before figure and light vanished.

A signal, evidently, for a minute later a man's figure appeared from the angle of the hedge, where it had been hidden in shadow. A man—tall, strongly built—yes, just the figure that patient watcher expected—stepped lightly across the garden, carefully keeping to the narrow gravel-paths, leaving no tell-tale footprint on flower-bed or box-border. He reached the iron stair, mounted it swiftly, had his foot on the balcony, when Gilbert Sinclair fired, with the unerring aim of a practiced sportsman and the firm hand of a man who has made up his mind for the worst.

The figure reeled, swayed for a moment on the topmost step, and rolled backward down the light iron stair, shaking it with the force of the fall, and sunk in a heap on the gravel-path below.

Gilbert waited, expecting to be thrilled by a woman's piercing shriek, the despairing cry of a guilty soul, but no such cry came. All was darkness in the balcony room. He fancied he saw a figure approach the window and look out, but whatever that shape was it vanished before he could verify his doubts.

He went over to the chimney-piece and put away his gun as coolly as if the purpose for which he had just used it were the most ordinary business of daily life, but this mechanical tranquillity had very little significance. It was rather the stolidity of a sleep-walker than the calmness of a mind that realizes the weight and measure of its act. He went back to the window. There lay the figure, huddled in a formless heap as it had fallen, hideously foreshortened from Gilbert's point of sight. The open hands clutched the loose gravel. No sound, no light yet in the balcony room.

"She does not know what has happened," said Gilbert, grimly. "I had better go and tell her."

He unlocked his door and went out in the corridor. His wife's bedroom opened out of the balcony room. The child slept in a smaller room adjoining that. He went into the balcony room and found it empty, then opened the bedroom door and paused on the threshold, looking in.

Impossible to imagine a more peaceful picture than that which met the husband's eyes. A night-lamp shed a faint light over the white-curtained bed, an open book and an extinguished candle on a little table by the bedside, showed that Constance had read herself to sleep. The door of the inner room stood half open, and Gilbert could see the little white crib, and the sleeping child. The mother's face was hardly less placid in its repose than the child's.

Cream Ripening by Bacteria.

The chief object of the ripening of cream is to produce the butter aroma, and this aroma, though very evanescent, controls the price of the butter. This flavor the butter-maker owes to the bacteria; for by their growth the materials in the cream are decomposed and the compounds formed which produce the flavors and odors of high quality butter. Different species of bacteria vary much as to the flavors which they produce, some giving rise to good, some to extra fine, and others to a very poor quality of butter. A majority of our common dairy species produce good but not the highest quality of butter. Up to the present time the butter-maker has had no means of controlling the species in his cream, but has had to use those furnished by the farmer. The bacteriologist can isolate and obtain in pure culture the species of bacteria which produce the best-flavored butter. He can then furnish them to the creameries to use as starters in cream ripening. The artificial ripening of cream promises much for the near future, although it has been applied only on a small scale at the present time. The use of a pure culture of a species from Uruguay improved the flavor of the butter of a Connecticut creamery over 20 per cent., according to expert estimates. Most species of bacteria in bad butter are probably associated with filthiness. Hence a proper inspection of the barns and dairies to insure proper conditions, especially cleanliness, will be a means of avoiding much of the trouble in cream ripening, and will in many cases result in an improvement of the butter.—Mark Lane Express.

The Typewriter on the Battlefield.

Military authorities appear to be exhausting every resource that will add to the rapidity of communication between the field of battle and the commanding officer. For a long time the telegraph was mainly relied on for the instant transmission of intelligence, and then the telephone was brought into active use. It has been recently seriously proposed that aids-de-camp and other carriers of information in time of war should be taught shorthand, in order to write down important communications with all possible speed, and the latest move in this direction is the introduction of the typewriter on the scene of military operations. One of the novel features of a recent military tournament in England was the use of the typewriter on the battlefield for the purpose of recording messages from signalers. It is stated that the typewriter operator was also an expert cyclist, and had his Remington mounted on the handles of his machine. Riding in and out among the horses and gun carriages, which he did without the slightest mishap, whenever he came to a standstill he instantly braced up the cycle by a handy contrivance, and pounded away at the typewriter while in the saddle. The message, when completed, was sent to the commanding officer in the rear by means of a trained dog.

Stamps for an African Chief.

Philatelists should note that a new postage stamp that is likely to become rare is being printed at the French Government stamp-printing establishment in the Rue d'Hauteville, in Paris. The department has been commissioned to produce them for the African chief, Menelik. The stamps are of the nominal value of 5, 10, 25 and 50 centimes, and 1, 2 and 3 francs. The first category (the cheaper sorts) represent a lion surmounted by a crown, holding a banner, and the others bear Menelik's effigy.—London News.

THE government experimental station in Iowa has lately proven that ground grain, when fed to colts makes them grow much more rapidly than unground, and the same amount fed them during April gave better results than in February.

RELICS OF BARBARIC DAYS.

Punishment Meted Out to Prisoners in a Delaware Jail.

It seems scarcely credible that in this advanced age of enlightenment, when we boast of a civilization that is as nearly perfect as it can possibly be, there survive such barbarous modes of punishment as the pillory and whipping post. But if Nellie Bly, she of globe-trotting fame, is to be believed, they are very much in evidence today, and can be found in the State of Delaware. She claims to have seen eight men publicly flogged and one man stand in the pillory of the penal institutions of that State last week. The place where this inhuman torture was inflicted was the county jail at New Castle, six miles from Wilmington. The punishment is meted out to the prisoners in the jail yard, and the public is always welcome. The law of the State requires that the whippings shall take place between the hours of 10 and 12.

The first sight that struck the visitor was an exhibition of the working of the pillory. In the middle of the yard, on a raised platform, it stood, in plain sight of the crowd that had assembled to witness the punishment inflicted. The man who was to be pilloried was convicted of forgery and was sentenced to spend one hour in it. Two men ascended the platform with him, and while one undid iron fastenings at the end of the pillory and lifted half the board, the other placed the man's head and hands in holes cut in the other half.

Then came the whipping post. After the man in the pillory had been released from his confining position and slowly and painfully straightened himself out, the sheriff appeared, holding in his hands a terrible looking cat-o-nine tails. He was closely followed by several men surrounding a negro, stripped to the waist. The negro walked to the post and held his hands for the officers to pinion them to either side with the iron bracelets. The victim was convicted of larceny and sentenced to five lashes. The punishment was administered by the sheriff, and although no blood was drawn, the white welts on the black skin told of the work of the lash. The second victim was also a negro and took his flogging without moving a muscle. The next man, also a negro, received ten lashes and wriggled painfully as the whip came down on his bare back. His crime was the stealing of a pair of pants valued at forty-five cents.

The first white man flogged that day was convicted of stealing a pair of shoes. This cost him ten lashes, five months' imprisonment, and his citizenship. He trembled violently as the whip swished through the air and landed on his back, leaving a heavy red mark. The next victim was an old-timer at the business, he having been flogged three times before. He, however, had not got hardened into the painful ordeal, and writhed in agony until his slender hands slipped out from the iron bracelets.

Fortunately Delaware is the only State in the Union where people are flogged, excepting Maryland, where this punishment is meted out to wife-beaters. In some parts of Delaware the whipping is done with a cowhide, which is more severe than the cat-o'-nine-tails. The number of lashes to be given, of course, varies with the enormity of the crime, sixty being the largest and five the smallest allotment. Women are not whipped, even when convicted of the same crime for which men suffer. It was formerly the custom to flog them, also, but this doubly barbaric relic of by-gone days died out about twenty-five years ago. The last woman to be tied to the whipping post was convicted of murdering her husband.

SENATOR DAVIS.

Brought Into Unusual Prominence by Denouncing the Kyle Resolution.

By his refusal to support Senator Kyle's mail train resolution, Senator C. K. Davis, of Minnesota, became a more than usually interesting personage. Senator Kyle's resolution was that interference with the transportation of the United States mail only should be considered any offense against the laws of the United States. Cushman Kellogg Davis was born in Henderson, Ky., in 1838, received a common school education, and in 1857 was graduated from the University of Michigan. He is a lawyer by profession. From 1862-'64 he was First Lieutenant of the 28th Wisconsin Infantry. He was a member of the Minnesota Legislature in 1867; was District Attorney of the State 1868-'73; was Governor 1874-'75. He took his seat in the United States Senate as a Republican March 4, 1887, and was reelected in 1893.

Great Scott!

Mrs. Elliott, of Delaware County, New York, started down a flight of stairs with a lighted lamp in each hand and the pancake turner she had been using held in her mouth. She fell, the handle of the implement was driven through her neck and the blade had to be cut off before the rest of it could be pulled out. And she is recovering.

MAINE state election Monday gave a heavy republican majority as usual.

EIGHT inches of rain fell in the country about Chicago last week. A great contrast to the long, dry spell.

THE pacing record was again lowered at Indianapolis last week, Robert J. beating his former time, making it 2:2½.

REPUBLICANS who claimed that wool would be cheaper, if on the free list, are surprised to learn that it is getting higher.

HEAVY rains in the northwest last week, checked and finally extinguished the terrible forest fires, and put a stop to the dreadful destruction of life and property.

IT WILL gladden the heart of Coxey's admirers in DeKalb county to know that their $100 has gone to help him get a big tent in which he will make his campaign speeches in the district where he is running for congress.

THE latest from the burned woods of the northwest is, that in some places, the high wind that followed the rains, fanned some of the fires into life again, and they broke out afresh though not as bad as before.

BAD wreck in the great Hoosac tunnel, A freight train was stopped to fix its engine, when a second freight, unable to see it because of smoke in the tunnel, dashed into it. Two lives lost and the tunnel blocked full of wreckage.

A TRAIN was wrecked on the Chicago & Northwestern road about 40 miles from Chicago Sunday night. Caused by a terrible storm that drove a lot of loaded coal cars from a sidetrack onto the main track. One killed and several badly hurt.

LIEUT. DONOVAN of the regular army, rode a bicycle 607 miles last week beginning at Cheyenne Monday morning at 6, and ending Saturday evening at 6:10 at Omaha. He made the run to convince government that long, rapid marches could be made on bicycles.

THOSE who sucked in the Coxey doctrine could easily put it into practice and try how it would work. They could go home, mortgage their farms for half their value, they have lots of money—for a time. And when pay day come, they would have to give up their farms

THE long talked of Hennepin canal, has been commenced. It is to connect lake Michigan at Chicago, with the Mississppi so as to give a direct water route to the Gulf of Mexico, and the Ocean. The great drainage canal of Chicago is to be utilized as a part of the big ship canal and work has been progressing on this part for several years.

DEALERS in playing cards, should remember that the new tariff law contains a clause requiring each pack to have a revenue stamp on. This will include all cards now on hand, This is another of those democratic laws, that a republicans say will "oppress the people and cause confusion in business." We know several people republicans and democrats, who have a great deal to do with cards, and they will be interested.

The G. A. R. are in Pittsburg this week by the thousand.

ANGOLA gave an overwhelming vote for waterworks last week.

Dr. G. W. McCONNELL, of Angola, was buried last Friday. He was one of the best known men in this section of the state.

GEO. HAZZARD, the gentle bank wrecker and general all around tough, so well known in Auburn, wants to be a congressman from the new state of Washington.

HUNTINGTON will have a big barbecue Oct. 4, at the date of the big democratic meeting there. All Indiana is asked to gather there and help at the barbecue and listen to speeches of famous men.

ILLINOIS soldiers have not yet been paid for their services in putting down the Debs rebellion. Indiana troops got their money two weeks ago. But Indiana's governor mortgaged his large farm to get the money. Illinois' governor is too nearly in sympathy with lawbreakers to care whether the men are paid or not GEORGIA democrats have opened up their campaign. Republicans not being numerous, they give most of their attention to the populists. The democrats favor bi-metallism rather than free silver. In other words we want to use both gold and silver in such quanities that both will remain at the same value, a silver dollar being as good as a gold dollar. And in order to secure for silver a wider field we are seeking to have other nations enter into an agreement with us as to the ratio, etc. This is a more sensible plan than the free and unlimited coinage.

THE rally to hear Owen's speech yesterday, brought out a fair attendance, and several brass bands and delegations. Owen did not come but Pat O'Donnell, of Chicago, a man hired to make speeches every two years, came in his place. He amused his hearers by showing what a great difference there was under the McKinley law in '93 and the same law this year. No other construction could be put on his, speech for we have had the new tariff law only two weeks, and as far as it has got into operation it has started the lines it affects into a more prosperous condition.

GRANT and Hooker counties, in Nebraska are being re-surveyed. Years ago, the contract was let to a lot of men who never made a correct survey and farmers and townspeople alike have had a world of trouble, even the new survey will cause trouble, as some men will find their houses or their best land given to a neighbor. A few townships near here, in Williams county, Ohio, had a similar experience a few years ago, Men who had built fine residences facing the road, suddenly found the road located back of the house in the orchard, while the house was on the land of another man.

THE Count de Paris, the head of the Orleans branch of the old royal family of France, died at his home near London, Eng., Saturday. He was really the head of both branches of the royal family—the Orleans and Bourbon—as the head of the latter, Count Chambord, is dead. The other royal family are the Bonapartes, but none are likely again to sit on the French throne, as the republic is giving satisfaction. Count de Paris and his brother served in the Union army in the rebellion for about ten months as captains on Gen. McClellan's staff, serving without pay. But when it began to look as if we would get into war with France over the French invasion of Mexico, they resigned and went home. The Count leaves one son and several daughters. He was a man of fine literary tastes and amiable character.

Fairfield Democratic Ticket.

The democrats of Fairfield nominated their township ticket Saturday, Joseph Huet, trustee; Henry Deetz, assessor; N. Crossley and Daniel Stomm, justices; Wm. Masters and John Reincœhl, constables. Since writing the above, we have received a more complete account from Albert Gardner. He says: The democrats of Fairfield township met in caucus on Saturday, Sept. 8, 1894, at Fairfield Center, Ind. to place nominations for the various offices. The caucus was called to order by Solomon Reincœhl; he was then chosen chairman of the caucus and Albert W. Gardner, secretary. Mr. H. H. Slaybaugh then tendered his resignation as committeeman for the east precinct and H. H. Deetz was chosen in his stead. Nominations for trustee were then in order and the names of Albert Hovarter, Wm. Shatto and Joseph Huet were announced. When the first ballot was taken it was found that no one had received the requisite majority; a second ballot was announced; Mr. Shatto then withdrew his name and after the ballot was taken Mr. Huet was announced as the successful candidate. Nominations for assessor were called for and the name of Henry Deetz being the only one announced, he was chosen by acclamation. Mr. Nathaniel Crossley and Mr Daniel Stomm were chosen as nominees for "justices of the peace" and Mr. John H. Reincœhl and Mr. Wm. Masters for constables. Mr. Hines the democratic nominee for treasurer of the county was present and gave a little speech of encouragement; Messrs. H. H. Slaybaugh, Solomon Reincœhl, Frank Seiler and Albert Hovarter each gave a short address enjoining unity and harmony of aim and action in their political work. All in all the caucus resulted pleasantly and satisfactorily.

Union Township Caucus.

The democrats of Union township met in the court room Friday evening, Sept. 7, to nominate their township ticket. There was a large attendance, the largest we remember seeing at a township caucus, those living in the country, being nearly all present, which, owing to the distance, is not always possible. Judge McClellan was made chairman, and C. M. Brown secretary. On motion by Boland the chair appointed tellers. They were Will Ryan and C. H. G. Jones. Nominations being in order, James McClellan nominated Willis Madden; P. D. West announced Geo. Lanning; H. J. Luce announced W. B. Brown. These being all the names for trustee, the nominations for justice were taken next, Jacob Walborn, C. C. Walter and Edward Ross were announced. For assessor, were D. D. Metcalf, Joseph Link and Emanuel Stafford. For constables Fred H. Kruger and L. S. Stoner. There being no other candidate for constable, the nomination of Kruger and Stoner was made unanimous. A motion by J. C. Henry prevailed, that in voting, we take the usual course, that is the voters to pass by the tellers and hand the vote to one teller, who deposits the same in hat. This was followed out. The vote for trustee stood:

Madden	102
Brown	28
Lanning	51
Necessary to a choice	91

And Mr, Madden was declared the nominee, Mr. Brown moved and Lanning seconded, that the nomination be made unamimous, which was done. In voting for justice, it was decided that as there were three candidates, each voter should put on his ticket the names of two men, as his choice for the two justices. This was done and the vote showed:

Walborn	76
Walter	126
Ross	65

Walborn and Walter being the highest, were declared the nominees.

Before the vote on assessor was taken, Mr. Stafford declined to run and his name was withdrawn. The vote resulted.

Metcalf	55
Link	74
Total	129

And Link was nominated. The meeting was harmonious throughout, and the voters were evidently getting waked up for the serious business of the campaign.

It was a gratifying fact that several democrats who have been advertised by populists and republicans as being tired of democracy, were at their usual places, moving on with the grand old party they had staid with so long. And it need not be forgotten, that in the long procession of those who marched past the tellers, with little ballots in their hand, were some who have been life-long republicans. There is room for all.

WATERLOO.

Tom Marsh is quite sick.

Frank Leas went to Butler Sunday.

Little Earl Luce makes a pretty picture in his wagon drawn by his goat.

Sam. Beck had a bad attack of bleeding at the nose a few days ago, but is out since on the street.

Mrs. Dr. Myers has been entertaining a house full of visitors for ten days past. Her mother left Waterloo Monday.

Mr. McDonald is assisting Mr. and Mrs. Johnson in the mental and physical labor of making their store even more beautiful than heretofore, for their grand opening the last of the week.

Since the spell is broken and a heavy rainfall first made us glad, we continue to receive a like blessing at intervals of a few days. Saturday evening the lightning was continuous, the rain poured down, and the large hailstones made a loud rattling.

Mrs. Phil Plum and her sisters, Mrs. Jessie Nichols, of North Judson, and Mrs. Andy Baxter, of Butler, left Waterloo Tuesday for Crystal City, Mich., where they expect to spend a week visiting relatives and eating quite a few peaches, as they will be in the great peach region.

Mrs. J. U. Winslow will sell at auction at her residence Thursday, Sept. 20, commencing at 10 a. m. and 1 p. m., carpenter's work benches and vice, bedsteads, child's crib, commode, barber's chair, safe for cellar, dishes, towel racks, scythe, barrel covers, whisky barrels, cupboard, iron kettle and frame used in making asphalt walks or roofs, clothes frame, trunk, clock, travelling sachels, cannon, presses, ice hooks, bath tub, sleigh robe, and many other articles too numerous to mention. These sales will continue each Thursday at same hours till all are sold. Mrs. W will also after this week sell at private sale.

Coxeyism Debaism and Populism.

It is difficult to believe that a DeKalb county citizen, whether an old-time one, or one recently imported, can be so devoided of good judgment and reason, as to take up with the wild doctrines the followers of Debs, Coxey and similar dangerous and crack-brained cranks, are preaching. Yet this is the unfortunate condition of a few of our people. Those wild opinions are really not worth noticing, and we would not notice them, so plainly foolish are they, were it not for the fact, that a few wellmeaning people are being deceived by them. So we call up some points.

First as to buying up all the railroads, etc. We have several times alluded to this extremely foolish idea, and have asked where we are to get the money to buy them with. We are met only with the thoughtless and stereotyped answer: "Issue more greenbacks." Well, suppose we should. That would add so much to our debt, as even the greenback is a debt, though it draws no interest. But as the railroads would not sell out, what would we do about it? They say, confiscate the railroads." But if it is right to confiscate railroad property, it is right to confiscate other property, and according to Coxey and his followers, the U. S. government, could look over the field and take forcible possession of any good paying factory, farm or mine that it pleased. The government would be the leading law breaker, robber and anarchist in the land. And so this fact could be carried into every line of business, and we would be at the mercy of the powers that happened to be at the head of things. Coxey's plan, which the populists are now going crazy over, goes even further than the railroad purchase. His idea is to have government own everything in sight on land and water, and under the land and sea. For if the states, counties and cities should follow his advice and bond themselves for a debt equal to half their assessment, not one of them would be able to pay out. All would be bankrupt in a few years, and the kind old government that lent them the money would have to foreclose. It would soon own Auburn, Dekalb county and everything else. This in turn would bankrupt the government and chaos would reign over the land. This from remarks we have heard, would suit quite a number of them. But one debt would not be all. The same set of people would be owing fifty per cent of their assessment in several places. Take an Auburn man for example. According to Coxey and his local prophets, this man would have to assum as a tax payer a debt of 50 per cent of his assessment, as a citizen of Auburn. Then the county would wring him in for 50 per cent on a county debt. Then comes the state with another 50 per cent, and this with the increase they wish in the indebtedness of the United States would put each citizen into debt for taxes alone, to the extent of twice his entire assessment. Then we would all be happy, of course, and every day would be Sunday. Did the world ever hear of such twaddle as this Coxey followers preach?

The Congressional Convention.

The democracy of this district has consummated the serious blunder against which we and many other democrats have warned them. They have renominated McNagny for congress for a second term in spite of the ridiculous figure he has made in his first. The meeting was called to order in Sængerbund Hall, Ft. Wayne, Tuesday at 2 p. m., and Chairman Zollars made permanent president. McNagny, instead of taking the chances of a nomination, made his speech first, a long one, which he read. After speaking of the work of congress, he came to his own case, and twice earnestly asked to be renominated. This was a sorrowful spectacle for a democratic convention and was a source of regret by his friends, for all day he had been hearing of the enemies he had made by his foolish and dishonest management over the district. After his last appeal he sat down. Even then, if another name had been sprung on the convention, it would have succeeded. But no one would allow his name to be used to cut a man off from a chance at a second term. Only one name being announced, they were proceeding to vote it by acclamation, when L. W. Rowe, of Lagrange objected and asked a roll call of the counties. This was done, and here the trouble began. The real sentiment against McNagny could not be concealed. DeKalb county made a stubborn fight and only gave him 7 votes out of 12 present, and a part of these would have deserted him if there had been any other candidate. Allen voted 2 against, but later on these were whipped into line. Lagrange gave 6½ against, Noble 6. DeKalb county was entitled to 18 votes, and of these not more than four could have been turned to McNagny, if there had been another candidate. Five DeKalb townships did not send a delegate. These were Newville, Stafford, Troy, Franklin and Smithfield. Several of the others only sent one. The whole affair has been unfortunate from the first. McNagny's selfish ambition and the selfishness of the two or three who presume to own the party jointly with him in this county have got the party into this trouble. But what do they care? Now, there are serious complications arising that we had hoped to keep in the background. There is no use concealing the fact that many democrats who believe in free silver will vote for Free Kelly, as that is about as far as he agrees with the populists, being a democrat in all else. McNagny owned in his speech that he voted against free silver. These two facts will render Kelley a dangerous competitor. Whatever evil results may come of all this, the COURIER did its duty without fear or favor, and washes its hands of whatever ill effects follow.

FIRST DEMOCRATIC RALLY.

Capt. W. R. Myers, democratic candidate for secretary of state will open the campaign in this county, Sept. 20. He will speak here at 2 p. m. of that day, and at Garrett the same evening. Let every democrat and every friend of just and reasonable government come and hear him.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

By virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Eva Christie is plaintiff and Allen Andrews, Sarah E. Andrews and John Yarde, Jr., are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of two thousand seven hundred seventy-nine dollars and eight cents ($2,779.08) with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on Saturday, Sept. 22, 1894,

Between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day, at the door of the court house of DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to-wit:

The northwest quarter of the northeast quarter of section one (1) in township thirty-three (33) north, range twelve (12) east. Also all that part of the east half of said northeast quarter of section one (1) township and range aforesaid, that lies north of the right of way of the Wabash, St Louis and Pacific railroad (Eel River Division) and the west bank of Little Cedar Creek, excepting one and one-fourth (1¼) acres of land from said last described parcel heretofore sold and deeded to Mary Ann Carper by George Clark by deed dated March 24, 1874, all situated in DeKalb county, state of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

The commissioners had to pay a bill for the breaking of a bridge south of town recently. That is one of the unjust phases of having too much law to govern you. We must pay for all losses by bridges breaking down, but there is no law to pay the commissioners to go over the county and see what bridges are getting weak. All the bridges should be carefully inspected at least once a year, but the commissioners must do it for nothing.

The Butler Review is authority for the statement that Coxey broke the populist temperance plank a few minutes before he made that $100 speech in Auburn. He went to the saloon in the Glazier House ann treated himself and a number of bystanders to whisky straight. A Butler man got the benefit of one drink and so the story came out. Coxey's temperance plank is like that of several other populists we know. It can be easily bent, if not fractured.

Peru is advertising a street fair, and they make the ridiculous assertion that it is "the first free street fair ever held in Indiana. Yet they are on the same railroad with Butler, and the latter had a successful free street fair last year and this year. Peru needs newspapers.

We are told that a number of our local wheelmen will make a volunteer run to Huntington and return at an early date. They talk of next Sunday, but we would think that should be a day of rest, and surely there is no rest in riding 100 miles in twelve hours.

The State Fair will open at Indianapolis next Monday, Sept. 17, and all indications point to one of the most successful fairs in the history of the State. The races will be exceptionally fine, as some of the best horses in the country will compete for the prizes. The railroads are offering exceptionally low rates during the week. *

The ladies of the State are showing more interest this year than ever before in the state fair, which will begin at Indianapolis next Monday, Sept. 17, and continue during the week. The prospect for a fine show in the Woman's Department was never better—and the musical feature of the fair cannot help but interest all of the lady visitors. The railroads are offering low excursion rates. *

THE ELKHART INSTITUTE of Art, Science, and Industry, Elkhart, Ind. Instructions thorough and eminently practical. Terms very reasonable. Expenses low. Both sexes admitted. Careful home training. Location attractive and healthful. Day and evening sessions. Diplomas awarded. Fall term, Aug. 21st to Oct 26. Circulars free. Address, H. A. Mumaw, M. D., Sec'y, as above.

There was a terrible wind or cyclone in a part of the storm that struck us Saturday evening. We say, a part of the storm for some places, there was no great wind. But a mile or two west of here, there was a good deal of damage done. There seemed to be a circle that struck Charlie Rugman's timber in one direction, Casebeer's in another and tore down a great deal for them and for Phillip Fluke. At the Junction, it took off part of the roof of the Monitor factory. A great many fences were blown down.

Rebecca Wilkinson, of Brownsvalley, Ind., says: I have been in a distressed condition for three years from Nervousness Weakness of the Stomach, Dyspepsia and Indigestion until my health was gone. I had been doctoring constantly with no relief. I bought one bottle of South American Nervine, which did me more good than any $50 worth of doctoring I ever did in my life. I would advise every weakly person to use this valuable and lovely remedy; a few bottles of it has cured me completely. I consider it the greatest medicine in the world." Warranted the most wonderful stomach and nerve cure ever known. Trial bottles 15 cents. Sold by Robbins and McCord druggists Auburn Ind. 34tf

The famous musical composers have taken a hint from their literary brethren, and are securing an advance magazine publication for their compositions just as the authors publish their novels in serial form. The Ladies' Home Journal, which was practically the first magazine to offer this outlet to composers of reputa, finds all the musical men rallying to it, Sir Arthur Sullivan announcing that the new song which he has just finished will be published in that magazine. Patti's veteran conductor, Arditi, has given his new waltz to the Journal, while Riginald de Koven's new song goes also to the same periodical. Strauss has sent his new waltz to the editor, Sousa a new march, and Mascagni, of "Cavalleria Rusticana" fame, is writing a piano score.

On Friday at 10 a. m. the Edgerton Base ball club, and Hicksville club will decide the championship between these two nines. Both clubs have won two games each, excitement is sky high over the game.

Many of our people will doubtless visit Indianapolis next week, during the meeting of the State Fair. The great stock show, the racing and the poultry exhibit will catch the men, while the ladies will enjoy the grand display in the Woman's and Floral departments. The big spectacular exhibition, The Last Days of Pompeii," will also attract many visitors.

Clapp's fine Views

Among the people who came up from Ft. Wayne Tuesday evening. was Mr. McMorgan, of Butler, who while waiting at the Ft. Wayne station discovered a man named James Cook, who was wanted at Butler for stealing. He watched Cook, and seeing he was going to take the same train, telegraphed to Auburn, and had Sheriff Ralston meet them at the Junction. As the train slowed up for the crossing there, Cook quietly slid out and took a walk down the Wabash track to the west. But the officer overhauled him, and he now languishes in the bastile.

Brown Culbertson & Boland got up a laughable invention last week, to represent a bicycle and rider. The wheels are grindstones, the seat, a shovel the connecting framework is mainly of shovel handles; the headlight is a dark lantern; a pint oil can is attached, as well as a big, formidable looking pipe wrench. But the rider takes the decoration. His body is a big oil can, the head and neck are two balls of twine, on which a tin tunnel does duty as a cap. The hands are little garden weeder rakes and look skeleton-like, the handles of the weeders which serve as arms, are dressed up in sleeves of rubber hose. The legs are also of rubber hose. The pedals of the machine were grindstone cranks on which the ghostly feet rested, one forward and the other back, while the claw-like hands grasped the handles of a drawing knife that served as the bicycle handles. As an advertisement it was a big card, but its great strength came in as a fun maker in which line it beat all the records. We understand that Frank Draggoo is the chief architect, though several heads and hands left the impress of their genius on it.

The Dispatch tries to coddle people into the belief that Isaac Hague would make a better commissioner than R. S. S. Reed. And the reason he gives is, that Hague has already "assisted the republican town board to reduce the town levy." It appears that it must have been a hard job to take four such "able business men" to reduce one little item, They must be great business men if they can't reduce the levy after the democratic board had so reduced the town debt, and got most of the improvements finished. The levy would have been reduced this year, by any board that was in power, and it need not take four men to do it either. From the way the Dispatch talks, we suppose the one democratic member fought against the reduction, and it took the combined strength of there four great business men to choke him into acquiescence. But the best way to compare Hague and Reed, is by their records, as trustees of Union township at different periods. As a trustee Reed has shown up head and shoulders above him, and will show up so as a commissioner. The people will make a grand mistake if they think Hague is an abler or better man. As to the town board, why should they not reduce the levy? They are making very few improvements, as nearly all were made by the democratic board of the year before, and the present board appears to be doing nothing now, so they can make a reduction of the levy and use this in the campaign. They seem to be running the board for politics rather than for the people.

E. M. Bishop, the tobacconist, has added a cigar factory to his establishment. Mr. Lockwood, formerly of the firm of Lockwood & Marxer, does the work, a room being fitted up on the east side of the store for his use.

We have received from Council Bluffs, an invitation to the marriage of Thomas Austin, a former Auburn boy to Miss Jennie Wallace of that place. As a lad Tom was well liked here and we hope he has done well.

Queer stories come to Auburn about Bliss' meetings, at points where he speaks in the country. Last Saturday he held forth to about 100 populists, democrats, republicans, and prohibitionists at New Era. As usual silver was his theme; paper money his subject; finances, what he talked about. But he got sidetracked long enough to tell them that the "corrupt old parties" were both desperately wicked and altogether gone astray. "Just look at the democratic times we are having, and the republicans are no better. I was coming down here this very day, when I met a poor old farmer staggering along with a wheel borrow on which he was taking his stock of tomatoes, cabbage, etc to town. The times are so hard he could not afford a wagon." And then Bliss went on to moralize on the desperate condition the country is in and how necessary it was that he, Bliss, be sent to the legislature to represent this benighted people and get them free coinage of silver. He grew so pathetic, that one old man leaned his head on his hands and dropped off into that peaceful slumber that even Coxey could not disturb. But to return to the doleful tale of the poor farmer and his overtaxed wheelborrow. It appears that as Bliss was going south out of town, he met our old friend Mart Muhn, who is a gardener, and being close to town, has for a long time been in the habit of bringing in small quantities of vegetables on a wheelborrow. Mr. Muhn will be tickled when he reads what a wail of pity he caused the champion of Coxey.

The Eagle Manufacturing Co.

After an idleness of a year or more, the foundry and stove works at the Junction, known as the "Eagle Manufacturing Co" started its machinery on Tuesday. It is in the hands and under the management of Samuel McAnally, who was its foreman for several years, and who is a good workman, and thoroughly understands the business. They will as heretofore manufacture cooking and heating stoves, Kettles, dinner bells, iron culverts, and make a specially of adjustable fire backs for stoves. They will do all kinds of casting in iron and brass and do a general foundry business. It will pay all who need work of that kind to see them.

A Cure for Croup.

Among the incidents of childhood that stand out in bold relief, as our memory reverts to the days when we were young, none are more prominent that severe sickness. The young mother vividly remembers that it was Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured her of croup, and and in turn administers it to her own offspring and always with the best results. Ask Robbins & McCord. 39

School Postponed.

There will be no school next week, the time of beginning having been again postponed, as the few lingering cases of diphtheria made this course advisable. We hear of no new cases, but for fear there might, be the board thought best to wait. Those who desire to attend need have no fears, for the school will not begin till all possible danger is over. The spread has been stopped, or rather there has been no general epidemic. All the cases have been got under control.

Campbell-Husselman.

Married, at the residence of the bride's parents, Sept. 11, 1894, Mr. Frank Campbell, of Auburn, and Miss Jennie Husselman, of Waterloo, Rev. C. M. Pierce, of the Evangelical Lutheran church of Waterloo, officiated. To the strains of the wedding march, Mr. Campbell and Miss Husselman entered the room and standing beneath a beautiful arch of golden rod and autumn flowers, were united in holy wedlock, after which the company did justice to a bountiful repast. About fifty guests witnessed the ceremony. The presents were numerous and useful and were valued at $75. An enjoyable time was experienced by all. May happiness be theirs all through life.

IN 1684 nearly all the birds of Europe were killed by the cold. Wolves entered Vienna and other large cities, and, driven by hunger, attacked the people in the streets.

LOOK around among your acquaintances, and if you see some close-fisted merchant that underpays his clerks and will walk a mile to save car fare, who is spending hundreds of dollars in advertising, you can safely wager that it pays.

STATISTICS show that all occupations that expose the person to dust predispose to tuberculosis, and that persons who follow sedentary occupations are likewsse predisposed to the disease. Those who live outdoors are almost entirely free from it. Contagion, especially due to floating germs, seems to explain these facts sufficiently.

THE National Guard of Pennsylvania consists of 8,700 men, and all but seventy-three of them reported for duty at the camp on the field of Gettysburg. The National Military parks of the United States will be great places for the mustering of its forces, and the movement to put the field of Shiloh on the same footing as Chickamauga and Gettysburg ought to go through without delay.

THE "yellow jacket," about which so much has been heard of late, is rather a vest than a jacket. It is made of rich yellow satin, has no sleeves, fits the wearer closely, and reaches to the thighs. It is fastened on the side with small buttons, and has embroidered on the bosom the royal dragon of China. There are but half a dozen men in the Chinese Empire who are entitled to wear it.

IT is well known that a reward of £500 was offered for the head of John Hancock, whose bold, impressive signature is so remarkable on the Declaration of Independence. Well, he signed the document as if he wished to throw his whole soul into his pen, and rising from his seat, exclaimed: "There, John Bull can read my name without spectacles. He may double his reward, and I'll put him at defiance."

ALL legal treatises and documents during the twelfth and two following centuries were written in a stiff, affected, and undecipherable hand called "court hand." It was intentionably illegible, that the knowledge of the law might be effectually kept from the common people. The manuscripts of the ninth, tenth and eleventh centuries seem to be all written by the same hand. This was due to the influence of Charlemagne, who selected a particular style of handwriting, adopted it, and ordered every scribe to write after that as a copy.

IT is not the fellow who goes around whining about unkind fate and the wreck it has worked in his individual case that is going to help things out a mire, but the man who recognizes that his contriving brain and strong right arm are a part—and no mean part, either—of fate, who goes to work to gather up what is left, and put the best face possible on an ugly situation. Such are the brave and cheerful spirits who in every crisis of whatever kind tread down the nettle danger and pass flyingly over the wrecks of past imprudence.

IT now and then transpires that a detective is an ass, but instances are rare in which he is a horse. A sagacious equine quadruped has just been the means of the arrest of some daring robbers, and the recovery of a large portion of their booty. The police, having caught the horse with one of the villains, set him loose and followed him, believing that he would find his way back to the place from which the thief had taken him. So it proved, the horse adroitly picking his path to the stable where the stolen goods and a whole nest of the villains lay concealed. The Chicago police department ought to pension that horse.

THE Greeks have a beautiful custom, when entertaining company, of taking a piece of lead and dividing it in twain, one half of the piece being kept by the host and the guest taking the other as they part. These two pieces of lead are kept as heirlooms, being handed down from generation to generation and from family to family. In process of time perhaps one of the family—it may be the one to which the former host belonged—is in want or trouble. The heir then goes with his odd piece of lead to find the other family with the corresponding piece of lead; and no sooner is the tally completed than the former hospitality is renewed and eternal friendship pledged.

THEY are naturally exercised in Great Britain over Senator Hill's bill for the prevention of Anarchists. With Germany, France, Italy, and even Switzerland taking similar steps, it follows that England will remain the only asylum for these troublesome gentry. But the true Briton's vanity is equal to the occasion. A usually sane authority, speaking on the occasion, says that there will be undoubtedly a big influx to the country. The enmity of the foreign police will educate the Reds in the arts of concealment. The conclusion drawn is that the necessity of watching disguised bomb-throwers and stabbers at every street corner will be excellent practice for the detectives of Scotland Yard. We hope that it will sharpen the wits of London's police, for they seem to need it. But won't this sort of experience be rather dear to pay for? However, if London says, "Hang the expense," nobody else need object.

EVERY few days some apology for manhood with more brass than brains jumps up with an essay on girls. This abominable class of literature always begins with a sneer and ends with a kick. A distinct flavor of sourness permeates it. The genuine girl is absolutely unessayable. Nobody understands her; she doesn't understand herself. She is a delightful bundle of contradictions. As wise as a serpent, she is as innocent as any sucking dove. She is modest as a violet and sweet as a barrel of molasses. She is as rosy as a winter apple and as plump as an Indian summer partridge. She knows something about the piano, and lots about making biscuit. She is tender with her sweetheart, and sets the dog on the other fellow. She is an armful of delights, and blessed is the youth she takes into partnership in wearing out the sofa. She is a daisy and a dumpling, and in all God's great creation there is nothing worthy to be named in the same breath with her.

THE Governor of Formosa evidently has a long and well-filled purse. As a good Chinese citizen he is now filled with the spirit of uncompromising and never-dying hatred toward Japan and all that is Japanese. He proposes to bring about the subjection of the Japanese Empire and the decimation of the Japanese nation even though it takes the last coin out of the old stocking into which he had been dropping his financial savings for some years. He has published a schedule of the rewards he will pay for the capture or destruction of Japananese fighting ships or the killing or capturing of Japanese soldiers or sailors. The sinking of a big Japanese warship will enrich those who do the sinking to the extent of $10,000; if the warship is a small one the destroyers will receive only $6,000. A Japanese officer, dead or alive is worth $200 to the Chinaman who has him, while the Celestial who is only lucky enough to get hold of an enlisted adversary will receive $150. Bearing in mind the great purchasing value of money in China and the extremely small wages paid throughout the Chinese Empire, the scale of prices is an extremely liberal one. A great many enterprising but unemployed Americans would like doubtless to assist in forcing the Governor of Formosa to make an assignment.

The Engaged Girl.

The engaged girl, with her brilliantly new ring and little airs of importance, is another easily recognized type. Out of the bevy of maidens who swarm on the piazzas or make bright the lawn and beach she is at once distinguishable by her indifference to that which absorbs those about her. This is the old-fashioned engaged girl, of course—not the up to date maiden who thinks nothing of accepting two or three separate and distinct pledges of affection, having given for each one a promise of marriage that she never means to fulfill, but which to her commercial soul appears a very nice, easy way of getting a really fine collection of jewelry. No, the engaged girl that the writer means is genuinely in love with the man whose ring she wears and with the lavish sweetness of womanly affection she doesn't care who knows it either. To her all the men are bores and she much prefers swinging in the hammock or strolling off for solitary rambles accompanied only by a book of poetry or a sentimental novel, to entering into any of the gaieties that were wont to delight her soul before the only man on earth made his appearance on the scene. One all absorbing diversion, however, remains to her. The clerk at the desk and the ruler of the postal destiny of the place that she is visiting receive much attention from the young woman. She is constantly receiving and sending long letters which can be boiled down to one sentence, "I love you."

Personal Tribute.

Initials may be made to stand for a good many things which they were never intended to indicate. Everything depends upon the ingenuity of the reader.

An old negro servant who had noticed "Washington, D. C." stamped upon envelopes received by his mistress, said one day:

"I jess like to know, Miss' Hannah, w'y dey allus put dem letters 'D. C.' after de name ob Wash'n'ton, on dem env'lopes?"

"What do you suppose they stand for?" inquired the mistress, who always enjoyed the old man's answers.

"W'y" said Sambo, after a moment's reflection, "I's been tinkin' dey mos' likely stood fer 'Daddy ob his Country;' but I wa'n't 'xackly sure and sartin but w'at dey might mean some udder ting; fer Wash'n'ton he was a great man, and 'pears like dere's a mons'ous deal to be said 'bout him."

Living By Hanging.

A Continental beggar has been living very comfortably by hanging himself. He would choose a tree near where young children were playing, string himself up and groan to attract their attention, so that they would run for help. He would be cut down and restored, and a letter in his pocket would explain his attempted suicide by a statement of his destitution. But he knew how to attach the noose so as to avoid strangulation.

FINE RACING AT THE STATE FAIR.

A Commodious Grand Stand, Splendid Track, Good Horses and Interesting Races.

GRAND STAND AS PHOTOGRAPHED SEPT 22ND. 1892.

The Indianapolis race course on the Indiana State Fair Grounds has the proud prestige of being the fastest track in the world. It was here that the Queen of the Turf, Nancy Hanks, made her famous race against time in 1893, and the thousands in the beautiful grand stand saw the gallant little mare cut away the seconds from the trotting record of the world. It was here that she made her mark of 2:04¾. The track is built upon the best known principles and racing can be seen from the grand stand along every foot of the mile of beaten earth.

The races at the State Fair in 1894 promise to eclipse anything heretofore seen on the grounds.

THE municipal administration just inaugurated at Kokomo is pursuing vigorously the issue on which they were elected—that of the strict enforcement of the laws. At the first meeting of the Council every policeman except one was summarily dismissed. A. L. Martin, who is Captain of Company L, State militia, and Sir Knight Captain of the Kokomo Division, Uniform rank, K. of P., being the only survivor on the force. Four new men are in their places. At the same session an ordinance was introduced to remove screens from saloons during unlawful hours, nights, Sundays and legal holidays. The order will pass and be strictly enforced.

THE nineteenth annual reunion of the "Old Brigade" Association, composed of the Eight and Eighteenth Indiana Infantry Veteran Volunteers and the First Indiana Battery, will be held at Winchester on the 18th instant, that date being the anniversary of the battle of Opequan, or Winchester, Va.

H. M. WILLIAMS, a balloonist, ascended 3,000 feet in the air at Fort Wayne. He lowered himself fifty feet by a rope and attempted to pull his parachute loose. The huge umbrella would not work and he was compelled to climb, hand over hand, to the trapeze. He came down in safety with the balloon.

MAT TUTTLE, traveling salesman for the Wysor & Hibbit's flour mill at Muncie, was badly scalded at the mill. He was assisting engineer James Doland in fixing a steam pipe near the boiler, when a plug flew out of another pipe and he was deluged with scalding water. The flesh on his breast and back was fairly cooked. His condition is very serious, but not fatal.

PETER O'ROURKE, supposed to be the oldest man in Indiana, was found dead in bed in the county house at Valparaiso, of which he has been an inmate for nearly thirty years. He came to America in the early part of this century and at one time was very wealthy. He claimed to have served in a war in Ireland in 1798 and, as near as he could tell, was 115 years of age.

PANHANDLE freight, No. 79, westbound, in charge of Robert Lashley, conductor, and C. C. Jenkins, engineer, was wrecked at Knightstown, by a broken rail. Head brakeman Healy was killed and eight cars were demolished. The train was heavily loaded and was running at a high rate of speed. Healy was a new man on the road and his home was at Noblesville.

JOSEPH WOODS, a prosperous farmer of Brandywine Township, Shelby County, is the possessor of a week-old pig which has six legs. The extra legs are joined to the pelvis and to the rear of the hams. The animal is in a healthy condition, and bids fair to live to maturity. A close examination shows that there are two animals, which have been united about the middle lumbar vertebra.

HOG cholera has broken out in Howard County and is raging to an extent never before equaled. In the past four days hundreds of hogs have died, some farmers losing their entire drove. The epidemic appeared in several sections of the county at the same time, and is more quickly fatal than ever known there before. The farmers are greatly alarmed. The loss already reaches many thousand dollars.

RICHARD MCGRIFF and his brother George, twins, celebrated their ninety-third birthday at the former's home near Decatur recently. They are undoubtedly the oldest twin brothers in the United States. Both are quite spry, walk without canes and read without glasses. One thing remarkable in the history of their lives is that neither ever used tobacco in any form nor took intoxicating liquors. Each owns a well improved farm.

JOHN LEWIS' 4-year-old child was saved from instant death at Greenfield, the other night, in a very peculiar manner. The little fellow was sitting on the Panhandle tracks when the limited mail came thundering along. When within a few feet of the child a small dog tried to jump across the track. The engine hit the canine and knocked it against the child, the force being great enough to land it out of the way of the train. The dog was killed.

Kahn & Bros., Hamilton, Ohio, pan-making machine; Charles T. Cox, assignor of two-thirds to M. J. Moon and W. T. Bowers, Liberty, disinfecting apparatus; Michael Gleason, Liberty, fence machine; Edward and L. Hedderick, Pettit sawing machine; Isaac H. Henley, Straughn, fodder-tying device; Lauren Humbarger, near Columbia City, apparatus for transplanting plants; Frank G. Smiley, Goshen, beam scale; Adolph Weil, Greenfield, apparatus for boring wells; William A. Wildback, Indianapolis, target trap.

EDWARD KELLY, a glass blower, originally from East Cambridge, Mass., died at Swayzee. Kelly arose from his bed for a drink of water. He drank from a can of supposed rain water on a window ledge. The can contained concentrated lye the chambermaid had been using for cleaning the room. After four days of agony Kelly died.

REV. E. BOHLANDER, pastor of the German Evangelical Church at San Pierre, accidentally shot and killed himself. He was aroused by what he supposed to be burglars, and seizing a gun, started to go out, when the gun was discharged, blowing his head from the shoulders and six feet away from the trunk. He leaves a wife and several children.

A Discussion on Fishing.

"Papa," said Benny Bicobumper, who knew his father's weakness, "you know all about fishing, don't you?"

"Yes, my son," replied the elder Bloobumper graciously. "There is very little about that gentle sport with which I am not familiar."

"You know all about the right sort of bait to use, don't you?"

"Certainly."

"That's what I was telling Freddy Fangle, and we agreed to leave something about fishing for you to decide. We had a discussion about it."

"Well, Benny, I am very glad to see you take such an interest in fishing, as well as to see such confidence in your father's judgment. What was the point on which you and Freddy differed?"

"I don't know as we differed, exactly. Freddy didn't seem to quite agree with me, though."

"State the question, Benny."

"Well, fish run in schools sometimes, don't they, papa?"

"Yes."

"That's what I told Freddy."

"Didn't he believe it?"

"Oh, yes, he believed that all right."

"Then what is it you wish me to decide?"

"Well, I told him that when fish ran in schools the proper bait to use was bookworms."—Harper's Bazar.

A Reading Idea for Invalids.

To make an envelope library, take ten envelopes, and put either a short story, an essay, or illustrated article in each, writes Rose Crosby in an article describing an envelope library in the Ladies' Home Journal. Lay the envelopes lengthwise before you, and rule off a space at the top in which to write the words, "Envelope Library No. 1," "Envelope Library No. II," and so on through the series of ten. Rule off a space at the bottom in which to write the name of the story or article, and the author's name.

When the envelopes are filled tie the ten together with a dainty ribbon, and send them where they will do the most good.

For use in hospitals these dainty packages of stories have proved very satisfactory. Weary convalescents, and especially those never visited by friends, are not only pleased with the gift, but are relieved from the fatigue that accompanies the holding of a heavy book or magazine.

Disappointing.

The mental havoc wrought by a long pursuance of the game known as "Anagrams" is sometimes sad to contemplate. A young girl who had had a protracted struggle to transpose the words "Nice ham" into something else, at last asked eagerly:

"Are proper names allowable?"

"Oh dear, what a shame!" exclaimed the girl. "I thought I had found the anagram for this old 'Nice ham' at last. To be sure, I don't know as I ever really knew anybody by the name of MacHine, but it sounds as if it were some one's name, anyhow!"

And without a thought of the domestic "machine" so dear to thrifty householders, or to any of the other machines so liberally advertised at every turn, she swept the disappointing combination into a heap, and began her struggle afresh.

Envelopes.

A safety envelope, to prevent tampering, has been devised. On the flap, the words, "Attempt to open" are printed with a double set of chemicals, the first impression containing nutgalls, and the second green vitriol. If the flap be steamed or moistened in any way, the magic printing will appear.

ARE STILL IN DANGER

FLAMES THREATEN MANY TOWNS IN THE NORTH.

Smoke in the Lake Superior Region Shows Fires Unquenched—Losses Aggregate Incalculable Millions—Relief for the Suffering Subscribed Liberally.

Fire Still at Work.

Reports from the fire-swept north say that, while the worst is thought to be over, the danger is not at an end. Fire smolders at countless points in northern Wisconsin and Michigan, and strong winds would fan the sparks into a blaze that wou'd sweep away many towns that have thus far fought successfully against destruction. These rekindled fires were seen on all sides of Washburn and Ashland, and the trainmen report the existence of Ironwood, Hurley, Odanah, Bayfield, Sanborn, Marengo, Penoit and a dozen other settlements is threatened. Incendiaries, it is said, have tried to set fire to Ashland and Washburn. The authorities will not confirm the report for fear of lynchings, but it is known that the jails at both places are well filled with men against whom no charges have been recorded.

Port Wing, forty miles east of Duluth on the south shore of Lake Superior, was totally destroyed Wednesday. The town had 200 inhabitants. The town of Spencer, Wis., had a close call. Surrounded on all sides by growing fires, the people sent a call for aid to Stevens Point. One hundred men responded, and, with 300 able-bodied fire-fighters of Spencer, succeeded in saving the place. The village of Thorpe, not far from Chippewa Falls, also had a narrow escape. Succor sent by neighboring towns prevented the expected destruction, and the total loss was not more than $20,000. Still another town that caught fire, Rib Lake, in Taylor County, was saved by prompt and vigorous work, and the loss will not exceed $10,000. The little town of Bruce, near Chippewa Falls, was not so fortunate. Fires enveloped it, and its 100 inhabitants waded into the Chippewa river and covered their heads with wet blankets. After the fire had passed over them they saw an ash-heap where their homes had been. The loss is about $50,000.

Reports are to the effect that Carlton, Kerrick, and Barnum, Minn., are in danger. The fires now surround these places, and are raging furiously. So dense is the smoke at Carlton that the operator there said he could not see across the street. It is therefore impossible to know anything from any of these fires except from the spot itself. Seven people were burned to death in the fires at Marengo, a few miles south of Ashland, Wis. In Duluth the smoke is so dense that it is utterly impossible to distinguish even faint outlines of buildings 400 feet away. Offers of aid to sufferers, both in cash and goods, are coming in from distant States. The temporary relief fund subscribed in Duluth grows and now reaches over $10,000. There are over one thousand destitute refugees from the Hinckley and Sandstone fires now in Duluth. One of the sad features in the suffering on the scene of the catastrophe is the large number of cows, horses, sheep and hogs, as well as fowls that miraculously escaped the fires and are now suffering and slowly dying from hunger. The humane societies will at once take this part of the relief work in charge.

SHOWED THEMSELVES HEROES.

Forest Fire Horror Brought Many Brave Men to the Front.

The heroes of the forest fires were many, and their deeds are just coming to light. Most of these men have been too busy to say anything about themselves, and their stories have only come out when some of those they have saved are heard from. The stories of Engineer Root and crew, of the St. Paul and Duluth train, and that of the Eastern Minnesota crew, so nobly headed by Engineer Best, have been told, although the full force of their heroic deeds cannot be understood by one who has never seen or realized the terrors of forest fires. Ordinary heroes become helpless under such an ordeal, and only the truest metal can stand the test of such a furnace. Engineer Ed Berry and Conductor Harry Powers, of the Eastern Minnesota freight, come to the front rank among the heroes who have stood the trial by fire. The 478 people whom they picked up and carried back to safety in the box cars were rushed through the midst of the furnace over burning ties, in the face of the knowledge that another train in the opposite direction had the right of way, and was liable to be met anywhere in the dense smoke and fierce flame. That was a terrible ride over the 150-foot bridge across the Kettle River, which was blazing and trembling under the wheels, apparently ready to fall. Fifteen minutes after the train passed the ruins of the bridge went down into the river. It was at this time that a crowd of alleged men crowded into the cab and begged Engineer Berry to uncouple the train and carry them to safety, leaving the people in the cars to perish. They were summarily fired. The number of people saved by Gustave Wentz, a cool-headed German teamster, will never be known. He kept his horses on the jump and carried large numbers to places of safety. Several entire families were saved by him.

FIRE LOSSES TAX CREDULITY.

Computed by Tens of Millions—Railroads the Chief Sufferers.

The total loss caused to date by the forest fires in Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota cannot yet be estimated with much accuracy, but it is known that computable losses almost tax credulity. In four counties in Michigan the loss on standing pine is known to be at least $30,000,000, and in Northern Wisconsin and Minnesota the loss is even greater. Logs ready for the mill have been burned in so many places that they cannot be estimated. Millions represent the losses on saw-mill plants and other millions the sawed lumber awaiting shipment. Still other millions were lost in the houses and personal effects of the victims. The railroads have suffered in the burning of bridges and damage to tracks, but their chief deprivation is of the future. Vast stretches of country, denuded of their forests, will have nothing so ship and no inhabitants to pay freight and passenger tariffs. Men driven out by fire will not return, even if there was business to entice them. Damage at Sandstone, Partridge and Hinckley foot up $980,900 for the three towns, and is more than half the loss in the towns, but does not include the timber.

EXPORTS from Germany to the United States have more than doubled since the taking effect of the new tariff law.

WAITE WINS EASILY.

The Colorado Populist Leader Has Little Opposition.

Gov. Waite won a victory in the Populist State convention at Pueblo, Col., being renominated on the first ballot by a practically unanimous vote. The opposition failed to develop their promised strength. Thomas M. Patterson, leader of the opposition to Waite appeared on the stage and endeavored to speak. He was allowed but five minutes. Nothing he could say in five minutes, he said, would make any impression upon the delegates, and he would therefore simply enter the protest of the minority. Ed Holden, anti-Waite, attempted to speak, but was howled down. Thereupon the Patterson delegation from Denver left the hall, followed by about a dozen other delegates.

GOV. WAITE.

Gov. Waite was renominated on the first ballot, receiving all but half a dozen votes, which were given to Congressman Pence. The nomination was later made unanimous. When introduced to the convention he was greeted with tremendous cheers. Gov. Waite, after thanking the convention for the honor bestowed upon him, said: "I do not take this as an indorsement of all my official acts, as I know I have made many grievous mistakes; but I take it as an expression of confidence in me, and that I have acted honestly, if not always wisely.

MINNESOTA DEMOCRATS.

Nominate a Ticket at the State Convention in St. Paul.

The Minnesota Democratic State Convention at St. Paul nominated a ticket almost by acclamation, only one position taking a full ballot. The full ticket chosen is as follows:

Governor—General G. L. Becker, of St. Paul.

Lieutenant Governor—John Ludwig, of Winona.

Secretary of State—John B. Haines, of Morrison County.

Auditor—A. Bierman, of Goodhue County.

Attorney General—Logan Breckinridge, of Olmstead County.

Treasurer—C. L. Lambert, of Carver County.

Chief Justice—Seagrave Smith, of Minneapolis.

Clerk Superior Court—Thomas Kurtz, of Clay County.

The platform reaffirms Democratic doctrines; denounces the protective tariff; indorses President Cleveland's administration; favors free coinage of silver whenever it can be accomplished consistently with the maintenance of a sound and stable currency; favors the popular election of United States Senators; demands rigid economy in public affairs; denounces the American Protective Association; commends the Democratic tariff bill; favors taxation of railway lands; and believes in arbitration.

JAPANESE IN A PANIC.

American Consul Surrenders Two Supposed Spies to the Chinese.

Shanghai advices say the surrender to the Taotai outside the settlement limits, by the American Consul, of two Japanese who were recently arrested accused of being spies, and who had been under the protection of the United States, has created a panic among the Japanese in this country. The latter believed themselves to be safe under the protection of the United States, and their alarm is increased in view of the report that their two countrymen now in the hands of Taotai are to be immediately executed. The Chinese authorities, when the prisoners were surrendered, pledged themselves not to torture the captives and to give them a fair trial. All the Japanese in this city, numbering about 300, are making preparations to leave China at the earliest moment possible. Many have already fled. The Yokohama Specie bank branch is transferring its business to the Comptoir d'Escompte during the war. The Japanese merchants are selling out their business and preparing to leave the country.

EMPEROR OF JAPAN.

TRIAL OF DEBS BEGUN.

Judge Woods Hears Evidence in Contempt Cases Against A. R. U. Officers.

With the calling of Judge Woods' court in Chicago Wednesday morning the work of rehearsing the events of the recent railroad strike and crystallizing them in numberless folios of dry legal documents was begun in earnest. The contest, while it lacks the dash and excitement which marked the days and nights when the attempt was made to enforce the Pullman boycott, promises to be a battle royal between the opposing attorneys, and the questions to be decided, it is asserted, are hardly less in importance than those involved in the strike and boycott. It is generally admitted that the case will be carried to the Supreme Court, no matter in whose favor it is decided. The case is simply a continuance of the proceedings begun in July for contempt of court against Eugene V. Debs, George W. Howard, Sylvester Keliher and L. W. Rogers, officers of the American Railway Union. The defendants are also under indictments for offenses similar to those charged in the informations for contempt, but they have not yet been tried.

SUPPLY OF GRAIN.

Stocks in Chicago Elevators Greatly Exceed Those of a Year Ago.

The stocks of grain in Chicago elevators last Saturday evening were 25,385,000 bushels of wheat, 1,401,000 bushels of corn, 1,297,000 bushels of oats, 148,000 bushels of rye, and 16,000 bushels of barley. Total, 28,247,000 bushels of all kinds of grain, against 21,308,000 bushels a year ago. For the same date the Secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade states the visible supply of grain in the United States and Canada as 66,949,000 bushels of wheat, 3,151,000 bushels of corn, 7,204,000 bushels of oats, 304,000 bushels of rye, and 569,000 bushels of barley. These figures are larger than the corresponding ones a week ago by 2,178,000 in wheat and 114,000 in corn. The visible supply of wheat for the corresponding week a year ago decreased 359,000 bushels.

King Milan of Servia, once went to the hotel of a distinguished lady who was giving a bazar for the benefit of the poor children of Paris. As soon as the King appeared upon the scene she advanced toward him with a splendid silver salver in her hand, on which was beautifully emblazoned the family arms. On it lay a pretty little bunch of violets.

"How much, madame?" asked the King.

"Twenty-four louis, sir," was her soft response.

Milan paid her the sum she asked, with a courteous bow, took the salver from her hands, placed the bouquet in his buttonhole, and walked off with the tray under his arm.

The Fondest Hour Memory Recalls.

The question naturally suggests itself, Which is "the fondest hour memory recalls?" Has the reader, whose attention we hope to engage, ever had a controversy with his stomach on the subject of dyspepsia? After convincing proofs that the digestive organ has got the upper hand, has a wise resort been made to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters? If so, the "fondest hour" has been recalled by memory in the shape of a lasting resumption of the power to digest, assimilate thoroughly and eat heartily without fear of being uncomfortable afterward. When the dinner bell, that "tocsin of the soul," strikes agreeably upon the ear, the auditor then greets it as a welcome sound and hastens to obey its summons. The Bitters, so renowned as a stomachic, overcome, too, malarial, bilious and kidney trouble, and remedy nervousness, rheumatism and sick headache.

Use Is Second Nature.

The following dialogue passed before a court in England, between a medical witness and a lawyer.

"If a person, lying on wet straw, were deprived of all the comforts and the necessaries of life, would it not hasten death?" asked the lawyer.

"That would greatly depend on whether he had been accustomed to them," replied the doctor.

"Do you mean to tell us that if a person lived in a horse-pond it would not be injurious to him?" the lawer exclaimed.

"I think not, if he had lived for sixty or seventy years in it," said the doctor, calmly.

Marines and Mariners.

Outcroppings of jealousy between sailors and marines aboard United States ships are common enough. The marine is that awkward thing, a landsman at sea. He is a soldier, clad in a soldier's uniform, receiving a soldier's pay and subject to the drill and discipline of the army rather than of the navy. Doubtless he is a more shapely person from a technical point of view than the Jack tar, but he is vastly less picturesque and human. He is, on the whole, hardly so well paid as the sailor.—New York Sun.

If you will kindly help me, please,
I shall be very glad;
For I don't go to school, you know,
I'm such a little lad.

There's several things I can't explain.
That's why I ask of you
To tell me what you learn from books.
What makes the sky so blue?

Why don't green peas in peanut shells
Out in our garden grow?
And why should poppies have that name
If "pop!" they cannot go?

Why do not chestnut horses come
From off th' horse-chestnut tree?
And why are table-leaves so big
While tree leaves are so wee?

Why is it that a white man's told
So often that he's green?
Why is 't that boys should never talk,
But only just be seen?

Why aren't dumb-waiters sometimes dumb
As they had ought to be?
They're horrid, noisy, squeaky things
It's always seemed to me.

And why should little pitchers have
Their ears so very great,
When all I've seen have but a mouth?
What is the earth's true weight?

What makes the clouds stay in the sky
Instead of falling down?
Are matches used to light the stars?
Why don't the fishes drown?

If you'll just answer these for me,
You will be very kind,
And when you've done there are lots more
A-preying on my mind.

To Make a Ball that Bounces.

Boys who are always losing their balls can make them themselves. Take a common cork and cut it as round as possible, making it the size of an ordinary marble. Then tear off very narrow strips of rag and wind these, one at a time, around the cork until the ball is of the desired size. Then cover it with cloth, or if a boy is fortunate enough to have an obliging sister she will make a cover of crewels by dividing the ball into quarters, winding the wool several times around it, then buttonholing the quarters all round one-half, then the other half, till an edge is formed on each side of each quarter, then buttonholing with any colors of wool till the quarters are quite filled up, when a seam finishes them, and a capital ball is the result, costing nothing to make, but really serviceable.

Escape from a Geyser.

A Montana paper tells of the wonderful escape of a young man from a geyser, into which he had fallen. His companions, who were watching his movements, shrieked as they saw him fall. They immediately procured a light, and lowered it into the crater for as great a distance as they could with the means at their command.

Nothing could be seen; but by dropping pebbles and bits of wood, they discovered that at the depth of about fifty feet the crater was filled with water. They gave him up for lost and with sad hearts left the scene.

They carried the news to the nearest village, but before any steps could be taken to rescue their companion he appeared among them alive.

He stated that he fell into the water feet foremost and quickly rose to the surface and caught hold of a projecting rock, by which he supported himself. The water was warm and buoyant and soon began to rise rapidly.

As he rose with it he grasped the rocks that jutted out from the sides until he was able to crawl out just as the water became very hot, when he fainted on the edge of the crater from sheer exhaustion. Such an experience is said to be without a parallel. So we should think.

Interesting Experiments.

The following experiment will be found useful in evening entertainments or for children's parties. They are all harmless, and no trouble can result from them.

The first one is an optical illusion. Cut two figures, just alike, out of black paper—crosses will answer the purpose—and place them in front of a white paper, about three inches from the eye. Have the extremities of the crosses about half an inch apart. Look at them steadily and you will see three crosses, all black, and the middle one entirely separate from the others. If the crosses are made of two colers, as red and green, and placed on a black paper, the third one will appear white.

Another effective experiment is the floating lights; this is easily accomplished, and it is hard for people to see how the trick is done. Insert a medium sized nail in the lower end of a half candle. If there is trouble in pushing the nail in warm it a little. The candle is then placed in a tumbler and just enough water used to reach the top of the candle without touching the wick. The nail is used for a weight. The candle is then lighted, and it will burn at the top of the water until the candle is all used up. One would naturally suppose that the blaze would soon reach the water, and be extinguished, but the fact is, as the candle burns away it grows lighter, and being lighter, rises in the water. By using colored glasses to hold the water, it makes a very soft light for use at night in case of sickness.

Another singular experiment can be easily done. Procure a piece of tulle and have a glass filled to the brim with water. Moisten the cloth thoroughly and place it over the top of the glass, pressing it down tightly to the sides so it will adhere to the glass. Hold one hand tightly over the top of the glass, so no air can enter it, and turn the glass upside down. Then by drawing the glass away carefully sidewise from the hand, it will be found that the water will remain in the glass, and not even a drop will come through the tulle. It is well to try this over a sink the first time, as if one gets excited and removes the glass too suddenly, the water will all escape. The whole secret is in drawing the glass slowly sidewise away from the hand, instead of lifting it.

DOG CAUGHT THE DYNAMITE.

Remarkable Result of an Indiana Farmer's Experience in Carp Fishing.

Farmer Sunderland, residing in Henry County, had an exciting experience while experimenting on the result of exploding dynamite in his fish pond in an effort to capture some of the big carp, writes a Muncie, Ind., correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. He took a stick of the explosive, lighted a match to the fuse and pitched it into the water. He had not before discovered the presence of his faithful dog that stood by his side eagerly watching each movement his master made. The instant Mr. Sunderland pitched the explosive into the water the dog dashed in after it, and by going under the water a short distance he seized the dynamite stick in his mouth and swam to shore. He considered it a repetition of the same sport he had often before enjoyed, and his idea was to return the object to his master.

Mr. Sunderland quickly discovered that this would never do, and he ran to a fence near by, with the dog close on to him with the dangerous stuff in his mouth. John succeeded in getting on the fence, and would likely have been blown to atoms had not the explosion occurred before the dog got dangerously close. As it was, a big hole was torn out of the earth and the fence blown down for rods near by, but the man was not seriously injured. The dog needed no funeral, as not enough of him could be found to make a decent grease spot. Mr. Sunderland will satisfy himself with hook and line in the future.

Sturdy Swiss Girls.

In Switzerland girls on arriving at the age of 14 are regularly employed as porters, and during the season in that country may be seen daily carrying the baggage of travelers up and down the steep mountain paths.

G. A. R. AT PITTSBURG.

ANNUAL ENCAMPMENT OF A NATION'S HEROES.

Nearly 30,000 Old Soldiers Brought Together—A Fitting Place for This Meeting of Veterans—The Northwest Takes a Prominent Part.

"Boys" in Blue.

THE twenty-eighth national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, held in Pittsburg this year, brought together nearly 30,000 old soldiers. The conventions of the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic and the Woman's Relief Corps, auxiliary to the Grand Army, the Daughters of Veterans, the National Association of Naval Veterans, and the National Association of Union ex-Prisoners of War were held at the same time.

The reunion this year has been a notable one, the anniversary being held upon soil peculiarly sacred to the cause represented at this gathering. Pennsylvania gave more sons according to her quota as a sacrifice to the god of battles than any other State in the Union. She stood on the border in 1861. She sent the first volunteer defenders to the imperiled capital in the crisis following Sumter. Her genius ruled in the national camps and counsels, and within her limits, fair set among the charming hills of the Cumberland, lies the battlefield of Gettysburg.

Thousands of the "boys of '61" who have made their homes in the Northwest have reason to remember Pittsburg and to be grateful for the helping hand extended the soldiers by the people of that city. Pittsburg was the gateway through which thousands of troops passed to the "front," and again when mustered out of the service and returning home. The necessities of the brave lads were realized at an early day and measures take to provide for their most pressing wants. From August, 1861, to January, 1866, Pittsburg fed and sheltered 409,745 soldiers, besides caring for 79,460 sick and wounded. Aug. 3, 1861, the Pittsburg Subsistence Committee was formed for the work. Troops starting for the "front" carried rations for a given number of days, but delays often compelled them to go hungry. In this vicinity was an abundance of foodstuffs and the committee set about gathering all possible and providing the soldiers with meals. City Hall was the headquarters, but buildings and grounds near the railroad stations were secured and no boy in blue passed through Pittsburg with an empty stomach. The Twentieth Indiana Regiment, Col. Brown, was the first one furnished with food by the regularly organized committee.

Pittsburg had made elaborate preparations for the event, $75,000 having been subscribed for the entertainment of the veterans. Triumphal arches were erected for the Grand Army to pass under, and the merchants and citizens vied with each other to secure the most original and beautiful decorations.

Hard times prevented the attendance of a great many of the veterans who live at a distance, but Pittsburg is the heart of a district in which old soldiers are numbered by the thousands and the contingents from Pennsylvania and Ohio were large, while the Northwest was well represented. At the National Encampment at Washington two years ago Pennsylvania had the largest number of comrades in the parade, being 9,000 strong. Ohio was second in strength, and there was a big rivalry between the Keystone and the Buckeye States this year.

Northwest Well Represented.

The departments of Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Iowa, Michigan, and Ohio sent goodly delegations this year, though the numercial strength of the various bodies was less than might have been expected had the industrial and financial conditions of the country been good during the last eighteen months. The Illinois delegation to the encampment numbered over 1,000 men. Michigan sent over 500 men, Iowa was represented by 200, Indiana by 700, Wisconsin by 200, Ohio by 10,000, and Pennsylvania by about the same number.

The sessions of the encampment proper were preceded by immense parades of the surviving veterans of the army and navy. The parade on Monday, which the Pittsburgers saw marching down their 5th avenue, was one that through the novelty of its character, in an inland locality, was fully as interesting as the greater demonstration of the Grand Army "turn out," which took place on the following day. The first was a procession composed of the National Association of Naval Veterans, commanded by Rear Admiral Bradley S. Osbon, of New York City, and the Naval Cadets and the Sons of Veterans. Rear Admiral Osbon was Admiral Farragut's signal master, possesses an honorable record and has had a variety of experiences. The characteristics of the naval veterans are original and vary considerably from their comrades, who fought on land while they fought on the sea, and occasioned the interest that attaches to all things nautical among people who dwell far from the sea.

Tuesday saw the parade of the remnant of the great armies that subdued secession, saved the Union and made black men forever free. It is a glorious organization that Commander-in-chief John G. B. Adams led on that day. Pennsylvania was a State of patriots from her old war Governor, Curtin, down to her (almost) every humble son. The Department of Illinois had the right of line, followed by the Wisconsin and Ohio departments. Forty-five State and Territorial departments were represented. This day, also, the ladies of the G. A. R., the Woman's Relief Corps, and the Daughters of Veterans held council meetings, and the Union ex-prisoners of war held their national convention. At night there were camp-fires at a dozen places.

The twenty-eighth National Encampment of the Grand Army assembled Wednesday in the Grand Opera House. Addresses of welcome were delivered by Gov. Robert E. Pattison, Mayor B. McKenna of Pittsburg, and Mayor William M. Kennedy of Allegheny. Gov. McKinley, of Ohio, made a speech. The Ladies of the G. A. R., Woman's Relief Corps, and Daughters of Veterans held their first meetings; there were entertainments at the Exposition Building and Westinghouse works, and a camp-fire of the Union ex-prisoners of war.

Thursday was given up to business meetings and elections, a concert and reception, and a camp fire by the Sons of Veterans.

Mr. Whittier's Mother.

Even the man who promptly takes the part of the undermost dog will laugh at the woes of a sea-sick friend. His most woeful expressions, retched out of him by a twisting, collapsing stomach, excite no sympathy, but are memorized for quotation when a company is to be amused.

The poet Whittier was a grave Quaker and a tender-hearted man, but he told this amusing story of his mother's voyage by steamer to Portland:

"My mother," he said, "was not used to traveling by water, and she had a new Quaker bonnet made to go on her journey. When we were well out to sea, she became very uncomfortable, and took off her new bonnet, and placed it on a chair beside her.

"Her discomfort increased, she changed her position, and sat down on the new bonnet. Thee knows Quaker bonnets' won't bear sitting on. This was too much for the good woman, and she said:

"'John, I want thee to take me right home.'

"'But, mother, we are way out to sea; I can't take thee home.'

"'Can't thee get the boat to turn round? I feel very sick, and my new bunnit will never do to wear to friend Smith's in Portland.'

"'No, mother, thee'll have to make the best of it now.'

"'O John, thee must never take me again on the water. I do' know as I shall ever live to get home.'"

Lamp Rock of Central Asia.

On the shores of Lake Rangkul, in the Cashgar mountains in Central Asia, stands the famous "Lamp Rock of Asia," which is so called from a cave in its side, from which a constant stream of pale greenish light is emitted. Ney Elias, the English adventurer, who passed it in 1885, thinks it possible that the light is due to some phosphorescent mineral in the sides of the cavern near its opening. The natives of that section have never attempted to investigate the matter, each seeming content with the story told by his father, which is this: "The cave is the dwelling-place of a demon, who guards vast treasures stored there, and the light is from a diamond worn in a band around his forehead."

Wouldn't Stand Nick Names.

Two boarding-school girls were sitting in their room in the dark discussing the torments and trials of the day over a jar of jam they had stolen from the cook.

"Isn't Miss Pond horrid?" said one, as she bit her jam-covered finger in the dark and gave a little squeal.

"She's a nasty old thing," declared the other, spitefully. "And isn't her aversion to nick names and diminutives provoking. Why, she reprimanded me for calling Helen Cook 'Nellie.'"

"Humph! That's nothing. Why, in the Latin class yesterday when I translated the lines, 'And the cohorts of Cæsar sallied forth,' she said in her nasty way: 'Sarahed forth; Sarahed forth, Miss Stump.'"

Underground London.

It gives an impressive idea of what subterranean London is fast becoming to learn that on emerging from the river the new City and Waterloo line will, in its passage up Queen Victoria street, run for a part of the way under the low, level main sewer, which, in its turn runs along beneath the District Underground Railway. So that at this point in the city we shall have first, a busy main thoroughfare, below that a steam railway, then a huge metropolis sewer, then an electric railway, reaching its terminus at a depth of about sixty-three feet below the streets, and here it will communicate with another line—the Central London—which lies at a depth of eighty feet.

Circumstances Alter Cases.

In Paris, where bicycling has become very common, an ardent wheelman was lately vaunting the advantages of his favorite amusement.

"I assert," he said' "that the bicycle is in every respect more serviceable than the horse."

"And I," said another man: "can prove to you the contrary, by citing to you a case where you would have much preferred the horse."

"What case is that?"

"The siege of Paris. If you had attempted to eat your bicycle then I think you would have found it pretty poor picking."

New Industries for Women.

A new industry for women has sprung up in Victoria. The government has promoted the establishment of a scent farm. In addition to cultivating the flowers, the manageress holds the classes to teach the process of extracting scent, as well as the distillation of roses, lavender, and other flowers. It is intended to combine scent-making with bee-keeping and poultry farming, all three affording suitable employment for women. California boasts of a number of women who own and manage large farms, and who make money and keep healthy and happy in the work.

A Cautious Client.

A lawyer tells the following story concerning a client, something of a wag in his way, with whom he had long kept an account. When the latter was finally made up, the bill, mostly for trifling services, covered several sheets of foolscap, as the items enumerated the most minute details. When the client came around to settle he refused to enter the office, but stood in the door, and holding one end of the bill, unrolled the voluminous document in the direction of his legal adviser, with the request that he would receipt it.

"Come in," said the lawyer in his most cordial tones.

"No, thank you," replied his client, "you'd charge me rent if I did."—Tit-Bits.

Apple Trifle.

To make this tempting dessert take three pints of pared, cored, and quartered apples, half a pint of water, one cupful of sugar, a slight grating of nutmeg and three pints of whipped cream. Put the water in the stew pan and then put in the apples. Cover closely and place on the fire. As soon as the apples begin to soften, which will be in about three minutes after they begin to boil, add the sugar and nutmeg and cook gently for ten minutes. Take up and set away to cool. At serving time put them in a deep glass dish and heap the whipped cream on top.

A Secret for Girls.

If all the girls knew the simple secret that bad complexions are due to a disordered liver, there would be fewer sallow faces and blotchy skins, and American girls would have no reason to envy the "milk and roses" of their English sisters. The secret of beauty is, use Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm. It beats all the beautifying creams and lotions and all the "enamels" in existence. Try it.

Leather.

The substitution of camel's hair, cotton, paint and chemicals for leather in machinery belting is said to be meeting with some success by manufacturers who have examined into the matter. It is an English invention, and the material is claimed to be stronger than any other belting, more durable, more efficient and as low-priced.

A YOUNG GIRL'S FORTUNE.

AN INTERESTING SKETCH.

Nothing appeals so strongly to a mother's affection as her daughter just budding into womanhood. Following is an instance: "Our daughter, Blanche, now 15 years of age, had been terribly afflicted with nervousness, and had lost the entire use of her right arm. She was in such a condition that we had to keep her from school and abandon her music lessons. In fact, we feared St. Vitus dance, and are positive but for an invaluable remedy she would have had that terrible affliction. We had employed physicians, but she received no benefit from them. The first of last August she weighed but 75 pounds, and although she has taken only three bottles of Nervine she now weighs 106 pounds; her nervousness and symptoms of St. Vitus dance are entirely gone, she attends school regularly, and studies with comfort and ease. She has recovered complete use of her arm, her appetite is splendid, and no money could procure for our daughter the health Dr. Miles' Nervine has brought her.

When my brother recommended the remedy I had no faith in patent medicines, and would not listen to him, but as a last resort he sent us a bottle, we began giving it to Blanche, and the effect was almost immediate."—Mrs. R. R. Bullock, Brighton, N. Y.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is positively free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

Good For Burns.

A little boy of Mrs. McDonald's, living near here, fell against a red hot stove and was fearfully burned. The pain was terrible, and it was thought the burn was so severe as to scar the child for life. I sold the lady a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which, after greasing the sore, she applied. It soon removed all the fire and eased the pain, and in ten days the boy was well, no trace of the scar remaining. J. D. McLaren, Keysport, Clinton county, Ill. For sale by Robbins & McCord. 39

DESERTING IN SQUADS.

Republican Senators and States Quitting Their Party.

Senator Jones Causes Consternation—He Formally Severs Relations—Dubois Tells Why—Others Will Soon Follow. Threatened Breakup In the Northwest.

The action of Senator Jones of Nevada in formally leaving the Republican party has created a sensation in political circles and started speculation as to its effects on the future history of parties. If it were confined to Senator Jones alone it would not be so significant, but accompanying facts indicate that it is but the first step in a general move to take all the northwestern states out of the Republican party. This plan is unfolded by Senator Dubois of Idaho in an interview commenting on Senator Jones' action. Senator Jones himself assigns as his reason for leaving the Republican party the fact that he has despaired of ever getting from it any legislation in favor of silver. He says his old party is hopelessly wedded to the eastern money power and at its dictation has decided on the single gold standard as the permanent financial policy of this country if it should be enthused with control. Before leaving Washington last week, Senator Jones published an elaborate address to his constituents setting forth these views with the clearness and boldness of statement for which he is remarkable. Intellectually he is admitted to be the ablest of the Republican senators and his loss will be deeply felt by the party.

Means the Loss of Many States.

Before leaving for his home in Idaho recently, Senator Dubois was asked for his views as to the effect on parties of Senator Jones' declaration of war. Mr. Dubois replied in the following significant language: "Senator Jones is not to be criticised for his action. His motives were honest. Nor can it be said that his step lacked wisdom. I know what his feelings are. Nor do we agree in some matters. If we did I should be with him today in his departure from the Republican party. Senator Jones haf lost all hope of the emanation of any good to silver from the Republicans. I have not. If I had I would go with Senator Jones. The only difference between us is that he lost confidence sooner than I. For myself I shall go to my state and do my utmost for Republican success in this campaign. We have a senator to elect and my energies will be turned to electing a legislature which will send to the senate a free silver Republican. But the Republican party generally should take notice by this action of Senator Jones. It means much to the northwest and foreshadows the coming action of myself, Teller, Wolcott, the whole host and herd of northwest Republicans unless there is a change.

Warning to Republicans.

"I am willing to say now—and those who take an interest may guide themselves by it—that I will join Senator Jones between now and 1896 unless the Republican party declares for free silver—as absolutely free as gold. I mean free silver of both gold and silver at a ratio of 16 to 1. There need be no doubt as to my statement. If the Republicans do not declare for the free coinage of both gold and silver at a ratio of 16 to 1, I shall join Jones and Stewart with the Populists, and I know at least six senators who have similar intentions, and it will cost the Republicans four states. It has cost them Nevada already; it will cost them a quartet of commonwealths besides. And if they can stand it, why, we'll have to. On the belief that the Republicans will declare for free silver, I fight in the campaign now fairly on. If I am wrong, if no such silver declaration is made by the party, I shall leave it. The effect of Senator Jones' action is hard to measure in advance. He is one of the strong figures in our party. In my own state, as, indeed, in all about him, including California, there is no man whose example would have a more profound effect. The Populist party of the entire west is stronger today by 25 per cent than the day before Senator Jones made this change."

Deadener on the Old Party.

The significance of the above is that it foreshadows a purely Republican loss. The states threatening rebellion are and always have been Republican states. It may be said therefore that what is Republican loss is Democratic gain. Democratic supremacy in the nation, so far from being endangered, is aided by the secession of the northwest to a third part as it weakens the principal rival of Democracy. It means the loss of that many votes in the electoral college to the Republicans and these votes are not necessary to elect a Democratic president. As to Senator Dubois' expectations of a Republican declaration for free silver, which he makes the contingency for his allegiance, he might as well consider himself out already, as there is not the slightest probability of such action. The Republican party is in the grip of the eastern money power and must do its bidding or dissolve. The men who control it reside in the east and if compelled to choose between the north and western states and those which it holds east of the Mississippi, the choice will soon be made. The embarrassment of the party is equal to that of the English king who was sternly told to choose between his duty and his head. While a declaration against free silver, it will reason, will lose it a few states, a declaration in favor thereof would lose it many more. With a wildcat in front and a tiger in the rear, the huntsman is at a loss to know which way to run. But with the Republicans the terror inspired by the silver kings will yield to the dread of the still more powerful gold barons.

Some Inside History.

Senator Dubois, in the above quoted interview, rather hints at than divulges all the facts behind this interesting severance of party relations. Those who share the confidence of Senator Teller and other Republican silver senators could add a chapter of startling significance. At one time this summer Senator Teller had made up his mind to announce formally in the senate his withdrawal from the Republican party. This was temporarily postponed. But he after stated publicly that he would support no candidate for the presidency who was not in favor of free silver and whose record from the beginning was undoubtedly in that direction. He specified by name the kind of men he would not support for the presidency, including McKinley, Harrison and Reed. There is no doubt that the whole contingent of Republican silver senators have made up their minds to leave the party unless it declares for free silver in 1896. Jones, knowing this will not be done, decides to leave now. The others are sure to follow in due time and it means the certain defeat and eventual disintegration of the Republican party. In the meantime, no such danger threatens Democracy. None of its states or senators are leaving it on this or any other issue. Just the reverse of what the Republicans have been boastfully claiming for some time is true. The stampede which they have been fondly persuading themselves has been going on in the Democratic party was really the clattering of hoofs that followed the galloping from their own ranks of their former staunch adherents in the northwestern states.

Organized labor has never asked anything in reason of Indiana Democracy that has not been gladly granted. All the legislation of that kind on the statute books is its work. The Democracy is and always has been the friend of labor. It could not be otherwise, as it is chiefly composed of workingmen. The party has always been the refuge of the humble and the lowly and ever ready to extend a helping hand to the needy and oppressed.

The Democrats of Maryland are making it exceedingly warm for the chief of the senatorial traitors whose treachery to Democratic principles prevented the full measure of reform promised the people. All these fellows will be weeded out from the Democratic party as soon as they can be reached, and the only regret is that their terms are not all to end with the incoming legislatures.

Vote-buying, which was formerly the most important Republican industry in the state, has disappeared with Republican protection. With the incoming of perfectly honest and untimidated voting, it will be observed, the state of Indiana has been easily Democratic. The state has never been honestly carried by the Republicans since 1874.

Every man or woman in Indiana who sends children to school has reason to be grateful to the Democratic party for the present schoolbook law. The amount it has saved in money and trouble has been a great boon to Indiana school patrons. That law broke up one of the meanest rings that ever plundered the people for its own benefit.

The Republican party, having built up the whole brood of trusts, is now trying to unload the odium of them on the Democratic party. But for Republican protection there would be no sugar trust, for instance, to stand in the way of honest tariff reform. McKinleyism was as fruitful of trusts as a dead dog is of maggots.

The Republican party is responsible for George H. Pullman and the whole system which breeds such men. He votes its ticket, its laws nourish him, he contributes to its campaign fund and is its legitimate offspring. Such conditions as pervade at Pullman were unheard of before the long reign of Republicanism.

Carnegie has lost favor with the Republican party, not because he sold rotten armorplate to the government, but because he has weakened in his support of protection. It was that vile system which made the Carnegies possible. Republicanism, like Carnegie's plates, is full of "blowholes."

Democratic legislation killed Pinkertonism in Indiana. It also abolished "pluck-me" stores. It also provided the employes' liability bill and other useful measures demanded by organized labor. These things will be remembered by laboring men when they go to the polls next fall.

The Democratic law which makes the big corporations pay their just share of the tax burdens is distasteful to Republicans. They would repeal it and remit the state back to the system formerly prevailing when the small fish were caught while the big fish slipped through.

Remember, that without the aid of the whole Republican membership the few Democratic traitors in the senate could not have obstructed tariff reform. The Republicans were the British, while the "masquerading Democrats" played the role of Benedict Arnold.

What position are the Republicans going to take on the tariff question, anyway? Will they demand the repeal of the new bill and insist on reopening the whole subject in congress? It is almost time they were announcing their intentions.

Republicanism in the far west is for free silver. In the east it is for the single gold standard. Anything to get votes. They promise the people whatever they want, provided, only in return that they will give them the offices.

The Democratic state platform enumerates the great reforms effected by the party in the interest of labor and the people generally. The list is long and covers a series of measures of the highest importance.

The Club Run.

It was too hot weather last Friday for such a severe trial of endurance as making 100 miles in twelve hours on a bicycle. But as advertised for a week or two it was attempted. About thirty-five started in the run, the others who had registered being kept away by the threatening weather, for we had been having light rains, and in fact it had rained the previous evening. The start was a little late, it being 5:23 when the pistol shot said "Go" There were a few in the company who had not registered, but who went along to see how well they could do. At Fort Wayne, they had made up 18 minutes of the 23 they were were behind in starting. At this point several turned about and came home. Thirty-two reached Huntington and took dinner there. On nearing Huntington, Mr. Cobb was taken sick, but kept on his wheel till he got to the hotel. After resting a few minutes he ate dinner, but soon after was taken quite ill, with vomiting and similar troubles, and had to go to bed. He came home next day on the train. A part of the others, including some of the Auburn boys, took a train back to Fort Wayne, then registered and rode the rest of the way on their wheels. Several of these came home ahead of time. The only man who made the full trip in the 12 hours was R A. Christian of this place, who had just 12 minutes to spare when he registered at headquarters. Several others made the entire round, among them being our young friend Harry Lewis, who showed wonderful endurance for a mere boy. Ira Thrush, August Fraas of Corunna, Furness Myers, Kendallville, Howard Long, Angola, Louis Kerr, Ligonier, and W. E. Cohagan came in from the full run about the same time Among those in the run besides Auburnites, were men from Kendallville, Butler, Angola, Avilla Albion, Ligonier, Coldwater, Pleasant Lake, Corunna, Ft. Wayne, and from Quincy, Mich. Another run will likely be tried early in October, when each will be allowed to set his own pace, as some think they could have done better if they had gone slower the first half of the journey. On the other hand, the Ft. Wayne Sentinel says several Ft. Wayne wheelmen would have gone along, if they could have been allowed to go faster. It appears that while a run of 100 miles in 16 hours entitles one to a place in the U. S. Century Club, it must be done in 12 hours to make one a member of the Northern Indiana Century Club.

Philately; or, Stamp Collecting.

BY S. PENTLAND.

From Home and Country (New York) for September.

The immense variety of stamps with which the market is flooded makes it impossible for any one to have an absolutely complete collection—except Croesuses, who have as much time as money to spend on their bobby. Most sensible philatelists confine themselves to one special branch, and it is only enthusiastic beginners who try to get beyond this boundary. For instance, one man collects only stamps, another wrappers and stamped envelopes, a third postal-cards; one confines himself to a particular continent, another to a single country, while several close their collections with a certain year. Those who confine their energies thus to a special branch take into consideration every scarcely perceptible difference in the quality of paper, water-marks, outline of stamps—whether cut denticulated, or pierced—and shades of color; they also collect proof sheets—that is, stamps that are designed as models for new issues. The slightest difference even in the quality of the paper justifies a specialist of this description in including the specimen in his album, so that, while an ordinary philatelist would look on his collection as complete with say thirty-seven different stamps of the kingdom of Saxony, the enthusiast would hardly be content with three hundred and seventy. Of course an ordinary stamp-album would not be large enough to hold these treasures, which pasted on large sheets of card-board, assume the formidable dimensions of maps, and have to be stored in large boxes.

The average collector, however, is content with a large, well indexed album, generally supplemented by miniature library of books on philately and its various branches.

We Had a Member Once.

The Angola Republican recalls a fact that many seem to have forgotten. It says: The bill recently enacted by congress authorizing the taxing of greenbacks the same as other money, was first introduced into congress by Judge McClellan at the suggestion of a prosperous Steuben county farmer. The reason which originally existed for the exemption of the great greenback from taxation has long ago ceased to exist, and we heartily approve of the policy of taxing all money equally. The facts are that judge McClellan not only introduced this bill into congress, but went before the committee that had it in charge and made an argument in favor of its justice and advisability. But Mr. Culberson of Texas, the chairman of the committee, not feeling favorable to the bill, never reported it to the House. So another Indiana member Mr. Cooper, has credit for it.

And in this connection we might add that Judge McClellan, was to a greater extent than anyone else, the originator of the Income Tax law which congress has just passed. His bill was for a graduated income tax, the rates varying as the size of the income varied, and was in some regards a fairer and better plan. All this reminds us, that the Twelfth district had a member once, even if he did not try to erect a monument on the spot where Gen. Wayne neither "fit, bled or died."

HE—"Do cigarettes make you ill, Miss Green?" SHE—"I never tried, Mr. Brown; but the people who smoke them do."

The Butler Record has changed hands, M. E. Smith retiring and Luther H. Higley assumes the reins of this live little weekly. Mr. Higley is not new at the business, having been in the office some time. History repeats itself. Mr. Higley's father, Emery Higley, well known to the old residents of Butler, when about the same age as his son, conducted a very readable paper in Butler. He removed to the west and we believe he died there.

The street fair proved a complete success, notwithstanding the weather was somewhat against us. The crowd each day was fully up to our most sanguine expectations. The exhibits were varied and profuse and compared creditably with many of the larger fairs. We had about one hundred extra police on the force, but there was nothing for them to do. The crowd was so good natured that the extra men on the force had nothing to do but to cultivate the acquaintance of the scores of pretty girls that lined up every corner and crossing. All in all, "Butler's Free Street Fair" was an unbounded success.

A Great Inland Waterway.

From Harper's Weekly.

The Chicago Drainage Canal is the most important public work now being executed in the world.

Chicago occupies the vantage site of the largest area of resourceful land which our race can occupy. Between the great St. Lawrence Valley on the north and the greater Mississippi to the south lies one pass two hundred feet lower than any other. At the heart of this pass stands Chicago. Nature has given her claim to the title that she has taken to herself—"The City of Destiny."

There was a time when, at a higher level, the lakes poured their flood of waters down the present valley of the Illinois River into the Mississippi. To-day, standing on the low summit of the water-shed of the Illinois, one is but thirty feet above the rocky ledge of Niagara. Here lay the physical opportunity to renew the ancient southern outlet of the lakes, and to complete the circle of deep waterways by joining the Gulf of St. Lawrence with that other distant Gulf of the South.

The canal was projected primarily to insure sewerage removal. The periodical floods of the Des Plaines, which forced the city drainage to Lake Michigan, have been already diverted into a permanent channel. The sewerage of a population whose stock-yards make it equivalent to that of a city of two and a half millions will be rendered harmless by dilution and borne away. In addition, new harbor conditions will be evolved for a port already first in the country; and the bridge proplem, which has wasted the time of hundreds of thousands, will be solved. The demands of the exposition perfected the railway service of the city. Street transit, with its net-work of cable, electric, and elevated systems, has kept pace with growth, and terminal track elevation, abolishing railway grade crossings, has been inaugurated. The final housing of the great merchants in structures whose location and mechanical design will relieve the congested team traffic of its business streets will soon come. Chicago will be intrenched in commercial advantages without a possible parallel.

The large commercial use of the canal, aside from the practical extension of Lake Michigan thirty miles further west, involves the improvement of the Illinois to its junction with the Mississippi. This should admit the passing of vessels drawing fourteen feet of water. It is unfortunate that the government works in this really noble river could not have been planned with better reference to the future. Removal of the old dams will be imperative, and it is well that the Sanitary District has authority under the laws of its creation to safeguard the new flood, and in so doing to make a proper initiative toward carrying the deep waterway to the Mississippi. The Mississippi Commission—who are privileged to assist that stream in controlling itself—will have the lakes as a storage reservoir to aid their labors.

Fatal Accident.

One of the saddest accidents it has been our lot to record, was that which resulted in the death of little Martha Husselman, last Thursday evening. She was the youngest child and only daughter and Mr. and Mrs. Cal. Husselman who live just north of town on the Waterloo road. Mr. Husselman and his wife, are both very careful and thoughtful in the oversight of their children and on this occasion, while he and his hired hand, Mr. Lateon were at work in the barn, the little girl who was about three years old was permitted to play in the orchard near by, having for a companion, another girl, a little older, the daughter of a neighbor Mr Lodowick. The men in the barn kept a lookout to see that the children remained in the orchard, for in the barnyard, some colts were allowed free access. After a little, on going to the barn door, Mr. Lateon saw little Martha, half sitting, and bent up, gasping for breath. He picked her up, asking what was the matter. She could not tell, nor could her little playmate give any very satisfactory explanation. But as the colts were about, it was plain the little one had been either kicked or knocked over and stepped on. The men carried her to the house, Dr. Vesta Swarts was called, and soon after Dr. Swarts. But before the latter came, the little one was dead. There was a bruised spot, as if a horse had stepped on her in such a way as to crush in her body at the lower point of the liver, and this caused her death. The child was a very bright and lovable one, and the idol of her parents, who are utterly crushed by the cruel and sudden blow. The funeral was at 10 a. m. Saturday and loving friends laid the little one to her rest in beautiful Woodlawn.

Sad Suicide.

Last Thursday evening, about six o'clock, Hiram E. Shilling, a son of Solomon Shilling, a prominent farmer of Concord township, committed suicide by shooting himself with a rifle, Coroner Miser was called and went down there next morning, and at the inquest, the following facts were adduced: Mr. Shilling has for some years been a stock buyer, and has accumulated some property, although at odd times he would drink a little. He was unmarried and always lived at his father's. Recently, he bought a piece of land of the Wm. Shutt estate, of Mr. Brent. Some disagreement arose between him and Brent, and on the day of the suicide, he went down to Brent's and in the presence of B. F. Wasson, the two men had hard words, and a threat to come to blows. But Wasson finally induced Shilling to get on his wagon and go away. Shilling got off at the corners where Wasson turned off the road, and went on up to his father's house. This was about 4 p. m., when he parted from Wasson. It appears that he went and borrowed a rifle of a neighbor, there went home, and up into his room, sat down on his bed, and placed the gun a his heart, using the ramrod to fire it, and fell back dead. The bullet was cut out of the skin at his back. When found he was dead. His books and papers lay on the bed with him. One paper was a sort of will in which he gave his land, together with $1260 in bank and $900 in notes, to his father, with directions put up a nice monument. He asked that his father and mother quit working and take life easier. He gave his horse and buggy and $100 to his sister Vienna, and hoped his father and mother would not fret. No other cause than that mentioned can be assigned for his suicide, for he was prosperous, and in general well liked. Everybody knew "Bub" Shilling as he was called for the nickname given him in childhood had stuck to him. He was about 34.

The Trials of New Cadets at West Point.

New cadets must remain in their quarters most of the day, and in the evening from eight to half-past nine o'clock, at which latter hour they are expected to be in bed. Cadet officers visit their rooms with lanterns to enforce regulations. This continual supervision by persons but little order than himself tries a new cadet's patience, as do the orders haughtily delivered with the sense of a little brief authority; he must "get his shoulders back," dig in" his toes, "straighten out" his arms, "extend" his fingers, "turn his head to right" or "left," "drag in" his chin, "wipe that smile off" his face, etc. After two weeks of this preliminary training he is taken into camp, where he joins the battalion and goes to parades and drills with the company to which he is assigned, there being four, among which the new cadets are evenly distributed; and now his real miseries begin. Aside from the persistent teasings of the older cadets, he is either drilling or cleaning guns or accoutrements, or, perforce, amusing his tyrants. For instance, he is compelled to march up and down the company street, shouting: "I'm mad! I'm mad! I know I'm mad!" On another occasion, with six "plebes," he is made pall-bearer at the funeral of a rat, while one of company blows "taps" on a cornet, as at a real military interment.

The older cadets manage to "run in" cakes, lemonade, and other delectable things. The new cadet may, perhaps, get a share, or may look on with watering mouth, unsatisfied. He has no money with which to contribute his share to these illicit pleasures. He has found that even every day articles of clothing that he is to wear must come from the cadet stores, that he must not expect to have anything else, that every penny of cash he may have in his possession is regarded as contraband, and that if he should be discovered to have any he must turn it over to the proper authorities at once and without protest. He must also remain in camp unless excused for some strictly necessary purpose, while the first class men may leave whenever off duty, on reporting at the guard tent. In camp his guard tours are two hours long, while in barracks they last but one hour. In barracks a guard of twenty-seven men is mounted each day, and is divided into three reliefs, each relief walking about one hour. A sentinel is posted in each division of the barracks to prevent visiting during study-hours, and to perform the usual functions of a guard duty.—From "Cadet Life at West Point;" Demorest's Magazine for October.

What Paper Is Made Of.

Paper is one of the most lavishly used articles of modern times. The materials of which it can be made are almost as numerous and common as the uses to which the finished article is put.

There are something over two thousand patents covering the making of paper. It may be manufactured, under some one of them, from the leaves of trees; from hop plants, bean stalks, pea vines; from the trunks and stems of Indian corn and every variety of grain; from moss, clover and timothy hay, and more than one hundred kinds of grasses; from straw and cocoanut fibre; from fresh-water weeds and sea weeds; from sawdust, shavings and asbestos; from thistles and thistle down; from banana skins, tobacco stalks and tan bark; from hair, wool, fur, old sacking or bagging, and from almost any other imaginable refuse.—Kate Field's Washington.

One of the Greatest Offers

ever made to the readers of this paper—one that is within the reach of everyone—is contained in the announcement of the Hub of Chicago, now acknowledged to be the largest clothing store in the world. They offer what they call a "Boys' Head to Foot Outfit," which consists of a double breasted coat, a cap to match, a first class pair of shoes, and two pair of knee pants, for only $5. Material and workmanship strictly guaranteed. Anyone desirous of further information can get samples of the cloth, and a large illustrated catalogue sent free of charge and postage paid, by simply addressing The Hub, Chicago, Ill.

Board of Health Orders.

Dr. C. N. Metcalf, secretary of the State Board of Health, was here Saturday, as noted elsewhere, and consulted with our local secretary, Dr. Swarts as to measures to prevent the spread of diphtheria. While Dr, Swarts assured him that much good had already been done, and a good deal of cleaning up and other sanitary measurers taken, there were still a great many who did not seem to realize that they were under any obligations to do anything of the sort. There is on nearly every block in the outer parts of town, some sort of nuisance such as a privy, a hog pen, a stable, a ditch, or a patch of rand weeds on wet ground. These should all be cared for. The privy can be easily sweetened up with lime, dry ashes or dry dirt. The hog pen can be kept clean, the ditch and waste places have the weeds cut and raked away and the sunlight let in. Each one should do this. It will be seen that the ordinance made by the Board of Health at their meeting on Monday proposes to see that this work is done. If the spots needing it are not cleaned and properly cared for, the Board will have it done at the expense of the parties. So, it will be cheaper and more satisfactory for the owners to do it themselves at once. Don't delay. Another thing children, in families that have a diphtheria case, should be kept at home. We have seen a number of them up town and at other points away from home. Let all exercise this care, and with a little patience and painstaking the matter will soon be over. The few new cases that have occurred are being carefully treated and mostly doing well. What we want is to take such vigorous measures as to have no more new cases.

HISTORY OF A WEEK.

PEOPLE, PLACES AND THINGS OF THE WORLD.

Many Killed and Injured in a Fire at Washington—Unsuccessful Attempt to Wreck a Passenger Train — Terrible Cyclone Sweeps Oklahoma Territory.

ROASTED ALIVE.

A Fatal Factory Fire at Washington.

Fire broke out in the Mattress factory operated by Stumph & Bros., Washington, D. C. In a short time all of the engines in the city were on the scene but so quickly did the flames spread that the operatives employed on the fourth and fifth floors were obliged to flee to the roof and compelled to jump for their lives before the trucks carrying the long ladders had arrived. Four of these jumped, one of them, James E. Vaughn, sustaining fractures of both legs and internal injuries. He is not expected to survive the shock. The other three who leaped escaped with more or less severe injuries, but all will recover. Albert J. Haske had both legs broken and was otherwise severely injured. Arthur E. Bevans was bruised inwardly and had his wrist sprained and Harry Bacon was badly bruised.

So far as could be learned the missing ones are Henry Fowler, Phil Ackerman, Robert Reitzell, William Tennyson, Willie Ash, a little boy, and one other, an engineer name unknown, and this includes all of the dead. The fire, besides destroying the Stumph building, consumed the Woodruff building, a factory where all of the Government files are made, and the falling walls of these buildings crushed Hall & Cammack's furniture house and filled Benners' marble yard and injured the Homeopathic dispensary building, on the Massachusetts avenue side. On the K street side, O. Oltenstein's horseshoeing establishment, an oyster depot and a building occupied by a gospel mission, and the Horse and Cattle Feed Company suffered demolition. The loss is $85,000 entire.

ROUTED BY JAPS.

Chinese Army Suffers Overwhelming Defeat.

Japan is in practical possession of Corea. It has routed the Chinese army in the first big land engagement that has taken place, and routed it so thoroughly that China will be powerless until she can send another army to Corea. The Chinese losses, according to a dispatch received from Seoul, are placed at 16,000 killed, while the Japanese only lost thirty killed and 270 wounded. The entire Chinese army—at least what was left of it—was put to rout and scattered in every direction, leaving no large organized Chinese force on Corean soil. As far as China is concerned she is in the position of having to begin the war all over again and under much more disadvantageous conditions than when she first sent troops to Corea. The Japanese are not only in possession, but they are flushed with success and have every opportunity for strengthening their position.

Monroe Salisbury Reinstated.

Maj. P. P. Johnson, President of the National Trotting Association, has temporarily reinstated Monroe Salisbury, the famous California turfman, who was suspended some time ago by the Fleetwood Driving Park of New York. The charge against Salisbury was that he removed the filly Expressive from the Fleetwood course before a race in which she was a starter was finished. M. E. McHenry made affidavit that Secretary Wasson said it was all right, and that the mare could be removed.

Trolley Cars Collide.

At Cleveland mischievous boys turned the current on a trolley car that was on a switch near the Lake View barns, and it was rushed down grade at thirty miles an hour. The runaway collided with a motor that was being run into the barn, and Conductor William Cherrington was so badly injured that his recovery is not thought possible. The motorman was also badly injured. One of the boys was arrested.

Town Destroyed.

Perry (O. T.) special: A terrible tornado passed through Jennings and Mining and blew fifty houses to atoms. A young lady and two children were killed, and several others injured. Several houses caught fire at Mining, and a conflagration followed. The town of Mining, Osage County, is forty miles from the nearest railroad, and particulars of the cyclone and fire cannot be learned.

Agent at Bronson Held Up.

T. L. Warne, the agent of the Lake shore Railroad at Bronson, Mich., on the air line division, was bound and gagged by three men at a late hour the other night. The safe was then pilaged of its contents, the loss to the company not being known. The men were not masked, and from the description given by Warne the police hope to capture the robbers.

Red Birds Must be Set Free.

The State Fish and Game Commissioner of Indiana has issued a circular in which he states all captive red birds must be set free. This species does not breed in captivity, and the State authorities fear it will become extinct.

Cowardly Attempt.

An attempt was made to wreck a Missouri, Kansas and Texas passenger train just north of Muskogee, Mo. Ties were piled upright on the trestle along the Arkansas River, and wedged in so that the ends extended about two feet above the rails. The trestle is thirty feet high. The engineer saw the obstruction in time to stop the train, but the pony trucks were torn from under the engine. The attempted wreck was no doubt for the purpose of robbery.

Greater and Better Results.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says:

"Business has met no setback, and continues larger than early in August, and larger than a year ago directly after the panic. More commercial paper is offered, the western demand for money increases, the iron manufacture greatly expands its output, shipments of shoes continue large, and cotton goods still advance a little. In some directions the postponed business has about spent itself, and less active trade results, while the net increase has been not much more than is usually seen in passing from August into September. In comparison with last year the increase is 7.0 per cent. in volume of clearings, while in comparison with September, 1892, the decrease is 25.7 per cent.

The Gallant Pacing Horse Makes a New Mark.

Terre Haute (Ind.) special: Friday was the greatest record breaking day ever seen on a track. Robert J. paced a mile in 2:01¼; Carbonate lowered the 2-year-old pacing record from 2:10 to 2:09; John R. Gentry made the stallion record for pacers 2:02¼, and did so in a race; Directly tied Carbonate's record of 2:10 for 2-year-old pacers made earlier in the week; Joe Patchen paced the mile in 2:04, beating the stallion record of 2:05¼, which held good until earlier in the day when Gentry set the new mark, and "Sweet Little Alix" trotted a second mile in 2:04½ the same week, which never before had been done. The weather was sultry, threatening rain, the track fast, and the horses announced for record miles in first-class condition.

It was 3:20 when Robert J. started to beat his own record of 2:02¼. The atmosphere was yet sultry but the clouds had disappeared and the wind had gone down. The king made a bad break in the second scoring, but got away well in the center of the track on the third attempt that he might the better get around the first short turn of the four-cornered track. It was seen that he was at his best and when the quarter was caught at :30¼, the hope was strong. The runner who was making the pace came alongside near the half which was made in 1:00¼ and the six thousand people broke into cheers. Three-quarters was reached in 1:30, making the middle half of the mile in the phenomenal time of 59¾ seconds, or at the rate of 1:59. He came home strong and went under the wire with the apparent courage and effort of his first quarter. The time, 2:01½, was put up at once. There was no dispute among either the official timers or the many expert timers among horsemen gathered in line with the wire at either side of the track. The cheering which began with sight of the figures had not ceased when Geers came back to the wire with the Hamlin entry. The track was covered with people. Some of them caught him up on their shoulders and carried him to the fence in front of the grand stand, where again he was received with cheers. Starter Loper announced the mile and the record made, and the people again broke into cheers.

FOREST FIRES

Are Still Raging in Michigan—Not a Green Tree in Two Counties.

A special from Bessemer, Mich., says: The Gogebic Powder Co.'s mill is still in great danger from forest fires. The fire department has been out for the past twenty-four hours and are almost exhausted. The fire is fiercely fanned by the strong winds.

At Trout Creek, Mich., a station on the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic Railway, the entire village is in imminent danger. Several small railroad bridges are on fire. Railroad wires are all down at Iron Belt, Wis., a station on the Wisconsin Central Railroad. A number of buildings were burned.

Several lives were saved by the good judgment of Conductor McHugh in detaching the engine from his train and feeling his way through the fire. Finding it impossible for any train to get through, he returned almost suffocated.

At Wakefield, a miner whose name is unknown was overtaken by the heat and smoke and was dead before assistance could reach him.

Four hundred million feet is the latest estimate of the pine destroyed in Gogebic and Ontonagan counties. Those informed say that not a green pine tree can be found in the woods.

FIGHT FOR TWO DAYS.

Chinese and Japanese Both Claim a Victory.

Shanghai special: Rumors have reached here that a battle has been fought between the Chinese and Japanese near Kai Chang, Corea. The engagement is said to have taken place about September 2. Native newspapers of September 10 say that the fight lasted two days, and that it was still undecided when this news was forwarded to the native press. The Chinese papers of September 12 announce that Gen Yeh, the Chinese commander, reports having gained a victory over the Japanese. It is reported here, however, that the Chinese have met with a reverse at Ping Yang. A private dispatch confirms the news that more fighting has occurred with undecided results. The floods in Corea still prevent the Chinese from crossing the Imchin River in order to attack the Japanese intrenchments. Another current report here says that the Kirino division of the Chinese army has crossed the Kulin River, and that it is now holding the city of Suhning while awaiting the advance of the main body of the army before attacking the Japanese right flank. No reliable news, it may be added, is obtainable here in regard to the progress of the war.

SHOCKING ACCIDENT.

A Number of Persons Fatally Hurt By a Runaway at a Funeral.

A frightful runaway occurred in a funeral party near Irondale, twenty-five miles south of Alliance, Ohio, in which fifteen persons were injured. While the funeral cortege was returning from the cemetery the horses attached to a carriage became frightened and the driver lost control of them. The animals dashed into the front carriage, wrecking it and causing the second team to run off. Both teams dashed into the two front carriages, causing the horses to run away, and all four teams plunged down a steep hill, completely wrecking the conveyances and throwing the inmates under the horses' feet.

A partial list of the injured is: Miss Anna Burnside and a younger sister, faces and heads cut in a shocking manner and breasts crushed. Both will die. Wm. Householder, both legs broken and crushed. Alex McBane, seriously injured internally. Ile Cope, head and face frightfully cut; is unconscious. Last March Mrs. McBane was caught in a runaway and injured, dying after giving birth to the child that was buried.

TERRIBLY BURNED.

Eight Persons Badly Injured By the Bursting of Oil Tanks.

Hudson (Wis.) special: An oil tank on a westbound freight on the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha Railroad exploded near Roberts, burning up two freight cars and a caboose.

While passengers were being transferred around the wreck another tank exploded and scattered the burning oil broadcast. Seven people were badly burned, as follows: Conductor Tom Fredericks, hands and face burned; William Conway, Ellsworth, Wis., hands and face burned. Mr. Dickey, Cleveland, Ohio, hands and head burned. L. B. Huedger, Menominee, Wis., hands and face burned. John Belwick, Minneapolis, Minn., back, hands and face in bad condition. Consul to Victoria Levi W. Meyers, who was returning to his home at Wapello, Iowa, hands and face; clothing all burned off. Olif Oakwell, Hudson, Wis., section man, hands, face and body; all clothing burned off. John Hyland, Hudson, hands. The injured were taken to St. Paul on a special train.

Wreck on the Iron Mountain.

A special from Charleston, Mo., says: A cyclone of tremendous velocity swept over this city causing one of the most serious wrecks that has occurred on the Iron Mountain Railroad. Two men were killed and a score of people were injured. The dead: Fred McClellen of Eldorado, Ill.; Parmelia Dempsey of Bertrand, Mo.

The most seriously injured are: C. T. Coyle, baggagemaster, badly bruised; John C. Davis, Eldorado, Ill., leg broken; J. W. Dexter, Cebertown, Ohio, internal injuries; W. H. Decamp, Hamilton, Ohio, head badly hurt; A. D. Leming, Alto Pass, Ill., fatally injured; H. W. Hester, Moorehouse, Mo., shoulder dislocated; G. K. Humphrey, Leora, Mo., arm broken; George McClendon, Soplin, Mo., arm badly hurt; Mrs. J. W. McCullom, Dexter, Mo., arm broken; G. H. Miller, Corning, Ark., badly bruised.

The west-bound express on the Cairo branch was just entering the city when the cyclone cloud and the train met and the wind lifted the coaches from the track and landed them twenty feet from the track, turning them completely over.

From the Altar to Death.

Train No. 54 on the Wabash, struck a carriage containing Mr. Fetters and his bride, Miss Munn, on an angling crossing one mile east of Edon, Ohio, and fatally injured both of them. The couple were married in Edon and were on their way to their home when the engine struck them, just twenty minutes after the words were said and the vows solemnized which made them one. Twenty minutes husband and wife, and then two mangled bodies wholly unconscious to the world! They were both terribly injured and died in a few hours.

Grave Robbery in Indianapolis.

Ghouls have again been at work in the cemeteries adjoining Indianapolis, and have stolen the body of John Cline from the burying ground of the Central hospital for the insane. Cline was a cigarmaker in poor circumstances, but the union of which he was a member has taken up the matter and is determined to recover the body and detect and punish the ghouls.

Destructive Cyclone.

A cyclone swept over the north end of Memphis, Tenn., which badly damaged the Louisville and Nashville shops, tore up a dozen residences, turned over a bridge, and injured several people. Ralph Culp was killed, Wilkes Yandall will die, and several people are reported to be badly injured. Property loss, so far as discovered, $50,000.

The Peary Expedition.

St. Johns (N. F.) special: The Peary expedition has returned here. In brief, very little has been accomplished, owing to the frightful weather. Several members of the party have been frost-bitten, but all are alive. Lieut. Peary and two others remained north. Mrs. Peary, her baby and other members of the party returned here.

Two Hundred Drowned.

London special: A Shanghai dispatch received announces that six survivors of the persons aboard the Chinese transport Ithian, which stranded in the Che Tung pass recently with 1,400 troops on board, while on her way to the Island of Formosa, have reached Shanghai say that they estimate that about 200 soldiers were drowned in the Che Tung pass.

Long-Lived Family.

Greenville (Ohio) special: Susan Boler, of this county, died 111 years, 75 years of which has been spent here. Her brother died several years ago aged 104. Her mental faculties were well preserved, but for some time she could neither walk nor see.

Fatal Fall.

John Hedlund, aged 35, fell from the roof of the new shafthouse of the Quincy mine at Hancock, Mich., and was instantly killed. He leaves a wife and children at Ispheming.

Fatally Mangled.

Charles Bryan, while attempting to beat his way on a freight from Ashland, Ohio, to Polk, his home, fell beneath the cars and was badly mangled. He died.

Breckinridge Defeated.

Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge was defeated by W. C. Owens for the nomination for Congress in the Ashland district, by a majority of 306.

Accepted Debs' Resignation.

Eugene V. Debs resigned as editor of the Locomotive Firemen's Magazine. His resignation was accepted by the convention.

Killed His Wife.

At Patriot, Ohio, Sherman Cox, a prominent farmer, shot and instantly killed his wife. Cox has skipped.

RUINS OF HINCKLEY.

WHAT A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT SAW THERE.

Scene of Unutterable Horror, Desolation and Death—Frightful Experiences of the People—How the Prosperous Minnesota Town Was Wiped Out.

Earth and Air Aflame!

Duluth (Minn.) correspondence:

Despite the hundreds of columns which have been printed descriptive of the great forest fires in Northern Minnesota, the most careful reader cannot but have failed to reach anything like a full realization of the horrors of that terrible holocaust which had the thriving village of Hinckley for its center. No one who has not gone over the burned territory, seen for himself the devastation wrought and talked with the survivors of the awful tragedy, can begin to appreciate what that ever-to-be-remembered afternoon and evening were to the people of the stricken territory. "It was as though the lid of hell had been lifted off for awhile, allowing the flames and smoke of the infernal regions to feast on poor helpless humanity," was the way one man in Hinckley briefly described the scene to me.

LOADING THE BODIES OF FIRE VICTIMS FOR REMOVAL TO BURIAL GROUND.

I spent ten days in Johnstown, Pa., immediately after the awful flood in the Conemaugh valley; I saw Louisville, Ky., only a day or two after it was visited by one of the most destructive and fatal cyclones in our history; I was in Sioux City, Iowa, by the first train which could take me there after the memorable flood in that city; I saw the ruin wrought in Titusville and Oil City by that remarkable conflagration when even the river, covered as it was with oil, became a blazing serpent, miles in length, shooting its fiery tongues 200 feet in air. But—always excepting Johnstown—I have never witnessed a scene of such complete devastation, such utter destruction, as is presented for miles and miles north of St. Paul along the St. Paul & Duluth and Eastern Minnesota Railroads. There is a territory, varying in width from ten to thirty miles and in length from thirty to one hundred miles, in which the flames left no live thing. The whole territory is blackened ruin—tens of thousands of acres of charred stumps, smoking ground, gnawing flames, even yet reluctant to leave while there yet remains fuel on which to feed. Where were once great forests, partially cleared farms, prosperous saw-mill villages, the homes of industrious settlers, now all is ruin. Even at St. Paul I found the air dark with smoke, and as I traveled north the smoke became more dense until, once in the heart of the burned district, it could be seen rising in columns and dense masses in all directions, completely obscuring the sun.

HOW A PAIR OF HORSES WERE FOUND.

Even the Heavens Ablaze.

How came the great fire of September 1 which swept over so many miles of territory, burning several villages and wipping out over 500 human lives? Not through any unusual prevalence of smaller fires or through any lack of vigilance or care on the part of the people, but through a combination of conditions very difficult to explain clearly, and against which no man or number of men could have struggled successfully. Let us glance at the conditions existing before the terrible conflagration swept over the country. The extended drouth, the quietude of the atmosphere, the fires burning among the pine stumps and roots in the forest—these had resulted in filling the air with dense masses of smoke, laden with turpentine and resinous gases, inflammable in themselves. Then came a veritable cyclone—the wind glowing sixty miles an hour—sufficient in itself to have wrought untold damage. The wind instead of dissipating the gas-laden clouds of smoke only served to condense them. Added to this, the air seemed charged with electricity. Beginning several miles south of Hinckley and sweeping northward came the cyclone, bearing with it the dense masses of gas and smoke, which speedily took fire either from the ground fires over which they passed or from electricity. The result was that the whole heavens seemed in a blaze. Immense masses of roaring flame were hurled along, many feet above the surface of the ground, igniting everything over which they swept. Great black clouds were seen rushing forward, whirling and roaring in the wind, only to burst into flames with an explosion like the discharge of ordnance. Many of the buildings, as I was told by men who had witnessed the remarkable and terrorizing sight, did not take fire from the outside, but from within, suddenly bursting into flames all through the interior and then exploding.

THE ONLY HOUSE LEFT BETWEEN PINE CITY AND MISSION CREEK.

Before the wind came up the people of Hinckley were generally about their usual vocations—working in the sawmill, about the streets, in the stores, along the railroads, etc. They were impressed with the unusual condition of the atmosphere, but were not frightened. The increased density of the smoke, so great that lamps were lighted in the houses shortly after noon, they attributed to the uncommon stillness of the air. The fire department had been on constant watch for weeks guarding against the near approach of the forest fires, and at this time were fighting a fire on the western verge of the village, but had it completely under control. The company was a volunteer one, and there was no water system in the village. But the boys had a great quantity of hose and usually were able to get water either from the mill pond on one side of the village or from the "gravel pit" on the other. In this instance, however, several teams were being employed drawing water for the fire company. To the fact that these teams and wagons were accessible when the crisis came many people owe their successful flight from the flames.

Suddenly came the wind—"the cyclone of fire," as the survivors call it. The insignificant fire which the men were fighting paled before the immensity of the volume of flame and smoke which came rushing over the heads of the firemen, and they were immediately forced to turn and flee for their lives, some on foot and some in the water wagons. At the same moment began all over the village, with its population of 1,500 souls, the flight for life.

In the Gravel Pit.

No one attempted to seek a refuge in the small mill pond to the west of the village. It was difficult of access for the villagers at best, being beyond the railroad embankment, and moreover was filled completely full of logs, so that it would have been almost impossible to get into the water. From the mill pond along the northern border of the village, at the foot of a considerable bluff, is the Grindstone River, never much of a stream, and its bed now nearly dry. At the eastern verge of the village was a hollow, known as the gravel pit, in which was a couple of feet of water. This was the only natural place of refuge for the people, and it seemed a poor refuge indeed. About 200 people did reach the gravel pit, however, and by lying down or crouching in the water, and pouring water over each other, succeeded in fighting off death. A few perished there from suffocation and heat, a few from fright and exhaustion, and one man was fatally injured by being trampled on by a cow. Several horses, cows and pigs, and even a number of rabbits and a few wildcats and lynx, crowded themselves into the pit with the people and came out alive. As the flames rolled through the air above them the people in the pit suffered untold agonies, and many were so severely burned that they will be under the care of doctors for some time to come. To this gravel pit, however, and to the two trains guided by the brave engineers, Best and Root, nearly all who escaped owe their lives. A few found refuge in water holes in the Grindstone River and a few succeeded in escaping by running for miles along the railroad tracks, having been unable to reach the trains.

Of the 1,500 people of Hinckley nearly 500 perished. At Sandstone, a little village a few miles north on the Eastern Minnesota Railroad, sixty-nine perished. At Pokegama several lost their lives, and of the settlers scattered here and there through the forest on small clearings very few escaped. Altogether, in and about Hinckley, fully 600 people perished.

Eccentricity of the Flames.

As I walked about the smoking ruins of Hinckley I could not but remark the complete destruction wrought by the flames. Every house was destroyed. The sidewalks, and even the culverts running under the streets were burned. Two landmarks, however, remain to show that fires as well as floods can be eccentric. The little wooden outhouse belonging to the Eastern Minnesota depot is intact, without a sign of fire on it, though of the depot and hotel across the way not a vestige remains. Again, down beyond the ruins of the St. Paul and Duluth Railroad roundhouse there stands a garden fence of thin pickets, dry as tinder, on which the fire has left no mark. Every house and tree and every foot of sidewalk has been converted into ashes, but the picket fence stands as clean and unmarked as though no fire had ever come within a mile of it. To explain such things is impossible. They are facts, nevertheless.

Here and there are bits of clothing, remnants of shoes, buttons, etc., and the peculiar dark, greasy-looking spots which the initiated recognizes immediately as the places where victims of the fire perished. Near the site of the roundhouse on the street is a quantity of scorched feathers and burned remnants of clothing. The careless passerby would not notice the place, but it marks a scene of such heroic self sacrifice as is seldom met with. On this spot perished a sick man and his two would-be saviors. He was unable to rise from his bed, and two heroic men carried him from the house lying on his blankets and pillow, and tried to convey him to a place of safety. After the fire, when the searchers went about the streets gathering up the dead, they found the three corpses. The corpse of the sick man was easily identified, but the two noble fellows who died in their heroic effort to save him were burned beyond recognition. No one will ever know who they were, this side of heaven.

Awful to Contemplate.

The mind can hardly grasp the extent of the disaster that has withered with the torch of fire and of death a large area of Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Michigan, leaving only blackened waste where beauty once reposed and human ashes where once was the sweet vigor of life! A blackened region, burned houses, and charred bodies once animated with immortal souls—these are the relics of the fiery tornado that swept whole towns and villages out of existence and leveled the beauties of the forest to a blackened, smoking ruin. But yesterday a scene of prosperity, of human hope and courage and thrift, of human lives and loves, and now——

There is woe piled on woe, horror upon horror, a charred and blackened chaos beneath, a heaven of smoke above, a city—a dozen cities—of the dead, with hope extinguished by despair and love turned from its objects on earth to objects beyond the dividing line of life! And oh, the sublime pathos of the change—the heroism displayed in the vast burning regions; the sacrifices that can never be written nor ever be known; the divine love that prompted self-obliteration that some one, dearer than very self, might live.

Mothers covering with their bodies the prostrate forms of their little ones that the cruel flames might not touch them, wetting the frail bodies while their own were on fire—who could view such scenes, who think of them, them, without feeling the sublimity of our common nature? And then the tragedy—the profound horror of it all—mothers, fathers, children, brothers, sisters, neighbors and friends, all standing in a raging ocean of fire; hopeful until their very breaths became as furnace draughts, and then turned with anguished gaze from earth to heaven, falling at length into the sleep of forgetfulness and painlessness.

How cruel it all was, how swift, and how terrible! A few hours and the fiery holocaust was over; nearly one thousand lives were wiped out and over $10,000,000 worth of property was destroyed. The survivors, dazed, suffering and despairing, stood amid their ruins and their dead, while above, veiling the brightness of the sun, hung clouds of smoke—the fringe of the fiery tempest past. Death and ruin reigned.

SHOWING ON MORTGAGES.

Bulletin Issued by the Head of the Government Bureau of Statistics.

Carroll D. Wright, as head of the Goverment's Bureau of Statistics, has issued a bulletin in relation to the mortgage indebtedness of the country. It is supplementary to those previously issued by the Census Bureau, and brings the work down to the beginning of 1890. According to Mr. Wright's figures the total amount of mortgage indebtedness on all forms of real estate Jan. 1, 1890, was $6,019,679,985. The total number of mortgages in force was 4,777,498, making the average amount of indebtedness covered by each mortgage a little over $1,260. The number of mortgages on houses and lots was 2,303,061 and on acres and farms 2,474,637. The amount of incumbrance on the former was $3,810,531,554 and on the latter $2,209,148,431. It may be a surprise to many that the mass portion of this form of indebtedness has been incurred not by the farming community but by the people in the cities and towns. The average amount of the farm mortgage is but a little over $900, while that on the lot and home is nearly $1,300. Neither does the West, as has been supposed, carry the weight of this burden in either case. New York has more mortgages than Kansas and Massachusetts more than Iowa.

New York is the most heavily incumbered State in the Union. Its aggregate mortgage indebtedness is $1,607,874,301. Of this amount $1,390,061,246 is secured by mortgages on other forms of realty than farms. Kansas' mortgage debt amounted to but $242,146,826, of which $174,720,071 was on acres and $68,426,755 on homes. Massachusetts carried a load of $323,277,668, of which only $42,441,247 had been incurred by the farmers of the State. The only real ground for complaint that the West has is that the money it borrows costs more than that lent out in the East. All through the Eastern States the average rate of interest is a little over 5 per cent. per annum, while in many portions of the West it is more than double this rate.

BRECKINRIDGE IS BEATEN.

W. C. Owens Carries the Ashland Congressional District in Kentucky.

Congressman W. C. P. Breckinridge, the silver-tongued orator and defendant in the famous breach of promise case in which Madeline Pollard appeared as plaintiff, has been defeated for renomination in the Ashland, Ky., district by W. C. Owens. Mr. Owens, backed by the majority of the women of Kentucky, and supported by the men of the State who have not hesitated to express their disgust at the attitude of the Congressman both during the famous trial and throughout the heated campaign, has won. Mr. Settle, who has never been considered a formidable issue in the campaign, cut but little figure in the primaries outside of his own county. In those counties where the feeling was most bitter, notably Bourbon, Franklin, and Woodford, money flowed like water, and the combined expense of the day is placed by many at $100,000. In Fayette County at several of the polls there were fights, but cool-headed men prevented the use of revolvers. Throughout the entire district there were probably 100 or more men injured.

W. C. OWENS.

No election or other occasion ever caused such a general suspension of business. For months the district has been agitated in the most bitter personal agitation. It was not a political, not even a factional, fight. It was a moral contest for weeks and months, and during the last few days it became intensely personal, so much so that the nomination was not the only issue. Col. Breckinridge was fighting for life, and he never before had made such speeches or displayed such executive ability in organization. He marshaled every man he could command, but he could not command the women. They had no votes, but they were the controlling element in the fife. The women prayed, the men voted, and Breckinridge was beaten. There's no use quarreling over the question as to whether it was the prayers or the votes that did it. Breckinridge is beaten.

BRECKINRIDGE.

William C. Owens is a native of Scott County, and one of the wealthiest men in the blue grass region of Kentucky, where he has lived all his life. He is 44 years old and unmarried. He graduated from the Columbia College Law School in the class of 1871. Two years later he began his political career in a successful race for County Attorney of Scott County. He was sent to the Legislature for five consecutive terms. Mr. Owens was a Democratic elector for his district in 1884 and was a delegate-at-large from Kentucky to the National Democratic Convention at Chicago in 1892. He was chosen temporary chairman of that body.

SCANDAL IN HIGH LIFE.

Mrs. J. Coleman Drayton and Her Notorious Conduct—Is Socially Banished.

Scandal in "high society" is very common these days. The papers had not yet exhausted their stock of disgusting stories anent William K. Vanderbilt's domestic troubles, when there came the announcement that J. Coleman Drayton had sued for divorce from his wife, who is an Astor. This Drayton scandal is not altogether new. Newspaper readers will remember that there was much talk about it two years ago, when the conduct of Mrs. Drayton with H. Alsop Borrowe, over in Paris, led to very amusing talks about duels, etc. The matter was finally permitted to die, but last week ugly stories were revived when Drayton filed his suit for divorce in a New Jersey court. His wife answers this with counter charges of infidelity.

MRS. J. C. DRAYTON.

Charlotte Augusta Drayton is a daughter of William Astor, of the family of which John Jacob Astor was the founder. Some fourteen years ago she married J. Coleman Drayton, a gentleman of education, refinement, studious and quiet habits, and good position. She became the mother of four children, was a leader in society, and had everything in the way of the luxuries of life that heart could desire. Yet she accepted, if the allegations of her husband be true, the attentions of Hallett Alsop Borrowe, a good-for-nothing young man about town, and for years carried on with him an affair which lacked even the grace of discretion and concealment. After the expose and the scandal, which finally resulted in world-wide notoriety, she had the assurance to try to force herself back into the social circles from which talk occasioned by her conduct had driven her. But society—vain, frivolous, pharisaical though it be—refused to receive her, and she has been forced to fly to Europe.

UNITED AT LAST

CHAPTER XXVI—Continued

Gilbert Sinclair felt as if this world and this life were one inextricable confusion. The anonymous letter had told him where and when to watch—and the writer of that letter had kept faith with him so far, since he had not watched in vain—but this spectacle of innocent repose, the mother sleeping near the child, was hardly in keeping; Gilbert paused irresolute, and then went to his wife's bedside and roused her roughly with his strong hand upon her arm. The dark blue eyes opened suddenly and looked at him full of bewilderment.

"Gilbert! Back to-night? I didn't expect you. Why do you look at me like that? What has happened?"

"Can't you guess? You didn't expect me. You had made your plans accordingly. You had made an appointment with your lover."

"Gilbert, are you mad?"

"He has not disappointed you—he is here. Get up and come see him. Quick. He is waiting."

"Gilbert, what have you been doing? Where have you been? Calm yourself, for Heaven's sake."

"Come," he said, grasping her wrist, "I am too much a gentleman to let your lover wait yonder—on the threshold of his own house, too. Strange that he should try to sneak in like a burglar, when he will be master here in a few days."

He dragged her into the next room, and to the balcony.

"Pray, don't be so violent, Gilbert. I will come anywhere you please," she said, gravely.

From the balcony she saw that prostrate figure at the foot of the stairs, and gave a faint cry of horror.

"Gilbert, what have you done?"

"My duty as a man. I should loathe myself if I had done less."

She followed him down the stairs, trembling in every limb, and clung to him as he knelt by the motionless figure, and turned the face upward to the faint light of the new risen moon.

"Gilbert, what have you done?" repeated Constance, sobbing hysterically.

"Murder" answered her husband, with a stolid despair. "I hated this fellow badly enough, but I didn't mean to kill him. I meant to kill Sir Cyprian Davenant, with whom you had made an appointment to night, counting on my absence."

"Gilbert, what have I ever done that you should think me the vilest of women? I have never wronged you by one thought about Cyprian Davenant which you might not know. I have never spoke a word to him which you might not hear—you and all the world. Your jealousy of him has ended in murder."

"I have been trapped somehow. Some enemy has set a snare for me."

"What are you to do? Oh, Gilbert is he dead?"

"Yes; the bullet finished him. I aimed under his shoulder, where I knew it would be fatal. What am I to do?—cut and run, I suppose."

"Yes, go, go: it is your only chance. No one knows yet. Go, for God's sake, this moment."

"And leave you with a corpse on the premises—rather cowardly that."

"Don't think of me—it is life or death for you. You must go, Gilbert. There is no help. Go, or you will be taken and tried and hanged," cried Constance, clinging to the iron rail, trembling very cold, the ground reeling under her feet.

"Yes, that's the natural sequence. Fool, fool, fool! An anonymous scribbler. What can have brought him here, and to the windows of your room? Constance, what does it mean? Do you know why this man came?"

But Constance could not answer him. She had fallen, fainting, on the iron stair.

It was not quite midnight when Mr. Sinclair drove up to his hotel—a small house in St. James', chiefly affected by men about town.

"Room ready, James? Yes, of course it is. You got my telegram yesterday. Been dining with some fellows. You can bring me a brandy and soda up stairs. That's all."

"Sorry the horse lost, sir," said the man, with respectful sympathy.

"What horse?" asked Gilbert with a vacant look.

"Beg your pardon, sir—Goblin, sir. Thought he was safe to win the cup. Took the liberty to make my little venture on him. You bein' an old customer, you see, sir, and all of us feelin' interested in him on that account."

"That was a good fellow. The ground was too hard for him—goes better in the dirt."

He went up to his bed-room after this brief colloquy, leaving the head waiter under the impression that Mr. Sinclair had been dining rather more freely than usual.

"Didn't seem to understand me when I spoke to him about his own 'oss," said the waiter to his friends in council; "stared at me reg'lar 'mazed."

"Ah, pore feller, he's 'it pretty 'ard to-day, you may depend."

Mr. Sinclair's last order to the waiter who carried the brandy and soda to his bed-room was to be called at half-past 6 next morning.

"You'll have a cab at the door at a quarter past 7," he said; "I want to catch the 7:30 train into Kent. I ought to have got home to-night if I could have done it."

"Yes, sir—half-past 7, sir. Anything particular you would like for breakfast?"

"Oh, anything."

"A bit of fish, sir, and a spatch-cock, or a devil?" suggested the waiter, pertinaciously. Nothing can subdue that solicitude to obtain an order which is the waiter's ruling passion.

"Fish—flesh—anything," cried Gilbert, kicking off his boots.

"A salmon cutlet, sir, with Dutch sauce?"

"An elephant, if you like. Get me the cab at a quarter past seven. A hansom, with a good horse."

"Yes, sir; an 'ansom and a fast 'oss. Yes, sir. Tea or coffee, sir?"

Mr. Sinclair banged his door in the waiter's face.

"The 'Heron Cay' starts at eight to-morrow," said Gilbert, referring to his Bradshaw, the only literature he carried about him constantly. "I shall be in Antwerp on Saturday."

Then, after a pause, he asked himself:

"Might it not be wiser to hold my ground and trust to the chapter of accidents? Who is to bring that traitor's death home to me? I sleep here to-night. No one saw me at Davenant."

He went to the mantel-piece, where a pair of wax candles were burning with that air of elegant luxury by which your skilled hotel-keeper seeks to reconcile his customers to the extravagance of his charges, and took James Wyatt's letters out of his breast pocket.

The first three or four he looked at were business letters, chiefly entreaties to "renew" or carry over, or provide for some little bill just falling due, "like the best of good fellows." These Gilbert laid aside after a glance; but there was one at which he started as if he had touched a snake. It was in the same hand as the anonymous letter that made him a murderer.

This, in plain words, was the gist of the letter—badly spelled, with a foreigner's uncouth orthography; curiously worded, with a mixture of foreign idioms and illiterate English.

"You tell me that all your promises amount to nothing—that you never meant to marry me. Rather hard to discover this after having nursed my delusion so long. I was to be a lady. I was to take my place in the world. Bah! all lies! Lies, like your pretended love—your pretended admiration. You ask me to go back to my country, and promise if I consent to this I shall be provided for—handsomely—with fifty pounds a year for life—whether I remain single or marry—an independence for a girl like me, you say. Soit. But who is to secure to me this independence? It may be paid for a year—two years, perhaps—and then cease. It must that I see you, Mr. Wyatt. It must I hear of your own lips what you mean. Your soft tongue is too strong for me. You could persuade me to do anything, to go anywhere, to serve and obey you as your slave, but I cannot obey to your letters. I do not understand. I want to see things clearly—to have your views explained to me.

"You say that I am passionate—vindictive—and that when last we met—and, ah! how kind it was of you to come here at my request—my violence almost frightened you. Believe me, I will not so offend again. Come but once more—only come and assure me with your own lips that this miserable pittance shall be paid to me honorably year by year—give me but your word for that, and I will go back to my friends in the south of France—ah—comme ce sera loin de toi, mon ami—and you shall hear of me never again.

"You tell me that you are no longer friends with Mr. Sinclair, and that you cannot come to this house, and that if I want to see you it must be that I come to you. That is not possible without throwing up my place altogether, for the housekeeper here is of the most tyrannical, and gives no servant leave to absent herself, and I will not give up this service until I am assured of my future. Give me, then, a proof of your good faith by coming here. Give me my pittance a year in advance and show me how it is to be afterward paid me, and I will trouble you no more.

"It will be very easy for you to come on the evening of the 14th. Mr. and Mrs. Sinclair are going to Ascot on the 15th; they will be absent some days. You know your way to the balcony room. I shall be waiting for you there between 10 and 11 on Thursday evening, and I will show a light in the center window as a signal that the coast is clear.

"Come if you wish me to trust you. Come if you do not wish me to betray you. Yours, as you treat me,

"MELANIE DUPORT."

This letter showed Gilbert Sinclair the diabolical trap that had been set for James Wyatt and for himself. He had been made the instrument of the French woman's revenge.

In the face of this revelation what was he to do? Carry out his intention; go to South America, and leave his wife in the power of this fiend. Gilbert Sinclair was not bad enough for that.

"I'll risk it, and go back to Davenant," he said.

"How do I know what this wretch might do? She might lay her lover's death at my wife's door, drag my wife's name in the gutter. No; at any hazard to myself I must be there, and, if necessary, this letter must be shown at the inquest."

CHAPTER XXVII.

CROWNER'S QUEST.

"What a horful thing!" said one house-maid, and "Who could have done it?" ejaculated another, as the news of the catastrophe spread through the house.

Who was to tell Mrs. Sinclair?"

Martha Briggs took that office upon herself. She had just filled Miss Christabel's bath, but the darling was not awake yet, and Mrs. Sinclair was most likely still asleep.

"I'll tell her when I take her cup of tea at half past seven," said Martha, looking pale and scared.

"Where's Melanie?" asked the upper house-maid.

"She asked leave to go to London early this morning to get herself some things, as if Maidstone wasn't good enough for her. She wanted to go by the first train to have a long day of it, she said. The first train goes at six. She must have left this house at half past five."

"That's queer," said the house-maid; "but I never had much opinion of foreigners."

"What could have brought Mr. Wyatt here last night, and to the bottom of those steps?" speculated Martha Briggs. "Why didn't he go to the hall-door as usual? It seems so strange!"

"It seems stranger that there should be any one there to shoot him," remarked the house-maid.

Mrs. Sinclair heard of the morning's discovery with a calmness which astonished her hand-maiden.

"I must telegraph for my husband," she said; and a telegram was dispatched without delay addressed to Gilbert at his hotel in St. James'.

The police were on the alert by this time, examining the scene of the murder. The coroner appointed 3 o'clock in the afternoon for his inquiry, which was to be held in the hall at Davenant. This would give time for summoning the jury.

Constance was sitting at breakfast, very pale but quite self-possessed, when Gilbert Sinclair walked in from the lawn.

"Gilbert," she cried, "what folly! I thought you were miles away—across the channel by this time."

"No, Constance, I am not such a poltroon. We have not been a very happy couple, you and I, and God knows I am heartily tired of my life in this country, but I am not base enough to leave you in the lurch. Who can tell what scandal might arise against you? No, my dear, I shall stop, even if the end shall be a rope."

"Gilbert, for mercy's sake! Oh, Gilbert!" she cried, wringing her hands, "how could you do this dreadful thing?"

"How could I? I thought I was doing my duty as a man. I was told that a man was to be here—your secret visitor. The man was here at the very hour I had been told to expect him. I saw him entering your room by stealth. What could I think but the worst? And thinking as I did, I had a right to kill him."

"No, Gilbert, no. God has given no man the right to shed his brother's blood."

"Except Jack Ketch, I suppose. God has given men the instinct of honor, and honor teaches every honest man to kill the seducer of his wife or daughter."

* * * * *

The inquest was held at three. Gilbert and several of his household, notably the gardener who found the body, were examined. Dr. Webb gave his evidence as to the nature of the wound, and the hour at which death must, in all probability, have occurred.

"Did you sleep at Davenant last night, Mr. Sinclair?" asked the coroner.

"No; I only came up from Ascot yesterday evening, and spent the night in London."

"Where?"

"At Hildred's Hotel, Jermyn street."

"Did you dine at the hotel?"

"No; I dined at Francatelli's."

This was a venture. Francatelli's would doubtless have been crowded on the night after Ascot, and it would be difficult for the waiters to assert that Mr. Sinclair had not dined there.

"You dined at Francatelli's. Where is that?" asked one of the jury with rural innocence.

"It is a hotel and restaurant in Piccadilly."

"How long were you at Francatelli's?" asked the coroner.

"I really can not tell. My horse had been running at Ascot, and losing. I was somewhat excited. I may have gone into Francatelli's at eight, and gone out again between nine and ten."

"And from Francatelli's you went to your hotel?"

"No," said Gilbert, feeling that there was a hiatus of a couple of hours here. "I went into the Haymarket Theater for an hour or two."

"If this fellow asks me what I saw there, I'm done for," he thought; but happily the coroner was not so much on the alert as to put that question.

"Have you any idea what brought the deceased to your house last night, when you were known to be absent?"

"I have a very clear idea."

"Be kind enough to tell us all you can."

"Coming from the station this morning by a foot-path through the park, the way by which the deceased always came to my house when he did not drive from the station, I found a letter which it seems to me that he must have dropped there last night."

"You found a letter dropped by the deceased in Davenant Park?"

"I found this letter addressed to Mr. Wyatt, which I conclude must have been dropped by him last night."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Elaborate Traps.

On nothing has the inventor more frequently exercised his ingenuity than the making of traps to catch mischievous insects, animals and men. The rat has received especial attention. Some of the contrivances made for his undoing are so elaborate that no full-witted rodent would go near them. A trap recently seen consists of a double chamber. One chamber has a glass end through which Mr. Rat sees two or three imitation rats having a nice time with a bit of cheese. Wishing to join them, he runs around the box, gets into the other chamber and is caught. There are numerous devices which employ mirrors for the purpose of alluring the rat to his fate. He mounts on top of a barrel and sees a toothsome bit of cheese. As he approaches it he beholds another rodent—in reality his own reflection in a piece of looking-glass—coming for the cheese from the opposite direction. He makes a dash to get there first, and a pivoted board drops him into the cask, which is half full of water. Contrivances for catching thieves are more interesting. One of them is designed to discourage bank sneaks. The sneak puts his hand in through the teller's window, and unintentionally actuates a mechanism which causes a slide with spikes to close suddenly upon his paw and impale it. A trap of a somewhat similar character is a steel shutter for a house window, so disguised with covering and fringe as to look like an ordinary curtain. If a burglar tries to enter at night, it shuts down upon him, the spikes hidden by the fringe helping to hold him fast.

The Last of the Miamis.

The only surviving son of the last of the chiefs of the famous Miami tribe of Indians, James R. Godfrie by name, died the other day on the reservation of 1,900 acres of land given him by the government in 1819, and on which he lived and farmed with his children and grandchildren for the past sixty years. His father was Frances, a chief who succeeded Little Turtle in command of the Indian forces in the Maumee and Wabash valleys. His mother was also the daughter of a chief, John Baptiste Richardsville. The deceased left a large family, and seventy-two of his descendants are now occupying the reservation, which is a valuable tract of land four miles south of Fort Wayne, Ind. The youngest is George, a prominent citizen of Fort Wayne, who is one of the few Indians who ever joined a secret society, and is the highest in Masonry of any Indian in the world, having taken every degree in both rites, excepting the thirty-third, and is anxious to take that.

Raising Corn in a Day.

"The Navajo Indians are wonderfully adroit at juggling," says an Arizona man, "and sometimes perform feats quite as wonderful as those of the famous Hindoo magicians. The crowning achievement that I ever saw performed by the Navajo magician is the growing of sacred corn. At sunrise he planted the enchanted kernel before him in full view of the audience, and sat solemly in his place, before it, singing a weird song. Presently the earth cracked, and the tender green shoot pushed forth. As the magician sang on, the young plant grew visibly, reaching a height of several inches in an hour, waxing thick, and putting out its drooping blades. If the juggler stopped his song, the growth of the corn stopped, and resumed only when he recommenced his chant. By noon the corn was tall and vigorous, and by sunset it was a mature plant, with tall stalk, sedgy leaves and silk-topped ears of corn."

A Murderous Thing.

A retired French naval officer has invented a rifle which is capable of firing two kinds of explosive bullets at once.

THE first square books are said to have been made by order of King Attalus, of Pergamos, who directed this plan to be followed for the greater convenience of readers.

CORN COB ARM.

Peculiar Natural Freak Owned by a Gentleman in Kentucky.

The likeness of a human arm and hand presented in every detail upon a common corn cob is the freak of nature owned by C. B. Cundiff, of Somerset, Ky. Two years ago it was found growing upon its parent stalk in a field near that city, owned by William Anderson. When the ear was pulled it was thought to be one of those frequent bunches found in every field. It was husked and thrown into the crib until the following autumn. When it came to shelling time the curiosity was developed in all of its fullness.

CORN COB ARM.

Among the superstitious it created a feeling of alarm, just as did the alleged "handwriting of the Lord" some weeks since.

The "Corncob Arm," as this phenomenon of nature is known, is, however, a genuine article. After being shown about the county it was finally presented to the present owner, Mr. Cundiff. He has had it measured and photographed for future reference, and prizes it most highly.

The cob weighs 4¼ ounces and is 8 5-16 inches in length. From the butt to the palm of the hand is 5¼ inches. Its thickness at the butt is 5 1-16 inches and at the wrist 4 inches. The thumb is 1½ inches in length, the first finger 1½, the second 1⅜, the third 1½ and the fourth 1⅜. It will be seen by looking at the accompanying cut that the arm, so called, is symmetrical, resembling the gloved forearm of a woman extended as if in the act of reaching for something. A curious thing presented by the fingers is the mark, or crease, upon the inner surface usually made by the joint in the human.

It is known that the Indians set a great store by some of the gnarled and twisted ears that were discovered in their harvest. The peculiar formation of the ear is due to the production of double celled blossoms, such as occur in almost every form of plant life. Pumpkins and squashes have been known to take on the likeness of the human face, and the root of the mandrake assumes the form of a man with startling fidelity. This is the first time on record that the useful and nourishing corn plant ever tried anything in that direction.

AMILCARE CIPRIANI.

The Distinguished Italian Agitator Has Taken Refuge in England.

Owing to the stringency of the new French law, many anarchists have taken refuge in England. Probably the most distinguished of these is Amilcare Cipriani, the Italian agitator. He was born in Rimini, fifty years ago, of a family of good social position. At fifteen years of age he entered the army, but deserted twice in order to join Garibaldi. Banished in consequence of his advanced opinions, he proceeded to Greece and took part in the insurrection against King Otho. He then went on an exploring expedition to Egypt, where, in the streets of Alexandria, he was attacked by a secret society, of which he killed a member. He then fled to England. Later he went to France, took part in the Commune, side by side with Flourens, for which he was sentenced to imprisonment for life, but was released in 1880. Since then he has spent several years in prison and been compelled to leave Italy and France.

AMILCARE CIPRIANI

Glucose.

In view of the fact that glucose enters largely into the adulteration of sweets, it is consoling to know the product is not harmful. Common molasses is glucose, mixed with a little cane sugar, which falls to the bottom of the cask after long standing. The part of the sugar derived from cane which will not crystallize is glucose. Its non-crystallizability is a characteristic of glucose. Commercial glucose is made from corn, but it may be made from almost any sort of vegetable stuff. It is obtained from cotton rags by mixing with the rags a small quantity of sulphuric acid. Ordinary blotting-paper treated in the same way will yield glucose. Cotton rags and blotting-paper are cellulose, and cellulose is the same thing chemically as sugar, save that it contains more water in each of its molecules. The sulphuric acid takes away the extra water, and the residue is glucose. Glucose is not quite so sweet as cane sugar, but it costs only three cents a pound. So it makes a very suitable adulterant, and for this purpose it is widely employed in the manufacture of candies, jellies and syrups. It is produced in enormous quantities from maize. Cheap jellies are as a rule purely artificial products, composed of glucose, gelatine, cochineal and flavoring extracts. Much of the liquid honey on the market is merely glucose flavored. Sometimes pieces of real honey-comb are placed in the jars of allegd liquid honey to give it a genuine look. It may usually be taken for granted that honey offered for sale in this shape is counterfeit. Samples of honey which claim to be of the greatest purity are most apt to be false. What an immense fraud this is may be judged when it is considered that honey costs twenty cents a pound and glucose three cents a pound.

Boarding House News.

In California there is a prune orchard of over 3,000 acres.

THIEVES in Chicago are evidently early and active in planning for their winter campaign. They have stolen several iron lamp-posts in the Hinman street district, and now the police are wondering where the property and the miscreants have gone. Still, there have been graver and more audacious crimes in that town. Some thieves do not stop at street lamps. They steal the street.

IT costs the United States a good many hundreds of dollars to rescue Gen. Ezetas and his officers from the successful Salvadorean revolutionists, and it is going to cost a good many hundreds more to return them to their enemies that they may be shot after the approved Central American fashion. All of which teaches us that it is very good policy for this country to keep its fingers out of the domestic differences of its peppery little southern neighbors.

THE hired man of the Ft. Wayne Journal is giving a great deal of attention to the Auburn COURIER, so much so as to cause attention. It is the first time any Ft. Wayne paper ever gave a congressional candidate more than a passing thought. It is the first time the Journal ever woke up to the fact that it lived, moved and had its little being in the 12th congressional district. And why is this thus? Answer. The hired man's employer was made Ft. Wayne's postmaster. No other possible reason can be given.

REPUBLICAN papers say that Harrison paid off a big lot of the public debt. He could have paid more had he used the fund properly that was left him by Cleveland. But he left no money for Cleveland's second term and had arranged the McKinley law so as to secure "protection" but no revenue. Cleveland has been cutting down expenses, but they could not be cut as low as Harrison had cut the revenue. Hence the debt increased. It would have increased more had Harrison been president, with his extravagant ways.

Two American Railway Union officers have been found guilty in the federal court at Indianapolis, but sentence is to be suspended during good behavior. One had thrown a stone at a high railroad officer and had entered a telegraph office and thrown books and papers on the floor. The other had threatened men who refused to strike, and said that in a short time, a flag with the letters "A. R. U." would take the place of the American flag.

IT is laughable to hear republicans complain that "democrats did not redeem their pledges to reform the tariff." The facts are, the democrats would have been able to "redeem their pledges," but that five of their senators had gone over to the republicans as far as the tariff was concerned. But there were 38 straight republicans in the senate, any four of whom could have helped the democrats to "redeem their pledges." Why did they not do this if it is so desirable?

IF THE wild and silly plans of the populists should be carried out, the debt of the nation, of the states, counties and cities would be increased to at least ten times its present size. And when pay-day came, every city, town, county, state and entire nation would drop at once into hopeless bankruptcy and financial ruin. A party with such a policy would endanger the interests of any community in which they were entrusted with power. A free and intelligent people should be ashamed of such doctrines.

REPUBLICAN papers are telling their readers this doleful thing: "A democratic congress has killed the sheep industry." Are we to understand by this, that they believe, and wish their readers to believe, that a democratic congress is a sort of "sheep dip" that poisons the sheep, keeps the wool from growing, prevents the bearing of lambs, gives the old sheep the foot rot and spoils the flesh for mutton? How else do they explain it. It is such truck as this, dealt out to intelligent farmers, that takes from republican papers, the influence they should have with the people. No one believes such truck. The stuff about democrats being unfriendly to the soldiers, is, another thing that hurts the grand old party. Everyone knows there is nothing in that.

C. A. GLESSNER, a Ft. Wayne news dealer has been arrested for selling the Kansas City Sun, an obscene paper that has been suppressed a time or two before. He will probably be punished and possibly several newsboys. And still the Garrett Clipper is allowed to go in the mails.

WE have received a copy of the new paper published at Shipshewana, in Lagrange county. It bears the names of Nusbaum & Rudy, the former being John W. Nusbaum, brother of Dr Nusbaum, who resides at Auburn. The name of their paper is the "Tribune" and it shows considerable vitalty for a paper published in so small a town. We hope our friends may make it a success.

REPUBLICAN politicians are never so well suited as when they are contradicting themselves. They now say "sugar is getting higher because a duty is put on it." But in '92 they told us that "things become cheaper when there is a duty on them." Now they complain that while "sugar is going higher," the "democrats in Louisiana" and "sugar beet raisers over the country" are leaving the democrat party because the new law 'takes off their protection and makes, sugar and sugar beets lower." All of which makes it look as if republican editors do not know much about things.

BRECKENRIDGE was defeated at the primary election in his district last Saturday. It is Henry Clay's old district, and there were three candidates for the democratic nomination, Breckenridge, Owens and Settle. Owen came out 378 ahead and this nominates him. Breckenridge says he will support the nominee, but that is of little account either way. The result is a credit to the democrats of the district. But the highest honor falls to the women, who worked early and late, to influence the voters against such acknowledged and shameless hypocrites as Col. Breckenridge, and helped to lead the people to an appreciation of purer morals, at least in public men. All honor to the ladies of the Ashland district.

BLISS still believes in Coxey. Last week, he said. "The way to build roads is by Coxey's plan." "It is burdensome to tax a farmer a dollar, or two or three dollars an acre to build gravel roads." From this, we infer that by Coxey's plan, a gravel road will cost nothing, which looks like an admission that the money Coxey wants issued will be worth nothing. If this money is worth nothing, who will work on the roads to get it, or who will sell gravel and take pay in that kind of money? If, on the other hand, the Coxey money has any value, it is because it contains a government promise to pay. But a promise to pay, is a debt, and then Coxey's plan would mean an increase of the debt. 500 millions or more. And who pays these debts? The people and no one else. The farmers, are of the people. So that even by the Coxey-Bliss plan, the farmer has to help build the roads. Coxey's plan, is the plan of a political fraud, a man who is working on the pocket books of credulous people, so that the dollar may flow from their pockets to his. And as ridiculous as it seems, still there are a few people, who like to be plucked of their hard earnings by just such frauds.

Richland Caucus,

CORUNNA, IND., 9, 15, '94.

EDITOR COURIER:

Sir: The democrats of Richland township met in caucus at Corunna Sept. 15, '94, and nominated the following ticket: Trustee, James Finch; assessor, Norris Friend; justice of the peace, west, Geo Maxwell; justice of the peace, east, Wm. Cruse; constable, west Edward Gushwa; constable, east, John Wetzel. There was a large crowd present and all seemed confident of success in November.

Mr. Hines, candidate for treasurer, was present and gave a short talk. Mr. Hines is a gentleman who is amply able to fill the position he seeks and would surely make an accommodating and obliging public servant. Yours resp., E. A. S.

Hugh Saxton Killed.

Another terrible accident occurred here Saturday evening, resulting in the death of Hugh J. Saxton, youngest son of Mr. T. J. Saxton and Mrs. Rosa Saxton. The boy lived with his mother near the fair ground, out east of town. That evening he had asked permission to ride his bicycle into the fair ground, and there he found Charlie Roberts, son of J. B. Roberts, who had gone out there riding L. J. Miller's little Shetland pony, Dandy. The Saxton lad had never ridden a horse and wanted to ride the pony home. So the boys changed, Charlie taking the wheel and Hugh the pony, and started home. In some way that cannot be ascertained now, when they were passing the floral hall, Hugh fell off and struck the ground so hard as to stun him. He was brought home and every exertion made to save his life, but he died in about two hours. One hip was considerably bruised, as well as his shoulder and neck, but it does not appear that his neck was broken, as was at first believed. The funeral was at the Presbyterian church Monday, at 2:30 p m., the services being by the pastor, Rev. F. C. Colvin. He was a bright handsome little fellow much loved by his playmates. He had many pleasant characteristics among them a passionate love of flowers. He will be greatly missed, especially by his mother whose constant and only companion he was.

FOOL OR LIAR—WHICH?

Both, past all denial. We refer to an "expression of opinion" about teachers' institutes and education in general, found in that obscene and disreputable sheet, the Garrett Clipper, written by Hank Little, the champion drunkard, deadbeat and slanderer of the county. Such a man and such an article deserve no notice, for very few decent people read it and perhaps no teacher in the county would read the filthy sheet if it were put into his hands. But now and then, a well disposed person may see it, and without hearing the truth, might be misled. The article alluded to is in the Clipper of Sept. 6, and for the benefit of the teachers, many of whom are regular readers of the COURIER, we will for one issue defile our columns with a few extracts. The tenor of the whole article is against county institutes and their promoters, and running all through it is a continued sneer at the teachers themselves. After quoting a compliment for the institute as found in the Waterloo Press, the Clipper Ishmaelite says:

"But does the reader know how this crowd was gathered? These teachers are allowed two dollars a day for attending the institute, which is paid by the taxpayers."

Now, as to the facts. The law of 1865 has not been changed as to institutes. And this is the thirtieth institute DeKalb has had under this law. It provides that the county shall contribute $50 towards paying the expense. That is every cent the taxpayers do contribute. No teacher gets a penny for his time. The editor is evidently sober enough to keep on a little further, for he adds:

"Now, a word about these teachers. Although they get paid for their time and expenses, some of them play the pauper act two-to-one slicker than Coxey, Brown, Wandering Iler, or Dummy Mott. While attending this wonderful educational 'art of arts' they sleep in livery stables and board at a bakery. They bring their horse feed, kick on the price of a stall and wear the town pump out to supply their drinks. They do this, or did so last week at Auburn, yet some of these same chaps expect people with far broader minds to look up to them on account of the position they hold—a forty dollar a month and board in a dinner pail. We're done. Let's sleep it off."

And we suppose he took another drink at this point and "slept it off." From this extract the teachers can easily see the kind of fellow who is lying about them—who is down on institutes, and who despises education in general. We have shown that no teacher has his time paid. Of course his expenses are not paid. Anyone with a grain of sense or a sober fiber in his brain, knows each teacher sustains himself. As for the serious charge of drinking cold water, which seems to be cause enough for the hatred of the Clipper man, we may presume that the teacher who was guilty of this breach of Clipper morals did so to avoid meeting the Clipper editor. The Clipper editor has not quenched his burning thirst at the town pump, as far as we know, since years ago when he claimed he took that dose of rough on rats and threw the box into the horse trough at that same pump. And we will warrant that the teacher who drank from the refreshing, cool water at the pump felt as much a man as he walked away, as did the Clipper man as he reeled off after his own last drink. If the teachers think Hank Little has such a "broader mind" or a superior education let us quote a sentence or two from his article against education and against teachers in one of their issues of last February. We ask teachers as well as all decent people to hold their noses with a strong grip, while we quote.

"Is DeKalb county schools making any headway in education? We think not. Within the last two weeks we have received several letters from rural teachers and the grammar, punctuation and spelling is simply awful. Some of them give the best evidence that the pedagogue could not spell his own name. Such things are more aggravating when we take into consideration the fact that this class of people appear dignified and want to be looked up to by everybody. How do they secure a license to teach anyway? If they don't know anything themselves, how can they be expected to teach others?" (Then after a lot of gush and harangue about a young man down in Newville township, he makes this fling at the town schools, as drawing is not taught in the country schools.) "There has been no noticeable advancement in twenty years, unless it is in speech-making, picture drawing, marching, drills or some foolishness of like nature."

Notice the delicate tints of his own classical education, as for example: "Is the schools making any headway?" (We might reply in similar ungrammatical style, "They is.") Again, "The grammar, punctuation and spelling is simply awful." This in its simple form would read, "They is simply awful." And in both the articles we have quoted in part, are to be found numerous cases of incorrect spelling and bad grammatical construction, while the punctuation is scarcely equal to guesswork. And why? Because this fellow who so boldly criticizes his betters, is an ignoramus and has no education himself. Much less has he ability, good taste, good morals, good habits or good standing in society. And such a man has the brass to stand up and criticize the noblest work now being done for the country, and to sneer at the noblest, ablest, brightest, most useful and most promising body of people the nation has—the teachers and their co-workers and sympathizers.

That the teachers themselves recognize the value of the press as an auxiliary in the good work they are engaged in, we append the resolution on that subject adopted at the recent institute:

"Resolved, That our thanks are due to the press of the city and county which have so liberally rendered aid and endeavored in every way to assist in the success of the institute and the school work of the county."

It is evident that the teachers, in passing this resolution, were in earnest, for the decent press of the entire county has always thrown its powerful influence in their favor, and in favor of good principles and moral and social decency. But this good work of reputable newspapers the Clipper and its drunken, dead beat editor never has done. He could not appreciate the good work of the schools. Ignorant and depraved himself, he could not rise to the higher level of the common schools. But the intelligent people of DeKalb county will stand by our schools and our school officers. They will encourage and sustain our noble army of teachers. And it is to these worthy elements that we address this article. They and the teachers of this county are rearing to themselves and the cause they represent, a monument as lasting and as glorious as has ever been reared in honor of a mortal name. It is a monument that will grow brighter as the years go by, and will tell of the labors and sacrifices of this generation, when their critic and defamer has gone down into a congenial oblivion and been gladly forgotten.

Does Protection Help Manufacturers?

The abstract of the Eleventh Census affords rather frigid comfort to that class of the republican party who believe that all that has prevented the manufacturing establishments of this country from going to that country where water is said to be scarce and winter clothing unknown, was a high tariff. In the abstract referred to, comparison are made between 1880 and 1890, covering a period of ten years, when none will deny but what the McKinley ideas and politics had full sway. The table referred to begins on page 112 of the book. We cannot refrain from subjoining a part of the table. The table shows the number of establishments engaged in manufacturing the different articles in the years mentioned, to-wit:

Agricultural implements	1943	910
Bagging flax, hemp, jute	27	16

And so on through the alphabet.

PROTECTION kills off manufacturing industries in one sense of the word. It kills off all the small ones and makes the big ones stronger. The small manufacturers then have to shut down and go to work as mere hands for the big ones. See our list showing the reduced number of manufacturing plants under republican "protection" from 1880 to 1890. That tells the story.

W. C. T. U State Meeting.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the state of Indiana will hold its twenty-first annual convention on Oct. 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9, 1894, at Indianapolis, Ind. The State Union has accomplished a good work in the past year, having just dedicated a few weeks ago the Hadley Industrial Home for Girls, an institution for the training of poor friendless girls for some useful occupation in life. This building was commenced less than two years ago, and is now complete, and the money mostly paid, and the full amount pledged. The ground was donated by Addison and Martha Hadley for this purpose, and the building has been erected by the local unions of the state. Auburn pledged $25 which has been raised and sent, and now have pledged $25 more, to be paid in six months. The delegates to the state convention are Mrs. Baldwin, Pres. of the union; Mrs. Burke and Mrs. Lewis. A feature of the convention will be a visit to the Home, which is about 20 miles from Indianapolis.

CORRESPONDENCE

WATERLOO.

Miss Allie Phillips, a teacher in the Garrett city school spent Sunday at home.

Charlie Voss and family, of Peru, are in town having been called to attend the funeral of his sister Minnie.

Joseph Zwilling has returned from Iowa and will go to Ann Arbor to complete his studies in pharmacy.

Mrs. C. A. O. McClellan, and mother, Mrs. Long, of Auburn, were calling on friends in the city on Tuesday.

Clyde Willis, of the Press office has at last mastered the art of riding the wheel and is now the owner of a fine one.

Mrs. Gill had no days set aside this fall as opening days, but says they have the goods to show and sell all the same, and will strive to as in the past to merit her share of the public patronage.

The Moshiers cousin who have bought Mr E. Braun's business, and property, will take possession the 29th Mr. Braun will move his family into the Fisher property on Washington street, within a few days.

Eli Williamson is making repairs and improvements in the property pleasantly situated in the "old orchard" preparatory to Mr. Braun's taking possession. Elmer Williamson is doing the papering and painting.

Mrs J. B. stated Saturday evening in at Johnson's that she should not have a new bonnet this winter, as she did not need it. Before leaving for home, however, the writer concluded Mrs. B.'s resolution to economize on bonnets was vanishing into thin air.

Mrs. Alva Espy, who was formerly a resident of Waterloo, is now here from Arkansas, intending to spend the winter with her niece, Mrs Ada Bemendorfer. Mrs Espy is a widow, her husband having died two years ago. Mr. and Mrs. E. had many warm friends here in the long ago, and a few are still here to welcome her back.

Saturday evening Miss Minnie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Charles Voss, died after a short illness of congestion of the lungs, aged 21 years. The deceased was very popular in a large circle of friends. The funeral was held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence. This is the first member of the family that death has taken from their midst. They have much heartfelt sympathy in their affliction, especially from those who have also been bereft. The burial took place from the residence, where the services were held. The attendance was very large, and very many showed their appreciation of the departed by the delicate gift of lovely blossoms, sprays and foliage.

Mrs. Barbara Heldt who, was very low for many weeks, in Ft. Wayne died Tuesday, about 1 p m. the funeral services being held Sept. 6 at the German Reformed church. The flowers were numerous and lovely, and the funeral was largely attended. A pleasing feature of the occasion was that the pall bearers were young men, friends of the family. It seems very fitting that the young should lay the old away to their long rest. Mrs. Margaret Braun, a daughter of the deceased, and Miss Katie Braun, of Waterloo, were present. Mrs Barbara Heldt was born in Wickersheim, Elsass Germany, and was 81 years, 5 months 22 days old at the of her death. She had 9 children, 18 grandchildren. Five of her children are living at the present time.

Mr. and Mrs Jesse Johnson had their usual fall opening Friday and Saturday of last week, the 14th and 15th. They had many visitors to see, admire and, what is of most importance, buy. The central feature of the decorations was a grand Turkish pavilion, furnishing the very best opportunity for the display of an endless variety of articles. A long table underneath was covered with the late styles of rich bonnets and hats. On each side, the length of the store, out of reach, but at the right height to see well, magnificent silks and satins for dresses and trimming were tastefully draped, the rich colors and shades serving to set each other off, together with other rich fabrics with handsome laces of all widths festooned in a way best to show their patterns. A long center table further down displayed trimmings in variety and endless other pretty, useful and necessary articles. The showcases were gay and beautiful with new styles of flowers, fancy work and other goods in greater variety than the writer can remember. The windows were lovely and said plainly an artist had been at work. In one was a tall, beautiful wax foliage plant as central decoration. As long as the world lasts, women will have bonnets and other pretty things.

Church Dedication.

The Church of Christ will dedicate the first house of worship in Ashley, Oct. 7. For eighteen months all the services have been conducted in a hall with many inconveniences. Yet we have had many enjoyable times. But now we look forward to the dedication of our new house with much satisfaction. Bro. F. M. Rains, National Sec'y of Missions, will be with us as the speaker of the occasion. Good music, grand sermons and other good things in proportion is what we anticipate.

J. N. SCHOLES, Pastor.

Dell Myers had something like a stroke of paralysis Sunday, or some similar trouble. He was suddenly unable to move or use his legs, and although he can now get out on the street with the aid of crutches, it is pretty slow work for him.

Kutzner & Myers have a first-class livery establishment at their barn on West Sixth street. They are always prepared to fit out their patrons with a good rig of any sort, and at fair rates. Don't forget them when you need a rig to go anywhere.

For instance, Mrs. Chas. Rogers, of Bay City, Mich., accidentally spilled scalding water over her little boy. She promptly applied DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, giving instant relief. It's a wonderfully good salve for burns, bruises, sores, and a sure cure for piles. tf

The two large willows on the south side of the court house have been cut down and removed. Mr. Click informs us, they taken up because of the millions of lice or small bugs that infested them from top to bottom. They also swarmed over the ground and great numbers found their way into the office of the commissioners and the auditor in the building.

Mrs. Lawrence has put down a new cement walk in front of her Seventh street property, by the M. E. church, and filled up the grounds to a more desirable level. It will add greatly to the appearance of the property and to the convenience of all concerned. Her example should be followed as other property owners. The town board also did a very acceptable thing by putting in a cement crossing.

Squire Walborn's court was busy on Monday with an assault and battery case from Corunna. A Mr. Luttman had gone into N. N. Barker's saloon, and become boisterous, when Barker ordered him out. He refused, and Barker put him out, and in doing so, knocked him down. Luttman had Barker arrested for assault, he pleaded guilty. Mr. Walborn fined him. Then Barker turned around and had Luttman arrested for "provoke." And Barker had to contribute to the school fund.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly." Sold by Robbins and McCord druggist Auburn Ind. 34tf

A letter from W. F. Williamson, of Angola, says we were in error as to Mr. Christian being the only man to complete the century run last week. He says Howard Long, of Angola, should have the credit, as he reached Auburn first and had only two minutes to spare. He says himself, Art Steel and Fred Bradner were the ones who reached Auburn first, but they had taken the train "along with some others" from Huntington to Ft. Wayne, then to Auburn on their wheels. Then he says the Shugers boys finished next, having come part way on the train with them, and that Long passed Christian about six miles out of Auburn, thus getting in first. Long, he says, was the first man to register at Huntington. We saw the riders as they came in but several were strangers and others passed too swiftly to be recognized. So we took the report of those we supposed knew.

The many friends of Curtis F. Ash, will be interested to learn that he is now a member of the firm he has been with several years. He had been traveling for the sale of paper for some time, and now we see his name on their letter heads. It is the Sheridan-Clayton Paper Co, Wholesale Stationers, St. Joseph, Mo. The DeKalb boy always manages to winter through.

A pleasant little party of elderly ladies met at the residence of J. R. Moody on Monday afternoon, in honor of Mrs. Moody's 58th birthday. They passed a few hours most pleasantly and then sat down to a splendidly furnished table the hostess and her daughter, Mrs. Zent, had prepared. It is not easy to say which enjoyed the afternoon the best, the entertainers or the entertained, for all seemed happy.

Sam. McAnally, who is in charge of the Eagle Mfg. Works at the Junction, has begun business in earnest. He had sales the first week, including one of their make of stoves, which it is said are excellent. He starts up foundry work also. They have always made a specialty of adjustable stove backs, a very handy thing, for they can be put into a stove easily, and everybody is liable to find the back of the cooking stove burned out.

Chas H. V. Lewis and family passed through here Saturday, on their way to their home in Kansas City Mo. Mrs. Lewis has been spending the summer at Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard, and Mr Lewis joined them there for the past three weeks. Then they visited the old home at Butler a few days. Mr. Lewis, has for about fourteen years been employed as cashier in the Union National bank at Kansas City, and is doing well. He was one of our old teachers and sent regards to Mr. McIntosh, and others. We are always glad to note the success of the energatic DeKalb boy.

The Musical Monthly for August and September, has reached our table, and as usual, it is full to overflowing with gems of music and song. Those whose taste incline them in this direction will find employment in fresh music enough to last them several days. The songs are especially inviting, and those who have the ability to appreciate the Italian songs, will find these numbers well worth the study. The Musical Monthly is published by Richard A. Saalfield, 794 Tenth Avenue, New York City, and is the leading musical journal of the country. It is 15 cents a copy, or $1.50 a year.

Rebecca Wilkinson, of Brownsvalley, Ind., says: I have been in a distressed condition for three years from Nervousness Weakness of the Stomach, Dyspepsia and Indigestion until my health was gone. I had been doctoring constantly with no relief. I bought one bottle of South American Nervine, which did me more good than any $50 worth of doctoring I ever did in my life. I would advise every weakly person to use this valuable and lovely remedy; a few bottles of it has cured me completely. I consider it the greatest medicine in the world." Roger Houlton, youngest son of DeKalb's first settler, is teaching music at Ft. Wayne yet We met him the other day, coming from giving a violin lesson, that being a favorite instrument with him, though he plays on several others.

Theo. Pilgrim, Jimmie Dills and Herman Kessler tried the 100-mile bicycle run Sunday. They went to Huntington and back. Pilgrim and Dills got back in 11 hours and 30 minutes, and Kessler would have made it, but his wheel broke.

Dave Hodge, Walter Hartman, R. W Cobb, Ralph Moody and others went to Bryan Monday to attend the bicycle races and baseball game. Ralph played for Butler and got three home runs off of Voorhees, an imported expert player.

Big show wagon in town yesterday. All for the purpose of getting umbrellas to mend. Well, that is a more honorable way than Coxey's plan of going into the tramp business. We will take this man as our model, and the populists can take Coxey.

Pearl Kelley went to Ft. Wayne Monday to enter school at the Westminister Seminary for Young Ladies. The school has the reputation of being an excellent one, and she will probaby spend some time there. Her aunt, Mrs. Barns went down with her, to help her to get started.

Do you want to spend a half hour in solid enjoyment and feel at peace with all mankind? Spend 5 cents for a Young America, sit down in a shady corner and take a quiet smoke.

Those who are entitled to medical assistance at the expense of the county should remember that the contract for this was given to the County Medical Society, and they alone get pay for it. All the physicians here except Dr. Nusbaum and Dr. Buchtel, may be called on, but these two are not members.

O. W. Nottingham, who at one time taught penmanship here, passed through on Saturday on his way to VanWert, Ohio. He is located at Coldwater, Mich., and divides his time between that city and VanWert, he being regularly employed at each place as a special teacher of penmanship in the public schools.

The popular firm of Schaab & Murphy come to the front again this week with a new advertisement of their big stock of clothing, gents' furnishing and all goods in that line. They have also added to their business, something they have never carried before, which is a full line of shoes for men and boys Their stock in both lines is new and large, and they will make the prices way down.

We are in receipt of a letter from A. C. Rhoads, son of J. M. Rhoads, of Newville. He is now located at Glassford, Ill, and employed in a butcher shop. He says that crops are fine in that part of the state—Peoria county. There will be plenty of wheat, corn, oats etc, but many are losing hogs by the cholera. He likes his outlook, where he is, and sends regards to the friends back here.

The Butler Record has changed hands, the purchaser being L. H. Higley, a young man who has been part of the time connected with the office for a year or two. He is a son, we believe, of the Mr. Higley who used to publish the Auburn Times here, up to 1870. He is said to be a worthy young man. Mr. Smith, the retiring editor, will move elsewhere. The COURIER wishes both gentlemen success.

Dr. Metcalf, of Indianapolis, was here a short time Saturday to consult with Dr. Swarts secretary of our local board of health, as to ways and means to deal vigorously with the diphtheria. Dr. Metcalf is secretary of the state Board of health, and the highest legal authority in matters conneced with the suppression of dangerous diseases. He had been at Walkerton to assist in getting the small pox there under control. His visit here will do good, as it is plain there is now and then a family that has so far ignored the orders of our local board. People must learn that all orders for the improvement of our sanitary condition must be strictly obeyed. They cannot be allowed to endanger the health of the community by their continual neglect and carelessness.

A GENTLEMAN prominent in several New York City clubs, says that many of them are breaking away from the custom of treating to alcoholic drinks. In the famous Harvard Club, composed of graduates of Harvard College, there is a standing agreement that no member shall treat another member.

THE islet of Massowa, in the Red Sea, where Italy is sending its anarchists, is one of the hottest places in the world, and escape from it in that sterile region would be very difficult. The plan of sending the anarchists somewhere to practice their cult upon each other is meeting with favor.

THE New York janitor of flats has not yet reached the tyrannical standard of his French counterpart, who, it seems, claims the right to open and read letters addressed to the various tenants of the building under his charge. Yet more remarkable than this is the fact that the act has been virtually upheld by a magistrate, who, being appealed to by one of the victims, positively decided that, as the letters had been merely read and not stolen, no offense at law had been committed. More than ever now can it be said that "the concierge rules Paris."

MANY a farmer who struggles with weeds would find his labors reduced if he were careful to remove the weeds from the roadside by his fields. Weeds which go to seed by the road give liberally of their seeds to all the fields about, and these are carried long distances by the wind. The farmer who has only grass growing by the side of his fields will have fewer weeds, fewer insect pests, and may add something to the amount of hay, if only the little grain that can be counted by the grazing of a horse or cow. Farmers cannot afford to encourage weeds anywhere.

A NEW YORK woman of bad reputation has been explaining how she committed perjury in a recent inquiry. In the first place, she said, she did not swear on the bible, and in the next place, when the oath was being administered, she just waved her right hand in the air instead of holding it straight up. Perhaps the incident is of interest as tending to show that conscience is never quite uprooted unless in a person of education or of superior mental activity. The woman in question is a perjurer, and worse, for her whole life has been vicious. Yet she has her scruples about taking a false oath, as the childish subterfuges show. A rather better woman, but smarter or better educated, might have calmly lied her way through it—bible, straight-hand and all.

PROF. SAUNDERS, in an address to the Canadian fruit growers, stated that the food value of apples depends in a measure on the condition of ripeness of the fruit; also on the variety of apples from which the supply is to be furnished. European authorities consider the money value of the fodder constituents in ordinary varieties of apples and pears as somewhat higher than those contained in an equal weight of turnips, and those of the apple pomace as about one-third higher in feeding value than the whole apple, which has served for its production, and about equal in value to sugar beets. Where apples are fed to stock they should be given in moderate quantities, and should be liberally supplemented with more nutritious and more highly nitrogenous food, such as bran, shorts or oil cake, and a fair proportion of hay.

THEIR word is the only thing some folks can't keep.

THE Czar is suffering from the influenza. Poor man! when it is not a blow-up it is a blow-out.

MEXICO is about to pass laws favoring the establishment of a greater merchant marine. The proposed changes, if carried out, will create the most liberal shipping laws in the world, with reductions or exemptions from duties for all material, and a liberal bounty system.

A LARGE nursery firm in Missouri made an offer last year of trees enough to plant an acre of land for every boy and girl whose parents would give them the land. In two weeks' time they had given away 45,000 apple trees. That ought to bring good returns to the nursery men in that sort which comes with the consciousness of a good action. That gift of trees will result in a great love for pomology on the part of the young folks who became orchardists. Leanings thus strengthened in youth become affections in maturity, and some of these children may well become the fruit growers of the future.

IT is intimated that the alleged attempt to borrow $4,500,000 for the purpose of taking out of bond spirits belonging to the whisky trust, and the failure to do so, was a ruse whereby to milk the lambs in the stock market. Close on a million dollars is said to have been made by a few men, who deliberately avoided a saving of more than that to the trust, which they might have done by taking the spirits out of bond before the law went into effect. If the truth be told it was a wicked thing to do, and yet no more than might be expected of a set of men who essay to grow rich by the manufacture of the enemy which men put into their mouths to steal away their brains.

THE work of making war maps of Fisher's Island, Gardiner's Bay, and Long Island Sound, which has been voluntarily undertaken by the First Naval Battalion, will do more than repay the State of New York for the maintenance of that body. The information which will be collected will be of inestimable value to the National Government in case of war, and in case of riotous outbreaks in the localities covered will be extremely useful to the State. It should be borne in mind that the officers in charge of the work were trained at Annapolis and have had experience in the navy, so that they will bring professional skill to the direction of the task.

IN a paper read by him before the University Extension classes at Oxford, England, Dr. Billings made the novel suggestion that race may be an element in determining varieties, well known to be great, in the death rates of different civilized countries. He asked what is the secret of the death rate in Austria being 30.6 per thousand while that of Sweden is only 17.6, and mentions the low death rate in tenement houses in New York occupied by Jews. He says that city is a gathering place for all nations and in it may be studied the susceptibility to diseases of the different races under much the same conditions. The death rate of the Irish rises there to 28, while it was only 18 at home. That of the Italian falls from 28.6 at home to 12.3 in New York City, that of Englishmen shows little change as a result of crossing the Atlantic, while the mortality of Germans falls considerably. It is found that certain diseases prey upon certain races with particular virulence. The black man suffers more than the white from consumption and kindred ailments and is altogether shorter-lived, while on the other hand he oftener escapes malaria, yellow fever and cancer. Among young Irish children there is a low death rate, among adults a high one, due to a considerable extent to the effect of tuberculosis, pneumonia and alcoholism. Cancer and diseases of the digestive organs prey especially upon the Germans, while the Jews, who have a low death rate and escape consumption and pneumonia, are especially liable to diabetes, locomotor-ataxia, and diseases of the nervous system. Dr. Billings showed that a large region of hygenic science consists of little more than a group of interesting problems, that the most advanced researches have resulted only in plausible surmises or tentative solutions thus far, and that the explanations which satisfied an earlier generation of writers on public health must be rejected or reconsidered by their successors.

Something of the Banana.

The banana is a fruit that possesses wonderful sustaining properties. It is now fully appreciated. Yet, years ago, in the warm countries where it flourishes, it was thought of so lightly that it was allowed to waste if not eaten by the cattle. It is true that the plant itself was valued, but simply as a shade for coffee trees, between rows of which it was planted. When in bloom the banana plantation is a sight of beauty, the buds and blossoms being gigantic affairs. In Cuba the fruit is reared with exceptional pride. The Spaniards used to regard the banana as a forbidden fruit, because they believed they detected in its heart the transverse section of the cross.

Has Great Influence.

The Farmers' National Congress will meet in Parkersburg, W. Va., Oct. 3, 4, 5, and 6 next. Special rates are made by the railways and the hotels. At the annual meetings a wide variety of subjects is discussed by speakers from all parts of the country, and at the coming meeting addresses will be made by delegates from twenty-one different States. More than thirty-five States have been represented at each of the last five meetings of the congress. The congress met in 1889 at Montgomery, Ala., in 1890 at Council Bluffs, Iowa; in 1891 at Sedalia, Mo.; in 1892 at Lincoln, Neb.; and in 1893 at Savannah, Ga. The congress is composed of one delegate from each Congressional district and two at large from each State, appointed for two years by the Governors of the several States, and one delegate from each State Agricultural College, and one from each State Board of Agriculture. Delegates from one-half the States are appointed each year. The congress meets in annual session lasting four days, and has an executive committee, known as the National Board of Agriculture. This Board is composed of one member from each State and Territory.

The Congress has no political platform and does not seek to form a political party. Its delegates come, not as politicians, but as farmers. This is one reason why the Farmers' National Congress is not so well known as the Alliance or Grange. The annual meetings are attended by hundreds of farmers not delegates. These meetings are not unlike the meetings of a national farmers' institute. The range of subjects is wide and the speakers are from every section of the country. Those who are to deliver addresses at the Parkersburg meeting are from the following States—we give them in the order in which they appear on the official program: District of Columbia, Nebraska, New York, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Kansas, Georgia, California, Ohio, Texas, Michigan, North Carolina, Iowa, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Maine, West Virginia, Alabama, Indiana, Missouri, Connecticut. The addresses are limited strictly to twenty minutes each. Several of the speakers are women. Many of the delegates bring their wives and daughters. The officers elected at the last meeting for the ensuing two years are: President, Hon. B. F. Clayton, Indianola, Iowa; Vice President, Maj. G. M. Ryals, Savannah, Ga.; Secretary, Hon. John M. Stahl, Quincy, Ill.; First Assistant, Col. W. G. Whidby, Atlanta, Ga.; Second Assistant, Capt. T. J. Appleyard, Sanford, Fla.; Treasurer, Hon. Henry Hayden, Indianola, Iowa.

The Farmers' National Congress is working for rural free mail delivery, legislation against adulteration, measures to stamp out infectious live stock diseases, the enlargement of the work of the weather bureau, rural telephone lines, good roads at bearable cost, fuller agricultural statistics and reliable crop estimates, better supported and managed experiment stations, the rational systematic improvement of waterways, and legislation affecting railways that, while preventing abuses, recognizes that the interests of farmers and of railways are closely related and interdependent. As each delegate is a man of prominence and influence, known to the Congressman from his district and the Senators from his State, the national legislature usually grants what the Congress requests. And the character of those prominent in it is a guarantee that it will be kept up to its present high position.

WORST DROUGHT IN YEARS.

Western New York Almost Literally Burning Up.

The worst drought in years in Western New York is now being experienced and already the loss of crops has been very great. But the most serious features of the drought is the grasshopper pest. Grasshoppers have stripped the pastures and meadows and are now attacking the tops of potatoes and even the grape vines. The number of the insects is almost incredible. When the farmers go into the fields to destroy them they are compelled to wear masks. Some farmers take a horse and plow and try to bury them. Grasshoppers are an excellent fertilizer. One ingenious farmer converts his horse rake into a net and rakes hoppers by the stack at the edge of a pond. Then he scoops them into the pond and makes compost heaps of the drowned bugs. He has made fifty loads of this kind of fertilizer.

Milch cows are being sold for a song because fodder is so scarce. Hay fields lie burned and blackened, crops have been destroyed and even trees are short of foliage. In several cities a water famine is feared and the greatest economy in the use of water has been ordered. Because water for sprinkling is denied many lawns are being ruined.

STARTLING FIGURES.

Twenty Per Cent. of America's Corn Has Been Cut Up for Fodder.

The report of the statistician of the agricultural department for September shows a falling off in the condition of corn to 63.4. This is a decline of 5.7 points from the August and 31.6 from the July condition. The change is marked in nearly all the great corn States. The present condition is 75 in Kentucky, 40 in Ohio, 55 in Michigan, 80 in Indiana, and 75 in Illinois, 51 in Wisconsin, 60 in Minnesota, 40 in Iowa, 50 in Missouri, 45 in Kansas, 15 in Nebraska and 16 in South Dakota. In most of the Southern States the condition has risen and a good crop is certain. In addition to the unfavorable prospects arising from the low condition of growing crop reports from eight States, show of an aggregate of 40,872,934 acres planted there has been cut up for fodder, or abandoned, 16,506,000 acres, or 38 per cent., which is a little over 20 per cent. of the entire area planted in the country. The percentage cut up or abandoned by the States reporting is as follows: Indiana 08, Illinois 10, Wisconsin 21, Iowa 35, Kansas 51, Missouri 16, Nebraska 81, South Dakota 81. The condition of wheat, considering both winter and spring varieties, when harvested is 88.7 against 74 last year and 85.3 in 1892. The reported condition for the principal wheat growing States is as follows: Ohio 102, Michigan 91, Indiana 103, Illinois 101, Wisconsin 92, Minnesota 85, Iowa 92, Missouri 91, Kansas 58, Nebraska 40, South Dakota 32, North Dakota 54, California 88, Oregon 88, Washington 87.

In the East, New York 86, Pennsylvania 91, Maryland 98, Virginia reports 78, Tennessee 78, West Virginia 93, Kentucky 92, Texas 92. In the principle wheat States there is considerable improvement in conditions, the crop being fully up to expectations, and in other parts the yield has exceeded expectations. The average condition of oats is reported at 77.8 against 76.5 in August, 77.7 in July, and 87 June 1.

GUBERNATORIAL WINNERS.

Governor Cleaves of Maine, and General Clark of Arkansas.

Governor H. B. Cleaves, of Maine, re-elected by the Republicans, was born in Bridgeton fifty-three years ago. He was educated in the public schools and at the Bridgeton Academy. He worked on the farm and as a lumberman, and in 1862 enlisted as a private in Company B of the Twenty-third Maine Volunteers. At the expiration of his term of enlistment he re-enlisted in the Thirtieth Maine Veteran Volunteers, and a few months later was commissioned First Lieutenant of Company F. He was mustered out of service at the close of the war, having won the reputation of being a brave officer. He returned to his native State, studied law and has since practiced his profession. In 1875 and '76 he was a member of the Legislature, and for two years thereafter was City Solicitor of Portland. From 1880 to 1885 Mr. Cleaves served the State as Attorney General. The Governor is unmarried.

H. B. CLEAVES.

General James F. Clark, Democrat, newly-elected governor of Arkansas, is the most aggressive man in that State. Although he is only 38 years of age, he has been successively active in the lower house of the Legislature, the State Senate, of which he was president, and finally as Attorney General of the State. From this latter office he next steps into the Democratic nomination for governor, which, in Arkansas, is equivalent to an election. He is the ideal Southern gentleman, firm, decided, aggressive and indomitable, and as a result of the three qualities, perhaps, uniformly successful. He already aspires to the seat in the United States Senate now held by Senator Jones, whose term expires in 1897. During the preliminary canvass, Mr. Clarke declared that he could beat any man in Arkansas for governor and he entered upon an exceedingly vigorous campaign to prove the soundness of this statement. The Democrats elected their entire State ticket, and Clark, for governor, had nearly 20,000 majority.

IS NOW A POPULIST.

Senator Jones, of Nevada, Has Served as a Republican Since 1873.

John P. Jones, of Nevada, who has left the ranks of the Republican party for the Populists, has served in the United States Senate as a Republican since 1873. Senator Jones was born in Herefordshire, England, in 1830, but was brought to the United States before he was a year old. He was educated in Ohio and in the early part of the California excitement he went to that State and engaged in mining. Subsequently he became a member of the State Senate. In 1867 he went to Nevada, and since then has been engaged in the development of the mineral resources of the State. He took his seat in the United States Senate March 4, 1873. His present term does not expire until 1897. In 1892 he had served in the Brussels Conference as a United States delegate under the appointment of President Harrison. Senator Jones' conversion to Populism is formally admitted in a letter to Enoch Strother, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee of Nevada.

CANDIDATE FOR CONGRESS.

Gen. Hugh Cameron Said to Be the Oddest Character Kansas Has Ever Known.

Gen. Hugh Cameron, a candidate for Congress from the Second Kansas District, is said to be the oddest character Kansas has ever known. He endangers the laurels of other sockless statesmen, for he scorns all footgear, and his beard, when at large, is said to touch the ground as he walks along. He is a candidate of the George Washington Corps of Home Protectionists. He is 68 years old, and his home is near Lawrence, where he has lived the life of a hermit, because the girl he loved jilted him on the day set for their nuptials. For years he has been known as a scholar, soldier, celibate and vegetarian. Gen. Cameron served with gallantry throughout the late war and left the service a lieutenant colonel and brevet brigadier general. He is a native of Pennsylvania, and a relative of the Camerons who have been so prominent in Pennsylvania and national politics.

The Centennial of the Silver Dollar.

The silver dollar of Uncle Sam will celebrate the centennial anniversary of its birthday on Oct. 15 next. On July 18, 1794, the Bank of Maryland deposited at the Philadelphia mint French coins of the value of $80,715 for coinage into silver dollars under the act of 1785. The first lot of the finished coins was delivered on Oct. 15, 1794. There were 1,758 of them in all, and they were the precursors, the first waves of the vast floodtide of silver dollars that has poured out upon the country during the one hundred years that have elapsed.

ORGANS STILL GRIND.

SOCRATIC ARGUMENT DEALT OUT BY M'KINLEYITES.

Professor of Conundrums Hard at Work—Lesson in President Cleveland's Letter—Tariff Combine Broken—A Too Previous Creak—Why the Records Are Silent.

Modern "Socratic Arguments."

A Chicago organ of McKinleyism quotes from a Duquoin organ of the same ism a "Socratic argument" in favor of the McKinley agricultural schedule. The "argument" consists in asking why since the enactment of that schedule the yearly imports from Canada have been less by so many dollars' worth of agricultural products, so many dollars' worth of horses, so many dollars worth of barley, so many dollars' worth of eggs, etc., etc.; why these imports from Canada have been so much less if the agricultural schedule has not benefited our farmers. The argument consists further in asking why, if free trade be a good thing for our farmers, sheep pasture lands have depreciated $28,000,000 under the mere threat of free wool.

This argument may be answered in various ways. It may be answered, Yankee fashion, by asking why the McKinley law quadrupled the number of noses on the man in the moon, and why the new law has decimated the population of the planet Mars, and why, under a high tariff, a tub of water will weigh no more after a live fish has been placed in it than it did before. Assuming that certain things are true does not make them true. The statements of the Duquoin Socrates are not substantiated.

The Socratic argument may also be answered by saying that even if we have imported less products of the farm from Canada under the McKinley law than we did before, that does not prove that the American farmer has sold any more of such products, or obtained any higher prices for them. If he has not he has not been benefited by shutting out Canadian products. The Duquoin professor of conundrums entirely omits the essential part of the argument.

As to the implied assertion in regard to sheep pasture lands, the Duquoin Socrates doesn't know whether it is true or not, because it is simply impossible for him or any one else to know whether it is true.—Chicago Herald.

A Sugar Catechism.

Q. What is the sugar tax? A. It is a duty of 40 per cent. upon the value of all sugar imported and one-eighth of a cent a pound additional upon refined sugars.

Q. Who pays the taxes? A. All taxes are paid ultimately by the people—the consumers. When the McKinley law removed and reduced the duties on sugar the price declined by almost precisely the amount of the taxes abated.

Q. How are sugar taxes collected? A. The taxes on the raw sugar imported are paid by the refineries, organized as a sugar trust. The trust then adds this tax and the duty on refined sugar to the selling price, and the grocers collect it from the people.

Q. What does this tax amount to? A. In 1893 the sugar trust imported 3,731,219,337 pounds of raw material, costing $114,959,870. The people paid the trust a sugar tax of $19,951,034. The Treasury got nothing. Under the new tariff the tax on the same importation will amount to $46,000,000 on raw sugar, which goes to the Treasury, and the trust, which has an absolute monopoly of the market, will collect $20,000,000 more for its own benefit.

Q. Is a tax needed to "protect" our refiners? A. It is not. Sugar refining is done more cheaply here than in any other country. In his testimony before the Ways and Means Committee in 1881, Mr. Havemeyer, President of the sugar trust, said: "I do not see why, under free trade in sugar, we could not supply a very large proportion of the world's consumption."

Q. What have been the sugar trust's profits under the favoring tariffs? A. In 1888 the trust paid $5,000,000 cash in dividends, equalling 27.5 per cent. on its certificates. In 1889 it paid the same amount and distributed 8 per cent. in stock certificates. In 1891 the profits were between $8,000,000 and $9,000,000 on refining account alone. In 1893 the profits were "nearly 105 per cent. on necessary investment."

Q. And this is the concern that has just been licensed by Gorman, Brice, Smith & Co. to tax the people of the United States $20,000,000 and more a year for its exclusive benefit? A. It is.

Q. What do the people propose to do about it? A. They propose to smash the trust.—New York World.

About Gormanism.

THE Baltimore News (Dem.) says: "The chief lesson we are to learn from the President's letter is the supreme importance, the absolute necessity for the nomination of men for Congress by the Democratic party whose previous and present record is assurance of fidelity to honest tariff reform. The test of that fidelity must be a public repudiation of Gormanism, not only because Gormanism means the betrayal of the party and the people, but because it means Republicanism in its worst form."

"THE issue is plainly made up between Democracy as represented by such leaders as Cleveland and Wilson, and the false and spurious Democracy of such men as Gorman and Brice," says the Baltimore Sun (Dem.). "There is no middle ground of compromise which any timid time-serving soul can hope to occupy, and yet claim to be a Democrat."

THE Chicago Herald (Dem.) counsels the administration Democrats in Maryland to deal mercilessly with Gorman candidates at the next State election. "Their success," it says, "would mean the re election of Gibson to the Senate in 1896 and of Gorman two years later. These men have shown themselves utterly unworthy to represent the Maryland Democracy. Their defeat should be secured at whatever cost. They are not Democrats, and if Democrats cannot be elected to succeed them, it would be better to have straight Republicans in their places."

The Income Tax in Maine.

It is observed that Thomas B. Reed has thus far had nothing to say about the income tax in all his speeches down in Maine. This recalls the fact that during the discussion of this feature of the tariff bill one of the United States Senators from Maine was reported as being of the opinion that this form of tax was popular in that State, and if the measure were to be submitted to the voters of Maine as a separate and distinct issue, it would command a majority of the votes. We do not know whether Mr. Reed would indorse that proposition, but we do notice that he isn't saying much on the subject one way or the other.—Boston Herald.

A Fair Rule for Wages.

A number of the protected manufacturers who combine politics and business for their own profit are threatening to reduce wages, giving the new tariff law as the reason. It is perfectly well known that tariffs have very little effect on wages. There is more variation in wages in the same industries in different States of our Union by reason of these facts than there is between the average of wages here and in England. Wages did not fall here after the tariff reductions of 1846 and 1857. There is a fair rule in this matter which workingmen would probably accept. Let all manufacturers who voluntarily increased wages after the passage of the McKinley bill be entitled to reduce them now. This rule would put an end to wage reductions very quickly.

Better than Was Promised.

While the Democrats have failed, at least temporarily, to fully redeem all of their pledges to the people, they have in some other ways done better by the people than was actually promised in their platform. They have in part substituted honest direct taxation for dishonest and delusive indirect taxation. While the income tax may not be, and probably is not, the best possible direct tax, it is a long way ahead of the accursed system which has for thirty years been robbing the masses for the benefit of the classes in the name of revenue taxation.

The income tax will be paid entirely by the classes. It will not rob anybody for the benefit of anybody else. Every cent collected will be collected by and for the government. The objections to it spring mainly from the dishonesty of the rich who will shirk and evade it as they do all other taxes. It is already so popular that the Republicans, if they should regain power, would not dare to repeal it. In only one of the twelve or fifteen States in which the Republicans have held conventions this year have they dared to say a word in their platforms against the tax.

It is expected that the present income tax will raise nearly one-tenth of our revenue. If so, it is probable that we will in future never raise less than one-tenth of our revenues by direct taxation. It is not improbable that all of our taxes will be direct before the beginning of the next century. The people are studying economic questions as never before and many have already discovered that indirect taxes are what make millionaires and paupers.

He Can "Beat All Creation."

An American manufacturer in straits has rushed madly off to Washington to get his duties doubled; the German has put a dozen more skilled chemists and Chemnitz graduates on his pay-roll, dispatched polyglot drummers to all parts of the world to get orders, and thus been able to snap his fingers at our tariff.

That is the kind of thing that the American manufacturer will not have to do. He will have to conduct his business without the expense of a branch office in the Ways and Means Committee room. Instead of mortgaging his mill to defeat a tariff-reform Congressman, he will mortgage it, if necessary, to buy the newest machinery and latest patented devices and to employ superintendents who know their business. With free raw material he will not need to ask favors of anybody, or dread competition of any sort except the competition of superior skill. If the Yankee cannot hold his own in that particular, then all his boasting is in vain. There is no doubt that he can, or that Mr. Gladstone is right in predicting the transferrence to this country of the industrial supremacy of the world, when once American inventiveness and practical skill and business talent are given a fair field and no favors.—New York Post.

Why the Records Are Silent.

"There is no record," says the Cleveland Leader, "that any representatives of the sugar trust ever interfered with the tariff legislation of the Republican party. No Senator from a State not interested in sugar refining ever threatened to prevent the Republican Congress which framed the McKinley law from passing any tariff bill unless the interests of a big monopoly were well taken care of." There was no need of such a threat, for the representatives of the Republican party were of one mind on the subject. They were all in favor of giving the trust that enormous bonus, out of which it has taken at least $40,000,000 in profit since the McKinley tariff was enacted. In the present Congress a small minority of the Democrats was at work for the trust against a very large majority that was opposed to it. In 1890 the trust controlled the entire Republican party in Congress; there was not even a small Republican minority to protest against the legislation that enriched the combination. Under such conditions it was not a difficult matter to conceal "the record" of the secret bargains.—New York Times.

Free Wool.

What, ho! Free wool was to destroy the American sheep, and yet the price of wool is already stiffening and the woolen mills are getting ready for a largely increased business.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Wool has no right to behave as it is behaving. Free trade in any commodity ought to ruin every factory in the land. Instead of making manufacturers lively, it ought, according to the reputed rules of the game, to put out the fires of industry, spread idleness, destruction, hunger, small-pox and hay fever broadcast. But instead of that free wool goes right along doing just what its enemies said it would not do, and all the pretty theories are knocked out in the first round. What is the matter, anyhow?—Baltimore Sun.

"IT (progressive tariff reform) means cheaper clothing, cheaper tools, cheaper pottery, and many other necessaries for the people. It means freer and larger commerce with those nations that buy our farm products, and consequent larger and better markets for our farmers. It means a transfer of some of the burdens of Government from what goes out for the daily purchase of the necessaries of life to that which comes in over and above the amount needed for such purchase."—William L. Wilson's speech at Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 29.

The More Wool the Less Shoddy.

One of the conspicuous benefits of the new tariff bill is going to be to make all-wool clothing cheaper. Some varieties of clothing are cheap enough already, but it has generally been made so by introducing shoddy and other substitutes for wool into its manufacture. Under the free-wool tariff we ought to be able to get all-wool cloths almost as cheap as we now get an inferior article.

Lucky Appraisers.

Under the tariff law the duty upon the bottles containing champaign is assessable according to the weight of the glass in them, and appraisers have the right to empty sample bottles in order to ascertain the exact amount of duty to which they are liable. Who wouldn't be an appraiser.

"THE overwhelming mass of the Democrats in the country are subject to no just criticism. They have kept the faith. They have been true to their principles."—William L. Wilson's speech at Martinsburg, West Va., Aug. 29.

LAWLER THE WINNER

CHOSEN COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE G. A. R.

Closest Election in the History of the Organization—Pittsburg and New Orleans Capture the Vice Commandership—Encampment Business—Finances of Order.

Majority of Eleven Votes.

Col. Thomas G. Lawler, of Rockford, Ill., was elected Commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, by a majority of 11 votes over Col. I. N. Walker, of Indianapolis. It was the closest contest for the office in the history of the organization. Maj. A. P. Burchfield, of Pittsburg, and Charles H. Shute, of New Orleans, were chosen respectively Senior and Junior Vice Commanders.

Colonel Thomas G. Lawler was born in Liverpool about fifty years ago. He came to this country when he was 10 years old, and was 17 when the war began. His army service began in April, 1861, when he made a three months' contract to fight for the Stars and Stripes in the Nineteenth Illinois Infantry. Sept. 17 of the same year he re-enlisted for three years as a private in Company E of the Nineteenth, with which brave regiment he participated in all the fire and fuss which the Army of the Cumberland was fated to pass through. He was honorably discharged Sept. 17,

COLONEL THOMAS G. LAWLER.

1864, his rank at that time being Sergeant. On receiving his discharge he returned to Rockford, where he has ever since made his home.

Colonel Lawler, previous to election to the Commander hip, served as Commander of Nevius Post, No. 1, and he now enjoys the unique record of not only being the commander of the oldest Grand Army of the Republic post in existence but of having filled that position uninterruptedly for more than a quarter of a century.

VETERANS DYING OFF.

Reports Show that Death Is Decreasing the Ranks of the Grand Army.

After the business session of the encampment had been called to order Wednesday the delegates were welcomed on behalf of the citizens executive board by Chairman Daniel C. Ripley and also by W. C. Quincy, Chairman of the Committee on Invitations and Reception. Governor Pattison welcomed them on behalf of the State of Pennsylvania, while Mayor McKenna, of Pittsburg, and Mayor Kennedy, of Allegheny, performed the same pleasant duty on behalf of their respective cities. Major Burchfield then presented the Commander-in-chief with a gavel of great historic interest. It is made of wood from Fort Sumter, Appomattox, Gettysburg, and Libby Prison, and is bound with metal from the historic cannon. It is thus symbolic of the opening and the closing of the war.

Commander-in-chief Adams in his address spoke at length on the subject of pensions, stating that, while it was a question of a great interest and he "disliked to consider money matters in connection with our services to the government, the disabled condition of a large number of our comrades forces it upon us." He continued:

By a vote of the last encampment, a test case was ordered to be made in the United States courts, and as that one already begun by Judge Long covered all the points, it was settled that no other should be instituted. In reply to the message of the President, which stated "that thousands of neighborhoods had their well-known pension frauds," the pension department of the order has hunted down all reported cases. Very few frauds were discovered, and when found were not cases where soldiers had defrauded the government, but where some dishonest agent had worked a poor, ignorant widow, and put the money thus obtained in his pocket.

The membership of the order, he said, is as follows:

One year ago there were in good standing 397,223. There have been gained during the year: By muster-in, 16,752; by transfer, 6,354; by reinstatement, 14,036; by reinstatement from delinquent reports, 2,519. Total gain, 39,661. Aggregate, 436,884.

There have been lost: By death, 7,283; by honorable discharge, 1,756; by transfer, 7,132; by suspension, 34,805; by dishonorable discharge, 154; by delinquent reports, 16,671. Total loss, 67,801. Number remaining in good standing June 30, 1894, 369,083.

These figures show that the G. A. R. has reached the beginning of the end, and each succeeding year will show a gradual decrease in our membership. The long-continued depression in business has caused many suspensions, and these we hope to regain when prosperity returns, but it will be impossible for us to recruit our ranks as fast as our members are mustered out by death.

During the year the Grand Army has not forgotten the great work of charity, and has expended $203,780 for relief. While it has lost in membership, the interest in the order has not abated, but has grown stronger. The little bronze button was never worn with more pride than it is to-day, and the enthusiasm of comrades in Grand Army work is everywhere apparent.

Black as Ink

Are the prejudices which some people cherish against what is good for them. They reason, as our old friend Artemus Ward says, thusly, "So-and-so has been taking medicine for a long time and isn't any better." They only know of individual cases. Many could be cited, to their astonishment, in which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has brought about a complete change in the physical condition of persons suffering from general ill health. This thorough stomachic, besides having the decided recommendation of the medical profession, is voiced by the general public as the possessor of qualities as an invigorant and restorative of health not found anywhere else. In bodily troubles caused by the liver, stomach and bowels, in instances where rheumatic tendencies are experienced, and when the kidneys are weak, it is the true resort.

Descendants of Robespierre.

The only male relatives of Robespierre living in France, according to a Paris paper, are Maximilian de Robespierre, who owns a tile manufactory, and his son, now 18 years old. He appeared in a Paris court the other day sponsor of one of his employes, who announced that he was a grand nephew of the notorious bearer of his name. He is an intelligent man, about 45 years old, and a graduate of a school of mines. When asked regarding his family papers, he said that his uncle, Henri de Robespierre, had fled with them to America at the time of the restoration, and that nothing had ever been heard of him or them since then.

THE single opinion of those who have seen the engraving of the new silver certificate is that it will pass. That is what it is made for.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered

GRANT COUNTY contains more than $270,000 of taxable glass works property.

VALPARAISO papers think that town is a regular heaven now because the saloons are closed on Sunday.

SMALL-POX has broken out at Walkerton. The disease is confined to the family of Dr. Doud. There has been one death.

THE Diamond Plate-glass Factory at Elwood has started up the remaining departments of the plant, and it is now running at full capacity.

AT Noblesville a 3-year-old child was run over and killed by a wagon, loaded with straw, on which she was swinging. Her head was crushed.

LIGHTNING struck the barn of Christian Yous, in Adams County. Four horses, farm machinery, and 400 bushels of grain were destroyed. Loss, $3,700; no insurance.

AN employe by the name of Mount was caught by machinery in the flour mills at Atlanta, and his arm broken and badly lacrated. He is also thought to be injured internally.

AT the home of S. J. Jett, Lebanon, Robert Jett was shot dead by his cousin, John Fleenen of Virginia, who was visiting him. Fleenen was shooting at a hat thrown into the air. Coroner Porter rendered a verdict of accidental shooting.

WILLIAM SCOTT, aged forty, was smothered to death in Hoosier slide, Michigan City. He was engaged in loading sand at the foot of the big sand hill when a cave-in occurred burying him. He was taken out two hours later. Scott leaves a wife and child.

AT Kokomo, two boys, 12 years old, sons of John Knote and Irvin Brown, owners of the Jerome mills, were racing in the mill-race. Young Brown's boat capsized and he was drowned. The Knote boy and several others, in attempting to rescue the lad, had narrow escapes.

MRS. WILLIAM MILLER of Brazil was pouring coal oil in the stove when the fuel ignited, making a feaful explosion, enveloping her in flames. Her cries for help were not responded to for a short time, and when neighbors reached her every stitch of clothing was burned from her body and her flesh was burned to a crisp. She cannot recover.

BEN CALDWELL of Lewisville, has an eight-day clock, eight feet high, that tells the time of day, day of month, and the moon's phases. The clock was made by Mrs. Caldwell's grandfather, 75 years ago. He cut the wheels from brass plates and hammered out the steel pieces. Every piece of work about it was made in an old grist mill near Connersville.

TWO prisoners broke jail at Valparaiso and made their escape. One was Del West, who has already served four terms in the penitentiary, and Charles Nearhufe, alias C. Monroe, who was arrested in Chicago about two weeks ago and brought here for burglarizing a jewelry store of Max Propp, at Kouts. They secured a key and, unlocking the jail-door, ran out. The hired girl grabbed them and called for help, but was knocked down, and the prisoners made their escape. Nearhufe's relatives live near Wheatfield, Ind.

COL. C. E. BRIANT of Huntington, Ind., and Adjutant Allan H. Dougall of Fort Wayne, have issued the following call to the comrades of the Eighty-Eighth Indiana Volunteers: "The annual reunion of the Eighty-Eighth Indiana Volunteers, infantry, will be held at Fort Wayne, Indiana, Wednesday, October 10, 1894. Regimental and company meeting at 10:00 a. m. Reunion at 2:00 p. m. Camp fire at 7:00 p. m. We would be pleased to have you all with us once more and your wives and families. Please notify the Adjutant whether you can be present."

RAN GILES, one of the oldest citizens living two miles east of French Lick, was found dead in his potato patch late the other evening. He is supposed to have been murdered while digging potatoes. When found by his son he was lying on his face, with his hoe yet in his hand. At the Coroner's inquest he was found to have had severe blows on the back of the head; also a wound on his side. There was no sign of any struggle, and he seemed to have been killed instantly. He was known to have had about $35, but when found only $11 could be found on his person. He was over 80 years old, and is supposed to have been murdered for his money. There is no clew to the murderer.

A WRECK occurred on the P., C., C. & St. L. at Middletown. Local freight No. 75 was on the main track and No. 19, the fast mail, in charge of Conductor Case and Engineer Charles Runnell, was due. This train does not stop there, but usually goes through at a speed of forty or fifty miles an hour. The flagman had gone but a short distance, when the fast mail came down the hill at terrific speed. The day was foggy and Engineer Runnell did not see the flag until within a short distance. He reversed his engine, but too late. The passenger crashed into the rear end of the local freight, and the caboose and two box cars were ground into kindling wood and others were damaged. The passenger locomotive was partially off the track and was badly damaged. No one was hurt save Fireman Jones, who jumped and was slightly bruised. Engineer Runnell remained at his post while the locomotive plowed its way through the crashing cars and came out unscratched. In three hours trains were passing.

THE Vigo Agricultural society has decided to hold a fair at Terre Haute the first week in October. The usual fair week in August was devoted solely to the big race meeting, and the October week is to provide the agricultural fair.

ALLISON ANDERSON, an employe of the Diamond Plate Glass Factory, was helping move a large plate of glass, when he fell, causing the glass to break and fall squarely on his back, cutting a gash ten inches long on his left side, severing the principal muscles on his back. He was injured internally, and he may not recover.

THE Department of Agriculture prints this statement of the condition of the crops in Indiana: The condition of the corn crop varies greatly in different counties. The drought of the past sixty days almost ruined the crops in some counties, while in others there has been sufficient rain to mature a good average crop. Rains have been local and light during the corn-growing season. Wheat is an excellent crop. Conditions were favorable for maturing and harvesting the crop in first-class order. The oats crop is of good quality and nearly up to an average in yield. Oats are being sold at 1 cent per pound in the local markets throughout the State.

FROSTS ARE NOW FEARED.

Recent Rains Improve Corn and Revive Pastures in Many Sections.

The recent rains have benefited late corn in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Illinois, Missouri and Kansas, but were too late to be of benefit to early corn. In Wisconsin, Minnesota and Iowa the greater part of the crop has been cut. North Dakota reports corn free from danger from frost, and in Illinois much will be beyond danger in from ten to fourteen days. In Mississippi much injury has resulted to corn from heavy rains, while hot winds and dry weather have proved injurious in Kentucky. The week has been favorable for cotton in the Carolinas, Tennessee and Texas and the crop is slowly improving in Georgia, but heavy rains have proved injurious in Florida, Mississippi, and Arkansas. Picking has been interrupted by rains in Alabama, Mississippi, and Texas. Louisiana reports shedding general and prospects less favorable than last week. The tobacco crop is practically secured in New York and Pennsylvania, and is being saved in good condition in Maryland. Cutting is progressing slowly in Kentucky, where the crop has suffered from hot and dry weather. Plowing for fall seeding, which has been greatly delayed on account of drought, has progressed rapidly in those States where good rains have fallen. Frost caused some damage in New England. Frosts also caused damage in Idaho and Montana. Killing frosts have visited Minnesota.

Reports as to the condition of crops made by the directors of the different State weather services of the United States weather bureau are as follows:

Illinois—Temperature above normal; sunshine below and rainfall above. Rainfall well distributed and unusually heavy in northeast counties. Corn improving and much will be beyond danger from frost in ten to fourteen days. Ground in excellent condition; some rye up and looking well.

Indiana—Good rains, especially in northern portion, revived pastures and put soil in good condition for plowing. Corn maturing fast; some safe from frost and much in shock.

Wisconsin—Frequent and generous rains during the week revived grass, benefited late potatoes, and put the soil in good condition to plow. Corn is mostly cut. Fall plowing and seeding is now being pushed forward rapidly. Forest fires are generally extinguished.

Minnesota—Warmer than usual. Heavy showers in southeast section, too dry elsewhere. Thrashing and corn-cutting nearly finished.

Iowa—A warm week, with copious showers, greatly benefited pastures and all immature crops. More than half the corn is cut or beyond danger of frosts.

North Dakota—Rains during the week have delayed thrashing somewhat. Fall plowing going on with difficulty on account of dry condition of soil. Corn out of danger from frosts.

Kansas—Abundant rains, except in extreme north and northwest, have freshened pastures, revived gardens and orchards, increased stock water, improved late corn and prepared grounds for fall plowing.

Nebraska—Showers general and pastures much improved. Some plowing done and a little rye sowed, but more rain needed in most sections.

Missouri—Drought broken by good rains in sections. Some late corn benefited and pastures greatly improved. Water more plentiful. Cutting corn and preparing ground for wheat the work of the day.

Michigan—Temperature and rainfall above normal, sunshine below. Copious rains the last week have greatly benefited pastures and late potatoes. Ground in good condition for plowing, except in clay soil.

Ohio—Beneficial rains have improved late potatoes, gardens and pastures; potatoes small and crop short; apples small and few; peaches large in number but small. Cutting corn general, bottom lands giving fair yields; upland cut for fodder. Early tobacco housed and about two-thirds crop of fair quality.

LANDSLIDE IN MAINE.

Pine Tree State Gives a Republican Majority of Fully 37,000.

Returns from the Maine elections show that the estimated majority of 37,000 for Cleaves and the other Republican candidates was not exaggerated. The Republicans carried both branches of the Legislature, electing a solid Senate, which two years ago stood thirty Republicans and one Democrat.

A Washington dispatch says that the overwhelming Republican victory was a surprise to everybody. The Democrats expected the State to go Republican by about 20,000, but even the Republicans did not look for such an unparalleled victory. The Democratic managers say, however, the effect will, in the end, be of great advantage to the Democrats in the approaching election. It will serve to stimulate them to greater energy for the final struggle. The early election in the State of Maine has always had a marked effect on the general result. Lawrence Gardner says: "I think that the election in Maine of a Democratic Governor in 1880 defeated Hancock for President. The Republicans were aroused to a sense of a sense of the danger that confronted them, and from that day forward internal differences were remedied, and the action of the party was harmonious."

The Republicans regard the result as the biggest victory they have achieved since the birth of the Republican party. The total vote for Governor, which two years ago was 130,000, is reduced by 15,000 or 20,000, but Republicans claim that Cleaves' vote will reach nearly 70,000. In every one of the sixteen counties of the State the Democracy was defeated.

The Presidential vote of Maine for last thirty years has been:

Year.	Rep.	Dem.	Total.
1864	61,193	44,211	105,014
1868	70,498	42,460	112,958
1872	61,422	29,087	90,510
1876	66,300	49,917	116,880
1880	74,039	65,171	143,853
1884	72,209	52,140	130,462
1888	73,754	50,481	128,260
1892	62,981	48,044	116,422

PRESIDES OVER LAWYERS.

James C. Carter Elected President of the American Bar Association.

At the recent meeting of the American Bar Association at Saratoga, James C. Carter, of New York, was elected president. Mr. Carter is one of the most eminent members of the bar in the metropolis. He was born in Lancaster, Pa., in 1827. His preparatory education he received at the Derby Academy, Hingham, Mass., and immediately after graduation entered the Harvard Law School. In 1853 he was admitted to the bar, and he is recognized everywhere as one of America's greatest lawyers. As counsel of the United States before the Behring Sea arbitration tribunal at Paris his success was the crowning effort of his many brilliant achievements. He has always taken an active interest in politics.

A BIG FRUIT FARM.

It Embraces 2,364 Acres on a Battle Ground.

Just across the line which divides Loudon County, Va., and Jefferson County, W. Va., and located in the latter, is a fine fruit farm, said to be one of the largest in the United States east of the Rocky Mountains. This estate comprises a little less than 2,400 acres and is situated on the far-famed Loudon Heights, noted for the many interesting events which occurred there during the late war, and rising about 1,000 feet above Harper's Ferry, which was famous in history before and during the war, and where there is scenery of which President Thomas Jefferson declared, "It is worth a trip across the Atlantic Ocean to see." All along the Blue Ridge Mountains, to which range Loudon Heights belongs, are foothills on which are fine flowing springs.

The present owners of the estate are Messrs. Charles and Louis Becker. In the spring of 1887, while looking for investments, the Messrs. Becker purchased a farm of 500 acres in this belt, and the first season set out a peach orchard of 33,000 trees. Since then eight other tracts have been added, and now the Beckers' fruit farm comprises 2,364 acres in one continuous tract, and is one of the largest fruit farms in the world. The orchards contain 45,000 peach trees, 8,500 quince trees and about 15,000 apricot, plum, damson and pear trees. Of the peach trees, 35,000 are in full bearing, ripening from July to November.

The method adopted in these orchards of "heading in" the peach trees close to the ground is followed. The strength that would go to maintain 3 or 4 feet of branchless trunk by other methods is thrown into the very fruit-producing branches. This results in producing a pyramidal-shaped tree, with strong, robust branches that are capable of sustaining a large yield of fruit without bending or breaking, as would be the result of a like yield on trees of ordinary growth. Another important consideration is the fact that these trees are much less affected by the high winds, a feature of much importance when the fruit commences to get ripe enough to pick.

It is a rare thing to find a peach tree on this large farm with a trunk six inches long from the ground to the branches. The pruning is done with the main object of letting in sunlight to the center of the trees and to slightly check a too free growth of some of the highest branches. The plan has been to plow and harrow the orchards early in the spring. Some orchards have crops of corn and potatoes growing therein, and others have received regular cultivation without being planted with any other crop.

Extensive as are these peach orchards, they are not the only fruit trees that are planted in large numbers. There are also orchards containing 1,800 plums in variety, 1,600 damsons, 4,700 apricots, 500 Japan persimmons, 7,000 quinces, and cherries, nectarines, English walnuts, Italian chestnuts and paper-shell almonds.

The vineyards cover sixty acres, which are to be extended to contain 100 acres. They contain 60,000 vines, 38,000 of which are in full bearing. The grapes grown on the Blue Ridge Mountains mature from ten to twenty days earlier than those grown in the Eastern States.

IMPROVEMENT IN CHECK-REINS.

Arrangement Sensitive to Every Movement of the Horse's Head.

A combined check-rein support and winker stay has been patented recently. The overcheck bit is shown by itself under the horse's head. This support for an overdraw check is designed to prevent the check-rein from wearing or rubbing against the head of the horse, and the winker stay is so attached that the blinds or winkers may be readily adjusted at any desired angle to the animal's head. The support consists of a face cross bar of leather, or metal and leather, having felt on its inner side and resting on the animal's face, where it is held by means of two side bars, preferably of spring steel, leather covered. The bars are curved so as not to touch the animal's face, and their upper ends are attached to the crown strap of the bridle, which may also be felt or similar material on its under side. There are loops or sockets, each with rollers, on the side-bars, through which pass the rearwardly extending members of the overdraw check, rendering it very sensitive to every movement of the horse's head. The winker stay consists of a rod with a shank adjustable by a set screw in a slideway in the central portion of the face bar, the rod having in its ends sockets in which the wires constituting the frames of the winkers are conveniently adjustable.

THE IMPROVED CHECKREIN.

Justice Nearly Blundered.

A sensational mystery which threatened evil consequences to two men has just been explained in New Hampshire. A French woodchopper had disappeared from the neighborhood of Concord, and two men who had been seen with him were charged with his murder. Human blood was found on the shoes of one and a check in the woodchopper's name on the other. The State had a strong circumstantial case, and the probabilities of conviction were great. The missing man has just been found at a town in a neighboring county, and the discharge of the suspected parties has been ordered.

A Story of Grant in Japan.

"When Gen. Grant was in Japan," remarked the son of a Japanese general recently, "the Emperor invited the General to cross the imperial footbridge near the palace at Tokio, across which none but the blood royal had ever trod. Gen. Grant accepted the invitation and walked across beside the Mikado, until they had reached the center of the bridge. Then he stopped, profoundly saluted the Emperor, and said:

"'Your Majesty, I have come so far to show you that I was not insensible to the honor you would do me, but I cannot violate your traditions. Let us return the way we came.'"

The perfect tact and courtesy of Gen. Grant on this occasion is very gratefully remembered by the nation which has the just distinction of being called the most polite people on earth. Americans visiting Japan are held in high favor, and are always treated with the greatest consideration.—New York Press.

What Paper Is Made Of.

Paper is one of the most lavishly used articles of modern times. The materials of which it can be made are almost as numerous and common as the uses to which the finished article is put.

There are something over 2,000 patents covering the making of paper. It may be manufactured under one of them, from leaves of trees, from hop plants, bean stalks, pea vines, from the trunk and stems of Indian corn and every variety of grain, from moss, clover and timothy hay, and more than 100 kinds of grasses; from straw and cocoanut fibre; from fresh water weeds and sea weeds; from sawdust, shavings and asbestos; from thistles and thistle down; from banana skins, tobacco stalks and tan bark; from hair, wool, fur, old sacking or bagging and from almost any other imaginable refuse.—Kate Field's Washington.

The Pigeon and the Blacksmith.

A pigeon, prouder and handsomer than its fellows, once formed a sincere attachment for a blacksmith, whom it followed about like a dog. The bird was a jealous guardian of the smithy, and even pecked at the hoofs of the horses as they were being shod. One day it tried to turn out a hen that had ventured to perch upon the side of a pot of pitch, and in the struggle both fell in. Mrs. Hinkson, who told the story of his curious career, rescued him and cleaned him as well as she could. But one night, after he had got the better of his pitch bath, she missed him off the kitchen fender, where he was last seen dozing in front of the fire. There was reason to believe that he had fallen a prey either to the house cat or to a stray pussy that could not resist the temptation of a pigeon supper.

Information for the Examiners.

Champ Clark, formerly of Kentucky, has no respect for the civil service laws, and he does not hesitate to say so, as was indicated by his vigorous speech in the house to-day. In the course of his remarks he made a general assault on the civil service system, which he declared, was the most monumental fraud of the century. "Not ten men in this house," said he, "could stand an examination for a $800 clerkship. Why, they asked one man how many British soldiers were sent over here during the revolution. The applicant replied that he did not know the exact number, but he knew a d——d sight more came over than went back."—Courier-Journal.

London's Low Death Rate.

London's general health during the past week has been remarkably good, the death rate—15.8—being much below the average. Nearly all the maladies to which modern flesh is heir to show a diminution, but one entry in the return of the Register General has not been seen in it for a long time—the death of a dock clerk's widow, whose age was stated to be 102 years, was registered in Sydenham sub-district, the assigned cause of death being "decay of nature." Croydon's death rate was 7.9, being the lowest of the thirty-three great towns in England, and Brighton's was exactly the same as London's.—London Telegraph.

Tobacco as a Fertilizer.

The extremely low price at which some tobacco growers have sold their undesirable crops of tobacco suggests a query why they do not keep it off the market and use this tobacco as a fertilizer to grow better samples in the future. The price they sell at is less than the tobacco is worth as a manure. It is rich in potash and is easily decomposed. Market gardeners often use refuse tobacco as a fertilizer, and they find better results from it than from many manures that cost more money. One of the advantages of tobacco as a fertilizer is in repelling attacks of insects. It is especially valuable in growing cucumbers and melons.

The Meaning of Sympathy.

It was a clever Frenchwoman who said: "Those who have suffered much are like those who know many languages. They have learned to understand and to be understood by many. It is an impossibility to fully sympathize with another's experience unless it has been at some time one's own. In trouble or grief we turn instinctively to some one whom we know has been through the same experience. It is the old human longing for companionship that shows itself. The feeling is strong within us that 'she will feel and know with me.' Therein lies the meaning of sympathy."

Wealth in England.

The number of millionaires in England is not so great as one might believe. According to the report of the income tax officials there are in England seventy-one persons with an annual income of $250,000, over 1,100 draw $50,000 annually, and only about 10,000 have an income of $10,000.

Vassar Students' Aid Society.

The Vassar Students' Aid Society has awarded two scholarships of $200 each for the coming college year. Miss Elizabeth P. Haughwont of Fall River, Mass., Pa., and Miss Mary H. Morgan of Pittsburgh, Pa., are the successful competitors. These scholarships are offered to students passing the best examinations for admission to the freshman class of Vassar College. They cover one-half of all charges made by Vassar College for one year's board and tuition. They are offered as a loan, not as a gift, but no interest is asked and no date of payment is fixed. Examinations are held in June of each year in Chicago, Denver, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Washington, Louisville, Detroit, Omaha, San Francisco.

When Troubled Clouds Pass Off.

Alas! how few of natures faces there are to gladden us with their beauty! The cares, and sorrows, and hungering change them as they change hearts, and it is only when those passions sleep, and have lost their hold forever, that the troubled clouds pass off, and leave heaven's surface clear. It is a common thing for the countenances of the dead, even in that fixed and rigid state, to subside into the long forgotten expression of sleepless infancy, and settle into the very look of early life; so calm, so peaceful, do they grow again, that those who knew them in their happy childhood kneel by the coffin's side in awe, and see the angel even upon earth—Dickens.

A NARROW ESCAPE!

How it Happened.

The following remarkable event in a lady's life will interest the reader: "For a long time I had a terrible pain at my heart, which fluttered almost incessantly. I had no appetite and could not sleep. I would be compelled to sit up in bed and belch gas from my stomach until I thought every minute would be my last. There was a feeling of oppression about my heart, and I was afraid to draw a full breath. I couldn't sweep a room without sitting down and resting; but, thank God, by the help of New Heart Cure all that is past and I feel like another woman. Before using the New Heart Cure I had taken different so-called remedies and been treated by doctors without any benefit until I was both discouraged and disgusted. My husband bought me a bottle of Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and am happy to say I never regretted it, as I now have a splendid appetite and sleep well. I weighed 125 pounds when I began taking the remedy, and now I weigh 130½. Its effect in my case has been truly marvelous. It far surpasses any other medicine I have ever taken or any benefit I ever received from physicians."—Mrs. Harry Starr, Pottsville, Pa., October 12, 1892.

Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is sold on a positive guarantee by all druggists, or by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles $5, express prepaid. This great discovery by an eminent specialist in heart disease, contains neither opiates nor dangerous drugs.

Good For Burns.

A little boy of Mrs. McDonald's, living near here, fell against a red hot stove and was fearfully burned. The pain was terrible, and it was thought the burn was so severe as to scar the child for life. I sold the lady a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which, after dressing the sore, she applied. It soon removed all the fire and eased the pain, and in ten days the boy was well, no trace of the scar remaining. J. D. McLaren, Keysport, Clinton county, Ill. For sale by Robbins & McCord. 39

RAILROAD TAX SUITS.

Origin, Object and Results of This Famous Litigation.

Most Important of the Kind That Ever Engaged the Courts.

The Democratic Law Fully Vindicated. Valuable Work of Attorney General Smith—An Adverse Opinion Would Have Bankrupted the State—Full and Succinct History of These Great Suits and Analysis of the Law They Were Intended to Nullify.

Prior to the passage of the tax law, approved March 6, 1891, the subject of taxation in this state was practically misunderstood. Those who paid taxes under the old system did so upon valuations fixed by themselves, without the slightest legal restraint or desire to fix a value upon their property representing either a fair or true cash value. Every person had been educated to the belief that it was right to force valuations down, because it was generally understood that the policy of taxation in this state rested upon the principle that to force a low valuation of property was to escape, in a measure, the payment of taxes necessary to support the government. This principle was manifested most clearly in valuations fixed upon all classes of corporate property. The owners of this property, being able to present their contentions more fully before the taxing boards than the owners of other property, always got the advantage of the situation by representing a condition which caused the authorities to place the lowest possible valuation upon their property, and this fact was known to all the taxpayers of the state, and, to counteract its evil consequences, the owners of real estate and other small possessions entered into the spirit of the times and fully competed with the owners of corporate property to the end that values should be made as low as possible, and in this competitive struggle for low values the land owner and the possessor of homes and small holdings were necessarily the sufferers from such a system. They could not, and did not, compete in this matter with those who held large property interests and controlled the corporate wealth of the state. Therefore in a short time the concentrated wealth of the state received the largest benefit from this system of pressing down the values of the taxable property, and the owners of other property were necessarily made to bear the largest share of the public burden. This was the condition of things when the legislature of 1891 met to consider ways and means to raise a sufficient revenue to carry on the affairs of the state government, to pay the interest on the public debt and to gradually reduce the principal.

The principle of taxation, that justice and equality can only be maintained by placing a fair cash value upon all property, had been lost sight of, and those most fortunate in the scramble to avoid taxation bore the least share of the public burden while, as in all such cases, those who were most numerous and farthest removed from the taxing authorities were made to bear the greatest, as well as an unequal, share of the public burden. Prior to 1891 there was no such thing as equality in assessment of taxes in this state. The constitutional provision which provides for a uniform and equal rate of assessment and taxation had been lost sight of or totally disregarded by those who may have misunderstood it.

Another principle under this system of taxation, which had been forgotten or disregarded, was that an increased and equal valuation of all property does not necessarily increase the amount of taxes to be paid by the citizen, for the reason that where all property is placed upon the tax duplicate at its true cash value all citizens will pay equally, according to the property which they own, and the higher the valuation the lower the rate of taxation; so it is a fundamental truth that the proper way to reduce the taxes, which the citizens must bear as a reward for good government, is to place upon the tax duplicate all the property of the state and attach to it a value according to the cash basis, which alone can equalize the burden of taxation. But this was not the rule prior to 1891, and the principle of equality having been destroyed by a violation of the constitutional rule of taxation, the burden of government fell most heavily upon that class of property which never can escape the eye of the tax assessor, the homes and farms and tangible personal property of the people, while railroads and banks and great corporate interests, the value of which is most difficult to understand, bore but a slight portion of the public burden in comparison to what the people necessarily had to pay by reason of this misapplication of the equity rule in taxation.

In 1890 the property of this state was valued so unequally that it scarcely produced a revenue sufficient to pay the ordinary expenses of state government, and did not produce sufficient revenue to carry on the public institutions of the state and pay the interest on the public debt, necessarily requiring each year a temporary loan, at a high rate of interest, to meet these public expenditures. And it was this condition, which was known and severely felt throughout the state, that prompted certain persons to demand of the legislature of 1891 that the entire tax laws of the state be revised, and to cause a re-valuation for the purpose of taxation of all property, real, personal and corporate, to be made in the year 1891. The revisions of the tax laws of that year did not essentially differ in principle from the laws that have always been in force in this state. In fact, they had the same machinery for valuing railroad property and equalizing the value of real estate and to value small holdings and personal property of the citizens prior to 1891 as is incorporated in the tax laws of that year. But the laws concerning the valuation of all property for the purposes of taxation in this state had not been faithfully and honestly executed. The principle of valuing property according to its true cash value and placing all property upon the tax duplicate had not been adhered to, but had been abandoned, and the question was sharply presented to the people of the state as to whether the government of Indiana should be supported by means of a uniform and equal rate of assessment and taxation, or by going into the market every year and borrowing money to support the government, and thereby going into debt and increasing the state debt each year.

The lesson taught by the passage of the tax law of 1891 was the lesson of constitutional taxation based upon a uniform and equal rate of assessment. As soon as the law was passed its execution assumed a partisan phase. One political party of the state, at least, denounced the law as infamous and retarded its execution and enforcement in every way possible; and so fierce were the assaults made upon this system of taxation by the Republican party that even the friends of the law despaired of its execution and, at times, were almost willing to abandon the effort of constitutional taxation in this state. While it was not a new law, yet it was a new enactment, and being a new enactment, its enemies urged against it all the objections that might have been made against an original and new law. It became necessary, to carry out the provisions of the law of 1891, that nearly every section of it should be defended and construed by some one. This defense began early in the spring of 1891 and was vigorously prosecuted by the attorney general until all the values for that year had been fixed and placed upon the tax duplicate. The contest which was waged during that year against the tax system by the corporate interests of this and other states having property in this state was the fiercest and most unrelenting that has been witnessed since the organization of the state government. From the tax boards, who fixed the values upon the property of the rich and wealthy, appeals were taken to the courts for the purpose of having the salient features of the law declared unconstitutional. It was alleged in the courts that this law violated nearly all of the provisions in the constitution of Indiana, and that it violated the most essential provisions of the constitution of the United States; that it denied due process of law to the corporations; denied the equal protection of the laws to them; that it was an invasion of the constitutional provision that the states shall not regulate or place a burden upon interstate commerce. It was alleged by these corporations, who sought to break down this system, that the valuations fixed upon their property were so high that, in themselves, they constituted a fraudulent administration of the law and, for this reason, they asked that the power of the court be exerted in their behalf.

It will be remembered now, and a history of transaction has been written, that the valuations of all property in this state, including railroad property and other corporations, was the result of the labors of the attorney general, who gave such construction to this system of taxation that, when the values were increased upon real estate by the local authorities, it became absolutely certain and necessary that the values of corporate property under the jurisdiction of the state board should be increased by that body. There was no escaping the proposition that prior to the passage of the law, real estate had borne the heaviest share of the public burden, and although it was not valued at its true cash value, still it was valued proportionately higher than corporate property within the state, and that since the local assessors valued real estate at a sum deemed to be its true cash value, thereby increasing the value over 46 per cent over the value of former years, that the authority charged with the duty of valuing railroad property must increase the value of that property in such equal proportions as to bring it up to the level of a statutory cash value. The action of placing a value upon property for the purpose of taxation is merely an executive or administrative function which, if honestly performed, must proceed in the line of construction given to the general system, so that one class of property shall bear the same relation to the public burden as any other class of property shall bear.

Prior to 1891 railroad property in this state had been valued in the aggregate at $69,000,000. It was admitted by the railroads themselves that this valuation represented only three-fifths of the true cash value of such property, and to bring it up to the true cash value it would require a large increase to be placed upon all railroad property. This increase was the result of the general contest which was waged in behalf of the law by the attorney general of the state, who fought the corporations on the basis of equal and just taxation at every inch, and contested with them every step from the passage of the law to the values fixed by the assessing boards. And with this contest the values on the property of railroads were increased from $69,000,000 to $191,000,000. This increase represents the difference between the true cash value of the property as fixed by the board under the construction given to the law by the attorney general and the values which they themselves fixed upon their property. The per cent of increase of 1891 over 1890 was 130, and it was this increase that drove these corporations into the courts, where the attorney general appeared and fought them from the circuit court through the supreme court of Indiana and to and through the supreme court of the United States, in one of the most bitterly contested lawsuits that has ever been brought or concluded in this country, and the success which crowned the efforts of the attorney general in these lawsuits is written in the history of this state. The amount involved, directly and indirectly, in the litigation which resulted in the supreme court of the United States holding the law to be constitutional and refusing to interfere with the assessment of the taxes against these corporations is, at first blush, fabulous. No such consideration was ever involved in any tax litigation in this country. The law was assailed because it was unconstitutional, and if the courts had held that it was unconstitutional all the taxes assessed under it would have been null and void, and where any of them had been paid the state would have been obliged to return them to the corporations. The amount involved in this litigation on the day the supreme court of the United States decided the cases in favor of the state was $7,101,827. Of this amount at least $3,000,000 had been paid under protest, and since the decision of the case by the supreme court of the United States there has been paid into the county treasuries throughout the state at least $4,000,000, the direct and necessary result of the victory won by the attorney general of Indiana over the corporations of this state. No such victory was ever before won for a state in the matter of taxation. The contest which resulted in bringing these taxes into the public treasury of the various counties of this state was directed, planned and executed by the attorney general and by no one else. He commenced with the beginning of the controversy and first laid open to the people of this state the doctrine of constitutional taxation in the great bank controversy, which originated in the superior court of Marion county, wherein the best lawyers of the state appeared for the purpose of getting a decision not so much affecting the banks, but a decision that would break down these laws and destroy their force in the matter of railroad and corporate taxation. This contest was carried on by the attorney general, not for any good result that might come in the so-called bank litigation, but for the purpose of asserting the constitutional power of taxation and maintaining it, so that when the threatened suits, which were afterwards brought, should be commenced, that this policy of battle should be continued all along the line as against them. And it is not forgotten that the fight made in the superior court and afterwards in the supreme court in the bank cases resulted in the establishment of the same constitutional doctrine as was afterwards asserted and settled by the supreme court of the United States.

These contests on the part of the attorney general in asserting the true doctrine of constitutional taxation has set at rest forever the objections raised against the law involved in these litigations, and the amount of taxes which the settlement of these questions will produce to the people of the state of Indiana in the future cannot be well or accurately calculated. They are like Tennyson's Brook. They will flow on forever, and if the public servants selected to administer this law in the future will adhere to the doctrine as asserted by the attorney general, and execute the duties of their trust with fidelity to the people, it will not be 10 years until this system of taxation will produce sufficient money not only to carry on affairs of the state, but to pay the interest on the state debt and to wipe out the principal. And it is to be hoped that the lesson taught by this great contest will never fall upon deaf ears, nor be forgotten by the taxpayers of Indiana, and it is the prayer of all good people that neither time nor jealousies, the egotism of some or the vanity of others, will ever deprive the real author of this blessing to our state of the merits due him for his labor and fidelity in standing by the cause of all people in behalf of just, uniform and equal taxation, to the end that every citizen of high or low degree, of much or little property, will be required to pay his just share of the public burden and feel that when the taxpaying time comes that he has not been called upon to contribute more to the maintenance of good government than his neighbors have been required to do.

PULLMAN IN INDIANA.

The Great Magnate Now Has to Pay For His Privileges.

The public generally will learn with surprise, if not disgust, that the valuable franchises of the Pullman Palace Car company in Indiana were enjoyed for years without the payment to the state of a single dollar for the privilege. His cars were run on every railroad in the state, enjoying the protection of the laws and making enormous sums of money for the owner, and yet there was no statute requiring any return for this. What was made was clear profit, and if other states have been equally generous there need be little wonder that this corporation found little difficulty in accumulating a fortune. Exemption from taxation is of itself equal to a good per cent on investment, as everything is receipts and no expenditure, and the making of fortunes is greatly simplified. Not only Pullman, however, but the telegraph companies and the express companies were equally fortunate in this respect. The only taxes they paid was on their office furniture and other appurtenances of this kind, which amounted to little or nothing. But for using the territory of the state for their lines and other privileges of indispensable value to such corporations these companies, like Pullman, went scottfree of taxation.

During the last session of the legislature Attorney General Smith drafted a bill to remedy this omission and to add the favored companies to the list of state taxables. The bill was drastic in its provisions and supplied a long felt want, but it was by no means allowed smooth sailing through the legislature. On the contrary, it met with most determined and angry opposition. A robust and well paid lobby was on hand to fight it at every stage. The Western Union and the express companies, as well as the redoubtable Pullman, were on hand "by attorney" to see that the bill was scotched if not killed. It was a formidable array of lawyers, professional lobbyists and interested parties that confronted Mr. Smith, but the plucky attorney general succeeded in defeating the "army of occupation" and finally got the bill passed. It was not, however, until the very last day of the session and after the hardest kind of a fight that the new statute became a certainty. As a result of its provisions the state of Indiana has been made richer this year by $100,000, and this off of property which was never before a subject of taxation. It was not without a struggle, however, that the tax was collected, even after the law was passed. The companies refused to pay, showed fight and the attorney general was compelled to enter suit against them. It is in the nature of corporations that if allowed to enjoy special privileges for a term of years they eventually come to consider them vested rights. Abuses of this kind become entrenched and it is always difficult—sometimes impossible—for the state to dislodge the possessors with all the machinery of the law at its back. The new law above described makes a valuable supplement to the general tax law of the state, and for both the Democratic party deserves full credit. It has done invaluable work in the last few years in teaching various corporations that the state has some rights which they will be compelled to respect.

Thanks to the Democratic party Johnny Davenport and his myrmidons will no longer supervise elections. The states will regulate such affairs without federal interference.

Republican prospects wane as the campaign progresses. That party, like a young robin, is biggest when first born.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phœbe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her, and she says it saved her life. Mr Thomas Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption. He tried without result, everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottles at Robbins & McCord's drugstore. Regular size 50c. and $1. 5

TALKED OF WAR DAYS.

The Reunion of the Old Eleventh Indiana Battery Boys

NOW a thing of the past. A couple of the comrades from the north arrived on the 19th inst. The rest of those who were permitted to attend came from the south on a special train at 8 a. m., Sept. 20. The morning was taken up with the business affairs of the association. The old officers were re-elected. The history of the battery gotten up by 1st Lieut. John Otto was offered to the comrades. A number of copies were sold and a number left with the president of the association for such as desire to procure a copy. (The price per copy is one dollar.) At 12 o'clock the "boys" with their wives went to dinner which was served in the Davis block south of the hardware store, by the Woman's Relief Corps of Auburn, assisted by the post members of the G. A. R. For several days previous, members of the W. R. C. and G. A. R. "foraged" in the country and town for such things as would tempt the appetite. A bountiful dinner awaited the hungry veterans and their wives; and every one that left the hall was full of praise for the "donors" and "preparers" of those things which keep body and soul together. As an "extra" and for a surprise the ever-thinking and ever-ready W. R. C. presented the boys of the battery a beautiful cake prepared expressly for the occasion. After the presentation the boys made the hall ring with three cheers for the W. R. C. and the Red, White and Blue—cake.

At 2 p. m. the afternoon campfire was a special attraction at the Grand Army hall. The address of welcome was delivered by Capt. E. D. Hartman, of Auburn, and everyone who knows the Captain will believe that that welcome came from the depths of a loyal, patriotic heart. The address was followed by a song by Comrade Dr. Andrews, of Coldwater, Mich., with Mr. Hastings at the organ. The song was followed by prayer by Rev Hart, of the Baptist church of Auburn. Capt. White, of Ft. Wayne, responded to the address of welcome, delivering an address which was a masterpiece of oratory and logic. After a song by Comrade Caldwell, of Garrett, Mrs. Mary E. Ehlers, wife of the deceased Lieut. John H. Ehlers of the battery, addressed the audience upon the subject, "What Caused the War of the Rebellion?" concluding with a description of the mission work among the colored people of the south. Next came a recitation by Miss Olive Elson, followed by a short address from Hon. W. L. Penfield. Addresses by Comrade J. N. Wilson for the volunteer cavalry and W. H. McIntosh for the infantry, followed, when Comrade Andrews produced another of his celebrated songs. A paper by the president followed, in which the situation of the old soldiers from the outbreak of the rebellion to the present time was reviewed. The comrades after this were ordered by the W. R. C. to appear before them in the dining hall once more. The singing of the Doxology and pronouncing of the benediction by Rev. Wilson concluded the afternoon session. After partaking of another enjoyable meal, those from the south repaired to the Lake Shore station to board their "special" for the city. A "good bye" or "God bless you" and a hand shake were exchanged, probably forever for some.

The evening exercises began at eight o'clock by the rendering of a trio by Misses Flora Hoffman, Clara Otto and Lydia Teeters, with Mrs. Garwood accompanying. Prayer by Rev. Wilson preceded Hon. W. L. Penfield, who addressed the audience in a happy strain of humor, concluding with the account of the enlistment and death of his two brothers who fought to defend the Union. During the evening Miss Elson gave two more of her well-chosen recitations.

The humor with which Mr. Penfield spiced his address affected the president as well as the rest of the comrades, and on calling on Comrades Keller, Moses Willis, Phillip Noel, James May, Chas. Eckhart and A. P. Green, each responded in the same happy mood and related incidents of the war. The president gave a short description of the field hospital horrors, and even Comrade Gordon responded with a dozen words. All too quickly ten o'clock arrived and the entire audience, with thankful hearts for the enjoyments of the day, joined in singing the Doxology and receiving the benediction pronounced by Rev. Keller.

God bless the old "Battery Boys," the W. R. C. and G. A. R. of this place, as well as all over the country until the meeting on the eternal camping grounds!

JOHN OTTO, President,
11th Ind. Battery Association.

A Quarter Century Test.

For a quarter of a century Dr. King's New Discovery has been tested, and the millions who have received benefit from its use, testify to its wonderful curative powers in all diseases of the throat, chest and lungs. A remedy that has stood the test so long and that has given so universal satisfaction, is no experiment. Each bottle is positively guaranteed to give relief or the money will be refunded. It is admitted to be the most reliable for coughs and colds. Trail bottles free at Robbins & McCord's drug store. Large size 50 cents and $1. 6

OBITUARY.

Malinda Avery, only daughter of John and Lydia Avery was born near Edgerton, Ohio, October 16, 1861, and died at the residence of her mother, Mrs. Lydia Avery-Cassler, in Auburn, Ind., September 23d, 1894. Miss Avery was well known and highly respected in the community and especially beloved by a numerous circle of devoted friends. Among the latter are many to whom she had endeared herself by deeds of kindness which will never be forgotten. She took a special interest in assisting those who were in need of help and sympathy. Her illness, though of many months duration, was borne with the most cheerful courage. She conversed freely of the home to which the Heavenly Father would bring his own, and of her personal faith and hope.

Miss Avery was employed as operator by the W. U. Telegraph company for about twelve years, a position which she retained until her death.

The enterment took place in the family burial lot at Edgerton, Ohio, Wednesday afternoon. ***

It May Do as Much for You.

Mr. Fred Miller, of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a severe kidney trouble for many years, with severe pains in his back, and also that his bladder was affected. He tried many so called kidney cures but without any good result. About a year ago he began the use of Electric Bitters and found relief at once. Electric Bitters is especially adapted to the cure of all kidney and liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50 cents for large bottles at Robbins & McCord's drug store. 6

Obituary.

Laura Catherine, daughter of John W. and Ella C. Baxter died of diphtheria Friday, Sept. 21, aged 4 years 5 months and 3 days. Little Laura was of that lovely form and spirit that win all hearts, the light of the home. She seemed to realize the nature and probable result of the disease, with an understanding far beyond her years. A few hours before her death she said "I don't believe I can live until morning, and later whispered sweetly "good bye." She had spoken before of the heavenly home to which she was going and said" Mamma don't cry if you can help it I am going to God."

The interment was at Woodlawn cemetery where appropriate services were conducted by Mrs. M. A. Ehlers with the benediction by Rev. W. L. Meese.

The choir, consisting of Messers. Hastings and Wisemantel, Mrs. Rose Shull and Mrs. Nettie Eckhart, song tenderly, "Safe in the arms of Jesus," and the dear little form, in the white casket, wreathed in flowers was gently placed in the lined and flower strewn grave.

"She is not dead, the child of our affection
But gone into that school
Where she no longer needs our poor protection
And Christ himself doth rule."

"In that great cloister's stillness and seclusion
By guardian angels led
Safe from temptation, safe from sin's pollution
She lives, whom we call dead."

Public Speaking.

The democratic county committee has made the following appointments for Dr. Fred. B. Wood, democratic candidate for representative in the state legislature. These notices will be kept standing and we hope people will keep them in mind and all turn out to hear him, whether democrats, republicans, populists, or prohibitionists, He is a fair minded speaker and treats his subjects and his hearers fairly. It will hurt no one to hear the truth.

TROPHIES OF A CHASE

AFTER THE FLEETING ITEMS OF NEWS.

Strikers Sentenced to Prison—The Torch Put to the Erie Car Works—Father and Two Children Killed in a Runaway—Irishmen Organize for Home Rule—A Boy Bandit Robs a Bank.

Hard on Strikers.

Los Angeles special: Judge Ross, in the Federal Court sentenced Callaher and Buchanan, A. R. U. strikers, to eighteen months' imprisonment in the county jail and to pay a fine of $5,000 each. These men were among those who attempted to intimidate non-union men on the Southern Pacific during the strike.

Butte (Montana) special: Judge Knowles in the United States Court, found H. B. Calderhead, Fred Walker, L. Garvin, S. Barton, W. B. Dye, and George Boomer, leaders of the American Railway Union, guilty of contempt of court, interfering with the movements of mails and Interstate Commerce on the Union Pacific Railway at the time of the recent strike, and sentenced five to imprisonment for thirty days in the county jail and to pay a fine of $500 each. There were twenty-one A. R. U. men on trial, sixteen of whom were discharged.

Fire Bugs.

The Erie, Pa., Car Wheel Works was destroyed by an incendiary fire. The fire spread with great rapidity. The works were built by the late W. R. Davenport, twenty-six years ago, and were valued at a quarter of a million dollars. They had not been in operation for two years owing to litigation The insurance is estimated at $60,000. The works covered five acres. The city is in a state of terror and manufacturers are putting large forces of watchmen on duty in anticipation of fire bugs. The fire was unquestionably of incendiary origin.

Strike Commission.

The United States strike commission, appointed by the President to investigate the recent Chicago labor troubles, adjourned its hearings from Chicago to Washington, and will meet in that city at the department of labor next week. It will, at that time, also hear any parties who may desire to be heard relative to the facts involved and the commission may, after careful examination of the testimony, which has already been taken, conclude to call further witnesses to supplement that which has been given on either side.

Organizing for Home Rule.

Dublin special: The group of Old Fenians and Invincibles have taken advantage of the discontent caused by the delay in action upon the home rule question, and have formed a new society called the Old Guard. They have issued a circular calling upon Irishmen everywhere to enroll themselves in a united brotherhood to resist all attempts to lower the Irish flag or to stay the onward march of freedom. Not one of the prominent members of the Irish party signs this appeal.

A Boy Bandit.

Mount Sterling (Ill.) special: Ralph Conklin, a farmer boy of 18 years, single handed, robbed the Bloomfield Skiles bank here and compelled the cashier to hand over $411. On his way to town he met Mack Dunbar, and, at the point of a pistol, appropriated Dunbar's horse and came into Mount Sterling with a mask over his face. After securing the money the young desperado was captured and is now in jail.

Buried Under a Wall.

Five laborers were buried under a mass of earth while at work making an excavation for the foundation of a retaining wall, just below the Germantown Avenue crossing of the Richmond branch of the Reading Railroad at Philadelphia. One man was so badly injured that he died and four others were seriously injured.

Was a Draw.

The twenty-five-round go-between Billy Plimmer, the English lightweight, and John Murphy of Boston, for a $2,500 purse, Marquis of Queesbury rules, the first of the present series of contests before the Olympic Club, New Orleans, was declared a draw after a lively fight lasting twenty-five, the full number of rounds.

Siberian Prisoners Escape.

By the steamer Rio Janeiro, which has arrived at San Francisco from the orient, news was received of the escape of 2,000 prisoners from Siberia. The men overpowered the Russian soldiers who were guarding them, and securing all the arms they could, fled toward Corea.

Horrible Runaway.

While D. M. Stevenson, living near Clearfield, Iowa, was driving home with his wife and three children, they were run into by a runaway team. Two of the children were instantly killed, and Stevenson mortally injured, dying soon after.

Smothered by Salt.

A fatal accident occurred in the salt works at Lyons, Kan., by the giving way of some supports. George Hamlin, an employe, was buried beneath a great quantity of fine salt and was smothered before he could be rescued.

France to Go to War.

The Paris correspondent of the London Central News telegraphs that the French Ministers of War and Marine are most actively preparing for the beginning of operations against Madagascar with the purpose of maintaining French authority.

Breckenridge to Practice Law.

Col. Breckenridge says that he will remain in Lexington and practice law. The firm will consist of himself and son and John T. Shelby.

Indian Uprising.

A special from Stonewall in the Chickasaw nation, says that Chief Blue, leader of the Chickasaw negro Indians, is in open rebellion. Insurrectionists have gone out marauding and terrorizing Indian citizens especially the squaw men. A band headed by King Blue, swept down on the farm of George H. Truax, postmaster at Stonewall, at midday. Truax, a white man, and his squaw were led from the house, bound with ropes and held prisoners. King Blue and his band then destroyed everything in the house, and rode off howling and screeching. The neighbors found Truax and his wife and released them. Other Indian citizens have been similary treated. The eastern part of the Chickasaw nation is in a state of terror.

GREAT HAVOC.

Seventy-Five Persons Lost in the Storm.

Fort Dodge Iowa special: Seventy-five persons are believed to have lost their lives in the cyclone which wrought death and destruction over such a wide and extended territory Saturday night. The injured are numbered by hundreds and the property loss will reach well up into the thousands. The devastated country lies in the southern part of Minnesota and the northern part of Iowa and extends from the western to the eastern boundaries of these States.

The storm started a few miles west of Emmettsburg in Palo Alto County, Iowa. In Iowa it went through the counties of Kossuth, Hancock, Winnebago, Cerro Gordo, Worth, Floyd, Mitchell, Chickasaw, and Howard. Leaving Iowa it went through the counties of Moyer, Fillmore, and Winona. In all these counties serious damage is reported. Houses were taken bodily from their foundations and trees were lifted by their roots. Many miraculous escapes are reported where houses were carried from one place to another without injury to the occupants. Such escapes, however, were exceptions.

The town of Emmettsburg, near which the cyclone started, was very fortunate in escaping, as the terrible hurricane grazed the outer edge of the town. Several people were killed just outside the town and severely injured. The towns through which the cyclone passed after leaving Emmettsburg, so far as reported, are Ellington, Burgen, Hayfield, Newton, Tompkins, Buffalo, Ruthven, Osage, Algona, Cresco, Burt, Plum Creek, and Lowther, all in Iowa, and Waseca, Le Roy, Spring Valley, and Homer, Minnesota. While the damage through these small places is very great, it is light in comparison with that done throughout the country districts. It is, of course, impossible at this time to say what the property loss will be, but it is very great. The loss of life is estimated to be in the neighborhood of seventy-five persons.

ALIX IS QUEEN.

The Little Mare Goes in 2:03 3-4 at Galesburg.

Galesburg (Ill.) special: The Galesburg track now holds the world's record for trotting, Alix clipping a quarter of a second off her record there, going the mile in 2:03¾. The day was all that could be desired, the hot sun putting the track in the most perfect order. To witness the trial of Alix and the other events no less than 20,000 people were on the grounds. At 5:10 the track was put in shape and Mr. Williams announced the special event of the day, the attempt of Alix to beat the world's record of 2:04. When the mare appeared on the track, with McDowell behind her she was greeted with a mighty cheer. On the second score, McDowell nodded his head, and with the runner by her side, the little mare was off on her journey to the quarter, which was covered in 30¼ and sped on to the half in 1:01¾. As she reached the three-quarters the watches marked her at 1:32¾. When the mare turned into the stretch she fairly flew and came under the wire in 2:03¾. The crowd went wild, and cheer after cheer went up for Alix, McDowell, Morris and for C. W. Williams and the fastest track on earth.

PLATFORM COLLAPSES.

Seventy-five People Fall a Distance of Thirty-five Feet.

Akron (Ohio) special: A wooden platform between two South Akron buildings collapsed, carrying seventy-five people down a distance of thirty-five feet. Twenty-five persons were more or less seriously injured, and one, Joseph Ryan, aged 18, received injuries from which he died a few hours later, at the residence of his parents. The platform had been built for the use of a carriage repository, which had recently been leased by an athletic club. The club announced an opening entertainment, and the platform became crowded with men anxious to secure good seats for the entertainment. A terrible scene of confusion followed the collapse of the structure. Friends hurried to the relief of those struggling under the wreckage, and in their eagerness to release the sufferers many were tampled almost to death in the dark alley. The police finally appeared, drove off the crowd with clubs, secured a light, and went at the work of rescue in a systematic manner. Several of the injured may die.

The State of Trade Will Suit Both Sides.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: "Plenty of material for encouragement, and also for discouragement, can be found by those who seek that and nothing else. But business men who want to see the situation exactly as it is find accounts so far conflicting that it is difficult to strike a balance. In those departments of industry and trade in which the deferred business and the demand for replenishment of stocks have not been exhausted, there is obvious improvement, and in some the business is not only larger than last year, but larger than two years ago. In others the exhaustion of temporary demand has brought disappointment, because it was smaller than was expected, and because the remaining demand appears uncomfortably light. In the aggregate, business is about a tenth larger than last year, but still falls about 25 per cent. below a full volume for the season."

Disaster at Sea.

San Francisco special: The British ship Senegal is at the bottom of the Pacific somewhere in latitude 30, 17 N., longitude 110, 08 W., for it was about in that locality that Olsen, a sailor on the schooner Mary C. Russ, saw her red light go out one stormy night at sea. The Senegal was bound from San Diego to Tacoma with loose sand for ballast. She was a large iron ship of the latest design and was considered one of the best in the English merchant marine service. The captain was accompanied by his young daughter and the crew consisted of twenty-seven men, all of whom were lost.

A Fiend's Deed.

Delaware (Ohio) special: George Taylor, a blacksmith, of Chicago, enticed the 9-year-old daughter of R. F Warren into a vacant residence here and attempted to assault her. The child's screams frightened the man and he was obliged to flee to the woods. Nearly exhausted, the child reached home and the officers and the neighbors began a search for the man and found him on the Hocking Valley Railroad. He was brought to police headquarters. At his hearing he was bound over to court. Public indignation is at fever heat.

Against Sympathy Strikes.

The locomotive firemen's convention at Harrisburg, Pa., adopted resolutions denouncing the members who struck through sympathy with the Pullman strikers, pledging that the brotherhood will hereafter abide by all its agreements and await the action of the grand lodge officers before striking, and declaring against the position of Vice Grand Master Hannahan in the Pullman strike in advising members not to work with non-union men, and approving Grand Master Sargent and other grand lodge officers. The convention gave Hannahan another slap by reducing his salary from $3,500 to $2,500, and leaving those of the other grand lodge officers undisturbed.

Dynamite Guns.

The War Department has been notified by Major Phipps, president of the ordinance board, which conducted the recent tests of dynamite gun batteries at Sandy Hook, N. Y., that the guns worked well, and that all the requirements of the contract had been met. Consequently the battery and plant will be accepted and the Pneumatic Dynamite Company will be paid $160,000 for one-eight inch and two fifteen-inch guns with all the boilers, compressers, machinery, and shells used in test and ten reserve projectiles for each gun. This experiment having resulted so satisfactory, work will be pushed in the dynamite gun battery for San Francisco harbors.

A Smuggler Caught.

Charles Augenstein of Syracuse, N. Y., arrived at New York by the Red Star steamship, Westernland. He wore an open front shirt and told the customs officers he had nothing to declare in the shape of dutiable property. The keen eyes of an inspector noticed a gold watch peeping out from Augenstien's shirt front. Further search showed false pockets in Augestine's underwear. Here three gold watches, gold broaches, ear rings, and gold chains were tucked away. The unfortunate declared he thought the jewelry must have been in his underwear when he bought it. "Well, then you're nothing out," said the inspector, as he pocketed the jewelry.

Ohio Democrats.

The Ohio Democratic State Convention met at Columbus, with Frank Hurd of Toledo, chairman. The convention declared in favor of free silver by a vote of 486 to 392.

The convention, by a vote of 467 to 326, declared in favor of the election of United States Senators by the people.

Following are the nominations:

Secretary of State—Milton Turner of Guernsey.

Supreme Judge—James D. Ermston of Hamilton.

State School Commissioner—James A. Leech of Franklin.

Member Board Public Works—Harry B. Keffer of Tuscarawas.

To Shield Her Sweetheart.

In the Circuit Court at Carthage, Mo., Lizzie Christy, an attractive girl of modest manners, pleaded guilty to stealing a horse, buggy, and harness at Webb City last summer and was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. The officers say they have evidence to show that her sweetheart, a young farmer who lives near Webb City, really committed the theft. They say the two left Webb City in the stolen rig, but at Sedalia the man deserted her.

Elmira Destroyed.

The business portion of the village of Elmira, Mich., a lumber town on the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad, 190 miles north of Grand Rapids, was destroyed by fire. The losses will aggregate $25,000. Among the buildings burned were the Mikdaugh House, Beebe's hardware store, Bellinger's store, Coombs' store, the Craven & Royce blocks, Gregg's livery stable and many other buildings.

Whitecapped.

David Swain, a laborer, of Westfield, a small town near Noblesville, Ind., became intoxicated and beat his wife in a horrible manner, tore her garments up and drove her into the street. Late at night an organized body of whitecaps visited Swain's home and led him to the outskirts of the town, where with straps and switches they whipped him into a state of insensibility.

Heavy Fire in St. Louis.

Fire, originating in the feather working establishment of Daniel B. Ely., at St. Louis, destroyed the large brick building in which that concern, together with the Mound City Boot and Shoe Company and the Hufnagel Boot and Shoe Company, was engaged in business, as well as some small structures adjoining.

Arkansas' Best Citizens.

Three hundred citizens of McGehee, Ark., secured Luke Washington, Richard Washington, and Henry Crobyson, three negroes who murdered H. C. Patton at McGehee, and strung them up to telegraph poles and their lifeless bodies perforated with buckshot, left dangling in the air near the scene of their crime.

Tragedy Over a Woman.

At Velpen, Ind., John Halton and Tom Davis quarreled over a woman and Halton was fatally shot three times.

DEATH IN THE WIND

Awful Loss of Life Reported in Iowa and Minnesota.

TRAIL OF A TORNADO.

Whole Towns Are Wiped Out of Existence.

Number of Injured Said to Run Into the Hundreds—Entire Counties Laid Waste by Wind and Hail—Several Villages Effaced from the Map—No Estimate of the Aggregate Property Loss Is Made, but It Will Be Something Enormous.

THE fearful cyclone which swept over a portion of Southern Minnesota and Northern Iowa Friday night is now known to have been the most disastrous of any storm which has visited the Northwest in many years. From best advices obtainable at the time this is written seventy-eight persons are known to have been killed outright, and at least as many more were dangerously, several of them fatally, injured, and the number of those less seriously hurt will exceed 100.

The towns of Emmetsburgh, Britt, Cerro Gordo, and Algona, Iowa, and Spring Valley and Leroy, Minn., were visited, and the country around them was laid waste. The telegraph wires are down so badly that full accounts of the awful disaster cannot yet be obtained, but the dead, numerically, so far as is known, are as follows,

Near Algona, Iowa	20
In Mitchell County, Iowa	10
North of Wesley, Iowa	15
Near Osage, Iowa	5
Cylinder, Iowa	4
Cerro Gordo County, Iowa	5
Spring Valley, Minn	3
Leroy, Minn	4
Near Britt, Iowa	7
Total	78

Starting about ten miles southeast of Spencer in Northwestern Iowa the storm of wind at 8 o'clock began its work of destruction. Taking everything before it, it swept across the State just north of Emmetsburg and Algona, wiping out the town of Cylinder, but mostly injuring the country districts. After passing Mason City and ruining the country northwest of Osage it bore off to the northeast, crossing the Minnesota line, and soon after 10 o'clock wrecked the town of Leroy, where a bad fire added to the destruction. Spring Valley was right in the path of the cyclone and suffered severely. Turning again to the east the towns of Homer and Lowther were badly damaged, and at one time reported completely wiped off the face of the earth. After crossing the Mississippi and doing considerable damage to farm buildings near Marshland, Wis., the storm seemed to have spent its force. A smaller storm did some damage at Dodge Center, which was not in the path of the main cyclone. The path of the storm was not wide, but it had all the characteristics of the deadly tornado and the dimensions of a cyclone.

MAP SHOWING TOWNS VISITED BY THE CYCLONE

Country the Heaviest Loser.

While the loss of life is great, it might have been much greater had there been many towns in the path of the storm. As it was only a few villages were struck. The greatest destruction of life was in the vicinity of Mason City, Iowa; Wesley, Iowa; Fertile, Osage, and Britt. At Lowther, Iowa, where the town was reduced to kindling, no fatalities are reported, but seventeen persons were injured, some of whom will die.

In Minnesota, the storm seemed to start at Le Roy, after traveling in the air for several miles. Five persons were killed at this place. At Chatfield, Minn., a dance was in progress in the opera-house when the storm descended upon the town. The building was blown down and many persons were hurt. Sixty houses in all were demolished and 100 persons were injured.

The cyclone appeared in Iowa at about 8 o'clock in the evening, and was accompanied by violent lightning and thunder. After the death-laden wind came a flooding rain, which rendered the destruction more complete. There appeared to be three clouds, one above the other, all whirling in opposite directions, and when they came in contact everything in their path was swept away. The storm was eccentric, as in many cases houses were completely demolished while structures directly adjoining were unscathed. The storm lasted about two hours, and traveled over a strip of territory 120 miles in length and from a quarter of a mile to ten miles wide.

With the exception of a call from Thompson, Iowa, for medical assistance to care for the wounded, there were no appeals for aid, and the more fortunate in the scourged district announce that they will care for the survivors.

The devastated district is visited by thousands of spectators from far and near, who charter every conceivable conveyance in which to make the journey. The picture of desolation presented will never be forgotten by those who saw it. That the wind could do what has been done in the way of destruction would not be believed were it not that the ocular proof is at hand. Forests of considerable area and heavy growth have been leveled as completely as though mown with a giant scythe. In some instances barbed wire fences, that offer the least possible resistance to wind, were blown away as clearly as though a fence had never existed in the locality. Boards have been picked up in which grains of sand are so deeply and thickly embedded as to give them the appearance of the sandpaper of commerce. In many instances the bodies of the dead have the skin so thoroughly penetrated by the flinty grains of sand as to be almost unrecognizable.

Every train into the district on Saturday took its quota of coffins to every station, and, as they were piled up awaiting transportation, a grewsome sight was presented. Sunday was a day of funerals throughout the devastated districts. In Kossuth county, Iowa, alone there were nineteen, followed on Monday by nearly fifty. The money loss in that county will foot up $250,000, and scores of people there and elsewhere are left destitute. The same condition exists at Leroy and Spring Valley, Minn.

PREY TO FLAMES.

Disastrous Dock Fire Costs Portland, Ore., Over $1,500,000.

The most disastrous fire in the history of Portland, Ore., broke out Sunday afternoon in the dock of the Pacific Coast Elevator Company, and raged for three hours, destroying property valued at over $1,500,000. The fire department was scattered about the city, looking after the small fires, when the alarm from the elevator was rung in. When the engines arrived the fire was beyond control and in half an hour from the time it started the docks for half a mile were on fire. Nothing could be done but to let the fire burn itself out. The Pacific Elevator Company's main building, the coal bunkers of the North Pacific Terminal Company, and the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company's wharf, 400 feet in length, were destroyed.

The elevator contained nearly 500,000 bushels of wheat. The new plant of the Portland General Electric Company, just arrived from Lynn, Mass., was standing in the yards of the terminal company on the cars, not having been unloaded. The machinery was of the most expensive kind, the most of which was destroyed, and the remainder badly damaged. Two hundred freight cars, 80 of which were loaded, were destroyed. The Oregon Railway and Navigation docks held 1,500 tons of freight, consisting of wood, salmon, general merchandise, and cement, all of which was destroyed with the dock. There were stored on the dock about 12,000 cases of salmon from the lower Columbia River and Puget Sound, awaiting shipment for the East. It was valued at about $40,000, and was partly insured.

MRS. CHAS. GLASSCOCK.

The Woman Who Brings Sensational Charges Against Senator Stewart.

The sensational charges made against the venerable Senator Stewart, of Nevada, by Mrs. Chas. Glasscock, though generally believed to be an attempt at blackmail, serve to make Mrs. Glasscock a person of interest. She is a Southern woman, now residing in a poor quarter of Washington, D. C. Her maiden name was Carrie Brady and her father was a farmer in Iredell Co., N. C. Her family threw her off when she married Glasscock, a livery keeper of dissipated habits. She was married ten years ago at the age of 18 and is the mother of five children. She is slight of figure, of the blonde type, and although not handsome, her face is not without evidence of refinement. To defend her children and clear her name, she says she will remain in Washington until the courts do her justice.

FOILED THE ROBBERS

FUTILE ATTEMPT TO HOLD UP A SANTA FE TRAIN.

Railroad Officials Received Warning in Time of a Proposed Attempt to Loot an Express Near Gorin, Mo., and Armed Detectives Were Ready.

Bullets Meet the Robbers.

Train robbers in Missouri were given a backset early Tuesday morning which they will never forget as long as they breathe. It was the neatest job ever done in the whole history of Missouri banditry, and it was all planned more than three weeks ago. The attack was made by a band of four masked men on the Denver express of the Santa Fe, carrying an express car with considerable money in it. The train was flagged about three-quarters of a mile east of Gorin, a little town in the northern part of Missouri, and before the robbers had time to board it a volley from ten Winchester rifles belched out flame and lead into their very faces. Panic-stricken, the robbers fled to the woods, with a posse of Sheriff's men and railroad detectives in hot pursuit.

The story of the robbery and the clever way in which it was balked reads like a romance. Three weeks ago, then, the officials of the road received word that the Denver express was to be held up and at once began preparations to give the robbers a warm reception. The express train is the finest and fastest train that runs on the road of the Santa Fe. It leaves Chicago every afternoon at 5 o'clock and travels like the wind after it gets out into the open. It carries the Wells-Fargo express car to the West and this car is always loaded with treasure.

Being in full possession of the plans of the robbers, the officials were in readiness to greet any demonstration of lawlessness with a shower of lead. Eight armed deputies, together with Sheriff Saling of Scotland County and City Marshal Byrnes of Memphis, Mo., were stationed on the train to welcome the bandits. Engineer Prescott was instructed to stop the train as soon as it was flagged, but, unfortunately for him, he did not act quickly enough to suit the robbers, one of whom shot him, the ball striking him in the shoulder and producing a severe wound, which, however, will not prove dangerous. At this juncture the Sheriff and deputies opened fire, and the robbers beat a hasty retreat, breaking for the woods, where their horses were tied. All the while the officers were shooting at the fleeing men, but only one shot took effect and this did no better than to wound one of the men. A gray horse was killed and another was captured, while the four men set off on the other two animals, followed by the posse.

SLAUGHTERED BY JAPS.

Sixteen Thousand Chinese Soldiers Killed or Wounded in Battle.

Details of the battle between the Chinese and Japanese forces at Ping Yang show a decisive victory for the Japs and the utter rout of the Chinese. The battle was opened at daybreak by a Japanese cannonade of the Chinese works, which was continued without cessation until afternoon, the Chinese responding. The work with the heavy guns showed good practice. The firing continued at intervals during the night, and in the meantime two Japanese flanking columns had formed a cordon around the Chinese. At 3 o'clock Sunday morning an attack was made by the Japanese columns simultaneously and with admirable precision. The Chinese were completely taken by surprise and were thrown into a panic. Hundreds were cut down and those who escaped death, finding themselves surrounded at every point, broke and fled. Some of Viceroy Li Hung Chang's European-drilled troops stood their ground to the eastward and were cut down to a man. The Pong San column, swarming over the defenses in front, completed the rout. Half an hour after the attack was opened the positions at Ping Yang were in possession of the Japanese.

It is estimated that 20,000 Chinese soldiers were engaged in the battle. The Japanese captured immense stores of provisions, munitions of war, and hundreds of colors. The Chinese loss is estimated at 10,000 killed, wounded, and taken prisoners. Among those captured by the Japanese are several of the Chinese commanding officers, including Tso-Fung, commander-in-chief of the Manchurian army, who was severely wounded. The Japanese loss is only thirty killed and 270 wounded, including eleven officers. Most of the casualties among the Japanese occurred during the first day's fighting, and very few were the result of the night attack.

SLICES OFF A SECOND.

World's Records Smashed on the Hoosier Track.

World's records went a glimmering over the Terre Haute track, which holds all but two of the fastest three heats ever paced and fastest two-year-old pacing record. The excitement was at fever heat when the starter announced that Robert J. would go to beat his own record, 2:02¾. Geers was up behind the pacer and at the second trial the word was given. The clip was so fast that the pacemaker fell behind, the first quarter being done in 30¾ seconds. Up then he went at even a faster gait and he was at the half stretch in 1:00¾. Down the third quarter unbeaten the gelding came like a whirlwind, and he was at the pole in 1:30¾. It was almost impossible to restrain the pent-up enthusiasm. With two or three gentle hits Robert J. passed under the wire in 2:01¾ and pandemonium broke loose. Men shouted themselves hoarse, and women waved handkerchiefs and parasols. There were cheers for the horse, for the rider, and for his owner, Hamlin. Geers was lifted from the sulky and carried up the stretch on the shoulders of his admiring friends.

In the free-for-all pace, John R. Gentry broke the stallion pacing record, doing a mile in 2:03¾. There was great disappointment over the failure of Alix to lower her record of 2:04. She failed to do so by a half a second. Carbonate beat the two-year-old record, covering the distance in 2:09. Joe Patchen endeavored to beat the stallion record of 2:03¾ but the best he did was 2:04. Directly tried to lower the two-year-old pacing record, but only did 2:10.

The Coroner delayed the funeral of the child to hold a post-mortem. The case has been turned over to the humane society.

JOHN GILLEN, of Kokomo, was fatally injured at Russiaville. He was sent there with two large plate window glass from the Armstrong, Landon & Hunt Company, at Kokomo, and was assisting to unload them from the dray. He was sitting on the sliding board holding one of the props when the heavy upright box slid off to the ground and caught the man, mashing him down. The ribs were broken loose from the vertebral column, and the column injured. The physicians say he cannot recover. He is a colored man, single, and has been in the employ of the Armstrong company for over thirteen years. He is dea

CHAPTER XXVII—Continued.

Gilbert handed the Coroner Melaine's letter, which had now assumed a crumpled and dilapidated appearance, as of a letter that had lain all night in the dew and dirt of the footpath under the trees.

The Coroner puzzled through the letter, reading it aloud, with various mistakes and pullings up and tryings back, the jury listened open-mouthed.

"This clearly indicates that Mr. Wyatt came here by appointment," remarked the Coroner, sagely. "Who is this Melaine Duport?"

"My wife's maid."

It was explained to the Coroner that Melaine Duport was missing.

After this, the jury having duly viewed the body, or, at any rate, made believe to view it, the inquest was adjourned to give the local police time to make their investigations, though what they were to invest gate seemed a somewhat puzzling question.

"They'll bring some London detectives, who will look into my room, see those guns, and then put two and two toge her," thought Gilbert. "I don't sup-ose my alibi wou d hold water at the assizes. A jury would want some independent evidence to sustain my account of my time between 7 o'clock and midnight yesterday."

* * * * * * *

The Coroner's inquest dragged its slow length along. No new evidence was elicited to make the case stronger a ains. Gilbert Sinclair. The fact of his departure remained the only damning fact against him.

There was also the fact of Melanie Daport's disappearance on the morning of the murder, and opinions were divided as to which of these two was guilty, or whether both had not been concerned in the act.

The newspapers made much capital out of an event which soon became known as the Davenant Mystery, and Constance Sinclair had the horror of knowing that she was the object of a morbid interest in the minds of the nation at large. She left Davenant almost immediately after her husband, and took up her abode at Marchbrook, with Martha Briggs and the little girl for her only companions, until the arrival of Lord Clanyarde from the continent.

The inquiry before the coroner ended at last in an open ve dict. The deceased had been shot by some person or persons unknown.

Davenant was formally taken possession of upon midsummer day, not by Sir Cyprian Davenant, but by his lawyer, who installed some of the old family servants as care-takers. Sir Cyprian had left England, a few days before James Wyatt's death, on his long-talked-of African expedition.

The year wore round and the horror of James Wyatt's unexplained death faded out of the national mind, as all such horrors do fade when the newspapers leave off writing about them. Constance lived her quiet life at Marchbrook as she had lived at Davenant, happy with her child, yet mindful, with a shuddering pity of that friendless wanderer doomed to bear the brand of Cain. Christmas came and passed, and for nearly a year she had remained in ignorance of her husband's fate. Then came a letter, in a strange hand, but signed by Gilbert Sinclair:

"DEAR CONSTANCE.—I am down with a malignant fever common to this part of the world, and generally fatal. Before I die I should like to ask you to forgive me for all the pain my jealousy gave you in days gone by, and to tell you that I now believe that jealousy to have been causeless. It was what the thieves call a 'put up' business, and Wyatt was the Iago. He set a trap for me, and got snared himself in the end.

"I want to tell you something else, which may perhaps distress you, but that is no fault of mine. The child you are so fond of is not your own. Poor little Christabel was really drowned, and the little girl brought to Davenant while you were ill is a child adopted for the purpose of bringing about your recovery. This plan was suggested to me by your father. He knows all about it.

"I have made my will, and sent it to my London lawyers. I leave you everything. So, if matters go well in the North, you will be a very rich woman. I wasted a good deal of money on the Newmarket stable; but, with your quiet life, you will soon recover lost ground. Of course you will marry C. D. Well. I can't help that. I ought never to have thrust myself between you and your first love. Nothing but misery has come of our marriage.

"God bless you, and give you a happier life than you would ever have spent with me. Your dying husband,

"GILBERT SINCLAIR.

"P. S.—If I go, the man who writes this, Thomas Grace, tobacco grower, will send you certificate of death, and all necessary evidence. If I live, you shall hear from me again."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

CRUEL KINDNESS.

That letter from her dying husband was a bitter blow to Constance Sinclair. There was the keen sense of loss; the knowledge that her lovely child had verily sunk beneath the German river never to rise again save as a spirit amidst the choir of angels. There was the deep humiliation of knowing that she had been duped. They had taken advantage of her affliction and consoled her with a lie. She had been fooled, deceived and deluded, as a child is deluded for her good. Her soul rose up against this mocking of consolation in bitterest anger. Her very thanksgivings to Heaven—those outpourings of a mother's grateful heart overflowing with its wealth of joy—had been offered up in vain. She had no reason to be thankful. Heaven and earth had conspired in ill treating her. God had taken away her reason, and man had imposed upon her folly. Whom upon earth could she ever trust again, when even her father had so deceived her?

With her husband's letter came the certificate of his death. The same post brought her a letter from Gilbert's lawyers, to inform her of their receipt of his will, executed on his death-bed.

After those tears given to the untimely dead, her thoughts were full of anger. She could not forgive the deception that had been practiced, even though it had been done to save her life.

"Better a thousand times to have died in that dim dream than to awake to such a disappointment as this," she said.

While she sat with Gilbert's letter open before her, abandoned to a tearless despair, the little one's voice sounded in the corridor, and she heard the light, swift footstep which always made her heart thrill. To-day it struck her with an actual pain. She rose involuntarily and ran to the door, as she had been accustomed to run to meet her pet, rejoicing at the child's approach; but, with her hand upon the door, she stopped suddenly.

"No, I won't see her—little impostor—living lie—to have stolen my love and my dead child looking down upon me from heaven all the while—looking down to see her place filled by a stranger—lonely in heaven, perhaps, for want of a mother's love, and seeing her mother's heart given to another."

The light-tripping step came nearer.

"Mamma! mamma!" called the glad young voice.

Constance locked the door.

"Go away," she cried, hoarsely; "I don't want you!"

There was a pause—complete silence—and then a burst of sobbing. The strangeness of that tone had chilled the child's heart. Lips that had hitherto only breathed love, to day spoke with the accents of hate. Instinct told the child the greatness of the change.

The little feet retreated slowly down the corridor—not so light of step this time—the sobs died away in the distance.

"I will never see her face again," cried Constance. "Some wretched child—perhaps the offspring of sin—base at heart as she is fair of face—and so like my lost one—so like—so like. No. I will send her away—settle a sum of money—provide handsomely for her—poor child, it is not her crime—but never see her again. Yet, oh, God! I love her. And she is crying now, perhaps. The loving little heart will break."

She had been pacing the room distractedly. This last thought was too much to bear. She ran to the door, unlocked it, and went out into the corridor, calling, "Belle, darling Belle, come back. I am waiting for you yet."

"My pet, I love you. I shall love you to my dying day," she cried, passionately. "Hearts can not be played with like this. Love can not be given and taken away."

The child hugged her, and was comforted, understanding the love, if not the words that told it.

"Belle hasn't been naughty, has she, mamma?" she asked, with innocent wonder.

"No, pet; but mamma has been very unhappy. Mamma has had a sad letter. Oh, here comes Martha," as that devoted nurse entered the night nursery. "Do you know, Martha, I think Cristabel wants change of air. You must take her to Hastings for a little while."

"Lor', mum, that would be nice. But you'll come, too, of course. You wouldn't like to be parted from her."

"I don't know that I could come, quite at first. I might come afterward, perhaps. I have some very sad business to attend to."

Constance told Martha of Mr. Sinclair's death, but not a word of that imposture which had just been revealed to her. Martha had been as completely deceived as she had, no doubt, Constance argued, for she knew it was not in the girl's honest nature to assist in a deception. The likeness to the lost child had deluded them both.

"I suppose all children of the same age and complexion are alike," thought Constance; "and yet I fancied my baby was different from all other children."

She wished to send the child away, in order, if possible, to cure herself of the habit of loving a child that had no claim on her—to love whom was a kind of treason against the beloved dead.

The preparations for the journey were hurried over; Martha was delighted to pack and be off. The child was pleased to go, but cried at parting from "mamma." At two o'clock in the afternoon the carriage drove Martha and her charge to the station, with the steady old Marchbrook butler for their escort. He was to take lodgings for them, and to make all things easy for them, and see them comfortably settled before he came back to Marchbrook.

Constance breathed more freely when the child was out of the house, and there was no chance of hearing that light footstep, that clear, sweet, childish voice. Yet how dreary the big old house seemed in its solitude, how gloomy the rooms, without that fluttering, changful soul and all the busy life she made around her—the family of dolls—the menagerie of woolly animals, all afflicted with the same unnatural squeak, and internal noise never heard to issue from any animal that ever lived in the realm of zoology.

"It would have broken my heart to keep her near me," thought Constance, "and I feel as if it must break my heart to lose her."

She sent for Dr. Webb. He was in the plot, doubtless. It was at his advice, perhaps, that this heartless deception had been practiced upon her. If it were so, she felt that she must hate him all her life.

The little village surgeon came briskly enough, expecting to find a mild case of measles, or some other infantile ailment, in the Marchbrook nursery. What was his astonishment when he found Constance pacing the long dreary drawing-room, pale, with two burning spots on her cheeks, eyes bright with fever.

"My dear Mrs. Sinclair, what is the matter?"

"Everything," cried Constance. "My poor husband is dead, and on his death-bed wrote me a letter telling me the cruel truth. Your wicked plot has been discovered. Yes, wicked; for all lies are wicked. You cannot do evil that good may come of it. You saved my life, perhaps, but what a life! To find that I have lavished my love upon an impostor; that when I thanked God on my knees for His bounteous mercies, I had received no gracious gift. He had shown no pity for my sorrows; but you—you and my father had played at Providence, and had pretended to perform a miracle for my sake. It was a cruel, infamous deception."

"It was designed to save your life, and, what is even more precious than life, your reason," replied Dr. Webb, wounded by the harshness of this attack. "But whatever blame may attach to the strategem, you may spare me your censure. I had nothing to do with it. The German physician, whom your father brought here, was the adviser from whom the suggestion came. He and your father carried it out between them. I had nothing to do but look on, and watch the effect of the shock upon you. That was most happy."

"The German doctor," said Constance, wonderingly. "Yes, I remember him faintly, as if it were a dream—that winter night. He made me sing, did he not? His voice had a mesmerical effect upon me. I obeyed him involuntarily. His presence seemed to give me comfort, stranger though he was. It was very curious. And then he bent over me and whispered hope, and from that instant I felt happier. And it was all a mockery after all; it was a trick. Tell me who and what the child is, Dr. Webb."

"I know nothing of her origin. Lord Clanyarde brought her to Davenant. That is all I can tell you."

"Fool! fool! fool!" cried Constance, with passionate self-reproach, "to take an impostor to my heart so blindly, to ask no questions, to believe without proof or witness that heaven had performed a miracle for my happiness. What right had I to suppose that Providence would care so much for me?"

"You have great cause to be thankful for the restoration of life and reason, Mrs. Sinclair," said the Doctor, reproachfully.

"Not if life is barren and hopeless! not if reason tells me that I am childless."

"You have learned to love this strange child. Cannot you take consolation from that affection?"

"No; I loved her because I believed she was my own. It would be treason against my dead child to love this impostor."

"And you will turn her out-of-doors, I suppose, and send her to the workhouse?"

"I am not so heartless as that. Her future shall be provided for, but I shall never see her again. I have sent her to Hastings with her nurse, who adores her."

"That's fortunate, since she is to be deprived of everybody else's affection."

There was a spice of acidity in the doctor's tone. He had attended the child in various small illnesses, had met her almost daily riding her tiny Shetland pony in the lanes, and entertained a warm regard for the pretty little winning creature, who used to purse up her lips into a rosebud for him to kiss, and had evidently not the least idea that he was old and ugly.

"Since you can tell me nothing, I shall send for my father," said Constance; "he must know to whom the child belongs."

"I should imagine so," replied the doctor, glad to feel himself absolved of all blame.

It was a painful position, certainly, he thought. He had anticipated this difficulty from the beginning of things. He was very glad to take his leave of his patient, after hazarding a platitude or two by way of consolation.

Lord Clanyarde was in Paris enjoying the gayeties of the cheerful season before Lent, and making himself extremely comfortable in his bachelor room at the Hotel Bristol. He had married all his daughters advantageously and buried his wife, and felt that his mission had been accomplished, and that he was free to make his pathway to the grave as pleasant as he could. From January to March he found his aged steps traveled easiest over the asphalt of Paris, and as poor Constance was happy with her adopted child, he felt no scruples against leaving her to enjoy life in her own quiet way.

Work of White Ants.

The pyramids of the white ants are a characteristic feature of the African landscape. The builders of these structures are not ants, but belong to the smaller family of termites. There is scarcely an insect so thoroughly hated by man as the termites, and the hatred is fully justified. They gnaw everything; the balconies and posts of the houses, tables, chairs, wardrobes, books, cloth, leather; in fact, little comes amiss to them except iron. The evidences of the destructive labors of the termites are to be seen on every side; but the creaturas themselves are rarely seen. They steal sneakingly to their labors. They are all blind, with the exception of the king and queen, and all defenseless except the soldier caste, which constitutes about one or two per cent. of the population. To escape starvation they must leave their subterranean homes or pyramids in search of dead wood, and, because of their blindness they render themselves invisible as the best mode of defense. By means of small dry tubes, constructed with infinite labor, and guarded by the soldier termites from hostile insects, they reach the timber to be operated upon. These tubular passages are about the diameter of a small gas pipe, and are frequently carried in a zigzag course by the termites up the trunk of a tree in their search for a dry branch. One may travel for hours and not find a single tree without one of these passages.

Farming in New Hampshire.

A correspondent of the Boston Transcript draws a gloomy picture of the farmers in the hill country of New Hampshire. There is no large area of land anywhere under cultivation, and only small herds of cattle. The scattered houses are surrounded by a garden patch, a few acres of corn, a pasture, with dense woods encircling all. "There is no real farming," he says. "Each man has his own mouth and a smaller or larger circle of dependent mouths to fill, and he goes at it in the way that lies nearest to his hand: in the way that his father went at it before him, and his grandfather, and his father. The commercial idea for accounting for outgoes and incomings is no part of their mental make-up; they live from field to mouth, and their horizon is bounded by the store which takes their butter and eggs in trade, and the town house where they exercise the rights and functions of American citizens."

A Remedy for Dog Bite.

When a person is bitten by a dog the first thing to do is to suck the blood out of the wound and with it the virus if the dog has rabies. But care must be taken that there be no cuts on the lips or in the mouth. Where the dog's teeth have had to go through clothing before reaching the flesh the chances are better, for the poisonous saliva would likely be taken off in penetrating the cloth. After the blood has been sucked out a physician should be consulted, and cauterization resorted to. If no physician be near, the wound should be cauterized anyway, well and deep, with a hot iron if less severe means cannot be obtained. Under the old methods of curing hydrophobia, when the virus once got into the system, there could really be no cure. The case was fatal. Pasteur's attenuated virus plan, from the results set forth, seems to be a great benefit.

THE SUGAR HARVEST.

A TIME WHEN THERE'S HUSTLING IN THE SOUTH.

Everybody and Everything Turn Out to Handle the Immense Crop—Sugar Mill at Abbeville—New Orleans the Great Shipping Point.

Making Cane Sugar.

SAY, Boy, what yo' doing there? Get them legs going, now; you don't roll no cigareets and work for me. If you want cigareets you go right up that hill there and press yo' pants."

Sugar is moving now, says a New Orleans correspondent of the Chicago Record, and moving fast. The old tradition of a sleepy South does not hold good in sugar time. Everybody and everything are brought out to handle the immense sugar crop harvested in Louisiana. The bayous and swamps are no longer stagnant resting places for the lazy alligator, but are filled with puffing steamers, pushing barges and flatboats all loaded down with with sugar.

Flat steamers holding in themselves trainloads of barreled sugar are carefully paddling their way to some railroad landing from which the sugar is shipped in cars.

"Where is this sugar going to?"

"Where you from?"

"Chicago."

"Thought so. This sugar goes to New Orleans."

This seems to be the shipping point for all sugar in the State, and is the board of trade or middleman between the merchant and producer. The sugar is carefully weighed on the plantation, but is always weighed again at New Orleans, and this weight is taken as the standard.

The plantation and mill of J. H. Pitnam at Abbeville, Vermillion parish, is a fair illustration of the industry throughout the State. Here you see real Northern push and energy. There are other things here from the North; in fact, the North contributes everything in the sugar industry but the cane and labor. The heavy crushers, the Worthington pumps, the big battery of boilers, the evaporators and clarifiers, the rails and cars, are all supplied by the CANE SHEDS.

North. The coal used as fuel is brought in barges and begins its journey somewhere on the Alleghany River. It first comes down the Ohio and the Mississippi, then up the Red River and into some of the small bayous to the mills, traveling some three thousand miles in its course. Modern improvements are used on this plantation. You are taken to the field in a sugar-cane cart run on rails and drawn by Sarah Bernhardt, a pensive mule.

Here hundreds of hands are cutting, piling and loading the cane. The harvest begins about Oct. 1s and the cutting runs to about Jan. 15. The cane is covered with closely clinging leaves, which are first taken off by two slashes of a broad-bladed knife. The top is next cut and the cane then severed close to the ground.

CUTTING CANE.

The cane is loaded into mule trains and taken to the mill, where it is weighed and then run into the elevator which feeds it to the crushers—first a three-roller and next a two-roller crusher When coming from this pressure the cane is dry and much like crushed wood. It is used for fuel for the boilers and furnishes about one-third of the power for the mill. The sap from the cane is pumped into the clarifiers and is of a light-green color, afterward turning to an orange. It is then forced into a triple-effect evaporator, exhaust steam being used. From here it is run into the settling tanks. It is now in the form of sirup. Granulating is the next process, 190,000 pounds of sap being granulated at once. It is now placed into large vats and rolled into the heating-room, and it is there left to thicken. It is then dried in the centrifugal, which revolves 1,400 times a minute. Now it is ready for barreling, being fed from the bins like flour. The capacity of the mill is 60,000 pounds of cane a day. Much of the cane is brought from neighboring plantations by boats or wagons. Good cane will yield 2 per cent. of sugar.

Cultivation of Oranges.

A recent traveler in China and Japan notices that in those countries the orange trees are not grown as we grow them in our country, by training them up to good stems and allowing them to have large and busby heads, but are suffered to grow low, crooked and stumpy like, more like bushes than as trees such as ours present. The traveler states that the reason given for this by the Asiatic cultivators was that it was much more easy in this way to gather the fruit, and for that reason it was cheaper and more economical to train the trees so than in the form of trees as our orange cultivators do; but this could scarcely be the reason, as the labor in those countries is so excessively low that the extra cost of a ladder and baskets to gather them could scarcely be an item in the calculation. We have recently come across some account of an experiment by an orange cultivator in California, who allowed some of his trees to grow low and bushy, as the cultivator might say "straggling," and had alongside the other trees trained up as if they were apple trees in the ordinary manner of an orange grove, and to his amazement he finds that these unpruned trees, suffered to grow in this way, are more than doubly as productive as those which have been subjected to the pruning necessary to give them an ornamental character. It is more than likely, therefore, that it was this productive character rather than the saving of labor which has led the Chinese and Japanese to adopt this method as their universal plan of civilization.—Meehan's Monthly.

It Never Dies.

There is no such thing as "next Senate," and so long as the constitution lasts there never will be. The Senate of the United States is an eternal body. It never dies. It is to-day exactly the same assembly which met for the first time in 1789. Every second year it undergoes a change of membership, the terms of one class of members expiring. But that change neither ends the old body nor makes a new one.

THE COUNT OF PARIS.

Exiled from His Own Country, Died in England.

The Comte de Paris, once a claimant to the throne of France, who died recently in England, has lived an exile from his native land for several years. He has been in poor health for some time. The Comte de Paris (Louis Albert Phillipe d'Orleans) was a son of the late Duc d'Orleans, and a grandson of the late Louis Phillipe, King of the French. He was born in Paris 56 years ago. He fled from France with his mother in 1848, and was educated at Claremont, England. In 1861, accompanied by his brother and the Prince de Joinville, his uncle, he went to Paris, and then proceeded to the United States. Here the brothers served one year as captains of volunteers on Gen. McClellan's staff, and then returned to Europe. In 1871 the Comte de Paris was made a member of the National Assembly, at Versailles. Since 1886 the expulsion bill of the French Government has compelled him to live in exile.

COMTE DE PARIS.

The Duc d'Orleans, Prince Louis Philippe Robert, the eldest son of the late Comte d'Paris, succeeds his father as claimant under the Orleans title. The Duc d'Orleans was born at Twickenham in 1869. His youth was passed and his education gained in England. In 1890 he went to Paris, with the object of being enrolled as a private soldier in the army of France. He was recognized, however, and promptly arrested for violating the law of 1886, banishing from France pretenders to the throne. He was sentenced to two years' imprisonment, but was pardoned after serving four months. This made him extremely popular with a certain portion of the French nation, but when he soon after broke off his engagement with his cousin, the Princess Marguerite, who had shown so much devotion during his imprisonment, he alienated the hearts of many. He is a jovial, pleasure-loving young prince, and has served for some time in an English infantry regiment in India, and has also spent a considerable time tiger hunting there.

A ROMANCER'S ROMANCE.

Novelist Barrie Weds the Girl Who Nursed Him When Sick.

The courtship of J. M. Barrie, the novelist, and Miss Mary Ansell was as romantic as any of the clever writer's own creations. Mr. Barrie was very ill and Miss Ansell bravely nursed him through it all. They were married as soon as he was able to travel. Barrie has won great favor in the United States, not only of critics, but the great reading public as well. He was discovered by Dr. Nicol, of the British Weekly, and was connected with that journal a long time. Then he embraced literature in earnest and his rise has been constant and rapid.

J. M. BARRIE.

The young bride is a very pretty girl and a very sweet, gentle and estimable one. Though for some years a successful actress in London, she has always been a girl of simple and retiring tastes. She has led the quietest of lives in the home of a matron friend—a life so quiet that old-fashioned people, it is said, would have called her a "home-bird." She has a special talent for dressmaking and millinery, and all her costumes, professional and private, have been made by her own fingers. She is accomplished, being a skilled musician and a clever artist in oils and water colors. Riding and swimming must be added to the list. She is a member of an old and much-respected family, and has treasures of beautiful old lace and china. No portrait, it is said, has ever done justice to her beauty.

HE WON BOTH.

How a Brave Young Man Secured His Love and a Fortune.

In 1822, Mr. Labouchere, a relative of the present member of Parliament of that name, was a clerk in the banking-house of Hope, of Amsterdam. One day he was sent by his patrons to Mr. Baring, the celebrated London banker, to negotiate a loan. He displayed in the affair so much ability as to entirely win the esteem and confidence of the English banker.

"Faith," said Labouchere one day to Baring, "your daughter is a charming creature. I wish I could persuade you to give me her hand."

"Young man, you are joking; for seriously you must allow that Miss Baring could never become the wife of a simple clerk."

"But," said Labouchere, "if I were in partnership with Mr. Hope?"

"Oh, that would be quite a different thing; that would entirely make up for all other deficiencies."

Returned to Amsterdam Labouchere said to his patron:

"You must take me into partnership."

"My young friend, how can you think of such a thing? It is impossible. You are without fortune, and——"

"But if I become son-in-law of Mr. Baring?"

"In that case the affair would soon be settled, and so you have my word."

Fortified with these two promises, Labouchere returned to England, and two months after married Miss Baring, because Mr. Hope had promised to take him into partnership, and he became allied to the house of Hope on the strength of that promise of marriage.

OLD JOHN was a shoemaker, an Irishman, and an ardent admirer of the Duke of Wellington. To describe the battle of Waterloo was his chief pleasure. He always wound up the narrative, sitting with his hammer poised, his spectacles pushed back on his forehead, and his whole appearance indicating the utmost enthusiasm, with the words: "An' the duke sez, sez he; 'Up, gyards, an' at 'em!' an' wid that, simultaneously, at the same time, all to onct, the gyards upped an' atted at 'em. An' that settled it."—Harper's Drawer.

THE people of France are soon to see some logs which are mammoths. The Washington State Building, which was one of those at the World's Fair, was made of immense timbers. Some of them were 3 feet square and 150 feet long. These are they which have gone abroad to show what Americans can do in tree raising. It is said the building is to be set up in France, just as it stood on the World's Fair grounds, and then the common people will feel more assured than they are now that that is the style of American houses.

ADULTERATED WINE

is injurious, but nothing gives strength, and tones up the stomach like a pure old port wine. "Royal Ruby Port," so called for its royal taste and ruby color, is on account of its purity, age and strength, particularly adapted for invalids, convalescents and the aged. Sold only in bottles (never in bulk) while cheap wine is sold by the gallon and gives a larger profit to the seller but less to the user. This wine is absolutely pure, and has the age without which no wine is fit to use. Be sure you get "Royal Ruby"; quart bottles $1, pints 60 cts. Sold by Resolutions of Respect.

SPENCERVILLE, IND., Sept. 22, 1994.

SPENCERVILLE LODGE NO. 321 KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS, PP. XXXI.

Your committee to whom was referred the duty of preparing a suitable and well earned memorial upon the death of a highly esteemed and greatly beloved brother, Hiram E. Shilling respectfully submit the following.

Whereas, the lodge has been called upon to mourn the loss of a beloved brother who answered the summons on high Sept. 12, 1894. Therefore be it.

Resolved by the members of the lodge of which he was a member in good standing, that in the death of our beloved brother the lodge has lost one of its most trusted and honorable members. The community an exemplary and useful citizen. The aged father and mother a greatly beloved son. The brother and sisters a fond, indulgent and affectionate brother.

Resolved, that we tender our warmest and tenderest sympathies to the father and mother brothers and sisters in this their great sorrow and commend them to Him who doeth all things well.

Resolved, that we extend our sincere thanks to visiting brothers from neighboring lodges, for their attendance and assistance in the burial of our brother.

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be given the bereaved friends and that they be spread on the records of our order, and a copy be sent to the St. Joe News, and to the AUBURN COURIER for publication.

D. C. BUTLER, JOHN M. HENDERSON, } Com.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, post-office as second-class matter.

THURSDAY....SEPTEMBER 26, 1894.

GRAND jury in Kosciusko county found idictments against 239 persons who had failed to give in their dogs to the assessor.

A WITTY exchange says the populist party is composed of nitrogen four fifths and oxygen one-fifth, and the compound set in rapid motion.

WORST cyclone ever recorded went over a part of Iowa and Wisconsin Frinight. Several towns, are damaged and not less than sixty lives lost.

WHY are republicans complaining about taking tariff off of wool and putting a tariff on sugar? Don't they remember that "the foreigner pays the tariff?"

WOOL industry is to be ruined by removing the tariff. Sugar industry is to be ruined by putting a larger tariff on." say republican papers. But republicans kept a tariff on both. Now which is right, the way they used to talk or the way they talk now?

CHARLES COLDMORNING, of Laporte was asked to move out of the house he was in, because he did not pay rent. Charles licked the man sent to put him out. Then the aforesaid Charles Coldmorning was arrested, but got out on $200 bail. It is a cold morning when Charlie gets left,

A LEGAL voter in Indiana must have been a resident of the state six months before the election, of the township sixty days and the precinct thirty days. If he moves from one township to another after September 5, or from the precinct after October 5th he will deprived of his vote on November 6.

MR. OWEN, the opponent of Capt. Myers for the office of secretary of state, will not be able to hold those joint debates they were to have, as he is seriously ill. He is at the Battle Creek Sanitarium. We are sorry this has happened, as he is said to be an able man and we know Capt. Myers is. It would have been interesting.

CAPT. MYERS made his opening speech at Auburn Thursday afternoon to a fair sized audience. The court room was full and he made a strong speech, as he always does. His audience at Garrett the same evening was of about the same size It was too busy a time to get people out, as seeding and corn cutting were both being pushed all over the county. He makes an excellent impression wherever he speaks, and offends no one.

EVERY republican paper has now copied the editorial they were ordered to—the one about Harrison paying 296 millions of the debt. But not one of them has yet tackled the remark we made on this, that Harrisson really paid less than 196 millions, as over 100 millions was left him by Cleveland. But Harrison could have paid more, had he not been so extravagand. Clevelan could pay more this term had not Harrison's congress made a law that failed to bring in any revenue. Why not tackle this question, and have a little fun with it?

SOME of our exchanges have a "heap sight" of perversity. They watch for the paper that gets an article wrong, and then copy from that. Some paper reported that "Bob" Shilling had shot himself, and nine tenths of the papers that clipped the article, used that paper Hiram E. Shilling was nicknamed "Bub," and that paper got it "Bob," Several clipped it as "Rob" but a number worked the article over, and made it "Robt" as being more genteel. And one had it "Robert" in full. Byron said something about the misfortune of being killed in battle and then have your name spelled wrong in the report, giving some one else the poor consolation of the glory. Several DeKalb papers had Bub's name right, but no one seemed to think DeKalb papers had it right.

AT THE close of the war, the national debt was less than 3000 millions. Now the populists, in a time of peace, want the nation to create a new debt of any where from 25,000 millions to 50,000 millions, or eight times to sixteen times as big as the original debt. They complain of the present debt which is about 1000 millions, or one fiftieth of what they want to have added to the existing debt. They also complain because fifty millions of bonds were recently issued at a time when treasury receipts were less than expenses and it had to be done. In other words, they object to a small, but necessary increase of the debt, but are anxious to have a very large and unnecessary increase. And yet they claim to be financiers! Yet they claim to be able to run the finaces of this great country better than anyone else!

Snaiks, More'n 100 of 'em.

The fall snake story has started. James Draggo, has a man working a farm for him a few miles in the country. Recently Mr. Draggoo directed the man to haul away a strawstack and put it on the fields. On working into the stack they came onto a pile snakes of all sorts, and kept killing them, as they went deeper into the pile. At last they got disgusted and set the pile on fire. After this, when they moved the bottom of the stack, some were still alive, and so they killed enough more to make them an even hundred. Then they took a rest. Among the reptiles killed, was a blue racer nine feet long. And it was not very good week for snakes, either.

Ye Olden Times.

Program of the "Old Folks' Meeting" to be held at Concord, October 6 and 7:

SATURDAY EVENING.

7 00 Song and prayer service, led by the pastor.

7 30 Sermon, Rev. M. H. Sly, Harlan.

SUNDAY MORNING.

9 00 Old time class meeting, led by John Wyatt.

10 00 Sermon, Rev. T. E. Lancaster, Churubusco.
Sacrament of the Lord's supper.

11 30 Doxology and benediction.

The class meeting, sermon and singing will all be in the old way. The hymns will be old, the organ will not be played, the hymns will be lined, and all things will be done as they were in pioneer days, as far as possible. Practice your old songs, be sure and bring your old hymn books of every kind, and sing.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON.

1 30 Singing, and prayer for a baptism of the Holy Ghost.

1 45 The old wooden mouldboard, or How or fathers did their work, Robert Culbertson.
Recitation, My Childhood's Home, Miss Lallie Steward.
Song, The Old Oaken Bucket.

2 00 The Circuit Rider, Mrs. M. A. Widney.
Hymn, When I can read my title clear.

2 15 The old spinning wheel, or, How our mothers did their work, Mrs. McNamara.
Recitation, Memories of old Kitchen, Miss Maud Culbertson.
Song, Twenty years ago.

2 45 Pioneer Reminiscences; Short speeches by the old people.
Prayer for the old people, Rev. T. E. Lancaster.

3 30 An old fashioned hand shaking, singing the Sweet by and by and benediction.

This is to be an all day meeting, so bring your dinners, as you will not have time to go home for them. Easy chairs will be provided for the very old and feeble people, and every other comfort that is possible. A hearty welcome awaits all and especially the old people.

Gone, But Not Forgotten.

Rebecca Maurer, nee Wyatt, was born in Pennsylvania April 8, 1814, and died Sept. 15, 1894, aged 80 years, 5 months, 7 days, and for nearly a quarter of a century she was a faithful member of the U. B. church. In her girlhood days she removed with her parents from Pennsylvania to Ashland county, Ohio, where, June 16, 1837, she was united in marriage to Jacob Maurer. To this union were born 12 children, 6 sons and 6 daughters, of whom 3 sons and 1 daughter have preceded her to the spirit land. Shortly after her marriage, Mother Maurer, with her husband, moved from Ohio to their home in Jackson township, where they lived the remainder of their lives. For 32 years husband and wife journeyed together down the stream of time and shared each other's joys and sorrows, as only a true wife and husband can, and then in the year 1869, Father Maurer was called to exchange worlds, and the mother with her children were left alone to battle against the world. Her trials and sorrows she met bravely, ever leaning on her God for strength, who has proven to be "a husband to the widow and a father to the orphan." Mother Maurer was a loving mother, a good neighbor and a kind friend, and at her death leaves 8 children, 27 grandchildren, 1 great-grandchild and a large circle of friends and neighbors to mourn their loss which was her eternal gain. The funeral was Sept. 17, the services being by Rev. Mr. Gilbert, assisted by Rev. Aaron Lilly and Rev. W. W. Lineberry. Interment in the Spencerville cemetery.

Opituary.

Mrs. Semira Wiyrick departed this life September 7, 1894, after a lingering illness. Mrs. Wiyrick, nee Brown, was the wife of Peter Z. Wiyrick, to whom she was married on September 22, 1864, at Auburn, Indiana. To this union, 3 children were born—Henry, Bruce and Myrtle.

Mrs. Wiyrick was born in Indiana 47 years, 2 months and 9 days prior to her death. She died a faithful member of the Christian Church, of which she had been a member nine years, and having in that time led a consistent Christian life. In her final sickness she often spoke of her unfaltering faith in the Redeemer and her hopes were fixed on the solid anchor of the cross, and showed her feelings in conversation, her evident interest in prayer and all those sacred communications with a Heavenly world. Friends will long remember her, but recognize that their loss is her eternal gain; and with tearful eyes and hopeful hearts as they leave the new made grave will turn their thoughts above, "Not my will but Thine be done."—Hartville, Mo., Press.

The Remedial Uses of Apples.

From Harper's Bazar.

In all temperate climates the apple grows freely, and might be obtained in practically unlimited quantities That it is not more used than it is, is probably due to the fact that being so plenty, it is undervalued. Yet almost every one likes the fruit in some fashion, and it should form a part of at least two meals out of every three during the year round; for even when the fresh fruit is not in season, canned, dried, or "evaporated" apples may always be had.

"Chemically," says a writer in the North American Practitioner, "the apple is composed of vegetable fibre, albumen, sugar, gum, chlorophyl, malic acid, gallic acid lime, and water. Further, the German analysts say that the apple contains a larger percentage of phosphorus than any other fruit or vegetable. The phosphorus is admirably adapted for renewing the essential nervous matter—lecithin—of the brain and spinal cord It is perhaps for this reason—though but rudely understood—that the old Scandinavian traditions represent the apple as the food of the gods, who, when they felt themselves to be growing feeble and and infirm, resorted to this fruit to renew their powers of mind and body."

Not only the phosphorus, but the acids of the apple are of singular use for person of sedentary habits, whose livers are apt to be too slow of action. These acids aid the liver in its work of eliminating from the body the noxious matters, which, if retained, would make the brain heavy and dull, or, in time, would cause rheumatism, jaundice, or skin eruptions and other allied troubles.

The malic acid of apples, either raw or cooked, will neutralize any excess of chalky matter engendered by eating too much meat.

Ripe apples are probably the least fermentable of all fruits, except possibly the banana. For this reason ripe and sound apples may be eaten by most persons in even the hottest weather; but even the apple is safest when cooked.

We have the support of eminent medical authority in saying that the most healthful way to cook apples is to pare and core them, and bake in a moderate oven. If the apple is of a quite sour variety it may be necessary to add a little sugar, putting about a saltspoonful in the hollow whence the core was extracted. The next best way to cook them is stewing. Contrary to common belief, apples baked in their skins are the least healthful of cooked apples.

B. & O. EXCURSIONS.

HOMESEEKERS' EXCURSIONS.

On Oct. 2 and 9, the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad will sell 30 day excursion tickets to points in Virginia on the Harpers Ferry & Valley Branch, south of and including Winchester, at rate of one fare for the round trip. Excursion tickets will also be sold on September 25 and October 9, to points in the West, Northwest and Southwest, at very low rates, good for return 20 days from date of sale. 40

LOW RATE EPCURSION TO THE SOUTH

On October 2 the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad will sell excursion tickets to points in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia at rate of one fare for the round trip.

Tickets will be limited for return passage twenty days from date of sale. 39

WATERLOO.

Twelve days and then the Waterloo fair. Everybody comes.

Sam Beck has moved his chicken and egg business into the barn where the hotel was burnt, on East Maple street.

Mrs. D Locke and daughter, Lucilla, expect to spend a week with Mr. and Mr. Klotz and other friends during the fair.

Miss Hattie Smith is at home with her parents, under the care of a physician, having given up her school, on account of ill health.

The future work selected by the Ladies' Minerva Club is "Civilization: A Historical Review of its Elements," by Charles Morris Part of the books are already received.

The Mosiers, cousins, are moving this week into the property they purchased of Edward Braun and will take possession of and conduct the meat market business Saturday.

Mr. Openheim on last Thursday, Friday and Saturday sold at auction all the goods from his store he could, also household goods, preparatory to moving to Hudson, Mich., Thursday.

Warren Luce moved his family out east of town on Mr Lutz's farm Monday. Mrs. L. was a Lutz before her marriage. Her parents are alone and wish them to live with them, and Mr. Luce finds his health failing with his past employment.

Mrs. Plum speaks of her visit in Michigan as delightful. Crystal lake, 27 miles in circumference, with a smooth road close to it furnishes a lovely drive. The hills are many and very steep—so mush so as to have caused her some inconvenience in riding up the ascent.

Do not forget the auction Thurday, the 27th, at 10 a. m. and 1 p. m at Mrs. Winslow's residence, east side. It will probably be held at the same time and place the following Thursday, Oct 4. Many more articles will be for sale than have been named in previous advertisements.

Edward Braun has bought the Fisher property on North Washington street, east side, including the orchard, which contains a variety of excellent apples, pears and other fruit. They expect to make a beautiful place of it. The family moved last week in time to spend Sunday in their new home.

Fruit stealing has been pretty extensively carried on this year, and it is quite time a stop should be put to it. Those four young men who went several nights in succession to the same place to steal grapes, even breaking a board off the fence to get in, must feel proud of themselves. But their names are known, and may be published at any time. An example made of a few of these sneak thieves would be for the good of the best part of the community.

One case of diphtheria, Morton Burtnett.

Farmers are busy putting out their wheat.

Mr. Hutton drove over to the "Hub" Saturday.

Several attended the Hicksville fair Thursday,

Bent. Phillips is in Chicago delivering some of his fine drivers.

Cormie Gibford has suspended his school for a week or two.

Miss Minnie Hornberger has returned from visiting her sister, Mrs. Myrtle Towsley at Elkhart.

G. W. Draggoo and family entertained relatives, Joseph Porter and wife, of Ft Wayne, over Sunday.

Trentman & Son, of Auburn, have rented the hub mill and will shortly have it in operation. This will furnish the boys some employment.

Almost a fatal accident at the B & O. crossing Thursday evening. Frank Stafford and wife were returning from St. Joe and were in the act of crossing when No. 3 west bound slowed up for Alice Draggoo, who was returning from the Hicksville fair. The lights from Henry Baker's store reflect so brightly on the track that the light of a coming train is hardly discernible. This has occurred several times and more caution should be exercised by the drivers.

BUTLER.

Many of our people will attend the Kendallville fair.

William Wise is out again after a long and serious illness.

Grant Keller is slowly improving from his severe attack of typhoid fever.

The basket factory is running in full force and is far behind in its orders.

Our streets are all cleaned up. The fair left them in a demoralized condition.

Mrs. R. C. Campbell has returned from a month's visit among friends at Toledo and Napoleon, O.

Shultz & Dirrim's jell and cider mill is in full blast. There seems to be a full supply of apples.

Clark Brown has about recovered from the injuries he received in his bicycle collision at the Bryan races.

The Angola fair had a fair sprinkling of Butler people mixed among its fair sized crowd. The fair was an average success.

J. A. Campbell reports a stormy passage between Edgerton and Butler in his night ride returning from the Bryan bicycle races on his wheel.

Mr Jones, who has been clerking for Mr. Brannan for the past year, is opening a notion store in the old Johns building. J. A Campbell Sundayed with friends in in Toledo, O., on his way east.

ASHLEY.

Col Hunt took charge of Wyrich Hotel last week. The Colonel will make a good landlord.

The people of the Christian church will dedicate their new church Oct. 7. May success crown their efforts.

New walks are being laid from Pearl to State streets This will be a big improvement to property along that line.

Our schools are in splendid working order, there being 170 pupils enrolled and more to come as soon as busy fall work is over.

Charles Kettering, one of DeKalb's prominent teachers, from near here, is teaching in the Husselmen district, near Auburn. The people may be assured they have a good teacher.

The ladies of the Methodist church were very successful with their supper last Friday evening, the proceeds being about $40. Who would not enjoy such a supper and all for 15 cents?

SUMMIT.

Wilson Gramling, of Chicago, came home last week.

Mrs. Kate Hilt was the guest of Mrs. Geo. Slayhbaugh last Sunday.

Mrs. Mary Belford was home a few days last week visiting her mother, Mrs. Emaline Smith.

Isaac Barker moved to town last week to be close to his school. He teaches the Summit school.

Henry Lawson and wife were the guest of Samuel Shaffer and family west of Hudson last Sunday.

Moving is the order of the day now. Frank Hilt moved out east on his farm last Monday, Edward Meeks moving into the house he vacated.

SIGNAL TRIUMPHS WON

By Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder.

Two signal triumphs have been achieved by Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder. First it received highest award and diploma at the World's Columbian Exposition of 1893. Next it secured highest award and gold medal at the California Midwinter Fair of 1894. At both fairs it surpassed all competitors in every respect. The reward in each instance was for strongest leavening power, perfect purity and general excellence. It was sustained by the unanimous vote of the judges. The victory at Chicago establishes the supremacy of Dr. Price's as "The Foremost Baking Powder in the World." The triumph at San Francisco confirms and emphasizes it.

CHANGE OF VOTING PRECINCTS.

At their June session, 1894, the Board of commissioners of DeKalb county, state of Indiana, made the following changes in the boundaries of voting precincts, the same being now entered in the records of said session:

PETITION TO CHANGE VOTING PRECINTS IN UNION TOWNSHIP.

"The Inspectors at the last general election find from the ballots cast at said election that the Southwest precinct of Union township cast 308 votes; Southeast precinct cast 209 votes; Northeast precinct cast 208 votes; the Northwest precinct cast 193 votes. The southwest precinct having cast more votes than a legal apportionate, we therefore recommend that the Northwest precinct be increased by extending the line of said precinct to Ninth street in the town of Auburn, thence west along the center of said Ninth street, on a parallel line to the township line. And that the Northeast precinct be extended to center of Eigth street, thence east through the courthouse; and that the Southeast precinct be changed so as to include the block between Jackson, Main, Eighth and Ninth streets. And that the Southwest precinct will include only south of Ninth street and west of Main street and Ft. Wayne road."

J. WALBORN, J. E. ENSLEY, M. BOLAND, } Inspectors.

Therefore the Board changes said voting precincts as recommended.

PETITION TO CHANGE VOTING PRECINCTS IN SMITHFIELD TOWNSHIP.

By George Strayer and others.

"It is ordered by the Board that the following precincts be established: Precinct No 1 to be compused of sections four (4), five (5), six (6), seven (7) and eight (8), and the voting place to be in the incorporated town of Ashley And Precinct No. 2 be the balance of the township and the voting place to be at Smithfield township center school house.

For instance, Mrs. Chas. Rogers, of Bay City, Mich., accidentally spilled scalding water over her little boy. She promptly applied DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, giving instant relief. It's a wonderfully good salve for burns, bruises, sores, and a sure cure for piles. tf

The editor of the Press says that O. P. Ensley is in charge of the work of sending speakers to different points, and wants him to send Reed or McKinley to DeKalb. We hope he will. We would like to find whether they have a man who can disperse a crowd quicker than Pat O'Donnell.

Read Dr. Henry Johnson's sermon in this paper. He makes clear, some good ideas about the anarchists, and their aiders and abettors. There are in DeKalb county many otherwise worthy men, who are just now being led astray by those who favor the dangerous teachings of Debs, Coxey and others who defy the laws of God and man.

A. D. Northam who used to live here, has gone on from bad to worse. Last week, in Ft. Wayne, he stole a watch belonging to his niece, and was arrested, and for want of bail was lodged in jail. He said he stole it to get money to take him to Gas City where he said he had work waiting, him. He was a capable workman, but hard drinking ruined him.

If you want to see a big flowering plant look at the one in McNabb's meat market near Kruger's grocery. It is an immense "Ghost Plant" in full bloom, about seventy of the immense flowers being out at once. They are not only beautiful but very fragrant, the perfume filling the room. It belongs to Fleming of the green house near the school grounds, and he had a photograph taken taken of it last week. There is a large English ivy in the same room, that Mr. Potter who is salesman there, has trained in a lovely picture. Fleming has a good many of those ghost plants.

St. Joe News.—The best way to realize a good price for your wheat is to empty it into your hog pen. The Tribune relates this test by a Michigan farmer: "Twenty-one shoats were fed for a week on wheat. The weight of the hogs when feeding began was 1,900 pounds, and at the end of the first week it was 2,345 pounds, showing a gain of 445 pounds. The amount of wheat fed was 11 bushels, These hogs are sold to be delivered September 15th, at $4 80 per 100 pounds. This shows a gain of $21 36, or $1 94 per bushel for wheat. The wheat is soaked twenty-four hours before being fed."

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly." Sold by Robbins and McCord druggist Auburn Ind. 34tf Ligonier Banner: Lake Shore officials have entered upon a crusade against men and boys for stealing rides on freight and boys for stealing rides on freight and passenger trains. At Chicago Saturday, and other places along the road, the special agents drove the offending passengers from the trains into the arms of the deputies, who were stationed along the right-of-way at convenient points. The railroad authorities, explaining their wholesale arrests, said they were constantly subject to claims for damages from people who are injured while stealing rides and had concluded to stop the nuisance as much as possible by making an examples of those caught in the business. If the raids of Saturday do not discourage those who are in the habit of stealing rides the raid will be repeated until a satisfactory result is reached.

Justice never sleeps in Auburn, and her courts are liable to run on Sunday as well as any other day. A couple of buggies, each with a young man and his girl, were driving wildly on our streets Sunday evening, and managed finally to upset one of the rigs, injuring the occupants considerably. They were hauled up, and Squire Ross fined one that evening, and next morning the other plead guilty and was fined.

The following Auburnites went over to Angola Monday evening to attend the twentieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Kemery, of that place. Dr. and Mrs. Nusbaum, Mr. and Mrs. John Robbins, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Zimmerman, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Gregg, Mrs. G. W. Weaver, Mrs. May Dills, Mrs. R. C Shull and Mrs. Hettie Sommers. They report a very pleasant time, as Mr. and Mrs. K. are adepts in the art of entertaining. Their excellent refreshments were served in the height of style, and were of the choicest. They were the recipients of many costly presents, appropriate to the occasion of the celebration of their china wedding.

Rebecca Wilkinson, of Brownsvalley, Ind., says: I have been in a distressed condition for three years from Nervousness Weakness of the Stomach, Dyspepsia and Indigestion until my health was gone. Chester Hodge and wife left their home north of town Saturday, taking the teams, and a part of the household goods along. One horse was left in the stable. Monday morning it was found that tramps had evidently got into house and staid ovenight. It is supposed that Mr Hodge has gone up to some point near Hamilton to get out haul logs. He had sold the crops and timber on his own place, before leaving. It is a strange move and people do not know what to think of it.

School Will Begin.

Next Monday, Oct. 1, schools will begin in Auburn, as there are at this date, Sept. 26, no more cases of diphtheria. The Board of Health requests, however, that children in whose families there has been any case of diphtheria, wait a week or two, to make it doubly sure there is no danger of further spread of the disease.

The Three I's Again.

All Auburn people will remember how near we came to getting the "Iowa Illinois and Indiana" railroad into Auburn. Many meetings were held. A company was formed and a preliminary survey made, the stakes being set to Auburn Junction. There was even a contract made for the building and equipping. But the "Chicago Improvement company" that took the contract became involved, and was finally absorbed into another company and so the road was never completed. It had been running as far as North Judson, for some time, and later was extended to Knox, in Starke county. Now, it is being completed to South Bend and is to be done by New Years.

The Talk of Europe.

A worthy theme in Europe just now, is discussing the marvelous cures by Vitaline and Nervetone, prepared by the Hall Medicine Co., of Toledo O. and for sale by all druggists. This wonderful remedy cures every form of nervous debility, nerve prostration, loss of nerve and brain power, mental depression, palpitation, sleeplessness, etc., also every form of nerve pain, headache, toothache and neuralgia, and is just such a brain feed and strength restorer as thousands need. For sale by Fischler & Son. Accept no other. 40

Records of the Chainless.

J. C. Knowles, of the K. C. W. of Brooklyn, N. Y. completed his 21st century run, Sept. 15 in 21 consecutive days without re-adjustment of years or bearings.

Mr. Knowles is making a trial for 30 century runs in 30 consecutive days, and on his 20th night his bearings were examined, and not the slighest evidence found of wear on any of the cogs. The Simplicity 47 tires are apparently as fresh as when he started. Two punctures were sustained but were each repaired on the road with a loss of but five minutes.

The New York office of the Chainless 65 Cortland St. received a letter from Copenhagen, Denmark, that an Americyclist, riding a Chainless, had just got there, making a cycle tour of Europe. He spoke so highly of the wheel, and of the Simplicity tire that the writer, asked the New York office for the agency for Copenhagen. The Chainless is popular over the world.

IF a man is out late at night, it is od protection to have a woman ong. A woman has a way of reaming that curdles a highway-an's blood.

TO ONE woman who has to put up th her husband's kin living with r, there are ten men who have to patient under the burden of their ves' relations.

A FRENCHMAN claims to have dis-vered a drug that is an infallible tidote for snake bites. That fel-w, if he values his life, will keep t of Kentucky.

THE discovery of pipes and drink-g vessels among relics of prehis-ric races may in part explain the use of their extermination. A vig-ous search will be made for cigar-te butts to confirm this theory.

IT is stated by authorities entitled credence that two-fifths of the en-e area of the United States con-sts of arid land, and that upon six ndred and sixteen million acres of is land crops could be raised if ater were supplied.

A MASSACHUSETTS woman has in-nted an envelope which it is im-ssible to open and reseal without tection. That woman's ingenuity ill bring down upon her devoted ad the maledictions of all mem-rs of her sex who are married and ost of those who hope to be.

IT is said that the follies and ex-avagances of Mrs. W. K. Vander-lt would "make a tremendous book," d that since her marriage her hus-nd has done little but follow her ound. It is to be regretted that so utiful a husband should have been d astray at last.

MEDICAL writers make it clear why ip is so fatal. They tell of hemor-agic and pyæmic or septico-pyæmic sults, with purulent and gangren-s inflammation of lung tissues and equent metastasis to other organs. ne case of hemorrhages and hema-mas in the muscular tissues, paren-ymatous, bleedings and bleedings diapedesis, pachymeningitis hem-rhagica interna, is mentioned. In any cases there is hyperæmia of the a, also meningeal infiltration and ppurative meningitis and hemor-age into the lateral ventricle, and ery frequently lobar pneumonia. apply the patient is not aware of l that is going on in his system or would perish before the learned actitioner could write the first pre-ription.

THERE is a difference in pigs. If l men are equal, all pigs are cer-inly not. The farmer who goes to the pork-business with that no-on will soon find himself a poorer nd wiser man. There's money in e raising of hogs if the work be one intelligently. They can be ade ready for market in a short me, so that quick returns can be ad—that is, if the breed is a good ne and the animals are given proper are. The last is the great stumbling lock. The majority of farmers seem imagine that hogs cannot exist ithout dirt. It is almost impossi-le to convince them to the contrary. oldy corn will not answer as well sound corn, and a weed pasture ill not keep them in as good condi-ion as a clover field. Pigs will eat nd flourish on a good deal that ould otherwise go to waste, but ven they draw the line somewhere.

A CHICAGO genius claims to have iscovered an "antiseptic powder" one harge of which is warranted to cure weevil, must, or binburn in grain, pecially in wheat. The powder is not expensive," costing only $3 for nough to treat one carload, or $25 or a quantity sufficient to cure ten ars of grain up to the correctness of ondition needed to make it acceptable to the buyer. Unfortunately for he discoverer the American wheat rop is so good in quality that no cor-ective is required, especially as the ower grades are wanted for the feed-ng of live stock. But the claim sug-gests the trouble inflicted on the bar-ley trade a few years ago by the in-troduction of a process for sulphur-ing the grain so as to make it of "good" color. The desired improve-ment in appearance was effected, but at the cost of destroying the ability of the barley to sprout in the malting process. Possibly the miller who should try to use some of the doc-tored wheat would meet with an un-satisfactory result, in which case the trade would be worse cursed than now, till the thing was discriminated out by a general refusal to meddle with the doctored stuff.

THERE is hope for the coming generation. It is predicted that our grandchildren will not have hands large enough to reach an octave on the piano.

DR. ANDERSON BROWN, one of the foremost women physicians of England, has established an industrial farm for inebriate women. The test of the practicability of outdoor life as a cure for drunkenness will be made under the auspices of the Women's Temperance Association. Fruit-growing, poultry-raising, gardening, bee-keeping, and butter-making will be among the branches taught.

THE aggregate tonnage of the mercantile marine of the British Empire is 12,427,596 tons, while that of France and Russia together only equals 1,539,507 tons. The entire number of vessels, exclusive of war ships built and under construction in the United States during the last fiscal year, was 894 of 134,394 tons while in Great Britain the figures were 318 of 718,204 tons. These are both steam and sail, but are exclusive of unrigged craft.

THERE is really no cause for surprise that ordinarily milk and all its products, especially cheese, are rich in germs—microbes—for it is a solution rich in all the elements of pabulum that all forms of life are looking for, and why shouldn't microbes like it as well as we? They do, and they generally get their first, and except for a few mean cusses among that tribe who fret our insides, we need not try to sterilize our milk or other foods, for the majority of germs are innocent, harmless, and some indeed predigest or pull apart our food substances, and make them easier for us.

IT is not generally known that the Chinese tea plant has been successfully grown in this country for some years. This season a consignment of tea from the Smith farm, near Fayette, North Carolina, was sold in New York for eighty cents a pound, and some from the Summerville gardens in South Carolina brought as high as $1 a pound. Mr. Jackon, an expert tea grower from Assam, who had charge of the Summerville plantation under Gen. De Duc, says that with negro labor he can raise tea more cheaply than is done with coolie labor in India, because of its greater reliability.

THE decision of the British Board of Agriculture against the importation of Canadian cattle stands, despite desperate efforts made to reverse it. Many of the witnesses testified that the cases examined were genuine pleuro pneumonia, while others regarded them as a disease hitherto unobserved. This puts Canadian cattle shippers in worse plight than before. The presence of pleuro pneumonia is bad enough, but it is less dreadful than the suspicion of some unknown horror which medical experts have not yet named. But we don't always credit these medical experts, and their disagreement among themselves gives a layman a chance to express the opinion that there are not so many new diseases as the doctors find new names for, and that people die of much the same diseases as they always did, with perhaps a more marked increase in the disease that used to be called "the hypos" than in anything else.

A BRIGHT young man who was raised on a farm says he would rather live in the country than in the city, if he could find as large a proportion of desirable companions in the country as in the city. He is a lover of books and of people who have some higher interests than the neighborhood gossip and the accumulation of of acres to the neglect of mental and spiritual growth. He recognizes the fact that very few thrifty farmers fail to live comfortably and lay by something every year, while the average city family does not meet expenses, but for all that he contends that the farming community where where there is any love of books or scientific investigation or any kind of mental activity is so scarce that no one without money can hope to find such a location. On the other hand, the dwellers in cities are brought more into contact with live questions of all kinds, and while they are poorer than farmers in dollars they are richer, as a rule, in the treasures that do not have to be left behind at the grave. The estimate is doubtless severe on individuals in nearly every farming community, but the fact remains that there are too many farmers with plenty of means for culture and refinement who have no sympathy whatever with such things.

Maine's Vast Territory.

The insignificant position or relative size usually given to the great State of Maine as compared to the other States of the Union on railroad maps gives very little idea of the vast territory of this great State, every acre of which is productive and habitable. The Industrial Journal says:

"A Maine lumberman estimates that the wild lands of this State would make thirteen States as large as Rhode Island, two as large as New Hampshire and Vermont, and one twice as large as Massachusetts. These lands are located in the following counties: Aroostook, 2,838,618 acres; Franklin, 589,962 acres; Hancock, 362,893 acres; Oxford, 553,654 acres; Penobscot, 827,504 acres; Picataquis, 2,000,444 acres; Somerset, 1,735,838 acres; Washington, 624,123. The spruce timber lands of Maine are worth more to-day than the pine lands fifty years ago. This statement is based on the opinion of lumbermen who have been engaged in the business for forty years. The value of these lands has been greatly enhanced by the enormous demand for pulp wood.

A TARIFF COMMISSION

AN ABSURD AND IMPRACTICABLE PLAN.

Ridiculous Scheme to Make a Tariff Bill Based on "Difference of Labor Cost"—Wanamaker's Advertisements Will Make Good Campaign Literature.

A Foolish "Voice."

The New York Voice (Prohibition paper) has been advocating a tariff commission to make and revise our tariff laws. It believes that we could, in this way, avoid the unsettling of business every time a new Congress meets and begins to discuss the tariff. The Voice says the work of such a commission would be "chiefly mathematical, to determine from cold figures what the relative labor cost in different industries is here and abroad," and "that would determine the measure of protection." The commission "is not to use its own judgment as to how much protection to give this industry or that," but simply "to ascertain a mathematical fact." The commission should be composed of "such men as Carroll D. Wright."

Evidently the Voice is not acquainted with past experience in dealing with "cold mathematical facts" in regard to difference of labor cost. All who have examined the subject and tried to state this mathematical difference of labor cost have come to the conclusion that it is impossible to state it accurately. In the first place, statistics must be obtained from producers. These producers are protected manufacturers, who would doctor their statistics, just as they now do when they go before Congressional committees. Such statistics are absolutely worthless. Even our census statistics are but rough approximations. For example, those on sugar-refining and on manufactures of shirts, collars and cuffs, in our last census, are ridiculous and grossly inaccurate.

But supposing that all protected manufacturers were honest and capable of making intelligent statistics, would any two experts agree as to the labor cost that should be considered? Take pianos. Some sixty or seventy trades are recognized in making the different parts. Most manufacturers buy actions, plates, strings, pins and other parts ready-made. Some buy cases, and do but little more than to string and tune and fit in actions. In a few cases the majority of the parts are made by one firm. It is simply impossible for any expert to determine the labor cost of making a piano and to have his conclusions accepted by any other expert.

But supposing that the exact labor cost could be determined in any industry and in any country, what foreign country would be chosen with which to compare labor costs in this country? Would we take England, where, as a rule, wages are highest and actual labor cost lowest; or India and China, where wages are lowest and labor cost, in most manufactures, highest? The impracticability of the whole scheme must be apparent to all who have thought on the question. Even Carroll D. Wright could not make a scientific tariff bill on this basis. He admits that his own statistics in cost of production are unreliable. In his report on cost of production of textiles and glass, published in 1891, he says that, "It was found upon careful study that but few industries could be brought under investigation in the lines specified in the law, the most practicable work being limited to iron and steel, and the materials of which iron is made, the textiles and glass."

But suppose that such a commission would reach the conclusion (which is undoubtedly true) that labor cost is often lower in this than in any other country, what then? Are we to levy an export duty to cover the advantage in our favor? In 1881 Secretary of State James G. Blaine said, in his exhaustive report on the subject of cotton goods, "undoubtedly the inequalities in the wages of English and American operatives are more than equalized by the greater efficiency of the latter and their longer hours of labor."

There should then be absolutely free trade, or something worse, in cotton goods. As we make boots and shoes, stoves, agricultural implements, pig iron and refined sugar cheaper than they are made in any other country, all of these, with hundreds of other articles, would have to go on the free list, or, perhaps, be subject to an export duty. Under such a system (and it would be in strict accord with the Republican platform) we would, in fact, have practical free trade in most articles extensively raised or produced in this country, and would have heavy duties only on such articles as coffee, tea and tropical fruits, nuts and dyewoods that cannot be produced here at anything like the same labor cost as in other countries.

It is absurd to hope to settle the tariff question with any such commission and in any such way. Congress is the only body with power to levy taxes. Every report or recommendation of a tariff commission would have to be acted upon by Congress, and the debate could be as prolonged as under the present system. "The power to tax is the power to destroy." The people should never let go of the taxation strings attached to their Congressmen. The tariff question must and shall be settled in the old-fashioned way. Protected monopoly is dying hard, but it is surely dying.

Business Men on the Tariff.

Politicians who have preached high tariffs until their place in public life depends on the success of McKinleyism are not the authorities on the effects of the new law that business men are. Mr. Wanamaker, for example, as a Republican politician, believes that anything short of the McKinley tariff means disaster to the country, but as a business man he must recognize facts and he advertises that dry goods have been made vastly cheaper by the new law. Here are some choice bits from a recent advertisement of his:

Forty-one cases more taken out of bond yesterday—under the last tariff. And so the stream of fresh new goods flows in day after day, like fresh blood into the body, and thus the business, like the body, gets its good health.

It is surprising that any one supposed that the common people—Abraham Lincoln said it better, "the plain people"—could not count for themselves. That reduced charges at the custom-house would make no difference in prices!

What was the tariff fight about if it were not to put down prices?

At the first go-off it certainly does that—at least it does it in this store. Five per cent or 10 per cent or 20 per cent less duty means something less in cost. It does not mean full 5, 10 or 20 per cent. less price, because the reduction is only on the duties paid. Whatever it is, however, that part comes off the price.

Similar testimony comes from all parts of the country. A newspaper published in New Jersey prints an advertisement of a store at Deckertown in that State headed: "The New Tariff Bill and How It Affects Us." Then the advertisement gives a comparison of prices charged by the proprietor under the McKinley law and the new law.

For example, muslins for which he was charging 10 cents he is now selling at 8 cents. Calicoes have been reduced from 5 and 6 cents to 3½ cents, percales from 12½ and 10 cents to 10 cents, satteens from 18 cents to 12½ cents, mackerel from 12 cents to 9 cents a pound, flour from $4.40 to $4.25 a barrel, and fruit jars from 70 cents to 60 cents a dozen.

There is no better object-lesson than is contained in these advertisements of fact that the consumers have been paying the tax and that the abolition and reduction of tariff taxes mean a reduction of the cost of living. Nor can the mournful groans of political Cassandras overcome the cheering influences of such advertisements as Wanamaker and other intelligent men are publishing in the newspapers.—New York World.

Wanamaker Forgets Politics.

Wanamaker leaves the Philadelphia public in no doubt as to his conviction that a tariff is a tax, and that the removal of duties lowers the prices of goods. For a number of days past he has been advertising the great "bargains" which he is enabled to offer by reason of the new law. This morning, for example, he made such announcements as the following:

Everything that free wool and tariff influences can do to put prices on a lower level has been much more than discounted in the handsome new dress stuffs that are crowding to the counters every day. This fifty-inch serge, for instance—black and navy blue, worth 50 cents by any measure of dressgoods value, never before heard of at less—the price is 37½ cents. This all-wool camel's-hair serge—navy blue, black, brown, modes—only a little while ago we could barely meet the demand at 50 cents; the price is 25 cents.

The ex-Postmaster General's advertisements have attracted the attention of his former chief's home organ, and provoked an outburst of wrath. Mr. Harrison's spokesman, the editor of the Indianapolis Journal, even goes so far as to say:

In trying to make the public believe that these and other reductions named in the advertisements are due to the new tariff, Mr. Wanamaker, or his advertising agent, is guilty of disingenuousness amounting almost to lying.

But there is no occasion for anger. Even if the new tariff does make things cheaper, is it not true that "a cheap coat means a cheap man under the coat," and will not the American people rise in a body at the first opportunity against any party which thus threatens to cheapen humanity?

Put True Tariff-Reformers on Guard.

It is of vast importance to the Democratic party that all its conventions should make strong tariff-reform platforms and nominate only faithful and able advocates of tariff-reform. Nothing has more disgusted the country and injured Democracy than its divided counsels on this issue of supreme moment. Of six Democratic Congressmen from Louisiana four voted against the Wilson bill on Feb. 1. At the same time one of California's three, one of New Jersey's eight and six of New York's twenty Democratic Congressmen voted against that bill.

EXPENSE OF CONGRESS

WHAT IT COSTS THE COUNTRY FOR ONE SESSION.

Salaries of Senators, Representatives and Their Clerks Foot Up a Large Sum—Various Contingent Funds for the Comfort of Lawmakers.

May Soon Reach $5,000,000.

Washington correspondence:

The session of Congress just closed was perhaps the most expensive Congressional experience that the country has ever had. By this is meant not the cost of what Congress did, nor the appropriations that it made for the general administration of the government, but for the actual cost of the two houses themselves. It is an interesting study to watch the growth of expenditures that the two houses of Congress are willing to appropriate for, when the expenditure is for their own personal recompense, comfort and pleasure. The expense in some of the collateral channels is simply appalling, and it is something that will one day cause a wild spirit of resentment throughout the country. There is too much money spent at the annual sessions of Congress and entirely too much recklessness in appropriating the public funds for the purpose. The great waste of money is naturally in the direction of salaries. Both wings of the Capitol are loaded and overloaded with employes. There are clerks to do this, clerks to do that, and clerks to supervise the other clerks. The fight and scramble and constant wrangle and furious contention is to get on the pay roll.

The earlier Congresses rarely cost as much as $1,000,000 per session. Here is what the fifty-third Congress appropriated for the last session of its term. It must be remembered that this is the short session, covering practically but three months, which expires March 4, 1895. The bulk of the appropriation, however, covers the whole period of the fiscal year, for most of the salaries are annual.

COST OF A SENATE SESSION.
Senators' salaries	$ 440,000
Senators' mileage	45,000
Compensation of officers, clerks, messengers	426,318
Clerks to Senators, not otherwise provided for	39,600
Contingent expenses	17,000
Miscellaneous items	116,500
Total for Senate	$1,083,818
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.
Salaries of members	$1,800,000
Mileage of members	150,000
Officers, clerks, messengers in the service of the House	374,000
Clerks to members and delegates	97,000
Contingent expenses	108,000
Official reporters of debates	21,000
Expenses of Congressional library	74,000
Expenses of botanic garden	19,800
Expenses of capitol police	38,900
Total for House	$2,666,700
Expenses for both houses	$3,750,518

This does not include $18,000 appropriated by the two houses jointly for the salary of the Public Printer and his clerks and the miscellaneous expenses of the Public Printer's office, nor does it include the enormous expense of printing the public documents, the Congressional Record, and all manner of public printing ordered by Congress. There are thousands of people employed in the printing office of whom it is impossible to get any record. They are employed on piece work, and it is impossible to estimate what will be needed to pay them. There is not a department of the government that does not include in its estimates a smaller or greater amount for the printing of its own department, and that brings up the cost of the printing bureau to figures which it would be impossible to follow out.

Great Expense for Clerks.

The grossest item in the Senate and House bill of expense are the charges for clerk hire. It long ago became a byword that there often were more clerks sitting in the Senate in their employers' chairs than there were Senators. It is true. When Senators feel that they can afford to appoint their sons, their brothers, their brothers-in-law and any other male members of their family to act as their secretary and draw the pitiful $1,0 a month, they ought not to be ashamed of their presence on the floor, and perhaps they are not. There are Senators, and many of them who have not only placed their sons on the pay-rolls, but who have installed wives and daughters as their private secretaries and stenographers, thus keeping the amount allowed for clerk hire all in the family. And among the Senators who have thus provided for their dependents are those best known to the country as leaders. There is no way of getting at the names of the people who draw those salaries, but it is an open secret that fully one-half the Senators have their sons or some member of their family on the pay-roll. Perhaps nobody should blame the Senators of either party for thus aiding in the support of their dependents, for they have an illustrious example in the Vice President of the United States, whose first official act after taking oath was to appoint his son his private secretary.

While the House of Representatives is in a general way more costly than the Senate, that fact must be attributed to its greater membership, but the House is learning fast. For years it has been trying to have a corps of clerks, one for each member, like those appointed by the Senate. It is only within the past year that the Senate would consent to this, but finally through means of a deal it was accomplished. It is the costliest innovation that the House has made in its expenses in many years. It involves, in fact, so much money that every method of disguising the real expenditure is employed. There are 360 members of the House, of whom about 100, not being chairmen of committees, are entitled to this clerical benefit. Under the new rule each member, not a chairman, is entitled to $100 per month during the session for clerk hire. Care was taken in the wording of the resolution that the members shall not appoint a clerk to draw that salary, but that he should draw that sum himself and use it as he sees fit in hiring clerical help. This serves a double purpose. First it keeps a lot of names off the pay-roll, where it is not desirable to have them, and again, if a Congressman does not want to employ a clerk, not needing one, he can draw the money and put it in his own pocket, and it is an open secret that many of them do it. Nothing since the famous back-pay scandal years ago has grated so unpleasantly upon the Congressional sense of honor as this petty means of adding to the Congressional perquisites. As will be seen, the appropriation for this clerical help is $97,000, but that is intended simply to cover the short term of Congress. During the session of Congress just ended there was expended more than $200,000. To be exact, $226,500.

The Packing Box Item.

There are other expenses in both branches of Congress which seem equally large. For instance, the item of contingent expenses, $108,000, is composed largely of stationery, $51,000 being appropriated for that alone. There is another item in the contingent account which always makes a great deal of fun, and that is the item of packing boxes. Every Senator and every Member is entitled, when he goes home, to have three boxes made in which to pack his books and papers. These boxes are made under contract. Each set consists of two large boxes and one small one. Those in the Senate are made elaborately. The cost of making these boxes is not so much. Those for the Senators cost about $1,200, those for the House cost about $4,000, but their actual cost is but a trifle compared with what it costs the postoffice department to transport the boxes and their contents about the country. Under the franking law each Senator and member can frank anything he pleases that is transportable in a postal car. When these Congressional boxes are filled, they weigh from 100 to 300 pounds. All that is necessary to secure them transmission through the mails is to paste on them one corner of a Congressional envelope with the member's frank made with a rubber stamp. During the last days of Congress every postal car that went out of Washington was jammed to the roof with this deadhead, dead-weight stuff. On two nights the Pennsylvania Road sent out two extra postal cars which contained nothing but this class of deadhead matter franked by members of Congress.

The Botanic Garden, while nominally a public institution, is really kept up for the sole benefit of members of Congress. It costs nearly $20,000 a year. Senators and members are the sole beneficiaries, for the reason that they alone can procure cut flowers, plants, cuttings, or bulbs for propagation. The Capitol police is a necessary adjunct, although why it should cost $3[illegible],000 a year to properly guard the Capitol Building it is hard to say.

And from year to year it is growing. Every Congress finds some new necessity, some new comfort, some new perquisite or some other new way of spending money. If it is not one thing it is another. If it is not a new $100 clerkship it is a new horse and wagon or an additional bureau or a better packing box or a larger collection of printed books for distribution or more garden seeds or more roots and plants. Taking the appropriations as made for the next short session of Congress as a basis, we may soon expect to see each session of Congress, no matter which party is in power, for they are both alike in that respect, cost the American people something like $5,000,000. As it is to-day, it is the most expensive legislative body on the face of the earth. There is nothing to equal it anywhere. The most extravagant monarchies of Europe, while they squander money upon their royal families, and in proper maintaining of royal dignity, are exceedingly chary of their legislative expenses. The British Parliament does not cost one-third the amount expended by the American Congress.

SHOWERS IMPROVE PASTURES.

Late Corn Also Promises a Larger Yield Than Had Been Anticipated.

The reports of the condition of the crops throughout the country received and compiled by the weather bureau at Chicago are as follows:

Illinois—Temperature, except in central portion, above normal; rainfall above and sunshine below. Frost in northern portion; no damage. Corn maturing fast; chinch bugs damaging some sections. Decided improvement in pastures. Ground in excellent condition for plowing and seeding.

Indiana—Showers have improved pastures and gardens in most sections and seeding is progressing rapidly. Corn is maturing slowly and is filling well; much in shock and most corn free from frost.

Wisconsin—Rain has been general in all sections. Grass shows a remarkable growth and fall feed is abundant. Potatoes improving. Corn turning out better than was expected. Cranberries nearly all picked. Considerable wheat and rye sown.

Minnesota—Temperature above normal. Nights cool, with frequent frosts, which only damaged garden truck. More rain needed. Fall plowing progressing rapidly. Potatoes being dug; yield light.

Iowa—Corn generally safe from frost. More than the usual amount of plowing has been done. Pastures and late potatoes show marked improvement.

South Dakota—High winds have delayed thrashing during the week, but it is nearly finished now. Frost has killed all vegetation that had not matured.

Kansas—Abundant rains in south half of the State and lighter rains in the north half, with much cloudy, cool weather, have greatly improved pastures, gardens, meadows and orchards. Plowing for a large acreage of wheat. Feeding begun.

Nebraska—Very little change in crop conditions. Rain much needed for fall plowing and seeding. Frost did little damage.

Oklahoma—Weather cool and pleasant. Copious rains fell everywhere, with the exception of limited areas in the north portions of central section, where the ground is too dry for plowing and chinch bugs are damaging forage crops. Some wheat sown. Late crops doing well. Grass will make good late hay and pasturage.

Missouri—Plowing and seeding progressing well, with soil in good condition except in some southern counties, where they were retarded by heavy rains. Pastures, turnips, late potatoes and considerable late corn greatly improved.

Arkansas—Weather very unfavorable. Cotton seriously injured by rust, rot, shedding and worms. Opening slowly and picking not general yet. Corn will be a good crop. Potatoes, pastures and fall gardens fine.

MORTON IS NAMED.

New York Republicans Want the Ex-Vice President for Governor.

Ex-Vice President Morton was nominated for governor of New York by the Republican State convention at Saratoga on the first ballot. Gen. B. F. Tracy in an extended speech placed in nomination ex-Vice President Morton. Col. Baxter of Elmira placed in nomination J. Sloat Fassett. Silas B. Dutcher of Kings County nominated Gen. Stewart L. Woodford. John S. Wise of New York, formerly of Virginia, seconded Morton's nomination. E. A. Nash of Cattaraugus, named Gen. Butterfield. Ex-Congressman Parker of St. Lawrence County presented the name of Judge Leslie W. Russell. Cries for a vote followed and the chairman ordered the roll to be called by counties. Before Ontario was reached Morton had been nominated, and when the vote was finished the clerk, amid great confusion, announced: "Morton, 532½; Fassett, 69; Woodford, 40; Butterfield, 29; Russell, 20; Bliss, 40½, and Arkell, 1." The nomination of Morton was made unanimous. Charles T. Saxton was nominated for Lieutenant Governor on the first ballot. A feature of the meeting was the enthusiasm caused when J. Sloat Fassett was mentioned as a candidate, but it ended with a demonstration, for Fassett was not in evidence when the votes were counted. The platform denounces recent tariff legislation and the present administration in general.

My Big Brother.

I wish that my big brother's here;
He comes home jes 'bout onst a year.
For where he lives 's an orful ways
An' cars can't come in free whole days;
But when he's here I laugh an' laugh
Till I'm 'bout dead—more'n half.

Last year, soon's he unpacked his trunk,
I frowed a pillow right kerplunk;
Nen he frowed back an' nen us boys
All frowed an' made the biggest noise
Until we made him say "enough"
An' tell us we were jes' the stuff.

We played some he's our big horse Jack
An' nen he rided us on his back;
But onst I falled off on my head,
'Cause he scared at the cat, he said—
I jes' got straps down off the shelf
An' tied him to behave hisself.

One day we played that we was bears,
An' runned him up an' down the stairs
Till ma said she'd jes' punish us
For making such an orful fuss;
An' nen she tooked him 'cross her knee,
An' laughed an' spanked him—yes, siree!

Onst ma gived us some dough to bake
On top the stove, jes' like a cake,
An' nen she said that we could try
To make ourselves an apple pie;
Nen when it cooked, we runned away
An' et it all up in the hay.

He wished he's small again like me
So he could climb our cherry tree.
I s'pose he's sorry he's so old
An' could do things 'thout being told.
For lots of times when he was here
He looked that way—he was so queer.

He'd stand an' talk to our old cow
An' ask her how she's tended now;
He'd look at everythinz he'd made—
The places where the chickens laid,
The pigeon coop, the old wood box,
That somehow shuts itself and locks.

Nen every place he used to play,
He'd go to see 'bout every day;
Down to the ice house, by the stairs
He'd go there lots—more'n anywheres—
An' there he'd stand an' look an' look,
Jes' like he's readin' in a book.

I s'pose he's thinking, for, you know,
He used to play there wif his beau—
A-making pies an' lettin' on
They's keepin' house like any one.
He used to say she was his wife
And cut her name there wif his knife.

When they'd come slow-like up the walk
Ma said they'd catch their hands an' talk
'Bout what they'd do when they got grown
An' had a big house of their own;
But sen, it never did come true,
Jes' like they said—he's sorry, too!

For he'd take flowers on the hill
Nen go down there an' keep as still;
Or else he'd look 't album where
There's an old faded one of her,
Mor'n onst I listened, and he said
Out loud: "Why, Annie, are you dead?"

I s'pose he thought she'd hear him speak
An' see the tears run down his cheek.
Say, don't you think it's funny how
He jes' remembers 'bout her now?
For he's a great big man, you know,
An' they were little years ago.

I wish some bird or fairy bright
Would bring him while I sleep some night;
I wish he'd come right off to-day;
I'd hold him tight and make him stay.
For all of us jes' feel so good
When he comes home—I wish he would.

The Right Bait.

"Papa," said Benny Bloobumper, who knew his father's weakness, "you know all about fishing, don't you?"

"Yes, my son," replied the elder Bloobumper, graciously. "There is very little about that gentle sport with which I am not familiar."

"You know all about the right sort of bait to use, don't you?"

"Certainly."

"That's what I was telling Freddie Fangle, and we agreed to leave something about fishing for you to decide. We had a discussion about it."

"Well, Benny, I am very glad to see you taking such an interest in fishing, as well as to see such confidence in your father's judgment. What was the point in which you and Freddy differed?"

"I don't know as we differed exactly. Freddy didn't seem to quite agree with me, though."

"State the question, Benny."

"Well, fish run in schools, sometimes, don't they, papa?"

"Yes."

"That's what I told Freddy."

"Didn't he believe it?"

"Oh, yes, he believed that all right."

"Well, I told him that when fish ran in schools the proper bait to use was bookworms. Now ain't I right, papa?"

Mr. Bloobumper reached for his slipper, and Benny disappeared out of doors.

While Milking the Cows.

Charles Dudley Warner tells a story of how, when a boy, he used to repeat Bryant's poem "Thanatopsis" while he milked the cows.

"I learned that poem when I was a small boy," he says. "I liked it because I was a farmer boy and the poem was all about nature.

"I remember well how ashamed I was when a cousin of mine told me how he found me in the barn milking and repeating the poem. He had crept into the barn when I was not looking and stood at a door watching me while I worked and talked away to myself. Then I was a small, barefoot boy, sitting on a milking stool and saying over the verses of Bryant's great poem.

"The cousin thought it all a great joke, so that night at the tea table he told the whole story, while I felt my face grow crimson with shame.

"But I like the old poem still. Whenever I say it over I think of the old milking stool and the cows in the barn at home."

Bearing-Down Feeling.

The portrait presented here is that of Mrs. J. M. Bender, who lives on the old York Road at Nicetown, Pa. She has been for many years in very poor health.

She had falling of the womb, causing that bearing down feeling and other forms of female weakness, with headache, severe backache, pains all over her body, and serious kidney trouble.

Her blood was in such a bad state that physicians said she had dropsy. Nearly discouraged, she tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and to her great surprise it made her a well woman. She now wishes to tell women all over the world to take the Vegetable Compound and be well.

The Greatest Medical Discovery of the Age.

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, OF ROXBURY, MASS.,

Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston. Send postal card for book.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the right quantity is taken.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it. Read the label.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Sold by all Druggists.

FANCIES OF FASHION.

GREAT VARIETY IN THE STYLES FOR THIS SEASON.

No Relaxation in the Search for Novelties in Dress—The High Appreciation Which Oddities Receive—House Dresses Daintily Adorned—Colors in Great Variety.

Dame Fashion's Doings.

New York correspondence:

EVERY possible means which can be utilized to give distinct character to a costume is welcomed by the designers of fall dresses. While cool weather has necessarily shelved many of the sorts of ornamentation which prevailed during the summer, there is no relaxation in the eager search for novelties. The gauzy notions of August are replaced by others which are suited to the approaching cold weather, but unusualness is as valued in the latter as in the former, and the danger of overdoing the oddity of any one feature or the whole of a costume is as slight as it was before.

As an example of the high appreciation which oddities receive, the house dress pictured in the initial is eloquent, for it was considered by its designer as nothing short of a work of high art. Of its novelty there can be no doubt; of its beauty there may be different opinions, but that is the point; the stranger is welcome because he is a stranger, and without much regard for his appearance. A simple gray woollen suiting is used for this dress, and its gored skirt is three and a half yards wide, and is lined with alpaca. The back is laid in pleats facing each other. Lining and stuff are cut in equal length and width for the bodice. It has a tiny basque and a full plastron which hangs down below the waist line, coming inside the buttoned extra fronts, which are sewed into the side seam, and is finished with a narrow black lace ruffle. A deep collar comes across the shoulders, with the ends tucked into the loose pa t in front. A plain standing collar and narrow sleeves complete the costume.

House dresses of the neglige order have ever been daintily adorned, and when one can be constructed which combines delicate stuffs and new sorts of garniture, the result is especially pleasing. The costume next shown does this and is well worth copying. As sketched it is made from white cashmere and mousseline chiffon. The back breadths are gathered in the waist and flare considerably in the skirt portion. At the top they are gathered to a round yoke. The front breadths hook beneath the draped part, which is left loose to show the pleated panel of mousseline. A draped fichu of white cashmere comes over the shoulders and is fastened with jeweled ribbon, from which three strings of paste pearls extend to the shoulder, where they fasten with a rhinestone buckle. Jewel embroidery also borders the drapery. The sleeves are of pleated chiffon, and a white cashmere ruching shows at the neck. If reproduction of this dress is attempted, and a great many stuffs are well suited to it, the jeweled ornamentation might be omitted. In the original this trimming looked well, but there is so much danger in the use of such things of cheapening the effect of the whole by a profusion of mock gems, that the amateur needs beware.

Collars and neck fixings are in great variety, because they are so generally used. Stocks threaten to be all the rage and so will the poor short-necked folk who have to go into them. The easiest way to accomplish a stock at home is to make a high standing folded collar with stiff foundations which fastens in the back. To its edges at the back are attached soft scarf pieces. After the stiff collar is adjusted, the scarf pieces cross each other, come to the front and there tie, the stock part appearing above the bow. These stocks are every bit as becoming and correct as the expensive ones from the stores, and they can be made of left-over gauze, crepe, chiffon, taffeta, satin, moire, etc. So it is best to save the leavings of the summer wardrobe. Having had a good season's wear out of a chiffon dress, you are really so much ahead if out of the whole gown you can get the necessary two yards to make a stock. The very swellest collar will be black moire, a modification of the directoire bow that captured everyone last season, and the old bow can be utilized for the scarf pieces of the new stock. For a black stock, moire may be used in the stock part, and black gauze, chiffon or crepe may form the scarf, but so far there is no encouragement for the woman who would like to make her stock of one color and the tie of another.

For those who do not like the stock there is the pretty folded collar, which seems likely to be popular forever. This style of collar now fastens at the back, where a spreading bow is added, so wide in "wing and wing" fashion that from the front the tips of the loops show prettily, with a good deal the same effect that is produced by side loops.

For dressier indoor wear than either of the costumes already described is that of the third illustration. Composed of white linen muslin figured with delicately tinted flowers, it is trimmed with plain and embroidered tulle. The skirt has a slight train and is edged with a narrow tulle ruffle around the bottom. Figured muslin is used for the bodice, and it has separate fronts let into the side seams, which are caught just above the bust. There is a short basque of embroidered tulle and a long fichu and sleeve frills of the same. The front of the bodice is of the tulle, the back of the figured goods.

A pretty dress accessory can be made of black satin in the shape of an elaborated fichu with a regular pointed fichu back that fits down under the scarf pieces. The latter cross in surplice fashion over the bust, pass about the waist and tie at the side in a great bow with drooping scarf ends. The special elaboration consists in epaulettes of satin set on the fichu, to hang over the sleeves of the gown with which the Marie Stuart surplice is worn. At first sight it is difficult to tell just what it is, whether a bolero jacket, an epaulette or a sleeve. It has a collar and seems to be a jacket with fronts and back just like a simple bolero, then it becomes infected with the eccentricities suggested by sleeve elaboration. Instead of going under the arm for the sides of a simple-minded bolero, it goes right over them and develops a lot of folds and fancies on the way, letting the sleeve of the gown show above at the shoulder and underneath. It is pretty and falls in well with the present fancy for oddities about the shoulders.

No daintier shoulder trimming could be devised than that seen in the neglige of the next sketch. Here the stuff is pink and white striped linen batiste, and the garment has long basques and a yoke imitated by the lace bertha, which runs down the front in a cascade. The fullness is taken in the waist in back, and the sleeves are finished by lace frills. Either pink or white China silk may be used as lining, and a bow of the same shade of ribbon ties the standing collar in front. The jacket hooks invisibly in front.

Fatal Chewing Gum.

A mystery of the morgue, which was supposed to involve an unaccountable suicide by morphine, has been solved by the discovery that death was caused by chewing gum, says the San Francisco Examiner.

The victim was a young medical student, and the rather remarkable case is made more noticeable by the fact that the boy of 18 years who came to his death through an inordinate passion for gum was buried the other day in potter's field.

Hubert E. Perry died quiet suddenly and unexpectedly in an upstairs room at No. 1821 Mason street.

An autopsy was performed, and it revealed only a hard clogging of the intestines at one place. The stomach was sent to H. E. Miller for analysis, and the chemist went to work. He went through all his elaborate tests for various poisons without finding trace of any. He did find something unusual in the stomach though, and that was a half teacupful of gum pellets.

The young man had evidently been in the habit of chewing gum and then swallowing it. Nearly all gum is paraffine mixed with some flavoring and coloring substances, and paraffine is an absolute neutral body, insoluable in anything and affected by nothing except mechanically. The wads of gum were exactly as when swallowed. It became plain that the gum, so strangely disposed of, had accumulated and clogged the digestive organs. It had caused some pain, and finally a sudden congestion of the lungs and other organs, which quickly proved fatal.

A DETROIT BUILDER.

HE TELLS A REMARKABLE STORY OF HIS LIFE.

CAME TO DETROIT ABOUT FORTY YEARS AGO.

Levi Elsey's Experience Worthy Serious Attention.

(From the Detroit Evening News.)

Away out Gratiot avenue, far from the din and turmoil of the business center, there are many attractive homes. The intersecting streets are wide, clean and shaded by large leaf-covered trees, and the people you meet are typical of industry, economy and honest toil. There are many pretty residences, but none more inviting in its neatness and home-like comfort than that of Mr. Levi Elsey, the well-known builder and contractor, at 74 Moran street, just off Gratiot. Mr. Elsey is an old resident of Detroit, having moved here about forty years ago. He has erected hundreds of houses in different parts of the city, and points with pride to such buildings as the Newberry & McMullan and Campau blocks, in which he displayed his ability as Superintendent.

"I have seen Detroit grow from a village to a city," he observed yesterday, in conversation with the writer, "and I don't think there are many towns in America to-day equal to it in point of beauty. I know almost everybody in the city, and an incident which recently happened in my life has interested all my friends.

"It is now about eight years ago since I was stricken down with my first case of illness. One cold, blustering day I was down town, and through my natural carelessness at that time I permitted myself to get chilled right through. When I arrived home that evening I felt a serious pain in my left leg. I bathed it that night, but by morning I found it had grown worse. In fact, it was so serious that I sent for my family physician, and he informed me that I was suffering from varicose veins. My leg swelled up to double its natural size and the pain increased in volume. The agony was simply awful. I was laid up and never left my bed for eight weeks. At times I felt as though I would grow frantic with pain. My leg was bandaged and was propped up in the bed at an angle of 30 degrees, in order to keep the blood from flowing to my extremities.

"I had several doctors attending me, but I believe my own judgment helped me better than theirs. After a siege of two months I could move around; still I was on the sick list, and had to doctor myself for years. I was never really cured, and suffered any amount of anguish.

"About two years ago I noticed an article in the Evening News about my friend, Mr. Northrup, the Woodward avenue merchant. In an interview with him he stated that he had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and that they cured him. I knew him very well, having built his house out Woodward avenue, and I thought I would follow his suggestion. I must confess I did so with marvelous success. From the time I began to take the Pink Pills I felt myself growing to be a new man. They acted on me like a magical stimulant. The pain departed, and I soon was as strong and healthy as ever. Before trying the Pink Pills I had used any amount of other medicine without any noticeable benefit. But the Pills cured me, and I was myself again.

"When a person finds himself relieved and enjoying health he is apt to expose himself again to another attack of illness. Some three months ago I stopped taking the Pink Pills, and from the day I did so, I noticed a change in my condition. A short time since I renewed my habit of taking them with the same beneficial results which met me formerly. I am again nearly as strong as ever, although I am a man about 56 years of age. I tell you, sir, the Pink Pills are a most wonderful medicine, and if they do as well in other cases as they did in mine they are the best in the world. I freely recommend them to any sufferer."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, and all forms of weakness, either in male or female. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post-paid on receipt of price (50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50—they are never sold in bulk or by the 100), by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

THE HIGHEST AWARD.

Royal Baking Powder in Strength and Value 20 Per Cent. Above Its Nearest Competitor.

The Royal Baking Powder has the enviable record of having received the highest award for articles of its class—greatest strength, purest ingredients, most perfectly combined—wherever exhibited in competition with others. In the exhibitions of former years, at the Centennial, at Paris, Vienna and at the various State and industrial fairs, where it has been exhibited, judges have invariably awarded the Royal Baking Powder the highest honors.

At the recent World's Fair the examination for the baking powder awards were made by the experts of the chemical division of the Agricultural Department of Washington. The official report of the tests of the baking powders which were made by this department for the specific purpose of ascertaining which was the best, and which has been made public, shows the leavening strength of the Royal to be 160 cubic inches of carbonic gas per ounce of powder. Of the cream of tartar baking powders exhibited at the Fair, the next highest in strength thus tested contained but 133 cubic inches of leavening gas. The other powders gave an average of 111. The Royal, therefore, was found of 20 per cent. greater leavening strength than its nearest competitor, and 44 per cent. above the average of all the other tests. Its superiority in other respects, however, in the quality of the food it makes as to fineness, delicacy and wholesomeness, could not be measured by figures.

It is these high qualities, known and appreciated by the women of the country for so many years, that have caused the sales of the Royal Baking Powder, as shown by statistics, to exceed the sales of all other baking powders combined.

Look Toward the Light.

In a sick room there was a little rose-bush in a pot in the window. There was only one rose on the bush, and its face was turned full toward the light. This fact was noticed and spoken of, when one said that the rose would look no other way save toward the light. Experiments had been made with it; it had been turned away from the window, its face toward the gloom of the interior, but in a little time it would resume its old position. With wonderful persistence it refused to keep its face toward the darkness and insisted on ever looking toward the light. The rose has its lesson for us.

We should never allow ourselves to face toward life's gloom. We should never sit down in the shadows of any sorrow and let the night darken over us into the gloom of despair. We should turn our faces away toward the light and quicken every energy for braver duty, and truer, holier service. Grief should always make us better and give us new skill and power; it should make our hearts softer, our spirits kindlier, our touch more gentle; it should teach us its holy lessons, and we should learn them, and then go on with sorrow's sacred ordination upon us to new love and better service.

Why He Didn't Call.

A young man dashed into a Mission barber shop one day last week and announced that he wanted a shave and wanted it quick. The chairs were all full, in one being what appeared to be a boy having a head of short curly hair trimmed. The young man stepped behind that particular chair and remarked:

"Say, kid, why don't you get your hair cut in the afternoon instead of crowding a shop at night when working men have to get barbered?"

There was no response, and as a barber yelled "Next!" the young man dropped into another chair.

"Gim'me a quick shave. I don't need it much, but I'm going to see my girl and she don't like to have her face whiskered. She kind a likes to rub her face against mine, but she can't stand whiskers. Gee!" and the young man nearly fainted.

The person he had addressed as "kid" was the girl that didn't like whiskers. She had just been having her short curls trimmed for the evening, but the young man didn't call after that glance she gave him.—San Francisco Post.

"Hail to the Chief!"

This is half the title of an old song. The balance is, "Who in triumph advances." The public, the press and the medical profession chant this refrain as especially applicable to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, chief among American remedies and preventives for malaria, constipation, dyspepsia, liver complaint, nervousness, unquiet sleep, rheumatic twinges, and the troubles incident to advanced age. It is also universally recognized as a reliable tonic and appetizer. As a family medicine particularly suitable to emergencies it has no equal. The nervous, the feeble seek its aid, and the happiest results follow. The convalescent, the aged and the infirm derive infinite benefit from its use. Against the influences of impure air, bad water, unaccustomed food, overwork and exposure it is a genuine preventive.

But They Were Paid the $1,400.

Some odd things happen in connection with the fire insurance business, and one of these occurred when a Chicago office paid out $1,400 on a risk which had been partially destroyed. The husband was unable to write his own name on the receipt, and the wife, with her daughter, brought the policy to the office to secure the money. She announced that her husband was unable to write his name, but that he had given her power of attorney. This was looked up and found to be correct, and then the agent asked the wife to sign. At that the daughter stepped forward and took the pen. "Why, your mother must sign this," said the agent. "Yes, but mother can't write," the girl replied. So the mother made her mark with the power of attorney, and the daughter did the writing.

The Convalescent's Friend.

Such is the name given Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier. It gives strength to the tottering limbs, it whips up the flagging heart, it restores warmth to the body just snatched from the icy grasp of death, it infuses life into the half empty veins, and new vital force into the limp and exhausted nerves.

THE trans-Atlantic steamship which succeeds in smashing the record may have jeopardized the lives of all the passengers, but, in view of the many thousand dollars' worth of free advertising it secures, the owners probably consider the jeopardizing is justified.

A SMART man is one who gets rid of worry whenever it is possible. A smart man is one who refuses to worry over trifles that are natural to life, but saves his energy for more important affairs.

DELUSION is born of ignorance; doubt of knowledge.

The Subject of Immoral Literature.

The whole subject of immoral literature and pictures is a queer and puzzling one and full of inconsistencies. Some books that are practically harmless are excluded from the mails in this and other countries, while other books that are really vile go scott free. Pictures that are almost spiritual are rejected from art galleries, while prints in the highest degree suggestive may be seen displayed in Chestnut Street windows. What one considers ideal and grand, another looks upon as degrading and vulgar, and the place of any particular book or picture appears to be largely a matter of opinion or favor. One of the most popular and refined illustrators—a woman—has drawn the pictures for a French book that is as broad as anything in print. In Melbourne they have been debating whether Sarah Grand's "Heavenly Twins" should be excluded from the mails. At Ocean Grove, a religious resort, the flashiest novels are sold in stacks from the news-stand counters. There is hardly a prominent news stand in this country where you may find a republication of a book that many years ago created a sensation and was tabooed everywhere as grossly and dangerously immoral.—Philadelphia Times.

Hidden Treasures in Genoa.

For centuries it has been the belief of the common people of Genoa that treasures were hidden in the bed of the Polcavera, a stream that runs by the city. Recently a carter in digging for sand in the bed of the dried-up torrent, came upon hidden treasurer, of which, so far, coin of the face value of 60,000 francs has been found, and the supply is not yet exhausted. By the Italian law half of this goes to the State and half to the finder. The value of the coin is far above the sum mentioned; many of them are rare and of great artistic value; they are chiefly gold and belong to the period between 1460 and 1550, that is, the reigns of Louis XI., Charles VIII., Louis XII., and Francis I., and are all either French or Genoese. The Genoese ducats are especially rare and will fetch high prices. The search for treasure is going on under police supervision.

A STRANGE CASE.

How an Enemy was Foiled.

The following graphic statement will be read with intense interest: "I cannot describe the numb, creepy sensation that existed in my arms, hands and legs. I had to rub and beat those parts until they were sore, to overcome in a measure the dead feeling that had taken possession of them. In addition, I had a strange weakness in my back and around my waist, together with an indescribable 'gone' feeling in my stomach. Physicians said it was creeping paralysis, from which, according to their universal conclusion, there is no relief. Once it fastens upon a person, they say, it continues its insidious progress until it reaches a vital point and the sufferer dies. Such was my prospect. I had been doctoring a year and a half steadily, but with no particular benefit, when I saw an advertisement of Dr Miles' Restorative Nervine, procured a bottle and began using it. Marvelous as it may seem, but a few days had passed before every bit of that creepy feeling had left me, and there has not been even the slightest indication of its return. I now feel as well as I ever did, and have gained ten pounds in weight, though I had run down from 170 to 137. Four others have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine on my recomendation, and it has been as satisfactory in their cases as in mine."—James Kane, La Rue, O.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

Good For Burns.

A little boy of Mrs. McDonald's, living near here, fell against a red hot stove and was fearfully burned. The pain was terrible, and it was thought the burn was so severe as to scar the child for life. I sold the lady a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which, after greasing the sore, she applied. It soon removed all the fire and eased the pain, and in ten days the boy was well, no trace of the scar remaining. J. D. McLaren, Keysport, Clinton county, Ill. For sale by Robbins & McCord. 39

WITH A BIG BOOM.

The Democratic Campaign in Indiana Is Inaugurated.

Wonderful Enthusiasm Manifested In Every Quarter.

Ovations Tendered the Senators and Representatives In Congress—Governor Matthews and Captain Myers Draw Great Crowds—Many Former Populists and Republicans Among the Crowds That Applaud the Democratic Speakers—All the Omens Favorable to Democratic Success in November—The State Fairly Wild with Democratic Enthusiasm.

The Democratic campaign of 1894 was formally opened throughout Indiana Saturday and the interest and enthusiasm manifested were beyond the most sanguine expectations of the party leaders. The attendance at the meetings was phenomenally large for an off year, in most instances exceeding that at the opening meetings in the presidential year of 1892, when the Democrats captured everything in sight at the election.

A noticeable feature at the gatherings was the large attendance of farmers and those who had formerly been classed as Populists. There was, too, a liberal sprinkling in of former Republicans who have recently been converted to the Democratic faith by the reduced cost of living since the Democratic tariff law went into effect. It was noticeable, too, that these latter were among the first to applaud every reference to the tariff fight in congress and the course of President Cleveland. Another notable feature of the day was the participation in the demonstrations of many old time Democrats who have not been very active in recent years.

All the omens were auspicious for Democratic success. The weather was perfect, the attendance extremely large and the earnestness and enthusiasm unsurpassed. All in all the demonstration was a huge success, and augured Democratic victory in November.

All the leading speakers of the Indiana Democracy were on the stump Saturday "loaded for bear." The issues of the campaign were forcibly expounded in nearly every county in the state and the eyes of the heretofore boastful Republicans opened to the fact that they have the hardest kind of a fight on hand to even make a respectable showing in November.

Voorhees Sounds a Keynote.

Perhaps the most notable meeting of the day was that at Terre Haute in the evening, where Senator Voorhees fresh from the scene of his long struggles and distinguished triumphs, addressed his fellow-townsmen. Though the hall was the largest in the city, it had not the capacity to accommodate one-tenth of those who turned out to hear Indiana's most eloquent orator. The senator was at his best and dealt with the issues of the campaign in the most masterful manner. He dwelt at length on the work of congress and the great results accomplished in securing legislation in behalf of the masses, in bringing about economy in public expenditures, reforming administrative abuses and breaking the power of monopolies and trusts. The senator's speech was received with the wildest demonstrations of approval.

Another of the great ovations of the day was that tendered Governor Claude Matthews at Lakeside park, Warsaw. His audience was largely made up of farmers, who came from many miles around to hear the farmer governor. So great was the throng that many hundreds were unable to get within sound of the speaker's voice. The governor was in his happiest vein and fairly wiped up the earth with the Republicans. He dealt chiefly with the state issues and captivated his hearers.

Senator Turpie spoke to an immense gathering of Democrats from three counties at Delphi and made a deep impression by his scholarly oratory and forceful logic.

Attorney General Smith opened the campaign at Brownstown, where he was greeted by an enthusiastic crowd of many hundreds. He exposed Republican shams in his usual forcible manner and dealt trip hammer blows in behalf of Democracy.

Captain W. R. Myers, the head of the state ticket, was greeted at Hartford City in the afternoon by thousands of people from that vicinity. In the crowd were many former Republicans and Populists who now give adherence to Democratic doctrine.

Congressmen Warmly Greeted.

A gratifying feature of the day was the warm welcome everywhere extended to the members of congress and the nominees. Few of them spoke at their own homes and the warmth of their reception cannot, therefore, be attributed to the kindness of their neighbors, but rather to a satisfaction with the record made by the popular branch of the national government. Representative Brets had a big gathering at English; Hon. S. M. Stockslager was warmly received at New Albany; Hon. Jason Brown addressed a huge audience at Franklin; George W. Cooper made speeches at Elwood and Alexandria, at each of which place he was greeted by large crowds of factory employes who had been out of work under the McKinley law and were only able to secure employment when that law was repealed. Hon. W. D. Bynum was enthusiastically received at Bloomington and Hon. E. K. Brookshire's meeting at Crawfordsville amounted to a veritable ovation. Hon. A. H. Taylor held forth to a multitude at Rockport and all Wells county was out to hear Representative Martin at Bluffton, where he spoke with Judge Allen Zollers and Hon. J. A. Hindman. Howard and Delaware counties held mass conventions and at Muncie the Hon. R. C. Bell of Fort Wayne made a rousing speech.

Nearly a hundred other meetings were held, all characterized by the greatest enthusiasm. District Attorney Burke spoke at Shelbyville, D. A. Woods at Decatur, H. C. Bell, deputy commissioner of pensions, at Columbus, with Judge Robinson, J. E. McCullough and Henry Spaan at Lebanon, D. E. Williamson, ex-Republican attorney general, and Sidney R. Moore at Brazil, John F. Follett of Ohio at Brookville, I. W. McKee at Marion, F. M. Griffith at Greenfield, Henry Kramer at Corydon, A. M. Cunning at Brownsburg, J. E. Bell at New Castle, J. B. Collins at Rensselaer, Patrick Keefe at Plymouth, John W. Kern at Spencer, S. A. Barnes and J. H. O'Neal at Shoals, John R. Wilson and N. G. Hunter at Peru, Thomas L. Sullivan at Kentland, Senator Stuart at Kendallville, Charles L. Jewett at Lafayette, Mortimer Nye at Richmond and a host of others at other places.

PAINT cracks.—It often costs more to prepare a house for repainting that has been painted in the first place with cheap ready-mixed paints, than it would to have painted it twice with strictly pure white lead, ground in pure linseed oil.

Strictly Pure White Lead

forms a permanent base for repainting and never has to be burned or scraped off on account of scaling or cracking. It is always smooth and clean. To be sure of getting strictly pure white lead, purchase any of the following brands:

"Anchor," "Eckstein," "Armstrong & McKelvy," "Beymer-Bauman," "Davis-Chambers," "Collier," "Shipman," "Southern," "Red Seal," "Fahnestock."

FOR COLORS.—National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors, a one-pound can to a 25-pound keg of Lead and mix your own paints. Saves time and annoyance in matching shades, and insures the best paint that it is possible to put on wood.

DEMOCRATIC TIMES NOW.

THE VOICE OF THE CALAMITY HOWLER IS HUSHED.

Reviving Business Under the Tariff Law Puts a Stop to the Dismal Croakings of Republican Editors and Orators—An Attempt to Check the Business Revival Until After Election—Record of the Week.

The industrial situation, which has been such a thorn in the side of the Republican editors and orators since the enactment of the new tariff law, and the repeal of the McKinley law continues to emphasize the fact that "Democratic times" have but just arrived.

Nowhere in the United States is the business revival more marked than in the state of Indiana. Such a complete answer has this proven to the calamity howls of the Republicans that they have become panic stricken and have set about, with an utter disregard of the people's interests, to advance their partisan ends by preventing the return of good times until after the election.

This movement is not entirely confined to Indiana, but it seems to have its origin in the fertile brain of the Republican state central committee.

The first indication of the movement came in an interview with the Indianapolis Journal, in which the proprietors of the Merritt woolen mills expressed their intention of closing their mills for a few weeks to "investigate the prospects under the new tariff bill" and determine what reduction in wages they will be compelled to make as a result of the enactment of the new tariff law.

It will be seen at once that this is a subterfuge, for the raw materials from which woolen goods are manufactured have been made free, the price of fuel has been reduced and the mills are in a better shape to operate at a profit than they have been since the McKinley bill was passed.

Following up this announcement from Indianapolis comes one from St. Louis that the Neideringhaus tin plate works contemplates a similar shutdown. Neideringhaus, it will be remembered, was formerly the Republican congressman from one of the St. Louis districts. It was for his benefit that the Rev. "Billy" Owen, then commissioner of labor under President Harrison, but now Republican candidate for secretary of state of Indiana, violated all the provisions of the alien contract labor law and permitted the importation of Welsh tinplate workers.

The ridiculousness of the attempt of Neideringhaus to make political capital in this way is amply demonstrated by the dispatches constantly coming from the Indiana gas belt which show increased activity in the tinplate industry since the enactment of the tariff law. Within the last week all the factories which have been idle have gone to work and arrangements have been completed for several new ones. For instance, the Atlantic tinplate company has been organized with $150,000 capital and will immediately begin the erection of a plant at Atlanta, Hamilton county.

Anderson has just secured the location of what is to be the biggest tinplate factory in America, and among the citizens' committee which secured the plant is Charles L. Henry, the Republican candidate for congress. This will be a 12-mill factory and will employ 1,000 men. Another new tinplate factory will be started in Alexandria.

These facts prove that the Neideringhaus shutdown is but a scheme to work up political capital and at the same time gouge the employes of the factory. The fallacy of the claim made by the Merritt mills people, that they must close their woolen mills, is made clearly apparent by the fact that since the new tariff law went into effect the woolen mils at Peru, Ind., have had orders growing upon them so fast that they cannot fill them without lengthening the hours of labor.

But the tinplate industry is not the only one in which great activity is being shown. From all over the state, from all over the country, for that matter, business is reported as improving rapidly in all lines. It would take a volume to enumerate the evidences of this, but one thing is peculiarly striking and that is the improvement in the state of Indiana, especially in the line of manufacturing.

At Dunkirk car repair shops have been erected which will require 12 large buildings and have a capacity for employing 1,000 workmen.

The McCoy-Howe company of Indianapolis is erecting a 3-story addition to its plant on West Georgia street.

Railroad earnings of 132 railroads for August show a big increase over the corresponding period of last year. At the latter time the world's fair traffic was at its highest. Thursday last was the busiest day in the history of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago railroad. Returns for August show the greatest number of loaded freight cars handled in any month in the company's history.

The Columbian spring works at Hammond, which has been shut down for a year, started up Wednesday. They will run double force to fill orders.

At Anderson the Victor windowglass works resumed operations Thursday. The Anderson and Union companies started up on the 22d and 25th inst. Four hundred skilled workmen will be employed.

NO LEGITIMATE RESULT WITHOUT EFFORT.

(South Bend Times.)

The following is a synopsis of Rev. Dr. Johnson's sermon at the First Presbyterian church Sunday morning Sept 2:

The woman saith unto him, Sir, give me this water that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw.—John 4: 15.

If I ever visit Palestine there is one place that I shall not neglect. It is one of the most beautiful spots on the round globe; there are mountains on the north and on the south, and the valley lies between the Jordan and the blue Mediterranean. There too, is Jacob's well, where took place the thrilling conversation between our Lord and the woman of Samaria. What a landscape for the pencil of the artist; there sits our Lord under the brilliant sky beside the historic well conversing with the woman. One question suggests another until the woman thirsting for the water of the hidden well appeals to the Master in the language, "Sir, give me this water that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw." But what shall we say of her request? Well, it was unwise, for the reason that she wished a result without effort. Without thirst there will be no effort, there will be no achievement. They are the hidden springs of all progress; without effort there can be no poem, or picture, or temple, or steamship, or cultivated farm. Nations never begin their march of progress until their thirst for something hither stimulates them to earnest achievement; that was the secret of the brilliant civilization of old Athens.

She climbed to the loftiest summit of intellectual achievement, because of the deep thirst and earnest effort of her orators and poets and artists and statesmen. Her deep thirst to express the beautiful in picture and poem and temple was the steam that moved her ship over the intellectual sea. Travel over the old world and stand by the grave of buried cities and you shall find suggestive illustrations of our statement. With your spade open the graves in the valley of the Nile and Euphrates and lift into the light the marvelous wealth of ancient cities. Your spade brings you into the presence of brilliant palaces and great libraries and rich galleries. Standing by the the open graves of the old cities you discover that thirst and effort are the explanation of the rich civilization at your feet. The spade puts into the hands of the modern world a literature more ancient than the inspired books of Moses. Thus showing that some of the conclusions of the higher critics are not based upon facts. Hence the spade of the archeologist is more than a match for the pen of the higher critic. The recent finds in the old valleys tell us that there was a language awaiting the inspired pen of a Moses. But go now from the buried cities in the valley of the Nile to the heart of darkest Africa. What is the secret of the small progress? Well, it is largely the result of environment. The people could sustain life too easily. There was nothing in their world to awaken thirst and stimulate effort. Hence without thirst there can be no progress.

But what is true of darkest Africa is equally true in the spiritual world. There will be no rich development in character where there are no thirst and hunger. There is no leaping into a full grown man in Christ. The babe that lies in the cradle can not at a jump become a man. So, neither can a babe in Christ. We grow in the proportion that we use the means. The means of grace are faith and prayer and the word and the sacrament. One thing we may enjoy as the purchase of our Lord and that is the Holy Spirit. He will flood us with His light and inspiration when we open to Him our souls, He blessing the means that we use will enable us to unfold gradually into the image and stature of our Lord. Hence we must not fold our hands and neglect the means of grace. But as we look around us we find that the spirit that throbbed in the request of the woman has found expression very near our homes. The anarchist that comes to us from the old world desires results without effort and work. He walks the streets of our splendid cities and asks for a division of property. He cares neither for God or church or heaven. He cares for himself and wishes you to move out of the house that has cost you the toil of muscle and brain that he may move in. He will not be satisfied until you share your farm with him and divide your bank stock and give him an interest in your factory. He is at work sowing his tares in our field of wheat. He will make us trouble unless we remove him from our shores. He glories in our strikes and sheds no tears over the destruction of property. He does not believe in an honest competition of labor, and some who are not anarchists have imbibed its philosophy. But let me say that I believe in an honorable competition along every path of toil, and for two reasons. First, it will give us a better article. For instance, if I am the only maker of plows and wagons and musical instruments in the world, I will not be stimulated to make the best possible article. For the reason that the market is mine, the public must have my plow or else raise no grain, must ride in my wagon or else go afoot, and then competition because it stimulates invention enables us to buy our articles cheaper. If my factory is the only one in the world why then I can demand my price. Why even the inspired apostle stimulated one church to a noble effort by calling attention to the liberality of another church. If you work and invent while I sleep you should have your reward. I must not complain. Then there is an exaggeration of the conflict between capital and labor. The conflict is largely imaginary for the reason that capital and labor are mutually dependent. The factory of capital cannot run without the hand of labor. Of course there is the unjust capitalist as there is the unjust laborer. However, capital and labor are dependent one upon the other. You wish my labor and I want your dollar and so there need be no quarrel between us. Our mutual dependence will prevent a long conflict unless some third party steps in to widen the gulf. The conflict between the two is as unreasonable as the conflict between a man's brain and his hands. There is a sculptor gifted with the genius of an Angelo; now it would be a waste of time for his brain and hands to get into a quarrel. If the brain of genius would chisel out of the white marble some ideal Washington it must be on good terms with the hand that holds the chisel. A strike would cost too much. But who are laborers? I for one; every drop of blood that flows in my veins is the blood of labor, and for generations back of me. Under the stars and stripes every man has an equal chance; under our flag no royal hand can close the gates against us. The path of effort invites our feet to some splendid result, hence if we would reap we must sow our wheat in some open field. But who are the successful men of the new world? Who represent capital under our free flag? Who are the men who run the splendid factories of our beautiful city? Why they were poor boys a few years ago and by hard work have gone from the bottom to the top. Under the stars and stripes the gates that were open to them are open to you and to me. Let no one by a false philosophy rob us of our opportunity. That is a sad chapter that has just been written in the great city of the northwest. The spirit of anarchy found expression on the shore of the sea that lies near us. When cars were burned and property was destroyed a blow was struck at the supremacy of law and our institutions were in peril—Yea more, it was a quarrel with God for civil government is a divine institution. It exists for the protection of life and property and to make possible the pursuit of happiness. Hence they who destroyed property displayed the spirit that fired on Fort Sumpter a generation ago. It was rebellion to the stars and stripes. But I am glad that the arm of the nation was long enough to reach from Washington to Chicago. When during the strike I stood on the lake front and saw the soldiers of the nation marching under the flag, I said in my thought—All hail to the government at Washington. The most brilliant stroke of the present administration of Mr Cleveland was his sending troops to Chicago to sustain the supremacy of law. From this day we must be earnest in instilling patriotic principles in the minds of the young. Every school house and every church should have its flag. When the boys of our own city were marching to the train, an elder of this church said to me that the stars and stripes should float over this temple of God. I said in my heart, Amen. The spirit that flowed at Chicago must be extinguished or else the flag will trail in the dust. The hope of our country, the solution of the great problem is the risen Lord who can give a new heart to the nation and inspire it to travel the path of his golden rule.

Full oft with starch and gloss serene,
The linen collar starts the morn;
Full oft at noontime it is seen
All wilted, wrinkled and forlorn.

That's what you must expect of such a collar; it's the linen of it. The stand-up collars won't stand up, and the turn-down collars will wilt down. The easy, cheap, and pleasant way out of this is to wear "CELLULOID" COLLARS AND CUFFS. These goods are made by covering linen collars or cuffs on both sides with "CELLULOID," thus making them strong and durable, and waterproof, not affected by heat or moisture. There are no other waterproof goods made this way, consequently none that can wear so well. When soiled simply wipe them off with a wet cloth. Every piece of the genuine is stamped like this:

TRADE CELLULOID MARK.

Insist upon goods so marked if you expect full satisfaction, and if your dealer does not keep them, send direct to us enclosing amount and we will mail sample. State size, and whether a stand-up or turned-down collar is wanted. Collars 25c. each. Cuffs 50c. pair.

WITHOUT THE

it is easy to steal or ring watches from the pocket. The thief gets the watch in one hand, the chain in the other and gives a short, quick jerk—the ring slips off the watch stem, and away goes the watch, leaving the victim only the chain.

This idea stopped that little game:

The bow has a groove on each end. A collar runs down inside the pendant (stem) and hits into the grooves, firmly locking the bow to the pendant, so that it cannot be pulled or twisted off.

Sold by all watch dealers, without cost, on Jas. Boss Filled and other cases containing this trade mark—

A watch case opener sent free on request.

Flag Presented.

The Auburn Rifles had a sudden little surprise at the close of the regular drill Friday evening. They had been at work about an hour, and came marching up Main street from the south and halted on the crossing leading east from the Kiblinger corner. Just then appeared in sight from the east, a small procession, one of the men carrying a flag. Spectators hastily gathered around for they had heard it whispered about that the soldiers were to be presented a flag sometime, though no one knew when. The flag had also attracted the notice of the soldiers and they stopped further maneuvers, and waited for it. A number of the G. A. R. were in the coming column, headed by J. N. Wilson, Mr. Gordon, Mr. Wolf and others we could not recognize in the uncertain light. Mr. Wilson, in a very appropriate speech, presented the flag to Capt. Kuhlman who on receiving it replied in a very feeling and eloquent little speech. He then gave the banner to the color bearer, and the Trumpet Note band coming up just then, all headed by the beautiful, flag, went marching gaily and happily up the street, then returned to the armory, and the incident was over. It will be remembered, that at the time, the company came back from Hammond a banquet was given them, and there was a small sum left over. Enough was added to this to get them a lovely flag, which was intended as a token of the esteem in which our people hold the company not only for the timely and valuable services in putting down the late Debs rebellion, but also to show our regard for their soldierly conduct and good record as citizens. The flag is a fine one of linen bunting, heavily fringed and tasseled, and with a beautiful eagle on the point of the staff. The boys are happy, and will no doubt take on a more soldierly bearing as they follow the lovely banner, in their weekly military evolutions.

Obituary.

Samuel Shoup was born in Lancaster Co., Pa., November 21, 1820, and departed this life September 25, 1994, age 73 years, 10 months and 4 days. He was baptized in the Reformed church January 11, 1821, December 27, 1846 he was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Catharine Grogg, in Stark Co., Ohio. To this union were born three children, all of whom died in their infancy. After residing there about two years, they moved to DeKalb Co., Ind., on the farm where he resided at the time of his death. Funeral services were conducted from the Union church, 5 miles west of Auburn, Sept. 27. Interment took place in Union cemetery, Rev J. D. Brosy officiating.

Obituary.

Maria Erehart, nee Kiner, departed this life September 26, 1894, after a lingering illness. Mrs. Erehart was the wife of Adam Erehart, to whom she was married July 18, 1841. To this union 7 children were born. Her husband and two children precede her to the spirit land.

Mrs. Erehart, nee Kiner, was born in Franklin county, Pa., Feb. 22, 1822, and when death released her of life's burdens and cares, was aged 72 years, 7 months and 4 days. In her girlhood days she united with the Lutheran church, and ever since has lived a religious life.

Mrs. and Mr. Erehart moved to this county 45 years ago and settled on a farm six miles east of Auburn, where they have lived and raised their family. In the year 1886, Father Erehart was called to exchange worlds, and the mother with the children were left to battle with the world. Mother Erehart was a loving mother, a good neighbor and a kind friend, and at her death leaves scores of friends and neighbors to mourn their loss, which was her eternal gain.

The funeral was Sept. 28, Rev. D. C. Sheldon conducting the services.

Coming Lecture To be here November 21.

Hon. John H. Littlefield, of New York, (formerly law student of Abraham Lincoln), will lecture under the auspices of the Epworth League, in the M. E. church on Wednesday evening, Nov. 21. His subject will be "Personal Recollections of Abraham Lincoln." He was a law student, as well as for many years a warm personal friend, of the "Martyr President," and is better qualified to speak of him than any other living lecturer.

Old Parties Not Alike.

Nobody with a grain of sense or a moment given to study ever believed the democrats and the republicans are alike in their beliefs. Yet our attention has been repeatedly called to statements of this kind that professional politicians, especially those of the corrupt new party, are peddling all over the country. So it did not surprise us when Bliss, of the Times, put out a long string of stuff of this kind last week. Some of his article was false, some was absurd, and very little of it had any bearing on the subject. But to a follower of the immaculate Coxey, we presume it would all count. He brings in the tariff to show that democrats and republicans are alike. His statements in this are false. Democrats have for fifty years advocated and worked for such a tariff only as would produce a revenue, being convinced that government had no right to levy a duty to "protect" any one. This in substance has been the fight on tariff issues. Republicans always took the other side and said government had a right and a duty to levy tariffs to protect industries. The two parties stand opposed on this. They are directly opposed on the question of bounties. Democrats say, "No bounties to anyone, because bounties cannot be given to all." Republicans favor interfering in elections, as in the "force bill." Democrats have just repealed a similar law after a hard fight. And so we might go on, naming the taxation of greenbacks, the more liberal use of silver as money, the taxation of incomes, etc. Democrats believe in free ships, free raw material, and republicans oppose both. Bliss even contradicts himself when he says, "the democrats would have passed the sieg-iorage bill over Cleveland's veto, had not the republicans voted solidly the other way. Even in state politics there is a wide difference. Democrats in Indiana have fought for and succeeded in getting equal taxation on railroads as well as on people, for the laborer as well as his employer, have given the laborer his mechanic's lien, have given the people cheap and uniform text books for schools, and many other laws that were as strongly opposed by republicans. Democrats, against the fiercest opposition from republicans gave us the Australian ballot law. And so on with many other matters. But enough has been said to call attention to the fact that democrats and republicans differ as widely as is possible for people living in the same community. When a man approaches you and says there is no difference, set it down he is a fraud and is only trying to deceive you for a purpose.

TROPHIES OF A CHASE

AFTER THE FLEETING ITEMS OF NEWS.

Justice Harlan Says Employes Are Privileged to Strike—Chinese Troops Disorganized—Public Debt Statement for September—Four Persons Burned to Death.

Chinese Troops Disorganized.

The Chinese War Consul continues to sit, but the disorganization is appalling. There is no clothing for troops, food is scanty and weapons and war munitions bought and paid for, can neither be found nor traced. The great Chinese camp between Tien Taku is filled with raw levies and disorder is rampant, although executions are frequent. The men are without rifles. Foreigners do not venture in camp unless they are guarded. Most Europeans have gone to the coast towns for protection. Many Chinese merchants have also migrated to the coast towns, feeling they will be more secure with foreigners. The remnants of the Chinese force from Ping Yang have reached Moukden. They lost everything and tell doleful stories of the fight. The transport Hung Chang has arrived at Hankow for the purpose of embarking troops for the North. The troops were ordered to proceed from Canton to Formosa.

Judge Harlan's Decision on Strikes.

In the United States Court of Appeals at Chicago, Judge Harlan, of the United States Supreme Court, reading the opinion, the famous strike injunction of Judge Jenkins was rather severely handled. Judge Harlan held that a body of men had a right to quit irrespective of the discomfort which might result. They had, however, no right to conspire to damage of embarrass.

He did not agree with Jenkins' famous definition of a strike, "that it was necessarily illegal." Judge Harlan held there was such a thing as a legal strike. Judge Jenkins' injunction is much modified. The opinion was rendered by Justice of the Supreme Court Harlan, and Judges Wood and Bunn. The bench was occupied by Justice Harlan and Judges Wood, Bunn, Jenkins, and Grosscup. Judge Jenkins appeared undisturbed by the decision.

The Chicago Times' Ownership.

By decision of the United States Court of Appeals at Chicago, James J. West wins every point in the suit brought against him by H. J. Hurskamp and others to settle the question of the ownership of 5,001 shares of stock in the Chicago Times Company and valuable property belonging to the Story estate. The decision by Judge Blodgett in the Circuit Court is reversed and the case is ordered to be referred to the master for adjudication of the points in dispute as to the value of the property in litigation and the relative rights of the claimants. West is declared by the Appellate Court to be guiltless of the breach of honesty charged against him by the complainants in their original bill. He is also declared to be the owner of the Times stock, and its sale by the complainants is said to have been illegal.

Comptroller's Statement.

A statement prepared by the comptroller of the currency shows as follows. Total amount of national bank notes outstanding, September 30, 1894, $207,471,501; decrease for the month, $27,477; circulation outstanding against bonds, September 30, 1894, $180,251,065; decrease for the month, $1,035,915; total amount of lawful money on deposit to secure circulation, $27,220,436; increase during the month of August, $6,493,338; United States registered bonds on deposit September 30, 1894, to secure circulation, $200,953,700; to secure public deposits, $14,876,000.

Loot a Postoffice.

The Postoffice at Gallatin, Mo., was recently burglarized. The safe was blown open and robbed of $2,000 in stamps and money. There is no clue to the robbers. The force of the explosion was terrific as the doors of the safe were thrown to the opposite end of the building. The robbers evidently became alarmed and after hurriedly looting the safe decamped, leaving a complete outfit of burglar's tools.

Not Probable.

Washington special: The Chilian legation here discredits the reports that China has bought the Chilian navy. The reports are regarded as preposterous, as Chili is proud of her modern navy, and with the country's great stretch of coast it is regarded as the most essential arm of her defense.

Shut Down.

The Baacke's Wire Nail Company of Cleveland, the largest concern of the kind in the world, has closed down for an indefinite period. It is said the plant may be closed permanently owing to a combination with Eastern manufacturers.

Havemeyer Indicted.

The grand jury at Washington brought indictments against Henry C. Havemeyer and John Searles of the sugar trust, for refusal to answer questions put to them by the Senate sugar trust investigating committee.

Four Lives Lost.

A special from Kenosha, Wis., says the residence of B. B. Pierce, of Wilmot, Wis., was destroyed by fire. Three sons, aged from 25 to 35 years, and a daughter 18 years old perished in the flames.

The Czar Dying.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the London Times confirms the report that the Czar's condition is considered very serious and that Dr. Leyden of Berlin, has been summoned to his bedside.

Into His Own Trap.

S. Swanson, a leading business man of Chesterton, Ind., tripped against the wire leading to a burglar-trap gun in his store, and received a full charge of buckshot in his legs.

A Giants Remains Found.

Portsmouth (Ohio) special: The skeleton of a man seven feet in height was found under an old oak on Pete Thompson's place, a few miles below this city, in Kentucky. The skeleton evidently belonged to a prehistoric race that threw up the earthworks still visible at that place and known as the "old fort." A crown of beaten sterling silver encircled the head, and there were many other evidences of the princely character of the "deceased." The find is considered a great one, as the skeleton's position under the tree proves that it must have been entombed many hundreds of years ago. An exploring party of archaologists will be on on the ground, and the details of the discovery will be sent to the Smithsonian Institution.

PARDON FOR MORMONS.

Proclamation Issued by President Cleveland.

President Cleveland has granted amnesty to all Mormons. A proclamation to that effect has been given out. The preamble sets forth the statutory definition of the crimes of polygamy, bigamy, etc.; the promise of the Mormon Church to no longer sanction such crimes; the conditional amnesty granted by President Harrison to certain Mormons, and the belief that the Mormons are obeying the law.

The proclamation then concludes with:

Now, therefore, I, Grover Cleveland, President of the United States, by virtue of the powers in me vested, do hereby declare and grant a full amnesty and pardon to all persons who have, in violation of said acts, committed either of the offenses of polygamy, bigamy, adultry, or unlawful cohabitation under the color of polygamous or plural marriage, or who, having been convicted of violations of said acts, are now suffering deprivation of civil rights in consequence of the same—excepting all persons who have not complied with the conditions contained in said executive proclamation of January 4, 1893.

THE HIGHBINDERS.

They Decree That Certain Laws Shall Not Be Enforced.

St. Louis special: The great all-powerful Tong society, whose members are commonly known as highbinders, has decreed that the law of the State of Missouri shall not be enforced in the case of the attempted murder of Lee Jong by Fung Lou. An agreement written in the strange hieroglhyies of the Chinese language was drawn up. The compact specifies that Fung Lou shall pay a stipulated sum to Lee Jong for a number of years, and that Lee Johg shall exercise and permantly remove the devil which he put in Fung Lou. The crime which Fung Lou has committed is a felony by the code of this State, but the Tong Society would rather settle the matter itself, and it seems that the police are perfectly willing for the society to do so. The agreement made between the two Chinamen resulted in revealing some interesting facts concerning the organization of Chinamen in St. Louis.

STATE OF TRADE.

A Marked Improved Within the Past Month.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Review of Trade says:

Special inquiry this week at all commercial centers regarding the state of retail trade shows a wide diversity in different trade. There is marked improvement within the past month and considerable excess over the business done a year ago, particularly in the necessaries of life. It appears that the volume of trade at present is on the whole considerably less than in a normal year in most parts The evidence of continued improvement in wholesale trade and manufacture does not appear this week. There was large distribution on orders given some time ago, but new business going to manufacturers everywhere is slackening. The completion of orders for the replenishment of stocks leaves a narrower demand and it is yet too early for consumption to provide further orders. The depression in prices of farm products has some influence.

Cowardly Murder.

A cowardly murder was committed on a freight train on the Pennsylvania road between Van Wert and Delphos, Ohio. At some point west of Van Wert five well-dressed men jumped into an empty freight car to deadhead their way east. At Van Wert three more men, also well dressed, got into the same car. The latter party at once began to hold up the others and relieve them of their valuables. One of the men offered resistance to the robbers and made a move as if to draw a weapon, when he was promptly shot dead by the highwayman. The murdered man's name is Burnett and his home is in Grand Rapids. When the train approached Delphos the murderer and his companions leaped off and disappeared in the darkness. The murdered man's friends got off at Delphos and notified the authorities of the crime.

Burned to Death.

Two men were burned to death, two other men and a little girl were badly injured and $100,000 worth of property destroyed by a fire at Nanimo, B. C. The fire started at the corner of Wharf and Commercial streets, in the Royal Hotel, which was destroyed. Pat Mayce, bootblack, and a bar-tender known as "Fritz," employed in the hotel, were burned to death. Three guests were badly injured. The flames spread in a northerly direction along Wharf street, destroying the Fire Hall, the Nanimo Hotel, C. E. Stevenson's dry goods store and five small frame buildings. That the newer part of the town was not completely wiped out was due to the absence of wind and to the heroic work of the volunteer fire brigade.

Another Vessel Lost.

St. Ignace (Mich.) special: Word reached here from Manistique of the loss of the schooner William Home, off Point Seul Choix, Lake Michigan. Six of her crew of seven were drowned. The crew of the Home consisted of Capt. C. H. Henderson; mate, Walter Bland; sailor, Keider; girl cook, named Annie, about eighteen years old; Anton Minga, and two sailors whose names are unknown. The William Home was built at Clayton, N. Y., in 1871, and was of 305 tons register. She is owned by J. M. Jones of Detroit. Her iron cargo was valued at $10,000, which is covered by insurance.

Monkeyed With the Buzz Wire.

Too much familiarity with an electric light wire caused the destruction at Dayton, Ohio, of a load of hay, which farmer Robinson was in the act of hauling into a livery stable alley. The hay brushed along the wire until a spark was engendered, when with a flash the ton or more of hay was involved in a blaze. The two horses attached to the loaded wagon were badly singed before they were rescued, and it was with difficulty that the fire department averted a conflagration involving surrounding property.

Arrested at Last.

Capt. Henry W. Howgate, formerly Chief of the Weather Bureau in Washington, was arrested in New York recently on the charge of forgery and the embezzlement of $360,000, committed in 1878 and 1879. The arrest is the result of a search which has occupied the attention of the United States Secret Service for over thirteen years. Howgate was arrested in 1880 in Washington, but having obtained the permission of the officers to go to his room to dress, he escaped through the window and has since baffled all efforts at recapture. With Howgate there was a mysterious woman of Washington for whom, it was alleged, he robbed the Government.

Wreck on the B. & O.

Martinsburg (W. Va.) special: The Royal Blue Line St. Louis-New York express on the Baltimore and Ohio was wrecked at Myers Hole, six miles west of here, by a rail turning over while the train was running forty miles an hour. The entire train left the track, two sleepers, the ladies car and smoker, rolling down a twenty-five foot bank, the engine, postal, express and baggage cars hanging to the ties. Of the hundred passengers on the train, railroad surgeons who went to the wreck by special from here report none seriously injured, although many are cut or painfully bruised.

Startling Statement.

W. J. Littlejohn of Chicago, in delivering the annual address before the Fire Underwriter's Association of the Northwest, at the Grand Pacific Hotel, Chicago, declared that the recent forest fires had been started by lumber kings. They had taken that method, he said, of covering up their stealing, and to them was directly due the death and destruction which followed. The speech caused a sensation among the 300 members present. The occasion of the gathering was the celebration of the silver anniversary of the association.

Samoan Rebels Surrender.

A special from Apia, Samoa, via San Francisco, says: The rebellion is at an end. Tamacese and the rebel chiefs made submission to Kink Malietoa on board the British warship Curacoa August 28. Submission and surrender of 100 rifles were the only terms imposed. It is not expected peace will endue long. One British and two German warships remains at Apia until the hurricane season.

Crushed to Death.

The lives of four men, two miners and two laborers, were without warning crushed out in the northwest colliery or Simpson and Watkins, at Simpson, near Carbondale, Pa. Their mangled bodies as near as can be ascertained, lie beneath a fall of rock which is ten feet wide, six feet high, and extends for at least sixty feet in the gangway off from the third slope of the mine.

A Desperado Kills Three Officers.

Muskogee (I. T.) special: Tom Smith, a noted desperado, shot and killed three colored United States Marshals and seriously wounded two white officers while they were attempting to arrest him at the Muskogee International Fair. The deputy marshals have organized a posse and are hot in pursuit of the murderer. Smith used a revolver and only fired four shots.

Buried in a Trench.

At Haverhill, Mass., while at work in a trench, Peter Pasqualle, Patrick Cavalle, and another named Russo, were buried beneath ten feet of earth by a cave-in. Pasqual had an eye gorged out and was so badly bruised that he will die. The others are believed to be internally injured, and their recovery is doubtful.

Drank Dead Snakes.

For some time past Charles Harmon and wife of Kent, Ohio, have been very ill. The other day their little baby died, and physicians decided that it had been poisoned. The well was cleaned and the bottom of it was found to be a mass of dead snakes, toads, frogs, and other vermin.

Can't Live in Utah.

A party of Hawaiian Mormons, sixteen in number, have arrived at San Francisco, from Utah, on their way to Honolulu. They say they have no fault to find with Mormonism, but that the climate of Utah was not adapted to them. Quite a number died there.

Civil Service.

A dispatch from Washington states as on the authority of a man high in the councils of the administration that Mr. Lyman will retire from the Civil Service Commission next week. Mr. Lyman was one of the original members of the commission.

Eye-Water, Not Fire-Water.

Mrs. John Davis and sister mistook eye-water for whisky at their home in Trigg County, Kentucky. They concocted some with medicine and drank thereof. The eye-water contained deadly poisons, and the two ladies are dead.

A $150,000 Blaze.

The plant of the Stillwater Manufacturing Company, Stillwater, Mich., together with several adjacent residences, were destroyed by fire. The loss will amount to $150,000.

Brakeman Mangled.

At Elyria, Ohio, Richard McCabe, a brakeman, fell between the cars and was terribly mangled. His home was at Chippewa Lake.

Failed to Lower Her Record.

Alix, the Little Queen, in her attempt to lower her record at Columbus, Ohio, went a mile in 2:04¼.

Base Ball.

The base ball season is over and the Baltimore's won the penant.

SEEK HIGH HONORS.

MEN WHO WANT TO BE GOVERNORS OF STATES.

Democrats, Republicans and Populists—"Bad Boy" Peck of Wisconsin, Henry Clay Evans of Tennessee and S. A. Holcomb of Nebraska—And Others.

E. W. Tunnell.

E. W. Tunnell, Democratic candidate for Governor of Delaware, is 50 years of age, and one of the prominent business men of the State. After leaving school he engaged in the mercantile business with his father at Blackwater. In 1870 he was elected to the Legislature, and in 1872 engaged in the drug business with his brother-in-law under the firm name of Mustard & Co. A number of years ago the Legislature appointed him a director of the Farmers Bank, Georgetown, and he has been Clerk of the Peace of Kent County. He takes a lively interest in public affairs, both State and national. He has never married.

E. W. TUNNELL.

Henry Clay Evans.

Henry Clay Evans, whom the Republicans of Tennessee have chosen for their leader in the gubernatorial fight, is a prosperous manufacturer. He is 51 years of age, was born in Juniata County, Pa., fought with the soldiers of Wisconsin during the war, and has since made his name well known as a business man and politician of Tennessee. After the war he located in Chattanooga, engaged in the manufacturing business and was twice elected Mayor of the city. Later he was one of Tennessee's Congressmen in the LIst Congress. Being defeated for a second term, President Harrison appointed him First Assistant Postmaster General.

H. CLAY EVANS.

Chas. A. Culberson.

Chas. A. Culberson, recently nominated for Governor by the Democrats of Texas, has long been active in law and in politics. He is a son of David B. Culberson, who is now serving his tenth term in the House of Representatives. Chas. A. Culberson was born in Dadesville, Ala., about forty years ago, but has been a resident of Texas nearly all his life. He was educated in the common schools of Jefferson and the high school at Gilmer, and in 1870 entered the Virginia Military Institute, at Lexington, graduating in 1874. In 1877 he was admitted to the bar of Texas. In 1880 he was elected County Attorney of Madison County and is now serving his second term as Attorney General of the State.

C. A. CULBERSON

Thomas J. Majors.

Thomas J. Majors, the Republican nominee for Governor of Nebraska, is the present Lieutenant Governor. He was born in Jefferson county, Illinois, 55 years ago, and attended the common schools until he was 18, and then went to work. In 1859 he removed to Nebaska, where he has since remained, except during the late war, when he served three years in the South. When Nebraska became a State, he was sent to the first and second sessions of the State Senate. In 1880 he tried to enter Congress, but was defeated, and since then has served two terms in the State Senate and two in the House.

T. J. MAJORS.

Charles A. Busiel.

Charles A. Busiel is the Republican nominee for Governor of New Hampshire. He was born in Meredith village, N. H., in 1842, became a resident of Laconia when only four years of age and has since lived there. He learned the hosiery business in his father's mill and has become wealthy in it. In 1878 and '79 he was a member of the State Legislature and was the first mayor of Laconia. He is a man of large interests outside of his regular business, being a director of the Concord and Montreal and other railroads and president of the Lake Shore railroad. Until 1892 Mr. Busiel was a Democrat, but the tariff plank in the Democratic platform that year caused him to join the Republicans.

CHARLES A. BUSIEL.

Chas. H. Sheldon.

Gov. Charles H. Sheldon, of South Dakota, was renominated by the recent Republican State convention. Charles H. Sheldon was born in Lamoille County, Vermont, in 1840, and lived there until the war broke out, then he enlisted in the Seventh Vermont Infantry, went with Gen. Butler to Ship Island, and was in some of the most important engagements of the rebellion. He enlisted as a private, and was mustered out March 14, 1866, as captain. He then lived in Illinois for eleven years, in Kentucky for three years, and in 1881 removed to Dakota Territory and located on the farm where he now lives, near Pierport, S. D. In 1886, he was elected to the territorial council and was permanent chairman of the Republican State convention in 1890. He was elected Governor in 1892.

C. H. SHELDON.

Silas A. Holcomb.

The Populist nominee for Governor of Nebraska is Silas A. Holcomb. He is a man of magnificent physique, being 6 feet 2 inches tall and built in proportion. Mr. Holcomb resides at Broken Bow, but is a native of Indiana, where he was born in 1858. He is a well-known lawyer and Judge of the District Court. Last year the Populists nominated him for Justice of the Supreme Court, but he met with defeat.

S. A. HOLCOMB.

Geo. W. Peck.

Governor George W. Peck, whom the Wisconsin Democrats nominated for re-election in November next, is widely known as the author of "Peck's Bad Boy," and a humorist of exceptional cleverness. The fight over the Bennett school law first brought him into politics in 1890, when he was chosen Mayor of Milwaukee on an anti-Bennett platform. Later in the same year, when the issue was transferred to State politics, Mayor Peck was made the Democratic candidate for Governor, and was elected to that office in November of the same year. The Democratic voters of Wisconsin are making a strong fight to secure another term in the executive office for the first Democratic Governor of the State since the civil war.

GEORGE W. PECK.

CROPS OUT OF FROST'S WAY.

They Are Matured Before the Nipping Cold Gets Around.

Reports as to the condition of crops throughout the country, and the general influence of weather on growth, cultivation, and harvest made by the directors of the different State weather services to the United States Weather Bureau and received at Chicago are as follows:

Illinois—Temperature in northern portion above normal, elsewhere about or slightly below; rainfall, except in central portion, below; sunshine above. Corn cutting progressing, but practically beyond danger of frost. Fall grain up and looking fine. Decided improvement in pastures.

Indiana—Corn safe from frost, most in shock and yield better than expected. Plowing and seeding nearly done. Wheat and rye coming up nicely. Pasturage much improved. Tobacco of inferior quality and quantity and cutting nicely.

Wisconsin—Weather favorable for farm work. Rainfall above normal and temperature slightly below. All crops out of the way of frosts. Corn and potatoes turning out better than expected. Fall feed never better. Seeding well advanced. Ground in fine condition.

Minnesota—Drought continues in west central section; elsewhere good rains have revived pastures and placed soil in excellent condition for plowing. Considerable injury to gardens by frost. Potato digging and corn husking general.

Iowa—Corn cutting has progressed rapidly; more fall plowing and seeding done than average of last two seasons; early seeding grain and pastures growing nicely.

Kansas—Abundant rains in east half of State, light showers in west half, with nearly normal temperature and sunshine, have brought forward pastures, gardens, and late crops; wheat and rye growing; hail-storm injured some fruit.

Nebraska—Ground very dry and fall plowing and seeding progressing slowly in most sections of the State. Some early sown fall grain coming up nicely; pastures much improved.

Missouri—Rainfall sufficient for present needs, except in a few localities. Seeding progressed favorably. Wheat and rye coming up well. Corn cutting finished in many counties. Pastures good. Light frost in northern section; damage slight.

Michigan—Temperature and sunshine above normal, rainfall below. Favorable weather conditions have promoted farm work and allowed plowing, corn cutting, and wheat seeding to push forward rapidly. Potatoes doing well in most counties; some being dug in southern counties.

Ohio—Abundant rain has put the ground in fine condition. Sowing of wheat completed in many counties; acreage below average. Pasturage is fine, and feeding from stack no longer necessary. Corn cutting well along; while the yield is low in average, it is better than was expected. Potatoes short yield and small in size. Tobacco moderate and fair quality.

GRAIN CROPS EXCEED THE DEMAND.

The World's Output Estimated 35 Per Cent. Above Consumption.

Samuel E. Morss, the Consul General at Paris, has sent to the State Department at Washington an abstract of the official report on the wheat crop in France for 1894. It is estimated by the French statisticians, says Mr. Morss, that the crops of 1894 throughout the world will be 35 per cent. in excess of the world's demands for consumption and seed. The annual consumption of wheat in France is estimated at from 118,000,000 to 125,000,000 hectolitres, an amount not in excess of, if equal to, the probable domestic production for the current year. July 31 the amount of imported wheat awaiting withdrawal for consumption from the customs entrepots was 559,621 hectolitres, so that there will be a large surplus over the probable demand for the next twelve months, even should another bushel not be imported.

POPULAR G. A. R. MEN.

Two Who Have Been Honored with High Office by Their Comrades.

One of the popular elections of the G. A. R. for the next year was that of Chas. H. Shute, of New Orleans as Junior Vice Commander-in-chief. Mr. Chute has been long identified with the G. A. R., and is one of the well-known men of the organization. It is especially appropriate, in view of the next encampment being held below Mason and Dixie's line, that the South should be represented among the principal officers. Mr. Shute has an enviable war record, is a man well known and popular in his own city, and Grand Army men say will make an excellent aid to Commander-in-chief Lawler.

C. H. SHUTE.

A. P. Burchfield, who was elected Senior Vice Commander-in-chief, was born in Allegheny Jan. 20, 1844. He graduated from the pubblic schools and then entered mercantile life, but left it to enlist as a private in Company E, One Hundred and Twenty-third Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, with which he remained until they disbanded in 1863. He was then only 19, and again entered mercantile life. He has since been identified with G. A. R. matters. Mr. Burchfield is one of Pittsburg's representative citizens.

A. P. BURCHFIELD.

MEYER SCHOENFELD.

The Leader of the Great Coatmakers' Strike in New York City.

As the leader of the coatmakers' strike in New York Meyer Schoenfeld has sprung into prominence. To him all the credit is given for dealing the death blow to the odious sweat-shop system, against which the strike was directed. Previous to the strike Schoenfeld was not known except as a coatmaker, and an executive member of his union. He is an excellent speaker and is at all times opposed to violence. It is believed that the signal victory of the coatmakers will cause a strike among the cloakmakers, of whom there are nearly 20,000 in New York

Minor State Items.

COLUMBUS police are now uniformed in metropolitan style.

HOSEA C. BUCKLEY, 73, killed by a kicking horse at Muncie.

SOUTH BEND will probably organize another militia company.

SCARLET fever has broken out in epidemic form at Brooklyn.

THE famous Roby park prize fight cases cost Lake County $1,945.10.

FORT WAYNE authorities are still fighting the Chicago Sunday Sun.

MICHIGAN CITY business men and bankers are buying a device to detect counterfeit money.

MIDDLEBURY will put up $15,000 for the extension of the Goshen Electric Railway to that city.

JOHN NOLAND, farmer near Anderson, found the skeleton of a snake measuring fifteen feet in length.

AT Richmond, Joseph Weibel, an employe of the Star Piano Company was crushed to death by the elevator.

THE large general store of Walton & Whisler, at Atlanta, burned, involving a loss of $10,000; nearly covered by insurance.

DICK GOODMAN, the notorious highwayman, was sentenced to five years in the pen at Anderson. His wealth is estimated at $50,000.

THE Randolph County Veteran Association will hold its reunion in Winchester Thursday, Oct. 11, followed by a campfire in the evening.

A. GARBODEN, a farmer near Decatur, was gored to death by a vicious bull. This is the same animal that killed George Spangler two weeks ago.

WM. DECKARD, well known farmer near Bloomington, was swindled out of a large sum of money by a man who left a stolen horse and buggy as security.

JOHN ARTIS, a colored carpenter, aged 70, fell from a scaffold at Sharpsville, Howard County, and was instantly killed. A wife and seven children survive.

ALBERT THOMAS' 8-months-old child, Martinsville, bled to death, from a slight cut in its mouth. This is the fourth child in the family to die of hoemophelia.

MANN EMILY, aged 26 years, who resides with his father on a farm southeast of Seymour, built a fire of some underbrush and when it had got under good headway he took an epileptic fit. Falling into the fire he was so badly burned that he died.

GEORGE SIEGUL, employed as miller at the Gathright flour mill, in Jeffersonville, was caught by the wrist and drawn into the cogs and around the shaft, while oiling a pinion wheel. As he came up, Henry Tronan, a fellow-workman, seized him and drew him out. It was found that the left arm had been torn from its socket and a terrible hole made, extending six inches down and six inches across the breast. The physicians removed the socket bone from the shoulder blade. Siegul may recover. He is 46 years old, and has a wife and six children.

A CORPS of engineers have just completed a trip up the St. Joseph River and its branches in the interest of the project of Toledo capitalists to build a canal to Chicago. The route as shown by the survey is from Chicago across Lake Michigan to Michigan City, to Elkhart, thence through a series of lakes and rivers to the Maumee, close to the State line down the Wabash canal, taking in defiance and Napoleon, Ohio, and making Toledo the terminus. Dr. W. T. Harris of Elkhart, has been making an exhaustive study of the subject. He has practically covered every inch of the ground and has made a survey of the territory which such a canal would cover. His investigation has made him a firm believer in the future of such a project.

NINETEEN loaded freight cars on the Lake Erie and Western broke from a train at the top of a hill three miles from Lafayette and ran back to the station, where the Chicago Big Four passenger was standing, ready to start for Indianapolis. Yardmaster Harry Brighty, of the Big Four road, fortunately turned a switch and threw the wild cars on a siding, and they crashed into the ladies waiting room, demolishing it and piling themselves in a heap. The only casualty was that to Harry Washburn, a hackman. He was caught by the wreck and severely injured. His horses were killed and buried beneath the debris. He was partially buried, but officers Rinard and Powell dug him out. His leg is hurt, and it is feared he has internal injuries.

MRS. LIZZIE KEPNER of New Albany, has engaged an attorney and will file suit against the heirs of Nelson Fordice, who died a few weeks ago at Shoals. She claims she was married to Mr. Fordice in 1884, and at his request the marriage was kept a secret. Mr. Fordice was a well-known resident of this city. He accumulated a large fortune, a greater portion of which he lost at Shoels in the smelting business. The friends of Mr. Fordice claim her story is a fabrication invented for the purpose of securing a portion of his estate. The only heir to the estate is a nephew, who is administrator. The estate will be worth about $ 0,000 after all claims are paid, and consists of land in Martin and Boone counties. Mrs. Kepner's claim will be opposed bitterly. Her husband, Barney Kepner, secured a divorce in 1878, on the grounds that she kept a disorderly house. She is about 65 years old and Mr. Fordice was 73 years old when he died.

SOUTH BEND is pluming herself at prospect of securing a union railroad depot.

MRS. JOSEPH R. JONES, near Muncie, is suffering with hydrophobia, caused by a cat's bite.

THE South Bend Tribune will be turned over to the Ladies' Aid Society of that city to be run for one day. The proceeds will be put in the relief treasury. The ladies will have full charge of the paper, doing the editorial and reporting work and proof reading. It will be the first time in Indiana that ladies have undertaken to manage and edit a daily newspaper.

THE Big Four train to Indianapolis picked up the dead body of Robert Ames lying on the track near Niles. The corpse was horribly mangled, and it is supposed that Ames was run down and killed by freight train No. 40, or fell under the wheels. Deceased was about 40 years of age.

THE 12-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe C. Griffith of Muncie, was seriously burned by natural gas in a very peculiar manner. The little tot had been left in a room alone. Admiring some red-hot clay brick in the shape of potatoes, she tried to get one of them out. She succeeded in getting one out, but her hands and face were frightfully burned.

HILL IS THEIR MAN.

Nominated for Governor by the New York Democratic Convention.

W. C. Whitney declined the Democratic nomination for Governor of New York and Senator David B. Hill was chosen to head the ticket. Mr. Whitney was to have been named by acclamation. His refusal to run left the delegates in an exceedingly unpleasant position. Senator Hill did not desire the nomination, and while facing the convention from the platform declared that he would not accept it. A scene without parallel in the history of conventions, except, perhaps, that in 1876, when Seymour was nominated by acclamation against the wishes of the majority of the delegates, took place when the name of David B. Hill caused a stampede in his favor. Fifteen hundred people stood upon their feet yelling themselves hoarse, two bands of music tried to drown the tumult, and Senator David B. Hill, the chairman, pounded violently but ineffectually with his gavel in attempt to restore order. It was a scene of disorder, but even of enthusiasm that would probably not be witnessed in a decade.

D. B. HILL

Mr. Hitt had finished his speech nominating John Boyd Thacher and been received with enthusiasm. Delegates had looked at one another and expected that the nomination would be made by acclamation. Even Senator Hill himself, with the gavel in hand, had ordered the roll called and breathed a sigh of relief, evidently believing the crisis had passed. But a slight-built man from Alleghany County, who had never been known in the councils of the party, threw a firebrand which caused a sensation almost beyond belief. When the county was reached Delegate Reynolds arose, and, amid intense silence said: "The united delegation from Alleghany County desire to place in nomination for Governor their first and only choice, David Bennett Hill." Then occurred one of the wildest scenes that could be imagined. Delegates jumped upon the chairs, spectators crowded into the aisle, hats were thrown heavenward, canes with ribbons waved wildly and men yelled themselves hoarse. The secretaries left their desks and jumping upon chairs also cheered with the multitude.

Finally, from sheer exhaustion, the vast audience ceased its applause enough to allow Senator Hill's voice to be heard, and in a husky voice he said:

"I am grateful to the Democracy of the Empire State for their courtesy and kindness and support in the past, but I must say to you that I cannot be your candidate again for Governor."

There were cries of "No, no," and "You're the only man," from the delegates, and the applause was renewed.

FUSION IN NEBRASKA.

Anti-Fusionists Withdraw and Nominate a Straight Ticket.

After a session prolonged until midnight the Nebraska Democratic State convention at Omaha nominated Congressman Bryan for United States Senator and made a ticket that includes five of the candidates on the Populist ticket. The opponents to fusion, numbering 104 delegates, then bolted the convention, organized a separate meeting and began the work of selecting a straight Democratic ticket. The Populist nominees, indorsed by the Democrats are: Judge Holcomb, candidate for Governor; J. N. Gaffin, for Lieutenant Governor; D. B. Carey, for Attorney General; S. J. Kent, for Commissioner of Public Lands and Buildings, and W. A. Jones, for Superintendent of Public Instruction. The following State ticket was nominated by the bolters:

For Governor—E. B. Sturdevant.
Lieutenant Governor—R. E. Dunphy.
Secretary of State—D. T. Rolf.
Auditor—Otto Bauman.
Treasurer—Luke Dridenthal.
Attorney General—John H. Ames.
Commissioner of Public Lands and Buildings—Jacob Bigler.
Superintendent Public Instruction—Milton Doolittle.

SWEPT BY A HURRICANE.

Frightful Storm from the West Indies Devastates the Atlantic Coast States.

One of the most terrific storms that has ever swept the Atlantic States on Wednesday night devastated the coast line from Key West, Fla., to north of Cape Hatteras. Another storm swept eastward from the Dakotas and Nebraska at the rate of fifty miles an hour. The Atlantic storm originated somewhere in the Caribbean Sea, that most prolific of all storm regions. It swept slowly, but with hurricane force, over the West Indies and up through the Gulf of Mexico and broke with full force upon the coast of Florida Tuesday night. Its movement continued northward all of Wednesday and Wednesday night its center was in the neighborhood of Cape Hatteras. From every point along the southern Atlantic coast that was not yet cut off from communication by the leveling of telegraph wires came stories of the destruct

UNITED AT LAST

BY

Mrs. Sinclair's telegram informing him of her husband's death, and entreating him to go to Marchbrook, disturbed the placidity of her father's temper.

"Poor Sinclair!" he muttered, with more fretfulness than regret. "Pity he couldn't have died at a more convenient time. I hate crossing the channel in an equinoctial gale. And what good can I do at Marchbrook? However, I suppose I must go. Women are so helpless. She never cared much for him, poor child, and there's Davenant still unmarried and devoted to her. An excellent match, too, since he came into old Gryffin's money. Providence orders all things for the best. I hope I shall have a fine night for crossing."

He was with Constance early on the following day, having lost no time in obeying her summons, but he was unprepared for the accusation she brought against him.

"Upon my life, Constance, I was only a passive instrument in this whole affair, just like little Webb. It was put to me that this thing must be done to save your life, and I consented."

"You let a stranger take my destiny into his hands?" cried Constance, indignantly.

"He was not a stranger. He loved you dearly—was as anxious for your welfare as even I, your father."

"The German physician, the white-haired old man who told me to hope? Why he had never seen me before in his life."

"The man who told you to hope, who persuaded me to agree to the introduction of a spurious child, was no German doctor. He was neither old nor white-haired, and he loved you devotedly for years. He heard you were dying of a broken heart, and came to you in disguise in order to see if love could devise some means of saving you. The German doctor was Cyprian Davenant."

This was another blow for Constance. The man whom she had believed in as the soul of honor was the originator of the scheme she had denounced as wicked and cruel, and yet could find no words of blame for him. She remembered the gentle voice that had penetrated her ear and mind through the thick mists of madness, remembered the tones that had touched her with a wondering sense of something familiar and dear. He had come to her in her apathy and despair, and from the moment of his coming her life had brightened and grown happy. It was but a delusive happiness, a false peace; and now she must go back to the old agony of desolation and incurable regret.

"You can at least tell me who and what that child is, papa," she said after a long pause.

"Indeed, my love, I know nothing except that Davenant told me she belonged to decently born people, and would never be claimed by any one. And the poor little thing looked so thoroughly cleaned and respectable—of course at that age one can hardly tell—the features are so undeveloped—the nose more like a morsel of putty than anything human—but I really did think that the child had a thoroughbred look; and I am sure when I saw her last Christmas she looked as complete a lady as ever came out of our Marchbrook nursery."

"She is a lovely child," said Constance, "and I have loved her passionately."

"Then, my dearest girl, why not go on loving her," pleaded Lord Clanyarde. "Call her your adopted child, if you like, and keep her about you as your pet and companion till you are married again and have children of your own. You can then relegate her to her natural position and by and by get her respectably married, or portion her off in some way."

"No," said Constance, resolutely, "I will never see her again."

And all the while she was longing to take the afternoon train to Hastings and rejoin her darling.

After this there was nothing more for Constance Sinclair to do but to submit to fate and consider herself once more a childless mother. Sir Cyprian was away, no one knew where, and even had he been in England Constance felt that there would be little use in knowing more than she knew already. The knowledge of the strange child's parentage could be but of the smallest importance to her, since she meant to banish the little one from her heart and home.

Lord Clanyarde and the lawyers did all that was necessary to secure Mrs. Sinclair's position as inheritor of her husband's estates. The Newmarket stables and stud were sold, and realized a considerable sum, as the training stable was supposed to be the most perfect establishment of its kind—built on hygienic principles, with all modern improvements—and was warmly competed for by numerous foolish young noblemen and gentlemen who were just setting out on the broad road which Gilbert Sinclair had traveled at so swift a rate. Things in the North had been gradually improving; the men were growing wiser, and arbitration between master and men was taking the place of trade union tyranny.

Constance Sinclair found herself in a fair way to become a very rich woman, caring about as much for the money her husband had left as for the withered leaves that fell from the Marchbrook elms in the dull, hopeless autumn days. What was the use of wealth to a childless widow, who could have been content to live in a lodging of three rooms, with one faithful servant?

CHAPTER XXIX.

AFTER MANY DAYS.

A common specific for a broken heart when the patient happens to be a person of handsome fortune—for your pauper, hard work is your only cure—is foreign travel. Lord Clanyarde, who hated Marchbrook, now suggested this remedy to his daughter. He felt that it was his duty to afford her the benefit of his protection and society during the first period of her widowhood, and it struck him that it would be more agreeable for both of them to lead a nomadic life than to sit opposite each other on the family hearth and brood upon the sorrows of this life or read the family Bible.

"It would be quite the right season for Rome, love, if we were to start at once," said Lord Clanyarde, soothingly.

Constance yielded to her father's suggestion with a graceful submission that charmed him. She cared very little whither she went. The little girl was still at Hastings with honest Martha. She cried sometimes for mamma, but was happy, upon the whole, Martha wrote: wondering very much why she and her charge remained so long away. Martha knew nothing of the change that had taken place in her darling's position.

"Very well, dear," said Lord Clanyarde. "You have only to get your boxes packed: and, by the way, you had better write to your banker for circular notes. Five hundred will do to start with."

Father and daughter went to Italy, and Constance tried to find comfort in those classic scenes that are peopled with august shadows; but her heart was tortured by separation from the child, and it was only a resolute pride that withheld her from owning the truth—that the little one she had believed her own was as dear to her as the baby she had lost.

Lord Clanyarde and his daughter were driving on the Corso one sunny afternoon in the Easter week, when the gentleman's attention was attracted by a lady who drove a phaeton with a pair of cobs caparisoned in a fantastical fashion, with silver bells on their harness. The lady was past her first youth, but still was remarkably handsome, and was dressed with an artistic sense of color and a daring disregard of fashion of the day—dressed, in a word, to look like an old picture, and not like a modern fashion plate.

"Who can she be?" exclaimed Lord Clanyarde. "Her face seems familiar to me, yet I haven't the faintest idea where I've seen her."

A few yards further on he encountered an acquaintance of the London clubs, and pulled up his horses on purpose to interrogate him about the unknown in the Spanish hat.

"Don't you know her?" asked Captain Flitter, with a surprised air. "Yes, she's handsome, but passee; sur le retour."

"Who is she?" repeated Lord Clanyarde.

Captain Flitter looked curiously at Mrs. Sinclair before he answered.

"Her name is Walsingham—widow of a Colonel Walsingham—colonel in the Spanish contingent—rather a bad egg, of course I mean the gentleman."

A light dawned on Lord Clanyarde's memory. Yes, this was the Mrs. Walsingham whom people had talked about years ago, before Sinclair's marriage, and it was Sinclair's money she was spending now, in all probability, on that fantastical turn-out with its jingling bells. Lord Clanyarde felt himself personally aggrieved by the lady, and yet he thought he would like to see more of her.

"Does she stay long in Rome?" he asked the club lounger.

"She never stays long anywhere, I believe; very erratic; likes artists and musical people, and that sort of thing; has reception every Saturday evening. I always go. One meets people one doesn't see elsewhere; not the regular treadmill, you know."

Lord Clanyarde asked no more. He would be sure to meet Flitter at one of the artists' rooms, and could ask him as many questions about Mrs Walsingham as he liked.

The two men met that very evening, and the result of their conversation was Lord Clanyarde's presentation to Mrs. Walsingham at her Saturday reception.

She was very gracious to him, and made room for him on the ottoman where she was seated, the center of a circle of enthusiastic Americans, who thought her the nicest Englishwoman they had ever met.

"Who was that lady in deep mourning you were driving with yesterday?" Mrs. Walsingham asked Lord Clanyarde, presently.

"My youngest daughter, Mrs. Sinclair. You knew her husband some years ago, I think. He is lately dead."

"Yes. I saw his death in the Times, in that dismal column where we shall all appear in due course of time, I suppose."

"Yes, he died in South America. You heard the story, I suppose. A most unfortunate business—his confidential solicitor shot in Sinclair's own garden by a little French girl he had been foolish enough to get entangled with. The jealous little viper contrived to give the police the slip, and Sinclair saw himself in danger of being brought unpleasantly into the business, so he wisely left the country."

"You believe that it was Melanie Duport who shot Mr. Wyatt?" Mrs. Walsingham exclaimed, eagerly.

"What, you remember the girl's name? Yes, there can hardly be a doubt as to her guilt. Who else had any motive for killing him? The creature's letter luring him to the spot was found in the park, and she disappeared on the morning of the murder. These two facts are convincing, I should think," concluded Lord Clanyarde, somewhat warmly.

"Yes, she was a wicked creature," said Mrs. Walsingham, thoughtfully; "she had a natural bent toward evil."

"You speak as if you had known her."

Mrs. Walsingham looked confused.

"I read the account of that dreadful business in the newspapers, she said. "I hope Mrs. Sinclair has quite recovered from the shock such an awful event must have caused her."

"Well, yes: I think she has recovered from that. Her husband's death following so quickly was, of course, a blow, and since then she has had another trouble to bear."

"Indeed! I am sorry," said Mrs. Walsingham, with a thoughtful look.

"Yes, we did all for the best. She was dangerously ill, you know, about a year and a half ago, and we—well, it was foolish, perhaps, though the plan succeeded for the moment—we made her believe that her little girl had been saved from drowning at Schoenesthal, in the Black Forest. You may have heard of the circumstance."

"Yes, yes."

"It was quite wonderful. She received the strange child we introduced to her with delight—never doubted its identity with her own baby—and all went on well till poor Sinclair's death; but on his death-bed he wrote a letter telling her——"

"That the child was not her own!" exclaimed Mrs. Walsingham. "That must have hit her hard."

"It did, poor girl. She has not yet recovered the blow, and I fear never will. What I most dread is her sinking back into the state in which she was the winter before last."

"Where is Sir Cyprian Davenant?" asked Mrs. Walsingham, somewhat irrelevantly.

"At the other end of the world, I suppose. I believe he started for Africa last autumn."

"Was there not some kind of early attachment between him and Mrs. Sinclair? Pardon me for asking such a question."

"Yes, I believe Davenant would have proposed for Constance if his circumstances had permitted him to hope for my consent.

"Poor fellow! And he carried his broken heart to Africa, and came back to find a fortune waiting for him, and your daughter married. Do you not think, if he were to return now, Mrs. Sinclair might be consoled for the loss of her child by reunion with the lover of her girlhood?"

"I doubt if anything would reconcile her to the loss of the little girl. Her affection for that child was an infatuation."

A pair of picturesque Italians began a duet by Verdi, and the conversation between Mrs. Walsingham and Lord Clanyarde went no further. He did not make any offer of bringing Constance to the lady's receptions for the memory of that old alliance between Mrs. Walsingham and Gilbert Sinclair hung like a cloud over her reputation. No one had any specific charge to bring against her, but it was remembered that Sinclair had been her devoted slave for a long time, and had ended his slavery by marrying somebody else.

As the weeks went round Constance showed no improvement in health or spirits. Pride was making a sorry struggle in that broken heart. She would not go back to England and the spurious Christabel, though her heart yearned for that guiltless impostor. She would not suffer another woman's child to hold the place of her lost darling; no, not even though that strange child had made it elf dearer to her than life. Mrs. Sinclair's doctor informed Lord Clanyarde that Rome was getting too warm for his patient, whereupon that anxious parent was fain to tear himself away from the pleasures of the seven-hilled city and those delightful evenings at Mrs. Walsingham's.

"Our medical man threatens me with typhoid fever and all manner of horrors if I keep my daughter here any longer," he said, "so we start for Engadine almost immediately. You will not stay much longer in Rome, I suppose."

"I don't know," answered Mrs. Walsingham, carelessly: "the place suits me better than any other. I am tired to death of London and Paris. There is some pleasure in life here; and I should like to be buried in the cemetery where Keats lies."

"Yes, it's a nice place to be buried in, if we must be buried at all; but that's rather a gloomy consideration. I should strongly advise you to spend the summer in a healthier climate, and leave the burial question to chance."

"Oh, I dare say I shall soon get tired of Rome. I always get tired of places before I have been very long in them; and if the artists go away, I shall go too."

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

A Changing Sea.

The Caspian Sea lies eighty-five feet below the level of the Black Sea, and is the greatest body of water in the world lying below the sea level. It is remarkable not only for this fact but for the changes that have occurred in its level. About the first century of our era, there is no doubt that the level of the sea stood eighty-five feet above its present horizon, and, of course spread over a vastly more extensive area than at present. The Russian Geological Society has printed a treatise, written by N. M. Philipof, on these remarkable changes of level. Since the early part of the Christian era, a genera and gradual decline of the level of the sea has taken place. In the eighteenth century, however, there appear to have been a few periods when the level rose. From the beginning of the present century there has been a fall, but since 1865, judging from recent observations, the level has been higher.

Lieutenant Sokoloff, a naval officer, while working in the Caspian region from 1843 to 1848, collected much information. He found that in the present century it had risen causing great apprehension among the inhabitants of an inundation, and giving rise to the belief in periodical variation every thirteen years. Lerch, while in Baku, in 1734 and 1747, found submerged buildings which had stood on dry land thirty years before, and he mentioned a saying of the Persians that the sea rose and fell alternately every thirty years. M. Philipof has made a special study of the whole question. Inquiring into the causes of these changes of level, he finds a variety of influences at work, such as the wind driving the water towards certain coasts, temperature of the air causing in summer evaporation and consequent fall in level. Rivers, rain and earthquakes are also among the active agencies causing fluctuations from month to month and from day to day.

Tim's Kit.

It surprised the shiners and newsboys around the postoffice the other day to see "Limpy Tim" come among them in a quiet way, and to hear him say:

"Boys, I want to sell my kit. Here's two brushes, a hull box of blacking, a good stout box, and the outfit for two shillins.'"

"Goin' away, Tim?" queried one.

"Not 'zactly, boys; but I want a quarter the awfullest kind just now."

"Goin' on a 'scursion?" asked another.

"Not to-day; but I must have a shilling," he answered.

One of the lads passed over the change and took the kit, and Tim walked straight to the counting-room of the daily paper, put down the money, and said:

"I guess I kin write, if you'll give me a pencil."

With slow-moving fingers he wrote a death notice. It went into the paper almost as he wrote it, but you may not have seen it. He wrote:

"Died—Litul Ted, of scarlet fever; aged three years. Funeral to-morrow, gone up to Heven: left one bruther."

"Was it your brother?" asked the cashier.

Tim tried to brace up, but he couldn't. The big tears came up, his chin quivered, and he pointed to the notice on the counter, and gasped:

"I—I had to sell my kit to do it, b—but he had his arms around my neck when he d—died."

He hurried away home; but the news went to the boys, and they gathered in a group and talked. Tim had not been home an hour before a barefoot boy left the kit on the doorstep, and in the box was a bouquet of flowers which had been purchased in the market by pennies contributed by the crowd of ragged but big-hearted urchins.

WORK IS HARD TO GET

HOW EMPLOYMENT EVADED ONE WHO SOUGHT IT.

Traveled Fifty Thousand Miles Looking for Labor—From the Mississippi to the Pacific and Then to the Atlantic—In a "Side-door" Pullman.

Tale of a Traveler.

It is a wide country, but a man seeking work may apply for it in every town in the United States between Bangor and Benicia and not find it, says a writer in a Chicago paper. Of course, employment may be found at once, but the chances are the other way. Herewith is given a specimen case. A railroader reached Chicago four days ago without money enough to pay for a meal. The stranger had been working in one of the railroad yards at East St. Louis until the hard times of '93 had thrown him out of work, and since that time had been, to use a phrase common among railroad men, "jumping sideways" all over the country.

RAISES THE PIE SIGN.

He was educated and intelligent, and had kept his eyes open during his trips in search of, as he termed it, "an office." He carried a very creditable letter of recommendation from Chesapeake and Ohio officials for a long term of service on the trains and in the yards of that railroad. In the story he told are many points of interest, chief of which is the fact that since he started on his so-far fruitless search for work he has been in every State and Territory in the United States, has compassed a journey of 50,000 miles by rail on a capital so slender that it would have given a professional tramp the blues. Here is his story in his own words:

"I lost my job in East St. Louis a year ago last June through a little law trouble. I fought the case because it was an endeavor made by a 'shark' lawyer to steal my wages, but in the end I lost both the law case and the job. I succeeded in proving to the superintendent the fact that I was right in fighting the case, and he recalled the order for my discharge, but I found out that my reinstatement meant the laying off of a man who had a family, so I told him to keep the job. I could hustle for one easier than he could for a half-dozen, and I thought if I tried I could find a job somewhere. Now I believe that I overestimated my ability as a hustler, for, while I have had clothes to wear and have staved off starvation, I am still 'short' on the job.

"I had sunk my small capital in getting my experience of 'the law as she is writ,' and had it not been for a friend I would have left the 'Queen city of Egypt' broke. The friend lent me $5, however, and I started West.

"I tried Kansas City, but it was full of railroad men waiting for business to pick up, so I kept on west to Denver. There were no signs of any improvement there, but the boys said: 'Keep on west; you'll catch on in the mountains sure.' So I decided to keep on. I went up to Cheyenne and got there at midnight, put up my last 'half' for lodging and breakfast and in the morning hit the superintendent for a job, but was told there were enough idle railroad men in Cheyenne to stock the division if need be. I was just a little blue. It was a toss-up' which way to go, so I struck out for the west coast."

Surprise was expressed at his undertaking such a journey under such conditions. The railroader laughed and said: "It is no trouble to do that in the west if you belong to anything. As far as traveling is concerned the local lodges of the railroad organizations all have contracts with the companies that, in addition to fixing the rate of pay, provide for the transportation of brothers who may be traveling looking for work. The west is almost perfectly organized, and a man will hardly get into a town before he is 'flagged' (giving the hailing sign) by some of the boys, and they never let him go hungry.

IN A NEW ENGLAND HAY FIELD.

Hoist the Pie Sign.

"If they are a little slow and the distance between meals gets too long for comfort the stranger can hoist the 'pie sign' (distress signal), and if there is a brother in the crowd it brings him forward.

"From Cheyenne I went to Ogden, Utah, where I struck the Central Pacific, and over that straight to the Golden Gate. I found from the trainmen I rode with that there was no show for work on any of the divisions on the way, so I kept right along. Sacramento, Oakland and San Francisco were as bad as any of the places I had been in. The railroad men were hanging together and hoping for better times, but it was trying business, as most of the men at work, and they were few enough, were 'holding up' from one to three idle brothers, hoping that in the near future business might revive and there be work enough for all. I saw plainly there was no use staying in any of these places, so I went down to Los Angeles on the Southern Pacific. The conditions there were no better. Railroad business in the West was completely paralyzed. I couldn't go any further west, so I started back east over the Southern Pacific, eventually landing in New Orleans after having interviewed every superintendent and trainmaster between the two points on the subject of work.

"I came up over the Louisville & Nashville to Cincinnati, and from there made side trips into Kentucky, West Virginia, and Ohio, to points where I thought there might be work, but it was 'no go,' and I was getting awfully tired traveling in the way I had for the last three months.

"I started out over the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton, intending to go through to Toledo, but at Hamilton, O., I ran across an old friend, and I stopped off to see him. I told him my story, and he laid off a few days to let me make a stake. I worked two weeks, and with the proceeds got me a cheap suit of clothes and a pair of shoes, but I was broke again when I started for Toledo.

"There was no chance for work there, so I went to Detroit, from there to Saginaw, and from the latter place up through Northern Michigan, across 'the Soo,' and after a trip across Wisconsin arrived in St. Paul. I could find no encouragement either in St. Paul or Minneapolis, and just because I did not know which way to go I started west again over the Northern Pacific.

'A conductor I had worked for twenty years ago was superintendent of one of the divisions out of St. Paul, and he got me a pass clear through. I stopped at all the principal points en route, but it was the same old story, 'No work and lots of men.'

"I tried Seattle, Tacoma, and Portland, Ore., but the search was in vain. The winter had set in, and the unemployed were almost starving and freezing to death in the big cities. In San Francisco I saw men wearing the insignia of the railroad orders working on the streets. They would have been glad to get away from the coast, but they had families and could not raise the money to move them; neither could they let their dear ones starve.

"I tried Los Angeles again, but it was worse than before: so I started out over the Santa Fe to Kansas City.

"I steered clear of Chicago, because almost every day I met squads of travelers, who, like myself, were railroad men, and they all said the city was overrun with unemployed men.

"I got to Kansas City in January and the people of that good city were on a continual hustle to keep their own unemployed from starving. I stayed one day with a friend and the next started over the Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham for Birmingham, Ala., determined to try the Eastern South. I did try it. I went over Alabama, Florida, and Georgia like a deputy marshal with a search warrant, and at last in March struck what looked like a regular job in the yards of the Georgia Southern and Florida Railway at Macon, Ga. They were handling an immense traffic in early vegetables. The job lasted twenty-three days; then came the worst freeze that country had ever experienced at that season of the year, and the vegetable trade was nil—likewise my job.

"I squared up, got another suit of clothes, and started again. I went to Atlanta, and from there to Norfolk, Va., across North and South Carolina. From Norfolk to Newport News, and from there to Washington by way of Richmond. From Washington I went to Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, and Boston, staying a few days in each place, but not long enough to affiliate with any of the 'commonweal' armies that were tramping over that country then.

In New England Hay Fields.

"From Boston I went all over the New England States, but with the single exception of a week in a hay field near Boston, couldn't find a thing to do.

"The railroad men in the Eastern States are a 'cold' lot, mostly natives who have never been outside the State they were born in, and who look on a traveling railroad man as they do a common tramp. I nearly starved out there, and you can tell all inquirers I'll never go East again.

"The night I started from Boston there were two 'Brotherhood' engineers and an O. R. C. man (Order Railway Conductors), who had been trying all day to get out over the 'Fitchburg' railway. We all wanted to come West, and we finally got out, but it was in a side-door Pullman—a box car.

"We got through to Rotterdam Junction, New York, and from there over the New York Central to Buffalo, where I left them and went through Western Pennsylvania to Pittsburg, but that city was no good, so I came on here over the Panhandle.

THE SIDE-DOOR PULLMAN.

"I started a year ago last June, and since then have been in every State and Territory of Uncle Sam's domain. I have ridden over somewhere near 200 railroads, have made applications for work in the offices of over 600 superintendents and trainmasters, and if I could have traveled in one direction all the time I would now have been fairly started on my third lap around the globe. I have tried to keep clean and, so far I haven't starved, though I shudder to think of the many meals I have 'run by,' and I have not slept in a bed for over two months now; haven't had my clothes off only when I could strike a river where I could take a bath. In my riding part of it has been on passes, part on 'card' or letters, and in a few instances, through the East, a box car."

NEGOTIATIONS FOR CLOTHES.

Curious Census Lessons.

Slowly the public is getting some intelligible ideas from the census compilation of four years ago. The clerks have at last figured out that there were then just 7,992,973 "home families" in the United States, which means probably that there were that many groups of persons living together. Of these almost five-eighths—in exact figures, 4,767,179—were on farms and the remainder in cities.

It thus appears that the country and the city population grouped in families is as five to three. Another statement is that the number of persons in a family is on an average less than five, so that the persons forming parts of the families are only about two-thirds of the total population. The other third, or about 20,000,000 persons, seem to be, therefore, living independently of family ties.

This is a rather curious showing. One-third of the entire population consists, presumably, of boarders, or of inmates of charitable and correctional institutions. As our paupers and criminals are not more numerous than those of other countries, the natural inference is that the habit of living in boarding-houses or hotels is far more prevalent than it is anywhere else.

Another thing that is surprising in these census figures of ours is, that we have fewer houses in proportion to population than the French have, for instance. In the United States the average is about five and a half persons to a house, while in France it is only four and three quarters, and yet the latter country is far more densely populated than even our oldest settled States along the North Atlantic coast.

The tendency is, however, toward fewer inhabitants to a house in this country. The decrease has been exceedingly slow but it has been fairly steady. In 1850 we had nearly six persons to a house, so that there has been a reduction of about half a person since then. On the principle of the fewer persons under the same roof the higher the grade of civilization, we are justified in congratulating ourselves on this fact.

Hard Times in Spain.

Great distress is prevalent among the laboring classes of Spain. Many hundreds of unemployed workingmen are walking the streets of Madrid, Cadiz and other cities in the vain search for work. One day recently 4,000 men went in a body to the government office in Madrid asking for relief in the shape of work for themselves and families. The government was able to do but little for them. Brigandage has greatly increased, and its spread is attributed to the distress among the rural population.

Skillful Jewelers.

The jewelry found recently in an excavation near one of the pyramids of old Memphis, Egypt, exhibits about as much skill in working gold and precious stones as now exists, although the articles found were made 4,300 years ago. The figures cut in amethyst and cornelian are described as exquisite and anatomically correct.

MADE it manifest: "Yes," said the eminent clergyman. "I nearly left the pulpit once to embark in a mercantile business, but the Lord wished me to continue his work." "How did you know He did?" "My congregation offered me $8,000 a year—and that was $2,000 more than I was offered in business."—Brooklyn Life.

IN all policies of life insurance these, among a host of other questions, occur: "Age of father, if living? Age of mother, if living?" A man in the country filled up his father's age, "if living," 112 years, and his mother's 102. The agent was amazed at this, and fancied he had secured an excellent customer, but feeling somewhat dubious, he remarked that the applicant came of a very long-lived family. "Oh, you see, sir," replied he, "my parents died many years ago, but 'if living' would be aged as there put down."—Tid-Bits.

Not Good for Kid Gloves.

In Paris elephant skins are tanned. The process is the ordinary one except that a very powerful extract of tannin is used. When the giant skin is taken from the vat it is nearly an inch and three-quarters thick. The tanned skin of the elephant, like that of the alligator, is used in the making of various fancy articles, and brings a high price, a small elephant leather valise costing $200 to $400, and cigar cases and card cases not less than $60 to $80.

J. G. SPENCER, democrat, nominated for congress in the 7th Texas district last week on the 1156th ballot.

REPUBLICANS have for years told how much they love the laboring man, but so far have placed not one law in his favor on the statue books of Indiana But they have opposed every law of the kind enacted by democrats.

PAPER imported brings the government a revenue of about $2,000 a year. But all the vast quantities of paper sold and used in this country costs more on account of this duty, though the paper is nearly all made here.

REPUBLICAN editors are trying to make farmers believe Canada will now ship in so much hay that the price will come down $2 a ton. But again we ask. What difference does it make whether the tariff is $4 a ton Haven't you always told us the foreigner paid it?

ESTIMATES are being made as to the complexion of the next House of representative. Republicans claim it will show 200 republicans, 147 democrats and 9 populists. Democrats claim it will show 190 democrats, 156 republicans and 10 populists. But of course it is all guesswork.

REPORTS from Madison, Franklin and other points, speak of scarcity of help. At these two towns thousand of bushels of tomatoes could not be canned, as not enough help could be got at the canneries to peel them. Where was Coxey and his unemployed "generals"? Making $100 speeches for the populists.

THE sugar trust has all needed advantage without a tariff or a bounty. They control a fourth of the business of the entire world, have better machinery more capital, and they control the buying as well as the selling in the best countries of the world. Democrats will not cease fighting this combine as well as all others.

REPUBLICANS "fear" that one article, sugar, will be higher under the new tariff. But when the McKinley bill went into operation several thousand articles went higher and only sugar went lower. And now, under the new law, leading merchants, including John Wanamker, are advertising their good "at lower prices because the new tariff makes things cheaper."

POPULISTS can't win. There is no need for a third party and thinking people realize it. A third party never accomplishes anything but to stand in the way of all improvements. In this county they are just in that condition. They claim everything but will not elect a county officer and they know it. They will not elect more than one township trustee, and may not do that much.

HAVEMEYER, the head of the sugar trust, was recently asked. "Which do you regard as most favorable to the sugar trust the McKinley law or the senate bill?" He replied. "I regard the McKinley law much better for the sugar trust, of course." Claus Spreckels, the other "sugar king" says he don't like the new bill as to its tariff on sugar. Now what will republican editors do for a complaint.

SUGAR producers, both the cane and beet, said the new tariff law would ruin their business because it knocked off the 2 cents a pound bounty. But a company has just been formed to make best sugar in Nebraska, with capital one million. The facts are, the sugar business like most others, pays well without a bounty or a protection duty. Protection and bounties are twin steals, that thoughtless voters vote on themselves to help someone else.

To Vote a Straight Ticket.

To vote a straight ticket stamp anywhere within the large square that contain, the rooster, the eagle, rising sun, or the plow and hammer, but stamp NOWHERE ELSE not even the small squares at the left.

To Vote a Mixed Ticked.

Do NOT stamp in the big square at all, but go through stamping the small square at the left of the names you wish to vote for on any ticket.

How to Proceed.

The Poll Clerk hands you three tickets a pink one with state ticket of all four parties on it; a white one with all four of the county tickets on it; a yellow one with all four of the township tickets on it. Go into the booth and stamp each one, in the way directed above, then fold each one separately in such a way that all names are on the inside and out of sight, and the poll clerks' names will be in sight on the outside, then come out of the booth, and give these three folded, separate tickets to the inspector, and give the stamp to the poll clerk.

The W. C. T. U. County Convention.

The Annual County Convention was held in the Baptist Church last Wednesday and was one of the most intresting meetings ever held. Mrs. Jones, the county president presided. Miss Laura Keeran conducted the devotional exercises in the forenoon. Mrs. Barns, of Auburn, gave the delegates a cordial welcome in a few words. Mrs. Kagey, of St. Joe, responded in a very pleasant manner. Then came the President's address by Mrs. Jones, of Garrett. Following this came the reports of Secretary, Treasurer and Superintendents. A paper on "Health and Heredity," by Mrs. E. J. McCord, was excellent, The devotional exercises were conducted in the afternoon by Mrs. Bogert, of Garrett, followed by "Temperance Literature," a paper by Mrs. Shower, of Waterloo. A very excellent Parliamentary Drill was given by Mrs. Ehlers. which was made very interesting by a real drill, in which the members took a part. Mrs. Cuppy sang a very sweet and appropriate song, "The bird with a broken wing." This was followed by a talk by Mrs. Ehlers on "Social Purity," which was most excellent, and should have been heard by every mother and daughter in Auburn, Mrs. Campbell gave a very interesting talk on the necessity of "Scientific Temperance Instruction in our Public Schools." The election of officers followed, which resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Jones; Vice President, Mrs. Long, of Waterloo; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Leighty, of St. Joe; Treasurer, Mrs. Vivian, of Garrett; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Olds, of Auburn. The next mid-year meeting will be held in Waterloo some time in the Spring.

Revival at Waterloo.

The revival meetings in the Christian church at Waterloo, still continue with large audiences and an increasing interest. Rev. Scofield is State Evangelist for the Christian church, and is a very forcible, and logical speaker. He is a teacher as well as a preacher. On last Lords Day at 4 p. m. a meeting for "men only" was held by the Evangelists, and a large attendance was present to listen to the warning of the speaker against the "sins of the sterner sex", and their results. On next Lord's Day, at 3 p. m. a meeting for "men only," will be held, and every man old and young will do well to go and hear this lecture, for none can but profit by hearing the words of warning. Prof. Hackleman the singing Evangelist has won the hearts of all, by his sweet gospel songs. He is a thorough musician, and composer of many of the songs he sings at these meetings. His rendition of "the Mother's Lament" and "Saved by Mother's Prayer" the latter his own composition, was very touching and left a deep impression of "pity" for the "wandering boys" on his hearers. The meetings will continue from night to night, indefinitely.

Court.

The judge came down Monday forenoon to work through his last term of court as judge of the 35th Judical circuit. He had just completed his last term in Steuben. Work began at once. The grand jury was organized and set at work. That afternoon they went out to the county Home on the regular visit of inspection. L. W. Treesh was made their foreman. The other members are as given last week: J. E. Dermott, Alex. Provines, J. H. Farver, Solomon Deetz and S. J. Tarney.

Probate work came on in court, and in the afternoon the matter between the "Long Distance Telephone Co." and Lyman Lockwood was brought up. It was caused by the company misrepresenting matters, Mr. Lockwood claims, when they asked to come across his farm with their line of posts they asked the privilege of going through and he said they might, but claimed they afterwards showed a written permit with his name to it. And then he thought best to change his mind, and not let them have the right of way. This has delayed the completion of the line for some weeks. While this was going on, a couple were getting ready to get married. Adelia Hummer claimed that Geo. W. White had promised to marry her, and had failed to do so. She asked his honor to haul George over the coals. After some discussion George thought best to live up to his word. Clerk Moody, who had just started off to his supper, was called back, and a license was made out. Then the couple, who are about forty years old stood up at the bidding of Judge Powers, who at once hustled them into the state of matrimony and they walked out of court, man and wife. The case of Lockwood was settled, later on, Judge McClellan, for the company arranged that Judge Powers should appoint three men to assess damages. Yesterday Judge Powers was sick and Judge Best, of Angola presided in his place.

Card of Thanks.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Pepple and other friends and relatives wish to thank their kind neighbors and all who assisted them in their late sorrow, the sickness and death of Mrs. Erehart, Mrs. Pepple's mother. Their good deeds will not be forgotten.

G. H. YESBERA,

The Leading TAILOR and CLOTHIER.

DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES.

We this week, for the second time, call attention to all the candidates on the democratic ticket. We have been able to have even the ticket itself in only a part of the time, owing to the crowded state of our columns. This week we add two pages to our paper, so we have room, not only for the mere ticket, but have the greater part displayed as it will be in the ballots to be voted. We call brief attention to each office.

For Congress.

It seems needless to add anything to what we said in our first issue after the congressional convention. But there seem to be a few who persist in misunderstanding or misquoting what we then said. As the leading democratic paper here, the COURIER would not feel justified in keeping up a fight which might, and probably would, injure our local ticket. What has been done, is done, and as far as we are concerned, is over with. If those who have persisted in keeping up their attacks on us, choose to do so, they will themselves only be to blame. We have a most excellent county ticket, whose interests must not be jeopardized. It is a question between a democratic victory and a republican victory and the COURIER takes the stand it always has. It will lead in the fight and proposes to enjoy the victory.

For Judge.

CYRUS CLINE, candidate on the democratic ticket, is a well known attorney at Angola, a clear headed, intelligent and well posted man. He is well equipped for the place to which he aspires, and stands pledged to reduce court expenses at every point possible, to the end that some of the expenses complained of may be made less. He believes justice can be secured at a much less cost to the taxpayers and, if elected, as he hopes to be, he will do his part to secure this needed reduction. He also promises to push court work as much as possible in order to assist in reducing expenses and securing the prompt finishing up of cases. To assist in this, he will, if elected, come to Auburn at the beginning of each term of court and remain here till the term is over, or at least till all the work is done and the work can stop. Of course when court is running at Angola he would be there, as that is his home. We do not know how a man could do better than this. He is a ripe scholar, was county superintendent of schools for several years, and is, besides, popular with members of the bar.

For Prosecutor.

L. J. Gengler, at Garrett, is well known in court circles, as well as with the people at large, for he has been deputy prosecutor for a number of years. He has shown ability and judgment in prosecuting state cases, and while he has always tried to secure the conviction of the guilty, he has not permitted his own feelings to be warped into a prosecution for mere spite work or personal advantage. He will make an excellent officer.

For Representative.

Dr. Fred. B. Wood, candidate for representative, is a well known resident of Garrett, where he has for many years had a large practice as a physician. He served one term as coroner and has always been a leading democrat, having made speeches over the county in several compaigns He is doing this now in his own behalf and in behalf of his party. Attempts made to smirch him during this campaign should be met squarely. He has been represented as given to hard drink. Such is not the case. We believe some years ago, this might have been the case, but those intimately associated with him assure us he is now a total abstainer and we believe them. Let this lie be nailed now.

For Commissioner.

NORTH DISTRICT.

Mr. Shultz, candidate for commissioner of the north district, is a man of more than ordinary intelligence and ability. He is a man of ripe experience, good judgment, and a wide knowledge of men and all kinds of business. He has by his own good management made himself comfortable in life. He is no chronic office seeker and people who vote for him will secure for the county one of the best managers we ever had. No one will regret having assisted to secure for the county, a clear headed, painstaking commissioner.

SOUTHWEST DISTRICT

Robert S. S. Reed is a man of the kind the people have long asked for. He is careful and particular and looks to where every dollar of the public money goes As township trustee, he is one of the best that Union township ever had. No public money goes to waste. A job must be done exactly as the contract reads or it is not accepted. It is this valuable point in his official career that has got one or two men down on him. They are now working to elect his competitor. The people should see that Mr. Reed gets the necessary support, for he is the man the county needs.

For Clerk.

Sol. Barney is one of the ab'est and brightest business men of the county—just the sort of man the county should have in its offices. Bright, brainy and well posted in all lines of business, Mr. Barney stands head and shoulders above his competitor. He does not appeal to the voters because he has failed in all other lines. We have seen enough of that. He comes to us as a man who has succeeded in his own business, and will therefore succeed in public business. Don't make any mistakes. Barney for clerk.

For Auditor.

Frank A. Borst is the best known man who ever occupied a place on the democratic ticket of this county. He has for several years been the chief worker in the office he now seeks to fill as principal. There is no detail he does not understand, and in all these years, no errors of any account can be charged to his work. Look over his record of faithful service. That is all that is needed to secure your good opinion. He has been faithful and honest. Ask him to come up higher.

For Treasurer.

Henry Hines is a successful farmer and sawmill man, who has always stood high in his own vicinity. He is making an honorable and manly canvass. A vote for him is a vote to continue the excellent management of the county treasury. He is now out among the people, and makes a friend every time he meets a man. Give Mr. Hines charge of the funds and not a dollar gets away.

For Sheriff.

Geo. C. Ralston is our candidate for this important place. "Coop" has made a most excellent sheriff. We doubt if the county ever had a better one. He has proved especially valuable in his work with the criminal classes. He began his first week of service by running in a lot of toughs and has been doing this good work ever since. The people of this class have come to fear him as well as respect him. So well are all classes of people satisfied with him that we look to see his majority increased this year. It should be done.

For Recorder.

John P. Crummins is still a young man, but has been in employments demanding high business talents and strict integrity. By the vicissitudes of railroad business, he has been out of employment for a time, but like an industrious man, has turned his talents in the line of abstract business, as his misfortune, the loss of a leg, prevents his going into more active work. He is a good scholar excellent penman, sober, and of good morals, No better selection could be made.

For Surveyor.

Cal. VanAuken, the candidate for surveyor has proved a grand success, and has made his office one of great value, and immense saving to the people. He has been able to conduct the business of this difficult office, not only efficiently, but economically. The expense of the office is several thousand a year less than heretofore and Mr. VanAuken should have credit for much of this saving and efficiency. It looks as if everybody would vote for him.

For Coroner.

Charles Comesky is the candidate for coroner. We do not look on the office as a very desirable one, or one in which a man can shine. But we feel sure that as far as honest service goes. Mr. Comesky will fill the bill. We hear no one objecting to him. Give him a hearty support.

The telephone cabinet for the long distance telephone at Davenport's drugstore is quite a curiosity. The person who takes or sends a message shuts himself into the cabinet, and it is made so close, with double doors, that no sound comes in to bother him. It would prove a great advantage in the use of the common telephone, as everyone, knows how any little noise or talking interferes with the receiving of a message

R. W. Cobb was severely criticised after the century run of Sept. 7, for setting too hot a pace between Auburn and Fort Wayne, but the larger majority were satisfied, and some complained because the pace was not fast enough. It will be seen, however, that Mr. Cobb knew his business, as in the Century run of Oct 1st, he made the run to Fort Wayne in 1 hour and 35 minutes and no stops, and completed the run of 100 miles in 9 hours and 27 minutes, inclusive of stops. Several of the less experienced riders had bet Mr. Cobb $50 that he or no other man could run a Century within the twelve hour limit over the course between Auburn and Huntington and ride the first 22½ miles in the time made on Sept. 7th, which was 2 hours and five minutes, inclusive of stops, or 1 hour and 45 minutes, actual riding time. He has demonstrated that it can be done 2½ hours better than the 12 hour limit, and would have been in 1 hour better had he not been delayed between Auburn and Fort Wayne by a loose pedal and a lost wrench, as he was the first to leave Fort Wayne after Cohagen, being only 25 minutes behind.

If you have not yet procured one of those pretty watch case openers, get one from your jeweler, or send to Philadelphia. They are furnished free by the Keystone Watch Case Company. Besides making a handsome charm for your chain, they save your fingernails and knife blades. The Keystone Company is the largest of its kind in the world, and makes all kinds of cases, from the low-priced nickel to the most expensive solid gold. Its great specialty is the Jas. Boss filled case. Jas. Boss invented and made the first filled case in 1859, and many of the cases then made and worn since are still intact. Later the Boss patents passed into the hands of the Keystone Watch Case Company, which has the sole right to make these cases, Boss cases are known to all jewelers as the standard, after which all other filled cases are patterned. All Keystone cases, Boss cases included, have the far famed Non-pull-out bow or ring. It is the only bow that is securely fastened to the case, and can only be had on cases made by this company. It prevents loss of the watch by theft and injury by dropping. These cases are handled by all jewelers, as the company itself does not retail. 40

Century Run.

The second Century run from Auburn took place Monday morning, Oct. 1st, starting at 5-39½. Seven started and all went to Huntington and back in less than 12 hours, except one. The names and hour of returning are:

Will E. Cohagen, Auburn,	1-26 p. m.
R. W. Cobb, Auburn,	3 6½ p. m.
Wm. McComb, Auburn.	6-10 p. m.
A. Goodwin, Pleasant Lake,	2-58½ p. m.
F. E. Johnson, Kendallville,	3-2½ p. m.
A. B. Cowley, Kendallville,	3 4½ p. m.
E. A. Warner, Swan,	3-3½ p. m.

Mr. Cobb lost about an hour on his return, owing to a loose pedal. Some joined the run at Fort Wayne but did not complete it. Cohagen will have the gold medal. McComb, who just missed getting home in 12 hours, gets a silver medal, but not admittance to the Century Club of Northern Indiana.

NEW JERSEY has a State hangman named James Van Hise, and he officiated at the recent execution of Altenberger, who was hanged for murdering Katie Rupp a year and a half ago. The fee for hanging a man is $250, and Van Hise made application to the Sheriff at Jersey City for his pay. He was disgusted at ascertaining that a garnishee suit on an old debt that he supposed was forgotten had got in ahead of him. He declared that it was a new way of "cheating the hangman."

EGYPT'S cotton crop aggregated 1,000,000 bales the tenth year since cotton has been grown to any extent in the land of the lotus. The Egyptians have under consideration plans for irrigating the fertile valley of the Nile which will turn a vast acreage into a most prolific cotton field, the product of which can readily supply the markets of the world. In the land of the Pharaoh our southern States have a dangerous rival, one that threatens to almost crush out their biggest industry.

ONE M. Bersier, of France, has invented a device by which the compass is made to act as helmsman. When the ship strays from the course for which the instrument has been set, an electric current starts a motor by which the rudder is made to turn the vessel back into its proper course. Great accuracy and no loss of distance in a run of twenty-four hours are claimed for the mechanism, which is said to have been successfully tried for two months.

STEEL is now cheaper than iron. It seems hardly possible, but the estimates of cost in a recent bidding for a bridge in Pennsylvania to be made with steel stringers and steel rivets was lower than a like estimate for the same bridge made with iron stringers and iron rivets. Four bids were made, and in each case the bridge could be made cheaper of steel than of iron. The successful bid was $1,965, as against $2,157, which was the lowest bid for the iron bridge. Owing to the greater strength of steel, the weight of metal in the steel bridge is much less than it must necessarily be for one of iron.

IT is possible that Burglar John Thompson got something in his raid, but it is not likely to do him much good. Thompson entered a house at 4013 Armour avenue, Chicago, and ransacked it, but met only with disappointment. He was arrested as he was leaving, but protested that he got nothing. The officer was doubtful, however, and there seems to be a possibility that Thompson was mistaken. The house was stocked with small-pox germs, and health officers are now endeavoring to take an inventory to see how many Thompsons may have carried away. Of course, it must be admitted that Thompson displayed enterprise, but we doubt whether his line of work ever will become popular. Few people are so hard up that they care to break into a house to steal small-pox.

A BOSTON professor of mathematics has got into trouble by attempting to do a simple sum in addition on the plan made so popular by Cupid. It is a well-known fact that Cupid makes 1 plus 1 equal 1, and that is what Professor L. Derry Passano, of the Boston School of Technology, tried to do in Baltimore. The sum apparently came out all right, but later it was found there was something to carry. It was nothing but a bruise or two made by the fist of the bride's father, but it disturbed the Professor's calculations, and for a time he was not sure that 1 plus 1 was not going to equal 0. Groom and father were separated in time to preserve their anatomy, however, and at latest accounts Cupid's arithmetic had proved correct. Aside from the mathematical feature of the case, it is something of a surprise to learn that a Baltimorean dared object to a representative of classic Boston. True, Miss Bissell, the bride, was only 16 years old, but it must be conceded that a Boston professor has education enough for two, and it is not necessary for his wife to finish school. Mr. Bissell ought to have known that. He was taking big chances in tackling a man from Sullivan's city, anyway.

THE Southern States are said to contain at least 70,000,000 acres of waste land which might be devoted to the production of rice. This would increase the present annual crop of 237,000,000 pounds to 70,000,000,000 pounds.

AT Liveamento, Uruguay, the other day, four highwaymen attacked the house of Pedro Cruxen, a merchant, and demanded $2,000. He replied that he had no money in the house. The bandits threw him on the floor, but he recovered himself, drew his revolver and shot three of his assailants dead. When the bodies were identified they were found to be regular soldiers, of whom one was a Captain, another a Major and the others their orderlies. It would be interesting to know if the immediate need of cash came from the necessity of paying a gambling debt of honor. A good many of the South American armies seem to bear some of the earmarks of the Italian mercenaries of the times of Signor Cellini, he of the memoirs and the stabbing matches, the easy conscience and the divine art. The difficulty with our far Southern friends is that they are not so strong on the æsthetic side.

IT would evidently be a wise thing for the States of Wisconsin and Minnesota, as well as all other States in which there are vast tracks of wooded land, to take some official action toward ascertaining the causes of the late great forest fires. It is obviously impossible to prevent occasional outbreaks in these immense stretches of timber. Nor does it seem at all possible successfully to fight the flames in their course when once started. It is, however, by no means unlikely that the respective State governments could in a measure forefend such terrible fatalities as those at Hinckley, either by making official arrangements for the warning of the inhabitants or by enacting legislation compelling the extensive clearing of timber around every town or village. At least, it seems only prudent that the people in these forest towns should be provided with proper means of escape or else required to provide themselves with such a safeguard. Were certain areas of the forest tract divided into districts, each district provided with a safe clearing or other easily accessible place of refuge and a systematic plan adopted for the transportation of people thither in time of danger, such catastrophes as those recently witnessed in the north might be considerably mitigated, if they cannot be wholly averted.

Animals that Seldom Drink.

Several species of reptilia, serpents, and lizards, and certain batrachians, exist in regions remote from water, and derive their necessary moisture from absorption and inspiration, taking no perceptible quantity through the mouth. The wild llamas of Patagonia are said not to drink, because in the locality they inhabit there is nothing but salt water to be found. Sloths are also said to live without drinking. Rabbits have also been credited with this power, but the late Rev. J. G. Wood recorded the fact that they feed on herbage when laden with dew, and in this way do their eating and drinking at the same time. A stony, waterless region of France has evolved a race of animals that do not drink. The sheep feeding upon the fragrant herbs have altogether lost the habit of drinking, and the cows drink very little. Roquefort cheese is made from the milk of non-drinking cows. The camel has been known to go twelve or fourteen days without water, carrying 300 lbs. and sometimes 400 lbs weight. A parrot is said to have lived in the Zoological Gardens, Regent's Park, London, fifty-two years without a drink of water.

THEY have a new hanging machine in New Hampshire. The victim will be his own executioner. When he steps upon a certain part of the scaffold his weight will open a valve which will set in motion machinery that will quickly jerk him high in the air. The body will then drop and hang suspended, thus making the snapping of the vertebræ doubly certain. These are rather grewsome details of the workings of the latest legal engine of death, but if the contrivance performs its work satisfactorily it may solve the problem of exterminationg criminals without such revolting scenes as have been associated with so many executions in the past.

STANDS TRIUMPHANT.

BRILLIANT RECORD OF THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

Living Made Cheaper and Taxes Greatly Reduced—Pernicious Legislation of Republicans Corrected—Great Speech of Senator Voorhees at Terre Haute.

Talked for Two Hours.

Senator Voorhees opened the Indiana Democratic campaign in Armory Hall at Terre Haute. Nearly 1,500 people were present. The Senator's speech was read from manuscript and required nearly two hours in delivery. Senator Voorhees is billed for twenty-five speeches in Indiana during the campaign. The Senator said:

The theory of this Government is that the people govern themselves through their representatives, chosen at short intervals, and at free, untrammeled elections. In framing and adopting the Constitution under which we now live, our great forefathers planted it firmly and squarely on the broad doctrine of self-government. They proclaimed to the ends of the earth their faith in the virtue, the intelligence and the sovereignty, not only of their own patriotic generation, but of all the generations which were to follow in this mighty republic. In this doctrine is contained the full and pure essence of American liberty.

SENATOR VORHEES.

There is no power above that which has been given to you by the Constitution. A stream can never rise higher than its fountain. From the beginning of the present century, when Jefferson was inaugurated President, down to the present hour, the Democratic party, through good and through evil report, through sunshine and through storm, in peace and in war, in its times of victory, and in its times of defeat, has never failed to thus assert the power of the people, and thus interpret the Constitution. The Democratic party has never recognized any control of the people except their own, nor any master except themselves. There is not an official personage in all this broad land, from your township trustee to your President at Washington, who can add to or take away one jot or tittle of your supremacy. You are the only people on the face of the globe to whom are guaranteed the inalienable rights of man in a written constitution. You are dependent on the bounty, grace and favor of no man or set of men, however powerful, for your freedom of speech, for your freedom of the press, your freedom of religious worship, without let or hindrance from secret and treasonable, oath-bound societies, the habeas corpus, your trial by jury, your civil supremacy over all military power, and your right to equal and exact justice before the law, whatever may be your state or persuasion, religious or political.

In thus pointing out the plenitude of your power and your unassailable sovereignty in the administration of your government, I have on this occasion a distinct object in view. I am one of your public servants, now many years in your employment, and I fully recognize, as I have always done, the duty I owe in rendering an account on all proper occasions of the stewardship with which you have intrusted me. I also stand to-day, as I have stood for more than a third of a century, for the honor, the integrity, the justice, the patriotism, and the triumph of the Democratic party. If there are those who think this a dark hour for the great old party of Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson, Seymour, Hendricks, McDonald, Thurman, and Cleveland, I do not agree with them on that point. I have seen dark hours in the political sky in my day and generation; I know what they look like. I have seen the clouds of coming disasters gathering in inky blackness low down over our heads, but it was only when the government itself, and all guarantees of liberty and union, were threatened with the same overthrow and destruction which seemed impending over the Democratic party. As long as the constitution survives, the party whose charge it has always been to maintain that instrument in all its purity and strength will survive also. When the republic itself shall fall, like a bright exhalation from the heavens to rise no more, then, and only then, will the Democratic party fall, its avocation gone, and the world shrouded in gloom and despair. But the present is not the hour for dismal forebodings; it is an hour rather for rational discussion, and for a well-grounded faith in the prosperity and glory of the future, arising from the sure and steady ascendancy of Democratic principles. The victorious legions of the Indiana Democracy, veterans of more glorious campaigns than the legions of Cæsar or Napoleon ever knew, are again in line, firm as in the days of old, and ready to move forward on the enemies' works of usurpation, spoliation and oppression.

And now, citizens of Indiana, let us take a survey of the political situation, and by the solemn light of recorded and undisputed facts fix the responsibility of parties, and vindicate the truth. What a vision rises to our view as we look backward for the causes which have led up to the present condition of the country! A solid mass of Republican legislation from 1861 to 1893 confront us. In all that space of American history, embracing the average period of a lifetime, every enactment of whatever kind or description, every law, whether by bill or joint resolution, is of unquestioned Republican origin, pedigree and adoption. From the first inauguration of Abraham Lincoln on the 4th of March, 1861, to the last inauguration of Grover Cleveland, on the 4th of March, 1893, the Democratic party has never, for a single day or hour, had the power to put a law on the statute books of the nation. During that long period the Democratic party never at any one and the same time had possession of both houses of Congress and the Presidency, and was, therefore, incapable of perfecting any proposed measure of legislation. If evil influences have been abroad in the land arising from pernicious legislation, the responsibility and the odium can alone rest where the power to legislate has rested. There is a brutal and senseless accusation in certain quarters at this time against the Democratic party because it has not in the first eighteen months of its legislative ascendancy, been able to uproot, tear down and demolish the entire system of vicious legislation whereby the Republican party for more than a generation has practically revolutionized this government, made it a plutocracy instead of a government of the plain people, established privilege and caste in all our public affairs; made the rich richer and the poor poorer, aggrandized the power of capital and oppressed every organization of labor and every branch of industry under the American flag. I defy the ingenuity of man to show where, and in what instance, the leaders of the Republican party ever devised, framed or enacted a financial measure of any kind into a law which was not originated and dictated by organized capital and against labor, whether organized or unorganized.

The stability of public credit was also menaced by vicious legislation on the subject of silver, as well as by the plunder of the the treasury and the destruction of revenue by the doctrine of protection. More than twenty years ago the great and unforgiven and unforgivable crime of silver demonetization took place at the hands of the Republican party and, although afterwards partially restored, yet from that time to the present hour silver money, instead of being treated in the money world as it is in the constitution, as the constitutional coequal of gold as a standard currency, has been kept in a maimed and crippled condition, spurned, clubbed and stoned at every opportunity by those interested in the contraction of the currency to the narrow basis of gold alone.

Speaking at the time in my place in the Senate I made the following statement and from it I never expect to depart:

"As a firm, unfaltering believer in bimetallism, and as an undeviating supporter of the coinage and use of both gold and silver as the standard money of the country, without discriminating against either metal, I voted against the passage of the Sherman act, and for the same reason I shall vote for its repeal. The outcry in certain quarters at this time that those who vote for the repeal of this measure are the enemies of silver as money and in favor of its demonetization is not only false, so far as I am concerned, but in the light of what has happened in the past, it is absurd."

For some months past you have often heard the sneering and somewhat idiotic inquiry as to what the Democratic party has done since it came into power. I would say in all kindness to our Republican friends, that we have been engaged thus far, day and night, and to the point of utter exhaustion, both physical and mental at times, in undoing and reforming the wretched and dangerous work you left when the people rose in their majesty and turned you out. The author of the Sherman act himself, and every leading Republican newspaper organ in the United States, denounced it as fraught with business ruin, and clamored to Mr. Cleveland's administration for its instant repeal.

The passage of the McKinley act in 1890 was the culmination of that system by which taxes are levied on one class of people for the benefit of another class, and it was so shameless, arrogant and insolent in all its features, so revolutionary, unjust and oppressive in its exactions on labor and the fruits of labor, that it became at once a trumpet call to battle for its repeal, and for the final overthrow of the hideous principle of legislative piracy on which it was based. Popular resentment arose like a spontaneous flame against a measure so unrighteous, so subversive of the inherent rights of man. No enactment in American history has ever been more odious to the American people than the McKinley law of tariff taxation. Not even the fugitive slave law of 1850 was held in greater abhorrence and detestation throughout the North than this measure of wickedness and extortion throughout the whole country. I do not hesitate to declare that the bill which passed both houses of Congress, and became a law on the 28th day of August, 1894, whatever its other merits or defects may be, will do more in the aggregate toward the inevitable reduction of duties, and consequently will make a longer stride in the direction of freedom in trade and commerce than any other measure ever enacted into law by the American Congress. While repealing the McKinley act, we provided that at least $30,000,000 a year should be collected hereafter from people who have good net incomes, rather than from people who have nothing but their wants, and their labor with which to meet them. What is this, but a transfer of taxation for the support of the government from the laboring poor to the idle and comfortable rich? What is it but a relief from high protection, and a direct and powerful blow to the whole protective system?

In regard to the general operations of the new Democratic tariff law it has made certain the replenishment of the treasury and removed all risk of a further increase in the permanent national debt. Again, it insures the cheapening, to a substantial extent, of the multitude of necessaries and comforts of life, reducing the cost of living for every household, without weakening the resources of the government. Clothing of every description, cloths, dress goods, blankets and carpets will be cheaper and better everywhere for its passage. Imported food, woods and lumber, china and glassware, pocket knives and table knives, nearly all the completed goods, the use of which is so large a part of civilized life, to gether with the materials of which they are made, share in the large reductions of duty. These changes alone will certainly, within a few months, make every man's daily earnings more valuable to him than now. But they will do far more than this. They will do much to revive depressed industry and to restore general prosperity.

But now, as my remarks are drawing to a close, perhaps some one in my audience, some kind friend, Democrat or Republican, no matter which, here to-night, wants to inquire again, and something more in detail, what the fifty-third Democratic Congress has done thus far. Let me answer in the splendid language of Speaker Crisp:

"We have not done all we hoped to do; we have done more in the past year to redress the wrongs of the people; we have done more for their relief than was ever done by any party in the same length of time in any country under the sun. These are bold words, yet I hold myself at all times ready to defend them. Coming into power at a time of panic, when business was at a standstill, when labor was unemployed, when our treasury was empty, with courage and fidelity we entered upon a struggle with the enemies of the people. We emerged from the struggle victorious in this:

"We have repealed the McKinley law.
"We have greatly reduced taxation.
"We have made living cheaper.
"We have made all money taxable.
"We have taxed surplus incomes.
"We have restored freedom of elections.
"We have reduced public expenditures and we have declared undying hostility to all trusts and monopolies organized for the oppression of the people. On these foundations we 'build our house;' on these issues we go before the people. For there we have 'fought the good fight,' to them we have kept the faith and we have no fear."

Turning from national affairs, however, at this point to the affairs of our own great and beloved State, I am ready to make answer as to what the Democratic party has also done for the people of Indiana. During the last ten years Democratic Legislatures in Indiana have enacted the following laws for the benefit and protection of wageworkers and employed laborers.

1. The law protecting labor organizations.
2. The law giving laborers a lien upon the product of their labor for wages and material furnished.
3. The law creating a mechanic's lien.
4. The law making a day's work in public employment consist of eight hours.
5. The law providing for the ventilation of mines and the safety of miners.
6. The law prohibiting the blacklisting of employes.
7. The law protecting workmen from being cheated and imposed upon in what are known as "pluck-me" stores.
8. The law regulating the liability of employes.
9. The law against the importation of alien or foreign laborers.
10. The law repealing the so-called conspiracy act of 1881.
11. The law requiring employers to provide seats for female employes in stores and factories.
12. The law protecting labor union labels.
13. The law providing for a standard coal screen for the protection of miners.
14. The law providing for the payment of wages every two weeks.
15. The great and just law making it a penal offense to bring into this State armed men, whether Pinkerton detectives or any organized force, for the purpose of shooting down laboring people.

Amendments in the future will here and there be made where experience points out their wisdom, and the lines of Democratic legislation will be pushed up at certain points, on raw materials, a little closer to an absolute freedom of trade, but it is due to the reviving business interests of the whole land to say that there is no reserved purpose in any party to recast the tariff schedules again or to rip up by general legislation the present law unless, after a fair, practical test, it should be found necessary to do so. But of the future workings of the law we have so recently made I have neither fear nor doubt. Although born amid the bitter scenes of party strife and fierce, avaricious contentions, yet it contains the spirit of liberty, equality and justice—liberty for the commerce of nations, equality for American citizens—without protection for any which is not given to all, and justice to American labor, which upholds everything and pays for all.

BUSINESS IS GOOD.

TEXTILE INDUSTRIES THRIVING AS NEVER BEFORE.

Revival Begun Immediately After the Passage of the Senate Tariff Bill, and Still Continues—Price of Wool Above McKinley Prices of Two Months Ago.

No "Calamity" Now.

The great prosperity, in the textile industries, that began immediately after the passage of the Senate bill, has been continued. It now seems certain that not only will free wool give us cheaper and better clothing, but that it will be the salvation of the woolen industry. The Woolen Reporter devotes a page every week to a "Bulletin of New Enterprises," which, however, includes mills shutting down as well as starting up; but since the passage of "the free trade Wilson bill," which was to "annihilate" the woolen industry, the record has been a remarkable one—probably better than for any two or three weeks during the four years of McKinleyism.

For the week ending Sept. 6, the Reporter mentions five new mills, twenty-eight enlargements and improvements, and twenty mills starting up, one of which has been closed nine months and another five years. Rawitzer Bros., of Stafford Springs, are mentioned as having settled with their dissatisfied weavers, giving them a 5 per cent. advance in wages. Of the five shut-downs mentioned one is "for the usual week's vacation and two are because of low water." The record is marred only by the shut-down of one mill because of "lack of orders," and another because of "accumulation of stock." The record for the week ending Sept. 13 is even better. During this week there were fifteen items under the column headed "New Mills." One of the mills mentioned is to have 48,000 spindles, and is to be the largest cotton mill in the South. Another, for making cotton, wool and worsted yarn, is to occupy a building 110 by 200 feet, which structure alone is to cost $30,000. "The plans for the new plant," says the Reporter, "have been ready for some time, but it is said the construction of the mill depended upon the settlement of the tariff question."

Under the column "Enlargements and Improvements" there are 18 mentions. Under the column "Starting Up and Shutting Down" 20 mills are mentioned as having started or about to start up. One of these has been closed since April last, another over a year, and a third for two years. All three are woolen mills. Only four are mentioned as shutting down, one to make repairs, another for two weeks, another because of a death, and the last is running on short time on account of low water. The record for the week ending Sept. 20 is just as good. The Reporter mentions 10 "new mills," 14 "enlargements and improvements," 26 "starting up," and 5 "shutting down." Several of those starting up have been shut down for months or years, and some are working with increased forces. Four of the shut downs are due to low water or to make repairs, and the other is unexplained. During the three weeks under the new tariff law there have been 30 new mills, 60 enlargements and improvements, 66 starting up, and only 14 closing down—all but two or three for reasons other than lack of orders. Such prosperity as this is going to cut a wide swath in the Republican majorities planned for the November election.

No Calamity for the Wool Grower.

The price of wool continues about 10 per cent. above the McKinley prices of two months ago. They are exasperating to the political wool growers who have told us a thousand times that prices would go all to pieces when wool should be made free. Worst of all, there seems to be no prospect of them declining. Here is what the Dry Goods Economist of Sept. 22 says: "The New York wool market during the past week has been steady and strong. The sales have been considerable, and have represented nearly all classes of wool. Special favor has been shown for desirable lots of Territory and for well-grown spring Texas. There is also considerable inquiry for the fall Texas clip, but as these wools will not reach this market for a week or two, no transactions are reported of the new fall clip. Some sales have been made in the wools sheared in the fall of '93, and prices are fully sustained and indicate that the fall clip, soon to arrive from Texas, will be favorably received and bring good values.

"Altogether, domestic wools seem very good property, and manufacturers are not asking any concessions from ruling prices."

The Wages Humbug.

Farmers sell their staples both at home and abroad at "free-trade prices," made in "the cheapest markets in the world." They compete against Egypt and India, where the lowest wages prevail. Have they reduced wages to the same level? Not they. England has practically free trade. But English wages have not been reduced to the Asiatic level. So far from that, they are higher than those of any other country in Europe. This talk about wages is the cheapest kind of humbug. Sweep away utterly the admitted injustice of protection and the vast natural wealth and marvellous industrial genius of this country will make wages here higher than anywhere else in the world, and higher in purchasing power over the necessaries, comforts, and even luxuries of life than they ever have been even in this favored land.—Chicago Herald.

Don't Desert Democratic Principles.

Those Democrats (and there are some) who do not intend to go to the polls this year or who contemplate voting with the Republicans, in order to punish the Democratic party for its inability to fulfill all of its promises at once, should stop and consider. By far the most important question is that of the tariff. What good can come out of the McKinley monopoly party on this question? No one who believes in tariff reform or free trade can expect anything of this party. The Democratic party has taken a long step in the right direction, and but a few traitors in the Senate, who are being rapidly kicked out of the party, would have taken a much longer step and taken it much sooner. The grip of monopoly has been shaken and it is quite probable that during the short session of Congress, which begins in December, the Sugar Trust will lose all it has saved of its McKinley monopoly. We may also expect free coal and iron ore. The Democratic party has given us the income tax, which will compel the rich to contribute something to the expense of the government that protects them. Heretofore nine-tenths of the expense has been met by the farmers and laborers of the country, who own less than one fifth of the wealth.

Of course no rational and intelligent person thinks that the panic and depression of the last year was due to Democratic legislation. The Democrats did not move as quickly as many wished in abolishing the Sherman silver law and the McKinley bill, which were in force and largely responsible for the panic, but it has at last ended both, and prosperity is again at our door. Democratic principles are sound, and the mass of Democratic Congressmen deserve the confidence and support of the people. The few traitors are being turned out and better men are being put on guard. Stick to your party.

Democratic Texts.

The Democratic campaign book for 1894 is getting up in attractive style. On the margins of the covers are arranged some choice specimens of Democratic doctrine. We quote the following:

"The People's Cause Is Our Cause."
"Free Government Is Self-Government."
"Unnecessary Taxation Is Unjust Taxation."
"Equal Opportunity in a Land of Equal Rights."
"Democracy—It Wears No Collar, It Serves No Master."
"I Am for Protection Which Leads to Ultimate Free Trade."—James A. Garfield.
"We Recognize in Labor a Chief Factor in the Wealth of the Republic."
"The Welfare of the Laboring Man should Be Regarded as Especially Entitled to Legislative Care."
"Freedom of Religion, Freedom of the Press, and Freedom of the Person."
"In Our Form of Government, the Value of Labor as an Element of National Prosperity Should Be Distinctly Recognized."
"The Necessities of Government Are the Beginning and Ending of Just Taxation."—Wilson.
"Organized Good Intentions and Idle Patriotic Aspirations Cannot Successfully Contend for Mastery with the Compact Forces of Private Interests and Greed."—Cleveland, Oct. 4, 1892.

Reprehensible Knowledge.

These labor people are getting entirely too inquisitive and impertinent. They know too much. They read too much. They think too much. They no longer accept with dog-like gratitude whatever the lordly barons are pleased to spare them out of their protection-made profits. The pottery magnates of New Jersey told their employes the other day that, much to their regret, they would be compelled to reduce wages under the new tariff. Some impudent potter, whose memory had not been curtailed with his wages, inquired why a reduction was now necessary, when there had been no increase under the McKinley bill. The conference adjourned. — Louisville Courier-Journal.

THE Wilmington (N. C.) Messenger (Dem.) says: "We think the leaving of the sugar fellows a fortunate riddance. It ought to make genuine reformers of all parties who favor equal laws and equitable taxation and a low tariff unite more determinedly than ever before in putting down the party that plays false on every possible occasion. Down with all favoritism and bounties."

IN order to be intelligently consistent you will have to occasionally change your opinions.

THE CALAMITY EDITOR'S VICTIM.

THE MARTYR-BUSINESS-MAN TO REPUBLICAN EDITOR—Say, I'm tired of howling just to please you."

A CLOUD OF WITNESSES.

A TEXT BOOK OF REFERENCE FOR THE BRILLIANT MIND.

It Is Peculiarly Adapted to Members of Young People's Societies, and Church Workers in Pulpit and Pew. It Holds Up Christ and the Bible from the Layman's Standpoint Alone, with Not a Line from a Clergyman or a Theologian. There Is Nothing Denominational Whatever About Our Cloud of Witnesses.

The author of this volume is well known to the denomination throughout the States as one of our most successful pastors and preachers. He has been pastor of the Baptist Church in Fort Wayne, Ind., for thirteen years and has baptized over eleven hundred converts. As an organizer and promoter of evangelical work he has been one of the most successful of our pastors. He has ridden no hobbies, been devoted to no fads, much less sensational heresies; but he has preached the plain, unvarnished gospel of the New Testament with such power, freshness, and effect that his church edifice is always crowded, and souls constantly converted. Such a man is Stephen A. Northrop, the author or compiler of this volume. The character of the man inspires great expectations.

The essence of the volume is set fourth in the title,—namely, the testimony of famous men, renowned leaders of human thought through the ages, to the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures and the divinity of Jesus Christ. An excerpt from the introduction is pertinent: "An impression prevails among a certain class, either through willful prejudice or superficial knowledge, that our great thinkers and representative men are not in open sympathy with the religion of the Bible; that Christianity is only for the weak, the young, and the ignorant, and that its champions outside the pulpit, the Christian press, and theological circles, are few and far between. These pages are a bold and exhaustive refutation to such opinions. Master minds in the first rank of statesmanship and scholarship appear in evidence that the reverse is true; that the wisest, the bravest, and the profoundest are the staunch friends of the cross and of the word. Indeed since the birth of Christ the wise men of the world, best qualified to detect error and imposture, have laid at his feet the richest gifts of their genius."

Again: "An interesting and unique feature of this work is that every one of its recorded declarations, directly and indirectly in favor of Christ and the Bible, comes from secular sources and none whatever from clergymen. By virtue of their office clergymen might be expected to advocate the claims of the founder of Christianity and its inspired book, hence a collection of testimonies from such authorities might be charged with professional bias; but when men of the highest intellectual attainments; men whose names are engraved on the front of the centuries as leaders of thought, pioneers of political, material, and moral progress—who have opened new paths to the feet of knowledge, and who have no personal interest at stake; when such men wield pen and lift voice in praise to the Lamb of Calvary, incomparable in the life he led, unapproachable in the faith he inspired, and matchless in the ethics he preached; to the testimony of such witnesses assuredly all reasonable persons will respectfully listen." These extracts reveal the nature of the contents of the volume; but they hardly give a conception of the richness of what is written. Nearly eight hundred have contributed, they are artists, such as Angelo, Murillo, Dore, Bach,—authors, statesmen, judges, educators, authors, presidents, historians, editors, physicians, scientists, kings, soldiers, poets, all have been cited to give their testimonies; the writings of the dead have been diligently searched and the living have been written unto, and their testimonies appear above a fac-simile of their names.

The "witnesses" are arranged in alphabetical order, so that it is very easy to turn to each "evidence." The pages are embellished with numerous excellent likenesses of many eminent men, and scattered through the book are historic engravings of Christ, beginning with the adoration of wise men and ending with the ascension. It need not be said that the extracts from departed "witnesses" are from the cream of their writings, and the living have written tersely, epigrammatically, and to the point. The "testimonies" are all brief for such excellence; but the nature of the volume forbade anything beyond a pointed, direct testimony.

The book is an encyclopedia of testimonies from great secular men to the value of the Bible as a divinely inspired book, to the Person of Jesus Christ, as the Son of God, and the divineness of Christianity as a revealed religion. On the family book table it is a most desirable volume both for religious information and for devotional reading; many of the extracts are most fitting as a part of family worship. For the preacher it is most serviceable; not a page but has some extract or sentiment to "inspire a thought" or "clinch an argument," and the editor may cull many an extract to enrich his column of "choice selections" of prose or poetry. As the introduction suggests, the collection of the testimonies has cost years of painstaking research in city, national, and university libraries and extensive correspondence with distinguished men of two continents;" but the results justify the labors, for they have given us an unique and valuable book, rich with treasures of ages, the perusal of which will make the Christian man appreciate his Bible more, esteem his Christian faith more highly, and love his Lord and Master as the "first among the sons of men," the one "altogether lovely"

The work of the publisher is admirably done. The book is printed on the best paper, in a bold, clear type; the binding is ornamental and artistic.

It contains six hundred pages, together with Portraits and full-page Engravings. Thousands of Biographical Works, hundreds of eminent men and scores of libraries in this country and in Europe, have been consulted in its preparation.

It sells in English Cloth Binding for $3.00; Half Russia, $4.00; Full Russia, $5.00.

Saved by a Dog and Drum.

In 1776 a ship was wrecked on the south coast of England, not far from Portsmouth. Fortunately, owing to the sharp wits of one of the sailors, all souls were saved. He got a drum that happened to be on board, repaired its defects so as to make it quite watertight, then fastened a rope to it securely, and tied the whole round a dog. Next he let the dog into the sea, and the noble animal succeeded in reaching the land. There some on-lookers seized the drum and hauled in the rope. By now a much stronger rope had been tied to the end of the first one, and by its means passengers and crew were gradually drawn ashore.

Gone to Pot.

The origin of the phrase "Gone to pot," has been traced to an old story about a tailor of Samarcand, who lived near the gate of the city on the road leading to the cemetery. It is said that this knight of the shears had outside his cottage an earthenware pot, into which he dropped a pebble for every corpse that passed by, and at the end of each moon counted the number. At length the tailor himself died, and his neighbors remarked, "Poor fellow, he now is gone to pot also."

Take No Chances.

Col. Ingersoll once called upon the Rev. Phillips Brooks, and the great preacher received him at once, although he had declined to see many distinguished preachers. "Why have you shown me this marked distinction?" inquired the Colonel. "The reason is simple," replied Dr. Brooks; "if those preachers die, I'll be sure to meet them again in heaven; whereas, had you gone away and died, I should never have met you again. I thought I had better take no chances."

Not Always What They Seem.

Even poets are not always what they seem. The Beacon tells a couple of stories to prove it. Last spring a woman who has published several volumes of poetry, was asked at a literary meeting to recite something of her own. She responded with three lullabys, as dainty and sweet as any ever written. After the meeting was over, the president of the club went over to where the poet was talking with a friend, and said, "Mrs. Blank, I want to tell you how much I enjoyed your poems. They were simply exquisite." The poet smiled. "Oh, I'm getting out a book of lullabys," she said, "and I tell you—it's going to be a ripper!"

Another woman poet of New England, whose songs are famous all over the country, was walking on the piazza at a seaside resort last summer, when she saw a friend approaching. "Good-morning, Mrs. A.," she cried, "beautiful morning, isn't it?" "It is, indeed," replied Mrs. A. "It is such a day as only God could have made." "Yes," replied the poet, promptly. "The Lord has done his darnedest to-day!" Two poetic souls!

A SCHOOL BUILDING.

DESIGN SOMEWHAT OUT OF THE ORDINARY RUN.

Very Simple and Thoroughly Constructive in All Its Parts—Materials Are Hard-Burned Brick, Relieved with Bands of Block Brick.

Cost Is $8,000.

This plate shows a design for a good, solid, plain public school building. That it is somewhat out of the ordinary run of the every-day French roof architecture we are fully aware; and in drawing the plans for this building we have had quite a difficult problem to solve. The general dimensions are 55 by 70 feet; first and second stories having each 14-foot ceilings, while the assembly room on third floor has a ceiling 16 feet 6 inches in height. The materials are hard-burned brick, relieved with bands of black brick; window sills, lintels, water-table, and underpinning of stone; the roofs all being slated, floors all lined and deadened, walls built hollow with two inches air space.

The design is very simple, and thoroughly constructive in all its parts, the cornices consisting of brick brackets, and surmounted with a wooden gutter, lined with metal. The schoolrooms are arranged so they have an abundance of light, are well ventilated and easy of access, and though all are in close proximity to, yet are in a measure isolated from each other, being divided by brick partition walls, the transmission of sound from one room to another is effectually prevented.

The entrances are placed in front and rear, and consist of spacious stone steps, with brick porch on front and slated hood on rear; the vestibules opening into a hall 16 feet wide, which contains a wide and easy staircase, leading up to floors above. This hall is convenient to all rooms, and the advantages it possesses, running as it does through the building, are at once obvious, as the unequaled ventilating facilities it affords renders it one of the best features of the plan. The basement is reached by stairs under the main stairs, and is used for heating and play-room purposes, which is well lighted, ventilated, etc.

The vestibules on front and rear are easy of access, passing through which we reach the main hall, from which the three school room open, also the hat and cloak rooms for each. The sides of the school rooms are wainscoted to the height of window sills, above which are placed blackboards. A teacher's room is placed between the two smaller school rooms, and a class room is provided in connection with the larger room, also a teacher's room, which is reached from the rear vestibule. Ventilating flues are carried up in the four chimneys, and as these run up above the roof, superior draughts are obtained. Ascending to the second floor by the spacious and easy stairs, we have a large lecture room, two school rooms, hat and cloak rooms, a teacher's room and apparatus room, all connected with the hall. On third floor is a room 27x42 feet, with a ceiling 16 feet 6 inches high, well lighted and ventilated, which at times would be found indispensable for exhibition purposes, as it is admirably situated, and easy of access from all parts of the building; and the four walls of this room being required for a support to roof, it will be seen no extra expense is added in getting this room, while the space around it serves as storage and for ventilating purposes.

The bell tower speaks for itself, and is not only useful but gives a great prominence to the building. This is a common sense school building, and one that gives all that it is possible to do for the amount of money expended, as the whole of the detail is simple, everything being honest, practical and substantial. Cost, $8,000.

CAPTURING A STRANDED WHALE

How Vancouver Indians Float the Aquatic Monsters to Dry Land.

At Vancouver's Isle the winter storms blowing directly from the north Pacific bring many whales which, getting out of their latitude and fatigued with fruitless struggles, are cast upon the coast. As the receding tide leaves the whales they lash their tails, unable to regain deep water, and make a low, guttural sound as they vainly try to spout, says the Month. The native canoes, which are made of the trunk of a tree hollowed out by fire, are instantly launched. The only weapon used is a barbed spear, to which is tied a sealskin bag filled with air, and to this a rope made of seaweed is attached, acting as an anchor to the bladder of rope. A pole is fitted into the socket in the spear head, and so arranged that it can easily be withdrawn, leaving the head imbedded in the body of the whale. Armed with both these primitive weapons the natives set off in their fragile canoes and cast their spears, catching back the loose handles. In a short time the monster is covered with sealskin bags. When the tide begins to rise the bladders prevent the whale from sinking sufficiently to use his own strength, keeping him on the surface of the water. As the canoe men pull to the shore the lines are tightened and gradually the animal moves slowly and steadily to the land. His struggles to free himself are tremendous, but all in vain; struggling as a fish out of water, he is hopelessly in the power of his Liliputian foes. The inhabitants for miles around crowd to the shore, singing and beating drums made of the hollow bole of a tree, over which is stretched the skin of a sea lion. As soon as the whale is brought beyond low-water mark the work is done, and they have only to wait till the tide leaves it high and dry.

Abstemious on Sundays.

The minimum penalty for serving drinks on Sunday in Western Australia is £50. A hotel-keeper in Perth, the metropolis, was recently mulcted in the sum of £150 for illegally refreshing a party of three on the Sabbath, the court refusing to regard the three drinks as constituting a single offense. Another curious feature of the licensing law in Western Australia is that the licensee must not absent himself from his house for more than twenty-eight days in the year, except by special permission of a stipendiary magistrate, a restriction on personal liberty that has long been the source of much irritation and indignation to the trade.

Steel Rails.

A steel rail costs twice as much as an iron one, but the universal use of the former means millions to the farmers of the West. It has enabled railroads to use larger and heavier cars, and the results are cheaper freights and quicker transportation.

Typewriting by Wire.

The teletype, or electrical typewriter, has been designed to meet the requirements of a rapid and truthworthy printing telegraph instrument is manipulated very much in the same way as a typewriter. The transmitter as well as the receiver, makes a copy of the message, and the liability to mistakes is thus largely decreased. The instrument works in unison, and it is impossible to send a message from one machine unless the corresponding machine at the end of the distant line is properly receiving. The record is plainly printed on the strip of moving paper in front of the operator. The same instrument can both send and receive.

How He Could Help.

On one of the many official excursions made by boat to Fortress Monroe and Chesapeake Bay, Chief-Justice Waite, of the Supreme Court, Judge Hall of North Carolina, and other dignitaries of the bench were participants. When the Government steamer had fairly got out into the Atlantic, the sea was very rough, and Judge Hall was taken violently with seasickness. As he was moaning aloud in his agony, the Chief-Justice, laying a soothing hand on his shoulder, said:

"My dear Hall, can I do anything for you? Just suggest what you wish."

"I wish," said the seasick Judge, "your honor would overrule this motion."

Why He Cried.

A citizen of Montreal lately on a visit to Ottawa, says Life, while passing down the hotel corridor to his room at a late hour, happened to hear violent groans and sobs issuing from one of the rooms. As the door was open, he entered and recognized a fellow Montrealer, prominent in political and business circles, and famous for his religious and alcoholic tendencies. He was kneeling at his bedside, clinging to the bed, and sobbing as though his heart would break. "What's the matter, old man?" inquired our friend, touching the sufferer on the shoulder. "I'm so drunk I can't say my prayers," was the tearful response.

The Queen Helped.

Several years ago, a celebrated tragedian was summoned to play "Hamlet" at Windsor. When he came to the soliloquy, he made an unusual pause after "To be——" The Queen, believing that he had forgotten his lines, instantly prompted—"or not to be. That is the question." "By your leave, your Majesty," said the tragedian, put out of courtly humor by the interruption, "that is not the question. The question is my method of interpretation." "Never mind your method," returned the Queen, smilingly; "what we want is Shakespeare."

Good Greeley Story.

Horace Greeley wrote a note to a brother editor in New York, whose writing was as illegible as his own. The recipient of the note, not being able to read it, sent it back by the same messenger to Mr. Greeley for elucidation. Supposing it to be the answer to his own note, Mr. Greeley looked over it, but likewise was unable to read it, and said to the boy. "Go take it back. What does the damned fool mean?" "Yes, sir," said the boy; "that is just what he says."

One Good Result.

Can the drouth be of any service to the dairyman? Why, of course, it can. To-day we have been working on the highway, scooping up several barrels of the finest road dust and putting it into the barn to use next winter in and about the gutters of the stables, both as an absorbent with the horse manure and litter generally, and as a deodorizer which we think is even superior to plaster, and only costs the job of drawing.

IF Texas were as densely populated as the State of Massachusetts it would have a population greater than France and Great Britain combined, or about 75,000,000.

Greater New York.

When one attempts to circumnavigate New York—as many do in the summer season—he realizes fully for the first time what an enormous population has clustered around New York bay. But there is another way in which he can impress his own mind with the fact—that is by comparison. The three and a half million people of the Greater New York are more than live in any one of the States except four, or in any of the South American Republics except two. Greater New York has more people than lived in all this country when independence was declared, and nearly half as many as were in the eleven Southern States that seceded in 1861.—New York World.

Draining Hillsides.

As the country grows older the gullying of hillsides by heavy rains increases, and it soon becomes a necessity to keep them in sod most of the time, only reseeding when the grass grows thin. The reason why hillsides gully worse now than formerly is the lack of underdraining to replace that which decaying roots of trees made in the soil when the country is new. It is news to many that hillsides need underdraining. They are often very springy, and if deep underdrains are sunk these hillside springs will furnish a supply of pure water all the year round.

Disraeli's Standing.

Lord Dufferin met Beaconsfield on the afternoon of one of his elections, and stopped to offer his compliment's on his success. This was the great Disraeli's rather complacent reply: "I said a pretty good thing on the platform. There was a fellow in the crowd who kept calling me a man of straw, without any stake in the county, and asking what I stood upon, so I said: 'Well, it is true that I don't possess the broad acres of Lord So-and-So or the vast estates of the Duke of A——, but if the gentleman wants to know upon what I stand, I will tell him I stand upon my head.'"

Millions for Defense

Against the inroads of that subtle, lurking foe to human health, malaria, had been expended uselessly when Hostetter's Stomach Bitters appeared upon the scene and demonstrated its power as a preventive and curative of the dreaded scourge. When the "gold fever" raged in 1849 in California, malaria was contemporaneous with it at the "diggings," and wrought dreadful havoc among the miners. Then and subsequently on the Isthmus of Panama, and wherever in the tropics malarial disease is most virulent, the Bitters became the recognized safeguard. For the effects of exposure and fatigue, miasma-poisoned air and water, sea sickness and all disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, the Bitters affords prompt relief. Invalids of all sorts will find it fully adequate to their needs.

Cow Peas for Food.

The cow pea is used extremely on the tables of the South. The pods are picked while the peas (really beans) are green, the same as our ordinary green peas, and are cooked in many ways. The white "blackeye" variety is used mostly for the table, and is considered a staple article of food south of Maryland. The pea is very nutritious and wholsome, being easily grown, and may be used either green or in the dry condition.

Catching Fish.

A French electrician catches fish by sinking in the water a net with an incandescent lamp attached. The curious fish collect around the light, when a pneumatic tire around the edge of the net is silently inflated and rises to the surface, entrapping them without frightening them, and, hence, without destroying the spawn—a great drawback to ordinary net fishing.

in time, if you are a sufferer from the scourge of humanity known as consumption, and you can be cured. There is the evidence of hundreds of living witnesses to the fact that, in all its early stages, consumption is a curable disease. Not every case, but a large percentage of cases, and we believe, fully 98 per cent. are cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, even after the disease has progressed so far as to induce repeated bleedings from the lungs, severe lingering cough with copious expectoration (including tubercular matter), great loss of flesh and extreme emaciation and weakness.

Do you doubt that hundreds of such cases reported to us as cured by "Golden Medical Discovery" were genuine cases of that dread and fatal disease? You need not take our word for it. They have, in nearly every instance, been so pronounced by the best and most experienced home physicians, who have no interest whatever in misrepresenting them, and who were often strongly prejudiced and advised against a trial of "Golden Medical Discovery," but who have been forced to confess that it surpasses, in curative power over this fatal malady, all other medicines with which they are acquainted. Nasty cod-liver oil and its filthy "emulsions" and mixtures, had been tried in nearly all these cases and had either utterly failed to benefit, or had only seemed to benefit a little for a short time. Extract of malt, whiskey, and various preparations of the hypophosphites had also been faithfully tried in vain.

The photographs of a large number of those cured of consumption, bronchitis, lingering coughs, asthma, chronic nasal catarrh and kindred maladies, have been skillfully reproduced in a book of 160 pages which will be mailed to you, on receipt of address and six cents in stamps. You can then write to those who have been cured and profit by their experience.

BY PERMISSION OF THE REV. IRL R. HICKS (The Storm Prophet).

Copyrighted by the Word & Works Pub. Co., St. Louis, Mo.

OCTOBER, 1894.—October begins bright and cool, growing warmer in west, with secondary storms crossing from and to 4th. Frosty nights will follow. Another warm storm wave will start from west about 5th, bringing rain along its path to the east during 6th to 10th. Cold and frost will attend clearing conditions following. The 13th, 14th, are reactionary storm dates, with Full Moon 14th. Cold and frosty weather will follow storm flurries, about these dates. The 18th to 23rd is a storm period affected by both Venus and Mercury. Storms on lakes and seas will be dangerous. This is especially true of the reactionary storms on and touching the 25th, 26th. Venus on 31st, Mercury on 26th, New Moon 28th, and "Vulcan" 30th, compose a combination that renders the closing days of the month precarious on land and sea. Rain, turning to sleet and snow, attended by dangerous gales on the waters. Cold and freezing follow.

Acts in Harmony.

Perhaps some of our readers would like to know in what respect Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is better than any other. We will tell you. When this Remedy is taken as soon as a cold has been contracted, and before it has become settled in the system, it will counteract the effect of the cold and greatly lessen it's severity, if not effectually cure the cold in two day's time, and it is the only remedy that will do this. It acts in perfect harmony with nature and aids nature in relieving the lungs, opening the secretions, liquefying the mucus and causing its expulsion from the air cells of the lungs and restoring the system to a strong and healthy condition. No other remedy in the market possesses these remarkable properties. No other will cure a cold so quickly or leave the system in as sound a condition. For sale by Robbins & McCord. 43

The tongue recovers from an injury much more quickly than any other part of the human system.

Saved from Croup.

"I consider Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a specific for croup. It is very pleasant to take, which is one of the most important requisites where a cough remedy is intended for use among children. I have known of cases of croup where I know the life of a little one was saved by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy." J. J. Populist Classmeeting.

Last Thursday, Bliss, the boss of the corrupt new party, called in his henchmen for the purpose of consultation and to give them further instruction as to the approved way of conducting a campaign. So far, a few of the "heelers" had been a little slack in standing up and calling down curses and hard names on all who were not as wild-eyed and crazy as themselves. In other words, a few of the brethren in Coxey had tried to preserve at least a show of decency. It was plain that the party could not hold together by such means. They must be better instructed or they would be mistaken for some members of the corrupt old parties And was not Bliss the proper man in his own estimation to instruct them?

LESSON I.

Bliss—Mr. Harding, what is the matter up in Richland? Complaint comes to me, your leader, guardian and guide, that things are going wrong up there.

Harding—Most worthy grand seignior Flapdoodle, it is this: One of the speakers you sent up there failed to refer to Cleveland as a "gold bug" and spoke of the old parties twice without using the term "corrupt." If these things are not changed, the party of great moral, political and financial looseness will fail to perform the work you have organized, by which our neighbors are to be abused and maligned and ourselves lifted into the offices.

Bliss—Jess so. These are crimes against our creed that must not be overlooked. Mr. Lowe, how is it in Franklin? I hear there has been a cog loosened in our machine up there.

Lowe—Most potent imported idea leader, our last speaker was a disappointment. He spoke only three hours, when you know the regulation short speech is 3 hrs., 55 min. The audience went away disappointed. They said they doubted his genuineness, for a true populist would have to be choked off by a rope and windlass any time after four hours.

Bliss—That's bad. I'll order another man to go up there and speak at the same place. The brethren must have their regular allowance of wind, even if I have to send Free Kelley.

Lowe—Better go yourself, most worthy imported. The people will tolerate no failures.

Bliss—I'll see. I don't care to go there again, as I have been there once and told them all about the great crime of 1873, and the free silver and unlimited greenback fake, and they may be onto my schemes by this time. In fact, I told them all I knew, and I don't see how I can find out anything else. However, I'll study it over. Mr. Dancer, how is it in old Jackson? Are there any complaints?

Dancer—Not for our own township, most worshipful organizer. But over in Wilmington, I understand our party has put up a ticket that contains only two chronic office seekers. And even those two have no record of above four trials each to get an office.

Bliss—Yes, that is wrong, of course. Such a thing in our party of pure politics and reform was never heard of before. Wilmington should turn her eyes on old Jackson and keep them turned. Wilmington has made a great mistake and I fear our people in that township will never support such a ticket. Brother Ammon, how is it in Keyser? I suppose Keyser is all right?

Ammon—Hardly, hardly. Several of our most valued workers have been disabled and had to retire, by having lost the little glass charms and populist buttons (sold only by Bliss & Lochner, Auburn, Ind.) They especially felt the loss of the button, which could be worn by gentlemen or ladies. It was very handy. And a few who do not take the Times are without any instructions as to how the button is to be screwed on and unscrewed. So they carry it in the pocket. So you can't tell by his outward appearance whether he is in favor of "Finance, Transportation and Land" or not. How can these great reforms be carried out if the machinery therefor be flopping around loose in the reformer's pocket? Mr. Bliss, you did wrong to leave out that advertisement about this charming little "momento." It is true, a few are trying to worry along without them. But it is hard work. What is a populist without his glass charm or his button? He is liable at any time to be mistaken for a member of one of the corrupt old parties Then there was another error made, this time in the management. As soon as our people heard how their beloved leader had "hollered out in meeting" in the midst of Capt. Myers' speech at Auburn, they appointed a holerin' committee to attend to the same religious duty at the Captain's speech that evening at Garrett. But whether from the shortness of time in which to prepare, or the poor selection we made for the purpose, our men only interrupted the speaker four times, although his speech was nearly an hour long.

Bliss—This was bad. You should select men with less good breeding and more gall next time. But let me remind you, Mr. Ammon, that in your responses to the head of your party, you take up too much time. Of course, a populist should practice on windiness, but you must not cut off your leader from any part of his favorite amusement. But I have not heard from Concord. I have a report that there is a serious difficulty down there. How is it?

Concord Henchman—There is a serious matter on which our "Industrial Legion" has taken a decided stand, but many of the common sort have broken away from us. It is this: We have adopted a rule that at least half our time, including every Saturday in full, should be given over to the business of redeeming the country from goldbugs, monopolists and money sharks of the east. We are pained beyond measure to record this, but there are quite a number of our people who have staid at home to-day to sow their wheat or cut their corn.

Bliss—That is bad. They will have to reform or be classed as old-party men in disguise. Are you sure they not getting ready to go back to the fold of our oppressors?

Concord Henchman—I fear so, especially as several of them have gone to cleaning out their fence corners, putting up the rails, cleaning the weeds that are going to seed in the garden. And a few have gone to splitting and carrying in wood for their wives again. These we have already given up as lost sheep from the Coxey fold.

Bliss—These are sad reports. They come to me as the green watermelon comes to the small boy. Oh, that familiar pain! Let us adjourn.

A Million Friends.

A friend in need is a friend indeed, and not less than one million people have found just such a friend in Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds.—If you never used this great cough medicine, one trial will convince you that it has wonderful curative powers in all diseases of throat, chest and lungs. Each bottle is guaranteed to do all that is claimed or money will be refunded. Trial bottles free at Robbins & McCord's drug store. Large bottles 50c. and $1. 1

SIGNAL TRIUMPHS WON

By Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder.

Two signal triumphs have been achieved by Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder. First it received highest award and diploma at the World's Columbian Exposition of 1893. Next it secured highest award and gold medal at the California Midwinter Fair of 1894. At both fairs it surpassed all competitors in every respect. The reward in each instance was for strongest leavening power, perfect purity and general excellence. It was sustained by the unanimous vote of the judges. The victory at Chicago establishes the supremacy of Dr. Price's as "The Foremost Baking Powder in the World." The triumph at San Francisco confirms and emphasizes it.

THE LATE CONGRESS.

Result of Its Work During the Long Session Recently Closed.

Much of Value Accomplished — Democracy's Redemption of Pledges — Sherman Law, Federal Election Law and McKinley Law All Repealed—Expenses Greatly Reduced.

The Fifty-third congress on Aug. 28 ended one of the longest sessions in the history of the country and one that will be remarkable. It is fashionable to abuse legislative bodies, both for sins of omission and commission, and the late congress is no exception to the rule. Much, however, of value has been accomplished and, still better, much of evil has been prevented. As the Democratic party will be called on for an account of its stewardship, it will be well to summarize briefly the work of the party during the year past. The three things which the Democratic party especially promised to do have been done. The Sherman law, the federal election law and the McKinley law have all been repealed. This work has been done in spite of much powerful influences arrayed against it, the Democratic party being compelled at many points to fight the solid Republican party, assisted by traitors in its own ranks. In the darkest days of the republic the Republican party placed on the statute books a law of most dangerous tendencies, designated to retain itself in power at the expense of violating one of the most sacred principles of the constitution. It authorized United States supervisors of elections and deputy marshals to be appointed by the federal courts wholly independent of the states where the elections were to be held. By this revolutionary and unconstitutional act the Republican party for years dominated and controlled many elections in its own interest. Thousands of men were arrested without cause and imprisoned within the states of New York, Ohio and Indiana in a single election and thus prevented from voting. The Democratic party promised, if placed in power, that this abuse should no longer continue. It kept its pledge and elections throughout the Union are now free from federal interference. The Democratic party in congress has repealed the law which, unconstitutionally as they claimed, authorized the president to levy and remit taxes. This great right has been restored to the people's representatives where alone it rightfully belongs. Another valuable reform effected by this congress is embodied in the bill of Mr. Cooper of the Fifth Indiana district authorizing the states to tax greenbacks and other United States currency. This class of money has been used for many years as a means for escaping just taxation. Indianians escaped it by having their funds in bank nominally invested in greenbacks or United States treasury warrants on the day for assessment. Banks accomplished the same object in the same way. This crying abuse, which enabled the dishonest to shift the burden of taxation from those most able to pay, has been finally abolished.

Representative Sayers, chairman of the appropriations committee, publishes an official statement showing that this congress has reduced appropriations to the extent of $20,000,000. In addition to this it has abolished several hundred useless offices and greatly reduced the expenses of the treasury department without injuring its efficiency. Another great reform, which has escaped general notice, is embodied in an amendment to one of the appropriation bills which carries into law the most effective means yet devised for controlling and curbing the power of trusts. It is, in fact, the most stringent law against trusts ever enacted in this country. It replaces the law of the former congress which had proved ineffective.

Another invaluable reform accomplished by this congress is the income tax law, the most effective measure to take the taxes off want and put them on wealth. It is confidently expected that the benefits derived from this experiment will result in making the income tax a permanent feature of our revenue system, as it always has been in the most enlightened countries of Europe.

While Democrats do not claim that the new tariff law is all that they expected and demanded, it is generally admitted that it is a vast improvement on the McKinley measure.

The full measure of tariff reform, as is well known, was defeated by untoward causes, against which the wisest and best of parties cannot guard. Treachery is a crime that is not discovered until it has done its deadly work, and the best appointed army is helpless if its commanding officer proves untrue to his trust. But McKinleyism, at least, is gone, and the country by the new bill is placed several removes from that hideous commercial nightmare. The new bill enlarges the free list, reduces protection on nearly all articles, some very greatly, and at every point improves on its predecessor. It is a proud consolation to sincere Democrats to reflect how gallantly the battle for revenue reform was fought by the entire press of the party, by its membership in the house of representatives, by its president and by all of its senators except a handful. The latter, aided by a solid Republican phalanx, were able in some measure to block Democratic intention by treachery to Democratic principles, but their conduct only serves to bring out in bold relief the fidelity of the rank and file of the party.

In short, while much of the work of the late congress was positively good, but little of it was bad. On a full review it will be found that, despite the shameful conduct of certain senators, this congress has been responsive to the popular will and true to Democratic pledges. Its negative services have been of great value. Many bad bills were defeated, many steals headed off and almost as great service rendered to the people by what was left undone as by what was done by positive legislation. Taken as an entirety no Democrat need feel called on to apologize for the record of his party in the Fifty-third congress.

Commonweal armies were only Republican chickens going home to roost where they were hatched.

While Democrats admit that the new law is not all they demanded on the tariff question, they insist that it is a great improvement over McKinleyism. The rest will be made right in time.

Chairman Wilson sounded the Democratic keynote in his great speech at Martinsburg. Along that line Democrats will fight, if it takes all fall—and winter.

Republicanism has often been tried and always found wanting—the offices. It still wants the offices, but the people don't want it.

A Spiteful Fling.

Bliss of the Times, had an ill-natured and ill-mannered fling last week at Mr McIntosh. He claimed that Mr. M. wrote the COURIER's Coxey articles and other editorials. While Mr. McIntosh, like other reasonable and intelligent citizens, has a very poor opinion of Coxeyism and its apostles, we wish to say, that he is not the author of the items that seem so distasteful to Coxey's worshipers. Nor has he written editorial articles for this paper. He has for several years, however contributed very acceptable articles on other subjects, and which we think the public has appreciated. As to the other charge made, that Mr. McIntosh "does much speculating in county orders," the statements is calculated to make an impression that Mr. M. is doing a wrong thing. There is no "speculation" in county orders by anyone. They sell at par and draw 6 per cent interest, and those who prefer to take 6 per cent in this way, rather than lend to the general public at 8 per cent, have, we presume, a right to do so. But the public interests have not been injured by anyone who has done so. It has been for the public benefit, for if men had not preferred county orders at 6 per cent to any other investment, the orders might not have been selling at par. But Mr. McIntosh has done more than this He has several times kept them from going below par. It will be especially remembered, how about a year ago, when he stopped buying, they went down for a week or so. But he fought against having them go down, and he and others who could, came to the rescue, in a few days put the price back to a par, where they are likely to stand hereafter. The Times article, besides being very untruthful was in extremely poor taste.

One word describes it—"perfection." We refer to DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cures obstinate sores, burns, skin diseases and is a well known cure for piles

CHANGE OF VOTING PRECINCTS.

At their June session, 1894, the Board of commissioners of DeKalb county, state of Indiana, made the following changes in the boundaries of voting precincts, the same being now entered in the records of said session:

PETITION TO CHANGE VOTING PRECINTS IN UNION TOWNSHIP.

"The Inspectors at the last general election find from the ballots cast at said election that the Southwest precinct of Union township cast 308 votes; Southeast precinct cast 209 votes; Northeast precinct cast 208 votes; the Northwest precinct cast 193 votes. The southwest precinct having cast more votes than a legal apportionate, we therefore recommend that the Northwest precinct be increased by extending the line of said precinct to Ninth street in the town of Auburn, thence west along the center of said Ninth street, on a parallel line to the township line And that the Northeast precinct be extended to center of Eigth street, thence east through the courthouse; and that the Southeast precinct be changed so as to include the block between Jackson, Main, Eighth and Ninth streets. And that the Southwest precinct will include only south of Ninth street and west of Main street and Ft. Wayne road."

J. WALBORN,
J. E. ENSLEY, } Inspectors.
M. BOLAND,

Therefore the Board changes said voting precincts as recommended.

PETITION TO CHANGE VOTING PRECINCTS IN SMITHFIELD TOWNSHIP.

By George Straver and others.

"It is ordered by the Board that the following precincts be established: Precinct No 1 to be compused of sections four (4), five (5), six (6), seven (7) and eight (8), and the voting place to be in the incorporated town of Ashley And Precinct No. 2 be the balance of the township and the voting place to be at Smithfield township center school house

CORRESPONDENCE

BUTLER.

J. A. Campbell returned from his eastern visit last Friday night.

Mrs. Cozens, of Toledo, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. R. C. Campbell.

Mrs. J. A. Campbell and daughter Florence visited her sick brother in Metz last Sunday.

Mrs. J. C. Fralick is about to remove to Chicago to join her husband who is running an engine on the B. & O. R. R.

Emlin V. Campbell, Frank Fanning and Walter Graham left last Monday for Ann Arbor where they will pursue the science of medicine and dentistry.

The lovers of base ball were treated to a very good game last Friday between Butler's crack nine and nine full blooded Indians. The score stood 5 to 10 in favor of the noble red men. On Saturday, with loud sounding trumpets they attempted to repeat the game, but the reds got lazy and let the Butler boys carry off all the scores but one—twenty or more. To say the crowd was disgusted is putting it mildly.

Our people were surprised and pained last Saturday evening by the sudden death of Mrs. Henry Yates, at her home near the schoolhouse. She has been in poor health for some time, but no immediate danger was feared. Her husband has business in Southwestern Kansas, and she urged him to look after it. He left home reluctantly a few days ago for Dodge City, and was supposed to be there at the time of his wife's sudden death. At this writing the exact time of his return is unknown and date of funeral unfixed.

Jacob Jennings, an old and highly respected citizen of Troy township, died very suddenly last Thursday evening. He left the house to do the chores and was found dead near the house a short time afterward. Words but feebly tell of his noble attributes. He was honored and respected by all who knew him. He leaves a comfortable home for his wife and two children who survive him. He was a worthy member of the Christian church. His funeral took place last Sunday from their church in Butler, Rev. Sniff, of Angola officiating.

SUMMIT.

Miss Kattie Fetters visited her parents over Sunday.

Mr. Andrew Yirker, of Garrett, visited his mother over Sunday.

C Babpst and wife, of Garrett, visited Mrs. B's father, Anthony Shiffli, over Sunday.

Mrs John Penick and Mrs. Henry Snowberger visited relatives in Lagrange over Sunday.

Albert Cherry and family, from near Butler, visited her sister, Mrs. Joseph, Penick, last Friday.

Jerry Mortorff, of this place, and Miss Jennie Rutlage, of Fayette, Ohio, were married last week.

Thos. Hammon has sold his farm to Joseph Hale and will move on his father-in law's farm south of town.

Wm. Stolenberger and family, of Lagrange, are here visiting Mrs. S.'s brother, Henry and A. A. Forney.

Dr. O. F. Rudolph and wife, of Corunna, and Mrs. Sadie Duncan were guests of Henry Lawson and family Monday.

Miss Nettie and Bertha Conrad are home visititing their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Conrad. The latter is going to school at Angola.

Agent Foster was walking around on his tiptoes and set up cigars Thursday morning in a mysterious manner. It developed later that it was in honor of a little girl who had come to their house that morning to call him "papa."

HUDSON.

Fall weather now.

H. M. Fried and W. V. Britton visited their old homes at Corunna on Sunday.

They do say there is to be a double wedding in town soon but we haven't been informed of the particulars as yet.

Qutite a number of our people from Hudson and vicinity attended the Fair at Kendallville.

The farmers surely have no cause to complain of the weather, as it could be no better for farm work.

Wm. Wallace has rented the property owned by R. G. Myers and will move his goods and family this week.

Now is the time of year to look to your morals, as the tempter is at hand in the shape of putting up stovepipe.

The Messrs. Thomas, formerly of Auburn will welcome all their friends and many new ones at the "Europe" Hotel.

Our houses that were vacated by men who lost their positions in the strike, are fast filling up and soon they will all be full.

Our merchants all make a full display of fall and winter goods. They will treat you well if you will call on them. Try them.

Mr. Tuttle, of Angola, has bought the barber shop of Frank Hill and has moved his family into Theodore Miller's house on Main street.

Times are going to be better now, as already, business shows a marked improvement compared with what it was a year ago at this time.

The editor of the Ashley Times seem to be quite particular as he will take one firm's ad and refuse another from the same town even if it is first class.

The good people of Hudson may look for a horse race any day now as there are several well bred trotters in town and their owners are jealous of their reputation to go fast.

Wallace and Britton will show you the largest line of stoves and ranges in this part of the country and will do with you just as they agree to do.

CONCORD.

Will Pence has moved again to Garrett.

Several of the children are having the mumps.

Remember the Old Folks' Meeting Oct. 6 and 7.

Mrs. Susie Melton is quite a sufferer with lung trouble.

Mrs. Rowe and a lady friend drove to St. Joe Thursday.

Theo. White and wife will be in [redacted]dance at the Hilladale fair.

Frank Seberts purchased a farm of J. R. Shilling a few days ago.

C W. Johnson has sold his nice driver to Frank White, of St. Joe.

Milas Brown and wife attended the Kendallville fair Thursday.

Mollie Baker and Mollie Buchanan drove over to Auburn Friday.

Frank May drove over to Ashley Saturday to see his Sunday girl.

H. R. Culbertson, of Auburn, was driving through the country Wednesday last.

Orla Baker has been quite a sufferer with an abcess on his neck for three or four weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Timmerman, of Cedarville, visited their daughter, Mrs. Dick Ervin, Sunday.

Mrs. Latson, of Auburn, is here visiting her son Ira, and by a miss step sprained her ankle severely.

H. H Fales and E. White will return this week from an extended visit to Missouri and Kansas

Tuesday last Mrs. F. Buchanan entertained Mrs. Kennedy, Mrs. Wasson, Mrs. Hull and Miss Lyda Wyatt.

David Fair, republican, candidate for treasurer, was fairing around his democrat friend, last Monday night, the guest of J. B. Gibford and family.

Samantha Buchanan, who has been an invalid for the last 15 years, grew worse Saturday. Sunday morning her case had developed into a true case of insanity. Her brother Florence is caring for her. She is closely confined to her room and will be until other arrangements are perfected.

Mrs. Barbara Rummell Baker died at her home Sept. 29, 1894, age 72 years, 3 months and 5 days. To this union 9 children, 6 sons and 3 daughters, were born. Her husband and two daughters preceded her. Funeral obsequies were conducted by Rev. J. J. Fred, of Leo, assisted by Rev. Thomas. The remains were interred in the Spencerville cemetery. All were present of the children except Joseph, of Ethan, Dakota, and Johnnie, her "baby boy" as she called him, now of Havre, Montana.

WATERLOO.

Eli Williamson is in poor health for some time past.

Charlie Speer came home Saturday for a visit of a few weeks.

Mrs. Dr. Darby and daughter Vernie are visiting the Doctor's brother in Ohio.

Mrs. T. R. Dickinson is visiting friends here at present, after an absence of many years.

Mrs. Henry St. Clair, of Russell county, Kansas, is visiting friends in this place.

Mrs. Mattie Maxon's class are rehearsing in anticipation of giving a musical concert soon.

Very interesting meetings continue to be held in the Disciple church, with fine singing.

Mrs. Metcalf, a sister of Frank Duesler, has moved into his pleasant building on Franklin street.

The Nodine Brothers have bought the Thompson laundry and will continue the business hereafter.

Henry Beck has returned from Hamilton and opened his bakery on Wayne street, north of the railroad.

Mr. and Mrs. Janes, of Philadelphia, have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Faucett for a few days. The ladies are old acquaintances.

Miss Ella Phillips has gone again to Hicksville, where she is trimming in a millinery store, of which Mrs. Murphy is the proprietor.

Mrs. Ida Daniels and baby daughter, of Fairmount, Minn., have been here a week visiting her father, Gen. Blair, and her sister Rose, as well as other friends.

Miss Alta McCloe, daughter of Rev. Mr. McCloe, of Churubusco, was married yesterday to a Mr. Miller, of the same place, by Rev. S. P. Klotz, of this place.

The Woman's U. B. Missionary Society gave a good concert in the U. B church last Sunday night. The exercises were conducted by the women in an entertaining manner. The collection was good.

Mrs. Cora Spaulding, of Wisdom, Montana, is making an extended visit with her parents, Mr and Mrs. Faucett, and her brother. Mr. A. G. Spaulding accompanied his wife here and, after a brief visit, returned to the west.

Monday morning, Oct. 1, at half past 6, the fire bell rang again for fire. This time it was the gristmill owned by Mr. Shepherd, but rented to another party. The flames soon showed themselves from the roof, and very shortly enveloped the building, reaching high up in the air. Such headway was made that it was impossible to check the fire, and the building was totally destroyed. It is said that a fire was built that morning for the first time this fall, and the stove being full of papers, the whole blazed at once, when in the second story there must have been a defect in the chimney, and it was there the fire originated. We hear, also, that Mr. Huber was negotiating with Mr. Shepherd for the purchase of the property, which would probably have been concluded but for a difference of thirty dollars between the two, and so it waited. An insurance on the building was carried the amount of which we failed to hear. Mr. Kagey was considerably burned about the hands and back.

PROF. NIEL,

Cycling At Sea.

From Harper's Young People.

George Pinkert's water-tricycle is the most remarkable development of the velocipede idea that has yet come before the public.

The inventor is a citizen of Hamburg, Germany, and he probably drew his inspiration from the desire to navigate the North Sea that fills the breasts of all good Hamburgers. It is possible to run the thing on land, but it is not much fun. The two principal wheels are four and one-half feet in diameter, and nearly twenty inches thick. They are made of sheet-iron, and divided into three air-tight compartments, so arranged that if any one of them springs a leak the other two will keep the machine afloat.

On the outside of the driving-wheels are fastened sets of paddles four inches wide and eight inches long. Mr. Pinkert steers with the small wheel of the tricycle, which is less than three feet in diameter, and has no paddles. Rubber tires on all the wheels fit the machine for land travel, but it is very heavy, and the best speed the inventor claims for it on a good road is nine and one-half miles an hour. On the river, he says, he can travel seven miles an hour, or a little better than that with a good current. On the sea Mr. Pinkert hoped to advance at the rate of a mile in fifteen minutes—but, alas! he forgot to reckon on the interference of seasickness with the most ambitious plans.

Everything went well during the trial trips Mr. Pinkert made on Swiss lakes and the rivers of northern Germany. He was his own marine engine, and his side-wheel craft splashed along nobly.

Ambition seized on Mr. Pinkert. If Webb had swum the English Channel, and the Oxford crew had rowed across, why shouldn't he traverse it with rushing fore-wheel and roaring drivers?

So, putting on his best uniform, and carefully strapping on board a good supply of water and provisions, the sea-going 'cycler set forth from Calais one July morning. Very little breeze was blowing, but that came from the south-east, so there was plenty of fog, and no prospect of clear weather. A sailor would have hesitated before embarking under such conditions, especially on such a tricky strait as the English Channel; but Mr. Pinkert was no sailor, and, besides, he was, as I have said; full of ambition. He launched his wheel—or wheels—and with very little effort paddled along the shore of Calais. A big crowd watched him. After half an hour's steady wheeling he was swallowed up in the fog headed straight for Dover. Then a storm came up and blew him far from his course. When the wind quit playing with him he was in the North Sea, but he did not know it, poor fellow, and kept paddling steadily forward. The waves rolled the bulky tricycle into all sorts of awkward positions, and came near capsizing it. Mr. Pinkert had that awful feeling—pains across, and loss of appetite, and general woe. A fishing-smack picked him up and landed him at Boulogne. Not a bit disheartened, he tried the Channel trip again. Once more seasickness overcame him. He is going to keep on trying until he succeeds.

"CELLULOID" COLLARS AND CUFFS are made by covering a linen collar or cuff with "celluloid," thus making them strong, durable and waterproof. When soiled they can be cleaned by simply wiping off with a [redacted]loth. No other waterproof goods [redacted] made with this interlining, consequently no other goods can possibly give satisfaction. Do not forget that every piece of the genuine is stamped as follows:

"DEMOCRATIC TIMES."

[illegible] Is Entering Upon an Era [illegible] Prosperity

[illegible]publican Papers and Republican Leaders Acknowledge That the Advent of Good Times Has Come Through the Enactment of the New Tariff—Factories Resume Operations in all Directions and Give Steady Employment to Labor. The Banks Let Loose of Their Hoarded Treasure and Business Everywhere Begins to Boom—Democratic Times at Hand.

Republican orators and Republican papers have had a great deal to say in the past year about "Democratic times," though all the while the country was suffering from the effects of Republican legislation.

This talk has suddenly ceased. The reason is not hard to discover. At last the Democrats in congress, after a long and desperate struggle against the Republican obstructionists, have succeeded in placing genuine Democratic legislation on the national statute books. The consequent benefits were instantly discernible. Business, which had so long groaned and sickened under the blighting influence of laws enacted by Republican congresses for the benefit of the protected barons, the trusts, the combines and the grasping corporations, immediately began to revive; wheels in the factories began to revolve; wage differences between employer and employe were quickly adjusted and the toiling masses not only resumed work but also realized an additional benefit in the increased purchasing power of their wages given by the reduced tariff duties.

The revival of business and industry in the past 30 days is really phenomenal. Factory towns are manifesting their old activity, merchants are pushing their trade and the banks are already putting into circulation the money which has so long been idle in their vaults.

Democratic times have come sure enough.

Depew's Testimony.

And they have come to stay. Business men recognize it, mechanics and laboring men recognize it, farmers recognize it; yes, even the Republican politicians who have been doing nothing but howl "calamity" for two years recognize it and are ceasing their dismal croakings. Here is Chauncey Depew, who has himself interviewed in Europe on the situation. Depew says:

The settlement of the tariff question is the beginning of a new era of prosperity. There is no end of idle money which will now seek active employment. In less than two years the panic of 1893-94 will be for gotten. Mines, furnaces, mills and factories will be in full operation, railroads will be conveying profitable traffic and the movement of internal commerce and the free circulation of currency or the equivalent in business and wages will certainly increase the demand for everything produced upon the farm or elsewhere. We are ripe for a long period of prosperity in business, good wages and full employment for labor.

However, this testimony of Depew wasn't necessary to inform the people of the United States that times were better since the passage of the tariff bill, nor to convince them that we were, as a nation—thanks to the wisdom of Democratic legislation—about to enter on an era of unexampled and genuine prosperity; a prosperity which, being founded on right principles, is bound to endure. The telegraphic columns of the papers are full of it. Every day the telegraph brings news of the resumption of operations by big factories, the establishment of new industries and the improved condition of trade. The St. Louis Globe-Democrat, one of the ablest as well as one of the most intensely partisan Republican papers in the land, says of the situation:

Two or three months hence the improvement in business will be so marked and so persistent that the croakers of today will be confounded and humiliated. Partisan capital cannot be made out of the gloomy vaticinations which emanate from certain Republican journals and statesmen at this time.

The Improvement In Indiana.

In Indiana the improved business situation is most marked. The Indianapolis Journal, intensely Republican, contains daily testimony to the improved condition of trade. In its weekly review of the situation in Indianapolis are found these statements, among others:

The Rockwood Manufacturing company reports business improving. This week it shipped a sawmill to Hayti, one of the West India islands, one to Kentucky, one to Tennessee and two to Missouri. It also made a large shipment of pulleys to the Pratt & Whitney company, Hartford, Conn. All the departments are running full time, and the company is especially busy in its foundry, having just booked several large orders for gray iron castings.

Love Brothers, proprietors of the Indiana cotton mill, are preparing to increase their production by putting in 160 more looms.

Although the canners of fruit and vegetables will not put up two-thirds as many goods this season as last owing to the drought which cut off crops, they are just now pushing business, giving employment to some 1,500 men and women.

The manufacturers of bicycles are much surprised that their business is keeping up so well. Usually all are shut down in August and September, but now they are running with fair forces.

The Hoosier woolen mills are running. They have orders to keep them busy the next five weeks, and hope before that time to have orders to keep them running in their present manner for a longer time.

Furniture dealers report an improved inquiry for new goods and, as one of them puts it, can begin to see a little clear sky.

President Bennett of the Indianapolis Stove company says the works are now fairly busy and the company is well satisfied with the results of its business in August.

Knight & Jillson say they have no reason to complain of their business.

The representatives of threshers and engines in this city, of which there are a number, are just closing their business year, and find to their surprise that fully as many engines and thrashers have been sold this year as in the year ending Aug. 31, 1893.

The Diamond plateglass factory at Elwood has started up the remaining departments of the plant, and it is now running at full capacity.

At Muncie Maring, Hart & Co., windowglassmakers, started with 250 hands Sunday night; Ball Bros. started started Monday night with 850 hands and all the greenglass factories with full forces.

At Greenfield the Samuel R. Wells and the Columbia windowglass works have resumed, giving employment to 300 hands.

At Anderson the Riverview Farm implement company of Brantford, Ont., has secured a location and broken ground for its factory. It will employ 200 hands.

Pittsburg capitalists have completed arrangements for establishing at Anderson a tinplate factory to employ 600 hands.

The wire nail factory at Anderson is working night and day, employing 600 hands. All the windowglass factories start up on the 20th and every factory in Anderson will then be running.

At Anderson the Anderson iron and bolt works resumed operations last week with its old force of 250 men.

At Noblesville the American Carbon works were awarded a contract for 1,000,000 carbons for the Milwaukee electric company and not only employed all of its old force without reduction of wages but will have to employ more men.

At Cicero the Modes company glass works resumed last week with 275 men and no cut in wages.

A Philadelphia dispatch to the Republican Indianapolis Journal says:

There was a general resumption in the glass business in South Jersey today, and by Wednesday there will hardly be an idle glass factory at Millville, Clayton, Williamstown, Glassboro, Malaga, Bridgeton and Woodbury. All the factories went into full blast. The coming season promises to be the best for years in the glass trade, and the outlook for continued work throughout the season is excellent. The work is being started on a very satisfactory basis to all. Most of the larger factories have orders now on their books to run throughout the year.

Money Again Moving.

Not only is there a boom in the manufacturing business, but all kinds of trade is flourishing and the bank statements are daily bearing testimony to the trade revival. The Evansville Courier, in an able editorial review of the situation, says:

The Courier a few days ago showed that in the wool schedule alone the people were relieved by the bill of $141,000,000 a year which has heretofore been taken from their pockets and given to the woolen manufacturers. This is the largest item of saving in the bill but it is doubly effective because while free wool reduces the burdens of the people to that extent it also takes from the arch of protection its keystone. All business men of the country fully appreciate this fact. They understand that the long reign of protection is nearing an end and that the most ordinary business prudence requires of them that they adopt their future business policy to the new conditions inaugurated by the new law. It is a significant proof of this statement that the loans made by the banks of the country were larger in extent last week than during the same week of 1892. This result is a most gratifying surprise. No one doubted that there would be marked improvement over the same week of last year, but that it should surpass the same week of 1892, eight months before the panic set in, exceeds the expectations of those who were the most sanguine in forecasting the immediate results of the enactment of the new tariff law. There is a gain of nearly $90,000,000 in the loans and discounts of last week as compared with the same date in 1893, and a gain of nearly $3,000,000 as compared with the same date in 1892. The figures as shown by the last statement of the banks in the New York Clearing House association showed a total of loans and discounts to the amount of $489,879,900. The figures for the corresponding date in 1893 were $400,169,300 while those for 1892 were $487,101,700. The only year since 1884 in which the loans and discounts have exceeded $400,000,000 was in 1889, so that as a result of the new tariff law the total loans and discounts at the date of the latest statement of the New York clearing house is the largest that the country has known since 1884. Of course this increase in the loans and discounts argues that there must also have been an increase in the deposits and the same statement shows that the deposits were larger at the beginning of September, 1894, than at the beginning of the same month during any of the past 10 years. The increase over deposits of a year ago is $212,000,000 and over 1892 is $76,000,000.

Axministers For England.

Another feature of the business revival worthy of consideration, is the rapid increase of foreign trade which had been so discouraged and depressed through the malign influences of the McKinley bill. Touching on this is the following special dispatch from the Indianapolis Journal:

From reports received at the state department it appears that the United States has at least turned the tables on England and is now shipping to that country carpets to the value of nearly $500,000 annually. To make the case still stronger, it is stated that these carpets are the famous Axministers, supposed heretofore to be produced in perfection only in England, and the trade is steadily increasing.

"These Democratic Times."

The country has fallen on "Democratic times" sure enough. And within 30 days the rejoicing thereat will be loud and general. The greatest growth ever known by the business and manufacturing interests of the United States was from 1850 to 1860, under a socalled free trade tariff. With the dawn of another period of reasonable tariffs has already come the assurance of great prosperity. That we are on the threshold of good times no one who gives a moment's thought to the subject can doubt. Capital and industry are now convinced that McKinleyism is forever dead and, fr[illegible]om the protection slavery that has so[illegible] hampered their efforts, they are no[illegible]repared to bring about that universal prosperity to which the unlimited resources and the inexhaustible energy of this country entitles it.

"Democratic times" are at hand.

Why?

If Democrats caused the hard times why in bloomin' blazes don't times continue to grow worse instead of better?—Anderson Democrat.

Bear It In Mind.

Just bear in mind as you go along that the payment of $379,000 of Indiana state bonds maturing April 1 makes a total reduction of state debt since last April of $710,000, an annual interest saving of $31,300. And this must be set down to the credit of the present Democratic state administration, and that, too, notwithstanding the fact that the levy for state purposes has been reduced.—Angola Herald.

A Raise In Wages.

Every reduction in the price of what any one has to buy is an increase in the wages of the buyer. By the repeal of Major McKinley's monstrosity the prices of hundreds of necessities of life are reduced. And every such reduction is a raise in the wages and earnings of every man, woman and child in the land.—Terre Haute Gazette.

Long Since Decided.

Mr. Charles W. Fairbanks is again giving his attention to the "infamous gerrymander," the chief "infamy" of which has been to prevent Mr. Fairbanks buying a seat in the United States senate. The courts and the people have long since decided against Mr. Fairbanks.—Kokomo Dispatch.

COSTS LESS TO LIVE.

Under the New Democratic Tariff Legislation.

All the Necessaries of Life Reduced In Price.

The Genial Advertiser Knocks Out the Arguments of the Able Republican Editor—Advertising Columns of Republican Papers Prove the Falsity of the Claims Made In the Editorial Columns. John Wanamaker Knocks the Bottom Out of All Republican Theories—Merchants Elsewhere Show the Benefits to the People of Reduced Tariff Rates.

The able Republican editor is having a hard time of it these days trying to make his editorial columns "consist" with his advertising columns. The aforesaid able editor is engaged in a frantic and futile effort to prove that the repeal of the McKinley law and the enactment of a Democratic tariff law is going to lead the country to the demnition bowwows and that the laboring man is about to be driven to absolute starvation.

But the genial advertiser is discounting the efforts of the worried editor by announcing prices away below what they were under the McKinley tariff. Everything almost that the laborer is forced to buy is cheaper. The advertiser tells him so, tersely and in display type. And these are arguments which the able Republican editor cannot overcome.

John Wanamaker, who was postmaster general under Harrison—having bought the position by giving $500,000 to the Dudley blocks-of-five fund in 1888—set the ball a-rolling in Philadelphia, and the columns of the daily papers in all the large cities of the country are now filled with similar advertisements.

The Effect In Indiana.

The Indianapolis Journal has been one of the foremost papers in the country to preach the doctrine of "protection for protection's sake," but its advertising columns are daily refuting its "protection" assertions. The Sunday Journal's "display pages" are a splendid testimonial to the service which the new tariff is doing for the people who buy things. Here are a few extracts from Sunday's Journal:

Nicoll, the tailor, advertises:

"REJOICE—BE GLAD!"

THE HOUR OF YOUR SALVATION FROM EXORBITANT PRICES IS AT HAND.

THE WILSON BILL DID IT.

Did it ever occur to you that with the advent of FREE WOOL you get the best imported fabrics for the same price you have formerly paid for domestic fabrics?

Do you realize that you can have a suit made to your measure for as little as $15 and $18 from materials which heretofore were offered at $20 and $25?

And the Kahn Tailoring company also bears testimony to the advantage secured by clothing buyers from the new tariff law as follows:

The continued tariff agitation has made it possible for us to buy woolens at such prices that we are now able to make suits at $20 and $25, which, previous to this season, we could not sell at less than $30 or $35.

Merchants in other lines also bear willing testimony to the lessened cost of living under the new tariff, but the following by the Pettis Dry Goods company will be sufficient for illustration:

NEW TARIFF TRADING

Means trading on the basis of the new tariff schedule. That's the kind of trading we did last week. Our customers liked it, too. Nothing sensational, mind you, but good substantial reductions on goods already affected and on goods that will be affected sooner or latter by the new tariff. Our customers get the benefit NOW. No matter whether the change takes place Sept. 1 or June 1, all the goods in our store are marked down to the new tariff basis now.

SEE HOW BENEFICIAL NEW TARIFF TRADING IS.

JOHN WANAMAKER'S STORY.

Takes Whole Pages to Tell of Reductions In Prices.

But if the Indianapolis Journal is worried by its advertisers, what must be the agony of the Republican editors in Philadelphia, where John Wanamaker is taking whole pages to tell the people what a benefit the new tariff bill is to them. Here are a few statements from Wanamaker's advertisements:

In new wool dress goods, cheviots imported to sell at $1.50 and $2 per yard are reduced to 50 cents; cashmere and cheviot plaids imported to sell at $1.50 and $2.00 down to 75 cents. All-wool sacking goes from 50 cents to 37½ per yard; sail cloth from 75 to 60 cents; French and worsted serges from $1.25 to $1; Bengalines from $1.50 to $1; silkfigured tamlses and batistes from $1.50 to 75 cents. Broad cloth, in all colors, is cut from $3 to $1.50. Women's wash dresses, in duck, pique and the like, that have ranged from $3 to $10, are put down to a uniform price of $2, and a vest goes with each suit. All silk satins drop according to price as follows: $1 per yard cut to 75 cents; $1.25 cut to 90 cents; $1.50 cut to $1.20; $2 cut to $1.40; $3 cut to $2.25; $3.50 cut to $2.65. On silks the cuts average higher, ranging from 33 to 50 per cent off all along the line.

Wanamaker sells everything. In shoes the reductions are as heavy as in fabrics. Women's calf Oxford ties go from $2 to $1.30. Infants' shoes go from $1 to 50 cents. High cut Romeo slippers, in all sizes and colors, are reduced from $3 to $1.50. On linens of all kinds the average drop is 20 per cent. On ribbons it is 40 per cent. On carpets it is 30 per cent. On silk curtains it is over 50 per cent. On children's clothing it is 40 per cent. Wall papers go all to pieces, being from 80 per cent in higher grades to 50 in the lower ones. Men's clothing goes down 25 to 30 per cent, and youths' clothing still lower.

In Chicago.

The Chicago papers are also filled with announcements of reductions in prices due to the new tariff act. The Tribune, the Republican organ, contains in the Sunday issue almost innumerable advertisements of this character:

Schlesinger & Mayer start with a page devoted to showing the reduction in dry goods, using this display line as a heading to the list of prices:

FREER TARIFF PRICES, BY WHICH MANY REDUCTIONS ARE MADE.

In Chicago, too, the grocers are telling of cut prices due to the lower tariff rates. For instance, C. Jevne & Co. announce sharp cuts in prices with this preliminary statement:

IMPORTING DIRECT, WE ARE FIRST IN THE FIELD TO GIVE OUR TRADE THE BENEFIT OF THE REDUCTIONS IN THE TARIFF.

And adds among other things:

The change in the tariff enables us to make a REDUCTION in every kind of imported cheese.

All the Chicago papers fairly bristle with similar statements. And the story of Philadelphia, Indianapolis and Chicago is the story of every other city in the country. In each one prices on the NECESSARIES of life—the things which everybody must have—are reduced sharply as the result of the enactment of the Democratic tariff law.

It Is the Proof of the Pudding.

Tariff reform is "a condition and not a theory" that confronts the people of the United States. During the long struggle against the trust-breeding monopoly-sustaining system of protection, Democrats have been telling their neighbors that lower tariffs meant cheaper necessaries of life. The merchants of the land are now demonstrating the truth of Democratic theories by marking lower prices on their goods.

The tariff is a tax and a Democratic congress has reduc[illegible] the tax.

The people are [illegible]g the benefit.

Democracy is vindicated.

STORY OF THE PENSIONS.

What a Democratic Administration Has Done For the Soldiers.

United States Pension Agent Spencer for Indiana, upon the request of H. C. Bell, deputy commissioner of pensions, forwarded to that gentleman a statement showing the number of new names added to the pension rolls at the Indianapolis agency since March 4, 1893, when the Democratic party came into power, and also the number of pensioners who have been reduced in rate or whose names have been dropped from the rolls in Indiana since that time. These reports show that 3,902 new names have been added to the rolls in this state, and but 165 have been reduced in rate, and but 82 dropped from the rolls. So it will be seen that less than one in each county has been dropped, while an average of 42 new names in each county has been placed upon the rolls and an average of less than two, in each county has been reduced in rate.

When it is remembered that there are over 68,000 pensioners residing in the state of Indiana it will be seen how clearly these figures show that the pensioners of Indiana have not been mistreated by the administration. The total dropped and reduced are 247, distributed through 72 counties.

WANAMAKER'S TESTIMONY.

The Democratic Tariff Reduces the Cost of Bed Blankets.

"Four hundred pairs handsome all-wool couch, bed or wrapper blankets, precisely like them regularly $5 up to a week ago; our price $2.75 the pair."—Advertisement by John Wanamaker, Harrison's postmaster general, in Philadelphia Times.

Oh, Sugar!

Here are the current prices of sugar in Indianapolis under the Republican (McKinley) tariff in September, 1893, and under the Democratic tariff in September, 1893:

	Sept. 1893.	Sept. 1894.
Hard sugars	6⅛@7⅛	5⅛@5⅝
Confectioners' "A"	5⅞@6⅛	5⅜@5⅝
Soft "A"	5⅝@6⅛	4⅞@5⅛
Extra "C"	5⅛@5⅜	4⅝@4⅞
Yellow "C"	4⅞@5⅛	4½@4⅝
Dark yellow	4½@4⅞	3⅞@4⅜

Benefits the Woolgrowers.

The McKinley tariff placed a high tax on wool. Because of this tax the manufacture of woolen goods was restricted, the demand for home grown wool was lessened and the price of wool fell to the lowest point in years. Wool has increased 4 cents per pound since the passage of the Wilson bill.—Logansport Pharos.

Against the Income Tax.

Hon. C. W. Fairbanks is very rich, and it is understood that the income tax of the new tariff bill does not meet with his approval.—Daviess County Democrat.

Not a Good Populist Year.

The Populist vote is falling off not only in the south, but also in the east and west. This is not a good Populist year.—New Albany Public Press.

The Indianapolis Journal's Review Makes a Great Showing.

The Monday Journal of Indianapolis in its weekly review of the business situation has these items:

A. A. Barnes, proprietor of the Udell woodenware works, has 195 persons employed, the largest number since the works were established.

The Dugdale can manufactory is still running to its full capacity, and this is to be its best business year since established.

The Jenney electric motor people are now working more men than at any previous time, and are behind in their orders.

E. Rauh & Son, manufacturers of fertilizers, are pushing their business beyond that of any former year. A large per cent of their product is exported.

Lumber dealers and planingmill men report their business as some better, but by no means what it should be. Especially in the wholesale business is the dullness felt.

The Cleveland Wire Fence company is arranging to put in a number more braiding machines, increasing their capacity to two tons a day. This firm has recently received orders for wire from Canada.

AN INSULT TO CLEVELAND.

Disgraceful Work at a Republican Campaign Meeting.

The President's Portrait Trodden Under Foot,

While the Republican Audience Cheers the Act.

Democrats of Blackford County Roused to Indignation by the Shameful Occurrence—They Are Everywhere Putting Up the Portraits of the Nation's President and Defying the Republicans to Tear Them Down.

HARTFORD CITY, Oct. 2.—[Special.]—The Democrats of Blackford county are highly indignant over the shameful act of certain Republicans one night last week in showing the most malicious and insolent disrepect to the president of the United States. The act which has so aroused popular disapproval among Democrats and respectable Republicans shows that the same bitter spirit actuates the g. o. p. as inspired it in 1892 when young Allison was murdered at Plainfield, Hendricks county, because he had dared to act as captain of a Democratic marching club.

A fat faced, curly-headed man, with a knowing look and a well developed opinion of his oratorical powers was in town Saturday. He was sent here by the Western Telephone Construction company of Chicago to look after an exchange which parties have endeavored to project. He learned that Captain W. R. Myers was to speak in this city that afternoon and had the word started that Mr. Stitch, for this was his name, "the McKinley of Chicago," was here ready to answer Myers' argument. Bills were circulated during the Myers meeting making this announcement and the feeble imitation of McKinley opened his mud batteries in the courtroom in the evening.

Before he commenced speaking an incident happened which disgusted the Democratic portion of the audience. Thomas Pierce, the Randolph county product, who made his debut here in a political speech, remembered as being heavily laden with "rebel bullets" and other expressions in referring to the Democratic party, again displayed his ears. Cleveland's portrait, which hung on the wall during Myers' speech, had not been taken down, the committeeman forgetting it. Pierce espied it, and like an enraged bull taunted by a red flag, he jerked the portrait down and flung it to the floor adr idst the cheers of the Republicans present.

The news of the dastardly act rapidly spread throughout Blackford county and quite naturally aroused the indignation of Democrats and the decent element of the Republican party. The Democrats at once began putting up pictures of President Cleveland everywhere and defying Republicans to tear them down.

A very bitter feeling has been aroused by this incident and if the Republicans attempt to tear down any more Cleveland pictures the attempt will be stoutly resisted.

TO ELECT BEN HARRISON.

Republican Plan to Forestall the Result In 1896.

While the Republicans are "not saying a word" about 1896 this fall there is every reason to believe that they regard the fight of this year as more likely to determine the presidential result than that of two years hence. In fact they are laying the ropes to that end.

The national Republican committee, while apparently remaining quiescent in the present campaign, is in reality directing every detail. It is not paying much attention to the election of state tickets but is looking after the congressional delegations from every state. The idea is that in 1896 no candidate is likely to have a majority in the electoral college and that the election of president and vice president will be thrown into the house.

Orders have been sent out to the Indiana committee that at least seven representatives of the next house must be Republicans—a majority of the delegation. In both Indiana and Illinois the Republicans will make a tremendous effort to elect a majority of the representatives to congress.

The Republicans are certain of electing a majority of representatives in [illegible] states, viz: Maine, Oregon, [illegible]mont (already elected), New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa and Washington. They have a strong pull in New Jersey.

If the Republicans should carry the majority of the members of Connecticut, New York, Indiana, Illinois and New Jersey they would need four more states to give them a clear field in the house if the election of president is to be decided there. They would have Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Montana, Idaho, California, Nevada and several others to draw upon, and they figure that they can easily capture the four necessary states.

In view of these things the importance to Indiana Democrats of voting for their congressmen cannot be overstated. By voting for a Republican or Populist candidate for congressman this fall they are directly voting to put Ben Harrison back in the white house in 1897. The presidential fight is now on and Democrats in Indiana should not lose sight of that fact for a moment.

There It Goes.

Under the McKinley law the tax laid went into the pockets of the sugar trust, while under the present law it goes into the treasury of the United States.—Muncie Herald.

The Benefit Universal.

While it is true that 5,000 windowglass workers will have to struggle along under the new tariff law making perhaps not more than $200 to $300 per month, 70,000,000 people will get the benefit of cheaper windowglass.—Anderson Democrat.

Whisky Trust Knocked Out.

The new tariff bill, far from being in the interest of the whisky trust, is rapidly knocking the bottom out of that giant corporation. Shares of whisky trust stock are now quoted lower than they were ever known before.

BIG BUSINESS CHANGE.

THE GREAT KIBLINGER FACTORY GOES INTO NEW HANDS.

The Most Important Business Change Ever Made in Auburn.

W. H. McIntyre and S. C. Snyder have purchased from the heirs of the late W.H. Kiblinger, the large brick factory buildings lying in the heart of the town on Jackson street, from Seventh to Ninth, together with the works, stock and "good will." This is by far the largest private transfer of real estate that has ever occurred in this county. The consideration is not stated, but it is supposed to be in the hundred-thousand neighborhood. The establishment is the largest in the county. The purchasers have incorporated under the title "W. H. Kiblinger Co." and will continue the manufacture of the well known Kiblinger vehicles on a larger scale than ever.

Mr. S. C. Snyder is well known to most residents of Auburn, having been born and reared within a few miles of town Of late his residence has been at Angola, Ind. He has been probably the best known and most successful dealer in buggies in this section of the country, and brings to the new firm an experience of 25 years in the trade. He is a comparatively young man of splendid business qualifications.

Mr. McIntyre, himself a native of this county, and having lived all his life in Auburn, is no less well known and favorably considered by all who have had dealings with him. For many years he was cashier of the First National Bank of this place, and in that capacity he developed an aptitude for business, and established a reputation for ability and integrity that have placed him in the front rank of business men. From this honorable position in one of our soundest and best conducted financial institutions, he has stepped out into other fields and has been a successful investor and manager in establishing electric light plants in several of the more important towns of Northern Indiana. He is careful and conservative in his business methods but has the necessary push and energy to go with these valuable qualities, to make any business he undertakes a success. Before Mr. Kiblinger's death, he chose Mr. McIntyre as the best man to take up the great work that in his own failing health he found too much for him. After Mr. Kiblinger's death, Mr. McIntyre was chosen to continue in the management of the great factory, and since then he has been at its head, giving his attention and energies to secure a continuance of its success. And he has succeeded. In spite of the closeness of the times, the business has gone on increasing in volume and importance till we are reliably informed that more orders for their popular buggies and carriages have been made than in any previous year. We feel sure that this great establishment, one of our largest and, best is settled on a permanent and successful basis. With two such able and experienced men, its future is secure.

A Visit to My Old Home.

"They're haunting me, they're haunting me,
The memories of o'd.
There is a harp within my breast
That spirit fingers hold;
And whether on life's cheerless way,
In grief or joy I roam,
The hand that stirs its mystic chord
Wakes but one echo—Home."

There is something connected with the scenes of childhood that fastens itself upon the impulses of the heart that the ravages of time fail to obliterate. It seems to grow upon us as age creeps over us and remains the bright oasis of our lives. With this feeling always sensibly felt, and a strong desire to once more view the scenes of my childhood home, on the afternoon of the 22d of September I left my home and after a lonesome ride of three hours on what used to be a fast train over the Lake Shore, I reached Toledo, where I passed a delightful Sabbath among friends and acquaintances. On the morning of the 24th, I left Toledo over the Wheeling & Lake Erie, and reached Lodi, in Medina county, about noon. To facilitate matters I carried a wheel with me, and after a hasty dinner I started for Homerville, distant six miles. A recent rain had made rough roads, and long, high hills added their tedious ascents to my journey, so I reached the forlorn and dilapidated little center a little behind schedule time. Now commenced a search for relatives separated by thirty or more years of the busy trials of life. After several blunders, a tall, gray old man was found, who answered to the name I sought. A brief introduction and a few penetrating glances he threw wide open the doors of welcome and the gray old man and myself were boys again—running, shooting, swimming and living over the happy days of other years. Many similar scenes were enacted, and moistened eyes and trembling tones told the story of our enjoyment. A good night's sleep beneath the roof of my long Unknown relative was added to my enjoyment. On the morning of the 25th, with this friend, I took passage on the B. & O. railroad, and within an hour we heard the well remembered station of "Doylestown" called. We alighted from the train and looked around us; the depot was near a well known highway and inside of a field where I used to hoe corn, while near by rested the quiet, time-stained old village of Easton. We walked through its long single street, comparing notes as to who once occupied this or that decayed old mansion, from whose portals issued only strange faces. We soon reached the extremity of its single street that passed the silent cemetery. We sought its seclusions and vainly tried to find the graves of mother or sister, whose rest has been unbroken for more than forty years, no trace of which remained. But from its gray old stones we could trace the name of many a former friend or acquaintance. With softened hearts we left its lonely precincts. The highway gained, we pursued its well known course, crossing the new artificial channel of old treacherous Chippewa, that the enterprising landowners now seek to chain. The new channel is five feet wide on the bottom and from five to ten feet deep, and reduces the length of the old stream from twenty-two to eleven miles. Going south we crossed the high hills so familiar to boyhood, and secured a conveyance and are soon again on our way over hills, streams and woods, where even the trees known from boyhood seemed like familiar friends. We climbed the Roland and Whitman hills, and looking back we could see the glistening roofs and domes of Bristol, and forward and upward see Doylestown, perched on its huge pile of rocks. We soon reach its old familiar streets. A street fair is in operation and we saunter among its main exhibits, meeting here and there some well known boy or girl of former times, now the spectacled matron or the gray corpulent man. The exhibits of the fair were creditable as compared with Butler's fair, but Butler's crowd of visitors had evidently remained at home. The attendance was not much greater than Butler's on Saturday afternoon. Many surprises met us during the day. We met but few of our old acquaintances; death had claimed the larger share, and the faces of those remaining bore but few remembered traces. The quick step, the raven lock and glistening eye were gone. The bent form, the measured step and grey locks had taken their place. We groped our way about the old church yard. The church that stood near by was gone, and on broken or fallen tablets I read the name and date of death of many a well remembered friend who had long since passed away. After spending a number of hours upon the familiar streets of this little city and visiting many well remembered places, and enjoying the hospitality of dearly remembered friends, and a pleasant visit with a lady who formerly lived at Butler. With my friend I left the place over a different road, every rod of which was hallowed by memories of childhood. I passed the Galehouse coal mine and again descended to the valley of the Chippewa. As about two hours of daylight yet remained I devoted them to a stroll about the old farm. I passed the portal of the dwelling erected more than fifty years ago, in which I passed nearly all the years of my youth, and around whose hearth for many years our circle was unbroken. It yet stands firm and seems to defy the finger of time. I crossed the farm, saw our commodious barn erected in 1849, yet in good preservation. I wandered through the old orchard; a few gnarled, broken and scrubby trees remained. I tasted some of the fruit that awakened a deep sense of the past. I crossed the spot where my eyes first opened to the light of the world, and where my earliest days and sorrows were passed. I followed the meandering rivulet that formerly was a small river, in its course across the farm, and noted the changes wrought by time, sought out the spring from whose crystal depths I so often quenched my thirst on summer days. The grand old sentinel—a giant elm—still stood guard; all else was gone. A tangle of weeds impeded every step. I crossed into the field where stood the well known wild mulberry. The finger of time had marked it for its own; a decaying trunk and a few withered branches alone remained. With thoughts busy on a dead past I left the scene and sought the home of a kind friend. The following day I again visited Doylestown, meeting many others who have grown old. In the afternoon I took the B. & O. train for Homerville, remained another night with my friend, visited a number of old school-mates of my youth, and on the 27th returned home, well rewarded for my time and money.

BOILED DOWN FOR OUR INTELLIGENT READERS.

A Whole Family Exterminated Trying to Thaw Out Dynamite—An Unknown Man Beaten to Death—Fatal Explosion at Chicago—Duel With Axes.

Five are Dead.

Ironwood (Mich.) special: John Ravell, a miner, put a half box of dynamite in the oven of the kitchen stove to thaw it out for use. The family, consisting of seven persons, was gathered about the stove, chatting over the events of the day and conversing with a neighbor, Mrs. Peterson. In a few minutes, without a premonition of danger, there was a terrific explosion, which dealt out death with an unsparing hand. The following were killed: John Ravell, Peter Ravell, Dan Ravell, Louise Ravell, Mrs. Louise Peterson.

The injured are: Baby Clarence Ravell, Mrs. John Ravell, Thomas Ravell. The injured are in a dangerous condition, and it is not unlikely that the family will be exterminated as a result of the father's foolish move. The house was blown to atoms.

The Dispensary Law Constitutional.

Columbus (S. C.) special: The decision of the Supreme Court in the dispensary cases has been filed. Justices Pope and Gary decide the law constitutional, while Chief Justice McIver dissents. The effect of the decision will be that Gov. Tillman will now begin an active warfare against the "blind tigers" which have been flourishing without much molestation since the act was declared unconstitutional. What the saloon men will do is problematic. They have never had any concert of action in fighting the law in the courts, but it is more than likely that some kind of a case will be gotten up which will finally bring the question in the Supreme Court of the United States.

Base Ball.

The series of games between the Baltimores, the National League champions, and the New Yorks, who finished second in the league race, for the Temple cup, were concluded Monday. The New Yorks defeated the Orioles for the fourth consecutive time, thus winning the cup and 65 per cent. of the net receipts of the four games. The net receipts amount to about $22,000 and each of the players will therefore receive a very snug sum for their great work in the series just closed. The New Yorks have outplayed the Baltimores at all points in the series, and have well deserved their victory and the spoils which go with it.

Murder at Elkhart.

An unknown man was brutally murdered in the outskirts of Elkhart, Ind., by four men, who stoned their victim to death and with a car coupling beat his head to a pulp and then, stripping the body, buried it in a neighboring woods, where it was found. The murderers escaped by boarding a Lake Shore train for the West. The murdered man is about forty years of age and his appearance and clothes indicate that he is not a tramp. A dispatch from South Bend says one of the murderers is in custody and other arrests will be made.

Death of Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Oliver Wendell Holmes, the venerable poet and prose writer, almost the last of the circle of great men of letters of New England of the generation past, died at his home at 296 Beacon street, Boston. The immediate cause of death was heart disease. Dr. Holmes had been in his usual good health all summer, which he spent at his country house in Beverly Farms. As was his custom, he came back to his winter residence in Boston about ten days ago. He was then as well and strong as at any time in the last few years.

Duel With Axes.

Two farmers, Raymond Martin and Robert Rye, at Hebbardsville, Ky., quarreled about a woman. Martin got two axes, handing one to Rye, he proposed a duel. They fought until Rye had both arms severed from his body and fell dead. Martin received horrible gashes about the head and breast and is in a dying condition.

Burned to Death.

A young son of United States Collector of Internal Revenue Burke, was burned to death at Vincennes, Ind. The elder brother gathered a pile of dead leaves in the street, and after setting them on fire, he left. The younger son began playing with the burning stuff, and his clothing soon caught fire.

Fatal Accident.

The Boston limited express on the "Soo" Railroad, went through a bridge near Pelican Lake, Wis. The fireman was killed and the engineer fatally injured. It is not known how the passengers fared, as the "Soo" line agent refuses any information on the wreck.

Steam Pipe Lets Go.

Two men were killed in an explosion in the Illinois Steel Works, Chicago, and a number of others injured. The accidental explosion of a steam pipe the fragments of which were scattered in every direction caused the deaths.

Ex-Governor Curtin Dead.

Ex-Governor Curtin died at his residence at Bellefonte, Pa. This removes another of the famous war Governors of 1861-5.

A Buffian's Just Death.

Akron (Ohio special: The city is stirred to the depths by the news of a shocking deed attempted by a prominent young man of this city. Henry D. Tolley attempted to assault Miss Gertrude Lewis, and being foiled shot himself through the heart. Tolley and Miss Lewis had been engaged until last June.

A Fatal Mistake.

Peter McGivern, Frankton, Ind., died from an overdose of chloroform, taken by mistake.

Corbett Will Fight.

The Evening New York Telegram prints the following:

"James Corbett has changed his mind about fighting 'Bob' Fitzsimmons for the championship of the world. He has overcome his objection to meeting a middle weight and has announced his intention of covering Fitzsimmons' money, now held by the sporting editor of the Herald and he will be in the city to make the match this week.

"Corbett communicated this information to a prominent sporting man who said: 'Corbett will go into this match against my judgment. I furnished part of the stake money for his fight with Sullivan, but I deplore his action in meeting a middleweight. It will add nothing to his prestige if he beats Fitzsimmons, and it is a big chance. However, he knows best what he wishes to do.'"

Corbett's action in receding from the position he assumed last week, is a great surprise to his friends and enemies alike.

SEVEN KILLED

And as Many More Wounded in a Kentucky Race Riot.

Hawesville (Ky.) special: As the excursion train from the Owensboro Fair arrived at Power's Station, a few miles west of this city, a terrible race war occurred between thirty drunken negroes and a few brave white men who nobly defended the women and children passengers. It seems that the negroes became frenzied because they were forced to ride in the colored apartment, and as they neared their home station they made a rush to get into the coach for white people. This frightened the women and less brave men who ran through the train. At this Deputy United States Marshal Moses Bullington, one of the bravest of all of Uncle Sam's officers, who had his family on the train, met the negroes and attempted to quiet them. The negroes then began shooting as they got off the train. Deputy Bullington and Squire Aldridge, both of this city, and Marshal Jones and Col. John Patterson of Lewisport, and a half dozen men named Atkins from this county, then began firing into the negroes.

As the train pulled out the negroes shot all the windows out of one coach, and the white men named emptied their guns into the negroes, who were bunched on the platform. Not one on the train was hurt, but it is thought that at least seven negroes are dead, and as many more wounded. One white man on the train used his knife, which was covered with blood when he came in. These statements are from the lips of United States Marshal Bullington, who was interviewed at his home.

DANGER

To the European Residents in China.

London special: British consuls at Hankow and Ning Po sent alarming dispatches to the Government, stating that European residents are in peril. The Evening News published a sensational statement that the Cabinet Council was called to consider a dispatch from Minister O'Connor in which it is stated that Russia is intervening to assist China against Japan in return for the cession to Russia of certain ports of Corea. If this is true, the Evening News adds, it will be a question of sending first-class British men-of-war to China to thwart Russian intentions. There is no confirmation of these statements from other sources.

It is announced upon authority, that the Cabinet Council, after discussing the state of affairs in China decided to send troops to that country in order to protect British interests. It is also probable that additional ships will be sent to strengthen the fleet in Chinese waters under the command of Admiral Fremantle. It is also said that in consequence of information received by the Cabinet, the British legation at Pekin will shortly be guarded by British blue jackets and native Indian soldiers.

A BLOODY RECORD.

Six Persons Meet Violent and Terrible Deaths at St. Louis.

St. Louis special: Six persons were killed here one day recently by street car motors and railway engines. At noon Michael Brennan, a messenger boy for the Terminal Railway Company, was run over and killed by a switch engine on Popular street. At 7 a. m., Katie Schaeter aged 7, who came here from Waterloo, Ill., to visit the fair, was ground to a shapeless mass by a motor car of the Union Depot line on Cherokee street. Thomas Ewing of Crystal City, Mo., aged 35, was killed by an Iron Mountain train on a trestle in the southern suburbs early this morning. His mangled body was found at 5 p. m. Johnnie Walsh, aged 6, was killed on the Wabash track in front of his father's house on Poplar street at 4 p. m. The remnants of the body found were taken to the morgue in a cigar box. At 4 p. m., Susie Seragin, aged 11, and Roy Bartlett, a boy of 3 years, whom Susie was caring for, were killed by a Union Depot motor car at Peck street and Kossuth avenue.

KEPT HER PROMISE.

Frightful Fall of a Lady Aeronaut from the Clouds.

Miss Beatrice Von Dressden, aged 17, made a balloon ascension at the fair grounds at Franklinville, Cattaraugus County, N. Y. A strong wind was blowing at the time, and she was advised to postpone the trip, but as this was her birth place and all the people assembled there knew her, she refused to disappoint them. The balloon was cut loose at 5 o'clock. When it had reached a height of 1,500 feet Miss Von Dressden endeavored to disengage the parachute fastened to the balloon, by which she purposed making her descent.

In some way she lost hold of both the balloon and the parachute, and fell like a stone to the ground. Her body was driven into the ground nearly twelve inches by the shock of the fall. All her bones were broken, and she did not breathe after reaching earth. Her father and mother were among the first to reach her. They were frantic with grief.

Burned and Roasted by a Live Wire.

A horrible electrocution was witnessed on Congress street, Boston, by hundreds of people. Charles E. Day, a lamp trimmer in the employ of the Boston Electric Light Company, was cleaning a lamp and had hitched himself to the top of a pole, when attention was called to him by a faint cry. Day was seen to be helpless and unconscious. In a few seconds he was limp, and a blue flame was emitted from his eyes, nose, mouth, and ears. Several unlookers tried to get up the pole, and one young man succeeded in touching the body when he dropped to the ground, receiving painful injuries. A. J. Mumes started up the pole, and reached Day's body when he received a shock and fell thirty feet to the ground, striking on his head, fracturing his skull. He died shortly afterward. It was more than a half hour before Day's body, now terribly burned, was lowered to the ground and taken to the morgue.

No Sign of War.

A dispatch to the London Daily News from Paris says there is nothing pending between France and England sufficiently grave to justify a scare. Madagascar is the only black spot on the horizon, and according to Paris opinion Great Britain ought to restrain her officers from drilling Hova troops or to insist that they quit the British service: but there is no sign of a national paroxysm against England.

Reuters agency at London virtually denies the report it circulated that the Madagascar ports had been blockaded. It expresses the opinion that the report arose from the fact that French warships had been ordered to exercise increased surveillance over the Madagascar coast to prevent the landing of munitions of war.

Murdered His Wife.

George Neorr, who was the proprietor of a saloon at 195 Shelby street, Indianapolis, fatally shot his wife in the head and then went to the house of his son near by and blew out his brains on the back porch. Neorr was 60 years old and married his wife, who was a widow, about one year ago. The woman had protested against the contaminating influence of the saloon on her three little children, and the murder resulted from this quarrel. The three children witnessed the murderous assault on their mother.

A Printer's Good Fortune.

Through the agency of the Cincinnati, Hamilton, and Dayton Railway and its connections, the Third Street Bank of Cincinnati, furnished Samuel Benjamin $15,000 to take himself, his wife and two daughters to Australia and back to secure an estate of $3,000,000 left him by an uncle. The bank secured legal evidence of the existence of the bequest from the Australian executors before advancing the money. Benjamin is a native of Russia and is a printer.

G. A. R. Appointments.

Commander-in chief Lawler, Grand Army of the Republic, has a pointed C. V. R. Pond of Muskegon, Mich., Inspector General; Matt H. Ellis of Yonkers, N. Y., Judge Advocate General; J. L. Bennett, Chicago, Assistant Adjutant General. The new Pension committee named is: Iven N. Walker, Indianapolis; W. A. McHenry, Dennison, Iowa; Isaac H. Bangs, Waterville, Maine; George W. Queen of Anarchists

The Chicago police arrested a woman who was found at the Union Depot with a bundle of anarchist literature. In her possession was found several circulars signed "Lizzie Loftus, Queen of the Anarchists," and ordering the destruction of Chicago on or about October 6. The woman, who was plainly dressed and of middle-age, refused to give an account of herself and was locked up pending an investigation.

Jumped the Track.

As the Southern Pacific narrow guage train was crossing the Oakland Estuary at Oakland, Cal., a car jumped the track, going into the water and taking down sixteen people. The killed are: P. J. Kyley, ticket seller, and an unknown body not recovered. The injured are: J. C. Wilson, San Francisco, badly hurt. Several other passengers were injured, although not seriously.

Killed in a Runaway.

Mr. and Mrs. William King, living near Lebanon, Ind., were driving home, when the team took fright and ran away. Mrs. King tried to jump from the wagon but made a fatal leap and died shortly afterward. King attempted to drive the team into a fence to stop it and was thrown out and injured internally. He is not expected to live.

Boiler Lets Go.

The boiler connected with the pile driver on the Louisville and Jeffersonville bridge at Louisville, exploded, and five persons were badly injured. The accident was due to the crown sheet blowing out. Among those injured were two engineers, who are supposed to be fatally scalded.

Called a Halt.

SLUMP IN GEORGIA.

Returns from the Recent Elections Show Big Populist Gains.

Sixty-three members of the next Georgia Legislature will answer to the Populist roll call the first Wednesday in November, when that body meets. Four Congressional districts of Georgia may elect Populist Congressmen in the national election, which occurs on the same day. The majority of W. Y. Atkinson, for the governorship, will be only about 10,000, instead of the 72,000, which was given to Gov. Northen two years ago. These are some of the results apparent from the official returns received from Wednesday's elections. To a large extent, a dispatch says, the contest for the governorship has been fought on national lines. The State platform called for the immediate free coinage of silver, without respect to the wishes of foreign nations. The inofficial returns at first indicated that the State had gone Democratic by 50,000. But these figures as the official counts were made, rapidly dwindled until the Democrats do not claim more than 18,000, while the Populists declare that returns from the country counties will reduce the majority to not more than 10,000. Several of the strongest Democratic counties in the State have been carried by the Populists and with but few exceptions every county in the State shows Populist gains.

W. Y. ATKINSON.

WOMEN IN THE FIGHT.

They Join the Crusade Against the Reign of Vice and Corruption.

If New York City is not purged of crime within a reasonable time it will be surprising. There are movements within movements looking toward a cleaner and morally healthier municipal life, and many earnest men and women are singly devoted to the purpose of putting an end to the frightful corruption that has made New York notorious among the great cities of the nation and the world. The call issued by Dr. Parkhurst asking the women of New York to co-operate in the work of reform, met with a generous response. Scores of influential and refined women, well versed in the problems of city government, have signified their intention of entering the crusade against vice. Most of these belong to existing societies and are admirably equipped for the work they have now undertaken. These ladies are encouraged to enter heart and soul into the reform movement by the brilliant success of their sisters in Kentucky in defeating Col. Breckinridge. They know that now the entering wedge has been driven by the Lexow investigating committee into maladministration in their city the road is open for a successful assault upon the powers of evil which have so long held New York in bondage. Dr. Parkhurst never made a more politic move than when he invited the co-operation in his work of the refined ladies of the republic's metropolis.

YOUR FOREIGN COINS.

Uncle Sam Has Placed a New Valuation on Them.

The Director of the Mint has estimated and the Secretary proclaimed the value of foreign coins as required by section 25, of the act of Aug. 28, 1894. The changes made are as follows:

	Value July, 1894.	Value Oct., 1894.

FATAL DETROIT FIRE.

FIREMEN CRUSHED TO DEATH BY FALLING WALLS.

Six Men Killed and Nine Others Seriously Injured by the Collapse of a Furniture Store—Sixty Employes Have a Narrow Escape.

Beneath the Ruins.

Six dead and a score injured is the record of the fire which destroyed the furniture store of Keenan & Jahn at Detroit, Friday morning. The dead are:

LIEUT. MICHAEL H. DONOGHUE, Chemical No. 1.

RICHARD DELY, pipeman No. 9.

JOHN HAGEL, pipeman No. 9.

FREDERICK A. BUSSEY, spectator; died at Grace Hospital.

MIKE BALL, pipeman No. 9.

JULIUS CUMMINGS, of No. 2.

The fire was discovered in the shipping-room in the basement at the back of the store at 7:30 o'clock. An alarm was promptly turned in, but by the time the engine arrived the fire had gained considerable headway, having run up the elevator shaft, and the entire upper floor was a mass of flame and smoke when the first stream was thrown. There were sixty employes in the building and most of them had great difficulty in escaping. The building, an old five-story structure, was soon gutted and the stock ruined.

At 9 o'clock the front wall of the building tumbled into Woodward avenue. It came in the shape of a collapse, and the mass of debris did not spread beyond the curb. The firemen working in front of the building were warned and retreated as rapidly as possible. Some got out from under, but a dozen or more were unable to do so on account of the piles of brick, glass and burnt timbers.

A yell of horror went up from the throats of the thousands who were in the street, and then there was a crash like an earthquake. The air was filled with dust and sheets of flame and smoke. Some of the falling wall broke the heavy electric wires and the trolley wire. A flash of sputtering electric fluid lighted up the scene and people crowded and surged to get into the stores and down the side streets to escape being shocked. A number of men, women and children were trampled under the feet of the frightened spectators.

Rescuers were immediately at work, and the six bodies were soon taken out. The aggregate loss on building and stock is estimated at $80,000; fully insured.

WILL VICTORIA ABDICATE?

A Sensational Rumor Now Afloat About the British Throne.

A letter from a London correspondent says that Queen Victoria may abdicate the throne on November 9. The letter says: Queen Victoria's rheumatism is worse. At this present time she goes up and down stairs in a sort of litter, and is rolled about her rooms in a vehicle which resembles an enlarged baby carriage. Specialists say it is rheumatic gout. The court eavesdropper says that on the 9th of November, the birthday of the Prince of Wales the announcement of her majesty's retirement will be made in favor of her eldest son, who will be acclaimed as Edward VII. Queen Victoria is 75 years old, an age when one can well understand she might be only too willing to free herself entirely from all trammels even of such feeble responsibility as a British monarch now possesses. The Prince of Wales is 53, and therefore no longer young, and so it is about time that he

UNITED AT LAST

BY

CHAPTER XXIX—Continued.

Lord Clanyarde and his daughter left at the end of the week. There were fever cases talked of already, and all the American tourists had fled. Lord Clanyarde felt he was not getting away an hour too soon. They dawdled about among Swiss mountains, living a life of rustic simplicity that was wondrously beneficial to Constance, but somewhat painful to Lord Clanyarde. At the beginning of July they had established themselves at a little lonely village in the shadow of white, solemn mountains, and here Constance felt as if she had passed beyond the region of actual life into a state of repose, a kind of painless purgatory. She had done with the world and worldly interests and affections. Even the little stranger's heart must have been weaned from her by this time.

Lord Clanyarde saw the gradual decay of his daughter's strength, and trembled for the issue. She had grown dearer to him in this time of close companionship than she had ever been since the far-off days when she was little Connie, the youngest and loveliest of his daughters. He told himself that unless something occurred to rouse her from this dull apathy, this placid calm, which looked like the forerunner of death's frozen stillness, there was every reason for fear and but little ground for hope.

Lord Clanyarde prayed more earnestly than he had ever done before in his self-indulgent life, and it seemed to him that Providence heard his cry for help.

One morning there came a letter from Rome which startled father and daughter alike. It was from Mrs. Walsingham, written in a tremulous hand, and addressed to Lord Clanyarde.

"They tell me I am dying, and the near approach of death has melted the ice about my heart. I have been a very wicked woman, and now conscience urges me to make you what poor reparation I can for the most cruel and treacherous revenge—not upon the man who wronged me, but upon the innocent girl for whose sake I was deserted.

"I have deeply injured your daughter, Lord Clanyarde, and I meant to carry the secret of that wrong to the grave—to leave her desolate and childless to the end. But the long lonely night, the pain and weariness of decay, the dreary seclusion from the dreary outer world—these have done their work. Conscience, which had been deadened by anger and revenge, slowly awakened, and there came a longing for atonement. I can never undo what I have done. I can never give your daughter back the years that have been darkened by sorrow—her wasted tears, her vain regrets. But I may do something. Let her come to me—let her stand beside my deathbed, and I will whisper the story of my crime into her ear. I will not write it. She must come quickly if she wishes to hear what I have to tell, for death stares me in the face, and this letter may be long reaching you. Every day drifts me further down the dark river. How swift it rushes sometimes in the dreary night-watches! I can fancy I hear the ripple of the tide and the hollow moan of the great ocean that lies before me—the unknown sea of death and eternity."

Here came a broken sentence, which Lord Clanyarde could not decipher, and it seemed to him that the writer's mind had wandered toward the close of the letter. There was no signature, but he knew the handwriting, and Mrs. Walsingham's address was engraved at the top.

The letter had been more than a week on the road, and was readdressed from the hotel where Lord Clanyarde and his daughter had stayed at the beginning of their tour.

"It's a curious business," said Lord Clanyarde, doubtfully, after he had given Constance the letter. "I believe her mind is affected, poor soul; and I really don't think you ought to go. Who can tell what she may do in her ravings, and not a vestige of truth in it, perhaps."

He thought Mrs. Walsingham's death-bed confession might concern her relations with Gilbert Sinclair, and that it would be better for Constance to hear nothing the unhappy lady could tell.

"This letter bears the stamp of truth," said Constance, firmly. "I shall go, papa. Pray get a carriage and let us start as quickly as possible."

"But, my love, consider the unhealthiness of Rome at this time of year. We might as well go and live in a fever hospital. The Pontine Marshes, you know, steaming with malaria. We should be digging our own graves."

"You need not go there unless you like, papa, but I shall not lose an hour. She has something to confess—a wrong done me—something about Christabel, perhaps," cried Constance.

He saw that the only wise course was to yield to his daughter's wishes, and lost no time in making arrangements for the journey back to Rome.

They entered Rome in the summer sunset, the city looking beautiful as a dream. The atmosphere was cool and balmy, but Lord Clanyarde looked with a shudder at the silvery mists floating over the valleys, and fancied he saw the malaria fiend grinning at him behind that diaphanous veil. Constance thought of nothing but the purpose for which she had come.

"Tell the man to drive straight to Mrs. Walsingham's, papa," she said, eagerly.

He gave the directions to the driver, and the man pulled up his three horses before one of the stately palaces of the past.

An Italian man servant admitted them to the anteroom lavishly decorated with pictures and bric-a-brac—a room in which Lord Clanyarde had eaten Neapolitan ices or sipped coffee on those Saturday evenings which Mrs. Walsingham had made so agreeable to him. He had never seen the room empty before to-night, and it had a singularly desolate look to his fancy in the flickering light of a pair of wax candles that had burned down to the sockets of the Pompeian bronze candlesticks on the velvet draped mantelpiece.

"Now is your mistress?" Lord Clanyarde asked, eagerly. The Italian shrugged his shoulders.

"Alas, excellency, it goes always the same. She still exists, that is all."

"Tell her Mrs. Sinclair has come from Switzerland in the hope of seeing her."

The Italian summoned Mrs. Walsingham's maid, who requested Constance to come at once to the sick-room. She was expected. But she must prepare herself to be shocked by Mrs. Walsingham's appearance. Her end seemed near.

"You had better go to your hotel, papa," said Constance. "I may have to stay here a long time. You can come back for me by and by."

On reflection Lord Clanyarde considered this the best arrangement. He really wanted his dinner, indeed, he had never yet found any crisis in life so solemn as to obliterate that want.

The servant led the way through a suite of reception rooms to a tall door at the end of a spacious saloon. This opened into Mrs. Walsingham's bedroom, which was the last room on this side of the house: a noble chamber, with windows looking two ways—one toward the hills, the other over the stately roofs and temples of the city. Both windows were wide open, and there was no light in the room save the rosy glow of sunset. The bed was in an alcove, voluminously draped with amber damask and Roman lace. Mrs. Walsingham was in a sitting position, propped up with pillows, facing the sun-low beyond the purple hills.

There was a second door opening onto the staircase, and as Constance entered, some one—a man—left the room by this door. She supposed that this person must be one of Mrs. Walsingham's medical attendants. The doctors were hovering about her no doubt, in these last hours.

"You have come," gasped the dying woman, "thank God! You can go, Morris," to the maid; "I will ring if I want you. Come here, Mrs. Sinclair. Sit down by my side. There is no time to lose. My breath fails me very often. You must excuse—be patient."

"Pray do not distress yourself," said Constance, seating herself in the chair beside the bed; "I can stay as long as you like."

"How gently you speak to me! but you don't know. You will look at me differently presently—not with those compassionate eyes. I am an awful spectacle, am I not?—living death. Would you believe that I was once a beauty? Grant painted my portrait when we were both at our best—" with a bitter little laugh.

"I have not lost an hour in coming to you. If you have done me a wrong that you can by any means atone for, pray do not lose time."

"Death is waiting at my door. Yes, I must be quick. But it is so horrible to talk of it, such mean, low treachery. Not a great revenge a pitiful, paltry act of spitefulness. Oh, if you knew how I loved Gilbert Sinclair, how firmly I believed in his love—yes, and he was fond of me, until the luckless day you crossed his path and stole his heart from me."

"I never knew," faltered Constance.

"No; you wronged me ignorantly, but that did not make my loss lighter to bear. I hated you for it. Yes, I measured my hatred for you by my love for him. Life was intolerable to me without him, and one day I vowed that I would make your life intolerable to you. I was told that you were making an idol of your child, that your happiness was bound up in that baby's existence, and I resolved that the child should be taken from you——"

"Wretch!" cried Constance, starting up in sudden horror. "You were there—at Schenesthal; you pushed her down the steps. It was not an accident——"

"No, no. I was not quite so bad as that; not capable of taking that sweet young life. To take her from you, that was enough. To make your days miserable, to make you drink the cup of tears, as I had done, because of you; that was my end and aim. I found a willing tool in your French nurse-maid—a skillful adjutor in James Wyatt. Everything was well planned. The girl had learned to swim, the year before, at Ostend, and was not afraid to plunge into the river when she saw some one coming. This gave a look of reality to the business. I met Melanie Duport at the ruins that September morning, and took your baby from her. I carried her away in my own arms to the place where a carriage was waiting for me, and drove straight to Baden, and from Baden traveled as fast as I could to Brussels, keeping the baby in my own charge all the while."

"She was not drowned, then. Thank God! thank God!" cried Constance, sinking on her knees beside the bed, and lifting up her heart in praise and thanksgiving. Of Mrs. Walsingham's guilt—of the vain sorrow she had endured—she hardly thought in this moment of delight.

"Where is she, my darling, my angel? What have you done with her? Where have you hidden her all this time?

A wan smile crept over the ashen face of the dying sinner.

"We are strange creatures, we women—mysteries even to ourselves," she said. "I took your child from you, and hearing you were dying broken-hearted, gave her back to you. Your old lover pleaded strongly. I gave her into Sir Cyprian Davenant's keeping. I know no more."

"Then I was not deceived. My Christabel—it was my Christabel they brought back to me. The instinct of my mother's heart was not a delusion."

"Can you pity—pardon?" faltered Mrs. Walsingham.

"Yes. I forgive you for all—for months of blank, hopeless grief—all—because of what you have told me tonight. If you had taken this secret to the grave—if I had never known—I should have gone on stealing my heart against my darling; I should have thrust her from me, left her motherless to this cruel world, and thought that I was doing my duty. Yes, I forgive. You have wronged me cruelly; and it was heartless, treacherous, abominable, what you did at Schenesthal; but I forgive you all for the sake of this blessed moment. May God pardon you, as I do."

"You are an angel," sighed Mrs. Walsingham, stretching out a feeble hand, which Constance pressed tenderly in both her own. Death is a great healer of broken hearts. "And will you forgive the friend who brought you your own child, believing that he was bringing upon you a stranger, and who experimentalized with your maternal love in the hope of winning you from the grave?"

"You mean Sir Cyprian Davenant?" said Constance.

"Yes."

"I felt angry with him when my father told me what he had done; but I am sure all he did was done out of affection for an old friend. I have nothing to forgive."

"I am glad to hear you say that. Sir Cyprian has returned from America after a successful expedition. He is in Rome."

Constance's pale cheek grew a shade paler.

"He is in Rome, and has paid me many visits in the sick-room. He has talked to me of your generous—your divine compassion. But for that I do not think that I should ever have had the courage to send for you——"

"I thank him with all my heart," exclaimed Constance.

"Let your lips thank him, too," said Mrs. Walsingham, touching the spring bell on the little table beside her. She struck the bell three times, and at the third chime the door opened and Cyprian Davenant came in. It was he who had withdrawn quietly at Mrs. Sinclair's entrance, and whom she had mistaken for the doctor.

"She has forgiven all," said Mrs. Walsingham. "You were right when you called her an angel. And now let me do one good thing on my deathbed. Let me be sure that the rest of her life will be bright and happy, that there will be a strong arm and a true heart between her and sorrow. It will help to lift the burden from my conscience if I can be sure of that."

Constance spoke not a word. She stood before her first lover blushing like a school girl. She dared not lift her eyes to his face.

Happily there was little need of words.

Cyprian put his arm round the slender figure, in its dismal black dress, and drew the love of years to his breast. "God has been very good to us, my darling," he said. "May He never part us any more! I think He meant us to live and die together."

Constance did not question this assertion. Her heart mutely echoed her lover's words.

* * * * * * *

In the early spring of the following year Davenant awoke like the palace of the Sleeping Beauty, and the comfortable old servants, who had grown fat and sleek during their period of comparative idleness, rejoiced and made merry at the coming home of their master. They had known him from his boyhood and to them this raising up of the old family to more than its former prosperity was like a personal elevation. Even the neighboring villages had their share in the gladness, and there were more bonfires and triumphal arches between the railway station and the park gates on the evening of Sir Cyprian's return with his beautiful wife than had ever been seen before by the oldest inhabitant.

Baby Christabel was waiting to receive them on the threshold of the old oak-paneled hall; and Martha Briggs, resplendent in a new silk gown declared that this was the happiest day of her life—an assertion which James Gibson, the gamekeeper, resented as a personal affront.

"Bar one, Patty," he remonstrated. "I should think your own wedding-day ought to be still happier."

"No, it won't," cried Martha, decidedly; "and I think you ought to know, Jim, that I would never have given my consent to get married if my mistress hadn't——"

"Set you the example," cried James, with a guffaw. "And a very good example it is, too. Sir Cyprian has provided me the new lodge at the south gate—five rooms and a scullery. That's the missus' doing, I'll be bound."

[THE END.]

Eskimo Weapons.

The spear used by the Eskimo is about five feet long. It is made of wood, mounted with bone, in which are finely carved all the fantastic designs characteristic of the Eskimos in this line of work. The arrow is made in three pieces, two parts wood, and the third, which is the head, of bone dipped in poison. The three pieces are held together by a leather thong, but with a slight movement of the hand these can be disengaged, leaving the head, when it strikes the animal, curved in its body in such manner that it is impossible to disengage it without cutting the skin.

When the weapon is used on whale, seal or other water animals a float, made of the bladder of a seal, is attached to the end of the spear, so that the hunter may trace its course and locate his game. The Eskimos have a peculiar way of "shooting" this weapon.

The hunter holds in his right hand, high above his head, a short stick, or "gun" with a notch near the top, where the end of the spear fits snugly. Taking aim at his game, he moves his right hand swiftly forward, propelling the spear with lightning speed, and invariably with unerring aim at the mark. Instances have been recorded where a hunter brought down his game at fifty yards, and one or two. Alas, story tellers, who have no fear of being discredited by the rising generation, say that animals have been slain at 100 yards distance. But all agree that the average Eskimo is a marksman who never fails to hit his mark, and who, when so disposed, always provides plenty for his family with his primitive weapon. Sometimes to this spear is attached a rope of leather, one end of which is securely fastened to the hunter's arm so that he may keep hold of his game. But this is only done on short distance shots.

A weapon used in hunting birds is a tripod-shaped spear. This is thrown in the same manner as the poisoned spear. The hunter sneaks within distance of his covey of ptarmigan or other birds, and lets fly his weapon. If he be lucky, three birds are the reward of his skill, if not, one or two.

Old Superstitions.

It is curious to observe how many strange ideas and superstitions have been handed down to us by our great-grandmothers, many of which are still firmly believed in in remote country places, particularly by the peasants in the north of England. It was proverbial with our grandmothers that—

A maiden should never be married in colors if she wishes to be happy, the most unfortunate colors being yellow and green.

Widows who re-marry ought to be dressed in white. Wednesday is the most fortunate day for marriages, Saturday the most unlucky.

The thirteenth of the month is unfortunate for all purposes.

If a wedding party should meet a funeral on the way to church, separation will ensue.

Birds in flocks are lucky, and the sun to shine upon a bride is most propitious, denoting success in all matters, and mutual love.

If a green pea-pod containing nine peas is put by a maiden over the hall door, she will be married if the first stranger who enters happens to be a bachelor.

Everything commenced upon the first day of the moon is supposed to turn out successful.

Never pick up an old glove or sorrow will follow.

A dream told before breakfast will not come out true. It is said to be unlucky to dream of a baby lucky to dream of a white horse, and luckiest of all to dream one hears music being played. To dream of a wedding means a death, and to dream of a death foretells a wedding.

TOWN OF BIG TRUNKS.

GROWTH IN CHICAGO OF A GREAT INDUSTRY.

Charles E. Nixon Gives Some Interesting Information Concerning the Prey of the Baggage-Smashers—From the Antique Chest to the Modern Trunk.

Genesis of the Trade.

The lively panorama presented in a railway station with the arrival of a train is never failing, ever changing, in its human interest. The blase traveler, the tired tourist, the bustling man of business, the fin de siecle girl, the bride of yesterday, mothers with frightened little ones clinging to their skirts, and patriarchs with silver hair, all mingle in the restless throng that have peopled the train. Up next to the locomotive that stands languidly puffing on the track after its long run is the baggage car, filled with travelers, inanimate, but quite individual in their way, all having the distinction of a check in addition to a name painted or tattooed with tacks on their person. Now the luggage van in Europe is very different from the baggage car in America. Our trans-Atlantic cousins travel, comparatively speaking, baggage light; a pair of porters (personally conducted) carry the hampers and the little flat trunks from the baggage room to the van, carefully depositing it, and the car man thereupon decorates the end of the trunk with a little "paster" indicating its destination. Here in America we rush into a baggage-room, shout at the imperturbable attendants, try to railroad three or four trunks through on a single ticket, frown audibly when the bags and boxes were dumped in the scales and we get a bill for "excess" over 150 pounds of personal baggage. Then we pocket our jingling brass checks, and let those trunks alone until we arrive in the place of destination, possibly 4,000 miles away.

A BUREAU TRUNK.

In the interim that blessed baggage has many adventures that no society for prevention of cruelty takes cognizance of; it is thumped and banged, compressed and crushed, flung about, the sport of the cyclonic baggageman, who appears to take a demoniacal delight in toying with his charges. The little brown paper trunk with tin trimmings, that began its travels in New York with a great steel-shod sample trunk, is suffering from acute appendicitis when it reaches Chicago, and by the time it is flung out in Kansas City it is in almost a complete state of collapse. The humanitarian who presides over the baggage department of the Union Depot in that city has almost made a fortune in the Samaritan-like act of "roping" shattered trunks. It takes a stalwart to get away from his bailiwick without getting 25 cents worth of rope at every throw.

THE DISCOURAGED BAGGAGEMEN AND THE BIG CHICAGO TRUNK EXHIBITED AT THE WORLD'S FAIR. CAPACITY 7,257,600 CUBIC INCHES.

This wear and tear of traveling paraphernalia necessitates large sources of supply. Chicago is the great center of travel; last year Frank Parmelee handled in transit over half a million trunks. It is perhaps interesting to know that right here is the greatest trunk and traveling supply center in the world. Over a million trunks and hand-bags are manufactured in Chicago each year, exclusive of the enormous quantities brought in from other points. The market extends into New York on the East and covers the entire West to Asia, Africa and Australia. While the business in Chicago is comparatively new, a number of trunk makers have grown rich enough to retire. Of course, there are trunks; and again there are trunks; and it may be remarked without fear or favor, the vast majority of them are short-lived; the intense rigor of their exercises would knock out the most robust constitution, and many trunks have outward show, rather than great structural strength. Hence the merriment of the baggage smasher and the activity of the trunk producer. The great American public must have trunks and plenty of them, for there are multitudes of trunk-dwellers in this land of the free.

When our ancestors sailed over from England they brought with them a great supply of chests. As Chester was a place noted for carved chests perhaps some of the most artistic came from that section, but they were most noted as features for household adornment rather than for their peripatetic powers. It is a historical fact that our good grandfathers traveled with saddle-bags long before Saratogas were dreamed of; their sons began to assume the coaching and canal-boat facilities, convenience of the carpet-bag, and the dignity of the portmanteau, and eventually dropped into the raw-hide trunk habit. This in brief is the genesis of the fashion that has inspired the great industry of to-day, under consideration. Common leather hand bags, or patent veneered paper hand bags, may be had cheap enough of the jobbers. The finer goods of fancy leathers, alligator, seal, Russian, or lizard, may be furnished with gold, silver, ivory, or pearl fittings to cost upward of $1,000.

When it became fashionable to take "outings" at summer resorts, the demand for trunks grew correspondingly, and the Saratoga with the swell top swept into fashion after the war. Even in the earlier days, when sole-leather trunks and portmanteaus were the proper and sensible style, base imitations began to creep in, and a Philadelphia firm began to make buff-leather trunks strengthened with flat steel ribs.

Back in the '40's, the majority of trunks were made from pine and whitewood covered with muslin. This was lamp blacked, coated with varnish, and bound in green bands with bright brass rivets. Prior to this was the old hair-covered trunk (hides tanned with hair on), with red leather trimmings, then followed the sheepskin trunk era; then came split from sheep, russet creased, bound with black leather, and fastened with Boston rivets. Then there were bridle-leather trunks, known as "the five-band trunk." Some of the sole-leather trunks made away back in the '50s, stitched with French edge or riveted, have survived the wear and trouble of time and are still bravely going the rounds. Very few if any, genuine sole-leather trunks have been made in this country in the past fifteen years. The trunks from 1850 to 1860 seldom exceeded 32 inches in length. In the next decade, the Saratoga period, they expanded from 36 to 42 inches in length and were 28 to 30 inches deep, and in order to be distinctly "swell" had a back humped like a dromedary. This justly aroused all the pent-up enmity of the baggage master, and he has never quite recovered from it.

The fashion in trunks changes almost every five years; the immense arched top tin trunk, so popular a few years ago, is now archaic, and the flat-topped canvas-covered trunk is the proper thing, with the carriage and steamer trunk in favor. Even the veteran sole-leather trunk is not proof against voracious and mischievous rats and mice. It is remarked that well-made trunks from here have defied the assaults of the terrible ants of equatorial Africa, one of the best tests that could be put upon them. The heaviest trunks are carried by the jewelry drummers. They are so well framed and securely bolted and cross-riveted that they might fall off a sky-scraper without breaking. The trunks of commercial travelers are built to battle with the world, and are very strong and substantial, bound with rawhide, cornered with drop-bolt steel, and painted a dark but modest red. The old-time commercial traveler trunks used to weigh 115 to 130 pounds, now they range from 70 to 100 pounds, and outwear their weighty predecessors.

The model modern trunk is to combine lightness, strength and durability with comfort, and the internal economy of his trunks is remarkable. He has a place for everything, and everything should be in its place to carry with absolute security, from filigree feathers and silk hats to curling tongs and small bottles. He does not guarantee to carry dynamite, but he can pack his hunting-trunk with a veritable arsenal, most inviting in its internal arrangement. Devices for the comforts of all conditions of travelers have been studied out and elaborated in detail, all subservient to strength and simplicity. There is a trunk for everything nowadays, from the giant "samplers," with an assortment of fine watch movements, to the bulky bicycle. While we were going to Europe for locks and findings twenty years ago, the European trunk men are now adopting American improvements and devices. The hand bags and fine leather goods made in America are more durable and for general taste quite as fine as those made in England and France. A well-known theatrical man, and he is certainly good authority, states that the best trunks in the world are made in Chicago. The life of a good trunk from the jobber is limited from one to three years, but there are plenty of trunks that have been purchased there that have seen five to fifteen years active service. There are well preserved old sole leather heirlooms that have seen half a century of wear, but it has naturally been intermittent.

The World's Fair furnished a particularly fine showing in our favor. Compared with loose-woven hampers of England, the showy French trunks in checkered patterns with frail brass trimming, the antique, raw-hide, carved boxes from Brazil, our trunks ranked easily first in point of lightness, convenience and durability. So much for the grand trunk center.

EDUCATION IN GROWING THINGS

How Children Can Be Kept Interested by Well-Selected "Rubbish."

Give a little child congenial employment, and he will almost invariably be happy and good-natured. Toys alone are not all that he requires—his active little mind demands the stimulus of intelligent occupation, even at the early age of 3 or 4, and it behooves a mother who has the responsibility of his mental growth at heart to provide the wherewithal for development. There is something very touching and beautiful in seeing an intellectual woman of real ability eagerly interested in the rudiments for the sake of her little child, says the New York Tribune. At an al fresco tea in the Berkshires not long ago a well-known authoress commenced filling her pockets with "rubbish," as she laughingly called the collection she proposed to add to a trunk full of odds and ends which, as she explained, she intended taking back to town for occupation for her small boy during the winter. Dried mosses and curious insects, preserved in alcohol to examine with the microscope; pressed wild flowers and grasses for a herbarium, and various seeds from interesting plants to start in the spring, etc.

"You can make a lovely experiment with an acorn or chestnut," she said by way of illustration, "by suspending one by a thread within half an inch of the surface of the water contained in a hyacinth glass, and leaving it undisturbed. In a month or two it will throw a root into the water, and shoot upward a straight little stem, from which will develop tiny beautiful green leaves. You have no idea how such experiments delight very young children, and how it awakens their intelligence. Another interesting bit of growth for the nursery is to take one of these pine cones, place it in a wine glass half filled with water, and after it has imbibed the moisture for a few days sprinkle it with canary seed. In a week's time the seed will sprout, to the intense satisfaction of the tiny gardener. Or an old sponge may be kept wet and completely covered with living green. Object lessons such as these teach many things which the inquisitive intelligence of early childhood imbibes without effort, but which cannot fail to develop and enlarge the mind." Mothers who, like Martha, are careful about many things and worry perpetually over the physical well-being of their children should consider whether they are careful to supply nutriment to the brain as well as the body.

Reptiles in the Wells.

During a continued dry spell in south Florida, reptiles often are obliged to resort to unique methods for obtaining fresh water. One need not be surprised while pumping water to see little brown frogs issue from the pump, and one man was rather startled while pumping to see a snake two feet long issue from the spout, and upon striking the ground quickly crawled under a house. The reptiles crawl into the pump to enjoy the water held up by the valves.

Trade Figures.

According to the official report for the year ended June 30, 1894, the exports from Southern ports amounted to $296,156,694, as against $271,715,014 for the previous year. This increase of over $24,000,000 is directly attributable to the growth of industries and the general extension of business in the South.

TIMES were bad, and made no improvement till the first important democratic laws went into effect.

TIMES kept bad as long as the McKinley law was in force and at once got better when the new tariff law went into effect.

CHICAGO big fire started twenty three years ago Monday night Oct. 8. As the city continued burning all next day, the anniversary is usually set for the 9th.

WHEN the McKinley law first went into operation, all the necessaries of life were increased in cost. Under the new democratic law, all the necessaries of life begin to get cheaper.

THE Press says sugar will cost 2 cents a pound more. But the democrats took off the bounty of two cents the people all over the country were paying to a few Louisiana planters, This saved the people 15 millions. Will the Press explain.

REPUBLICANS complain that the new tariff law is high on some things. Will they agree to make these lower? As the McKinley law they like so well, had rates about twice as high it is plain that any further reductions must come from democrats, not republicans.

THE great democratic barbecue and mass meeting at Huntington last Thursday, was a great success. It is estimated that 20,000 to 30,000 people were present. Twenty beeves were roasted, and there were six tables,each 100 feet long. There was speaking at three different stands. Among the speakers were Governor Mathews and Senator Turpie. It was one of the best rallies ever held in the state.

PRICES of domestic wool have gone somewhat higher since wool was put on the free list. The reason is, as we have often said, that with the tariff taken off of imported wool, the manufacturer could afford to pay more for the home grown wool. Besides with cheaper foreign wool, we could make goods cheaper, so as to sell all over the world. Hence, we would make more woolen cloth, and need more home grown wool. So the price would be likely to keep up.

THE editor of the Waterloo Press is foolish enough to think he can make farmers believe they can be "protected" and that all that is needed to get good prices is to restore the McKinley bill and that any change in the tariff rate makes the same change in price. "The tariff on wool has been reduced 100 per cent" he says, and wants farmers to believe that will take 100 per cent off the price of their wool, which would make the selling price nothing. But wool went down steadily under the McKinley bill, and is now gaining a little. Farmers know all these things.

THE Kendallville Standard anxiously exclaims: "How can the national debt be paid and the credit of the nation be sustained when the expenses exceed the revenues of the country? Turn the incompetents out." That is just what the people have done. They "turned the incompetents out" in 1892, because with a hundred millions surplus to start on,and revenues larger than ever before, they cleaned out the treasury by their unheard of extravagance, and though the surplus had disappeared they passed a law to reduce the revenues, so as to embarrass the treasury still more. Let the people say: "Keep the incompetents out." Under democratic management the treasury bids fair to get in shape again. Already the receipts exceed the expenses.

Public Speaking.

The democratic county committee has made the following appointments for Dr. Fred. B. Wood, democratic candidate for representative in the state legislature These notices will be kept standing and we hope people will keep them in mind and all turn out to hear him, whether democrats, republicans, populists, or prohibitionists, He is a fair minded speaker and treats his subjects and his hearers fairly. It will hurt no one to hear the truth.

Wool Under High Tariff.

Republican papers generally and the Waterloo Press in particular cannot forget the wool question, and from the way they state it, one arrives at the conclusion that either they do not know what they are talking about or are hard pressed for something to say. As a matter of fact the McKinley tariff has nearly ruined the sheep industry. Take for instance, the State of Ohio had 841,757 less sheep in 1890 than they had in 1880. The State of Indiana 20,378 less and Illinois 104,442 less than they had in 1880. (See Teble 4 at page 71 of Abstract of the Eleventh Census of 1890.) This covers a period of time when protection had full sway. Now, with the Wilson bill in force only a few weeks, the price of wool is advancing and ere long the flocks will increase and wool be raised at a greater profit than before the McKinley law was repealed.

The Cause of the Panic,

1. Cleveland turned over to Harrison $330,348,916.12
Harrison turned over to Cleveland $162,432,920.78
Difference.....$167,864,995.34

But this amount included the gold reserve, $100,000,000, which Harrison considered sacred, and the agency accounts, so that Harrison's secretary of the treasury, in the last debt statement he issued, puts down the net cash balance in the treasury at $24,128,087.88,and of this $11,497,829.74 were nickels, dimes, etc.

2. Harrison began the purchase of bonds immediately after his inauguration. and the first seven months paid out $66,954,500,

3. In three years Harrison paid the bondholders $47,967,807.32 premium on bonds.

4. "Revised" or "recast" the debt statement three times so it would show a balance in the treasury.

5. Transferred a trust fund of $54,388,475.75 into the available cash.

6. Had the benefit of profit on coinage amounting to $30,105,013.25.

7. Signed the McKinley act, which reduced the receipts from customs in one year $42,068,241.10.

8. In two years under the McKinley law the sum of $8,614,439.14 was refunded to importers as drawback.

9. The purchase of bonds, the billion dollar congress, drawbacks and general extravagance bankrupted the treasury.

10. This, with the miserable makeshift silver-purchasing law, alarmed capital, brought our securities home, sent a gold stream across the ocean in volume $157,989,803.

11. Preparation to issue bonds made by Harrison's secretary of the treasury.

12. Harrison's panic and soup horses The democratic party has rescued the nation from bankruptcy and chaos.

Nothing can arrest the return of prosperous times, but the return to power of the party that precipitated the panic.

Will the people return to McKinleyism and Fosterism and Harrisonism, or will they let well enough alone?

These are the great questions of the campaign.

Election Sheriffs, Etc.

The new election law, the Logansport Pharos says, provides that the board of commissioners must appoint election inspectors, but the chairmen the committees of the two parties casting the greatest number of votes have authority to designate the election judges and the poll clerks, as well as the deputy sheriffs. A list of the persons recommended for judges must be filed with the county board a week prior to the election, and the poll clerk at least four days before election. The county sheriff appoints the deputy sheriffs. They are chosen from the two parties casting the largest number of votes, and the persons appointed must be recommended to the county sheriff for appointment five days before the election.

WATERLOO.

Miss Katie Braun has charge of the foreign exhibits in floral hall.

Mrs. Ida Daniels started Sunday for her home in Fairmount, Minnesota, intending to stop on the way to visit her brother, Frank Blair.

There is a fine Edison phonograph on the grounds and the wonderful machine draws crowds to listen to it.

Jim Booth will have a dance, of course

Everybody has some interest in the exhibits on the ground and the children are excited over the merry-go round. The hotels and boarding houses are full of business.

Lewis Henning has rented of Mrs. Winsow, the brick building (quite recently vacated by Sam Beck) to pack winter apples in.

Many horse traders are in town from abroad, and find quite a few who live here.

Ora Bohler has returned to Waterloo.

At the burning of the roller flour mill last week, two farmers were heard to say they would each give $50 towards building another mill.

The fair began Saturday evening. One man had cheap jewelry which he was selling out to the surrounding crowd. Another was trying hard to sell out a wagon load of bananas at "ten cents a dozen," which most persons know is what our dealers have asked for some time.

Miss Ella Phillips was home from Hicksville over Sunday.

Mrs. Juliette Dickinson was called to Angola Saturday eve, the little son of Mrs. Ed. Ettinger being sick.

Coming Lecture To be here November 21.

Hon. John H. Littlefield, of New York, (formerly law student of Abraham Lincoln), will lecture under the auspices of the Epworth League, in the M. E. church on Wednesday evening, Nov. 21. His subject will be "Personal Recollections of Abraham Lincoln." He was a law student, as well as for many years a warm personal friend, of the "Martyr President," and is better qualified to speak of him than any other living lecturer.

SWEET AUBURN.

The Loveliest Village, as Seen by other Eyes.

Thirteen years ago I visited in Auburn, then as now, a guest in the family of my brother, Mr. Barns, of the COURIER, and now on my second visit I feel that a brief mention of my impressions will not be amiss. I have found the people of Auburn among the friendliest I ever met, and the ladies especially. I will always remember for the many attentions received, and that have tended so much to make my stay delightful. I reached here this time Oct. 2, and found the town greatly improved since I was here before. The shade trees have grown in size and beauty, the streets, always level, have been greatly improved, especially in the long lines of white, level cement walks. Of course the town as a whole, has improved and grown, and with its fine churches, school houses, and nice business blocks, strikes a stranger favorably. I shall carry with me a pleasant remembrance of her ladies, whom it was my good fortune to meet, both the young ladies and those of maturer years. And last, though not least, Auburn should be proud of her literary ladies. I speak more especially of the Ladies' Literary Club, as I met them at my other visit and again on this occasion. They were just beginning their work when I was here before, and I find them now the finest club I ever met. At my former meeting I was pleased. This time I was charmed, and without wishing to appear as flattering them, must say I was surprised at the progress they had made One seldom meets such a refined and lady-like company, who at the same time possess such a store of solid, sound intelligence and such a wide range of information. One cannot but enjoy such a "feast of reason and flow of soul." To me, it was very refreshing. I especially enjoyed Mrs. Ford's paper, "A Journey." It carried me back to many similar experiences. In conclusion, let me thank all the ladies who made the hours of my stay so pleasant. MRS. B. A. DAVIS,
Hatch's Mills, Ind.

Auburn Ahead Once More.

Auburn is in the lead in still another line. The W. C. T. U. of this place took up a collection at their meeting at W. H McIntosh's on "Mother Wallace Day" and though not a large amount, it was ahead of any other place in the state. The W. C. T. U. paper, the "Organizer" of Indianapolis, under date Oct. 4 says of this:

"We are just in receipt of $13.50 from Auburn as the result of the Mother Wallace Day entertainment given by them. This is the 'banner Union' in amount of proceeds sent to us, a fact of which they will be sure to be proud. We congratulate them on their success and hope the 'Organizer' will richly repay them for their efforts"

The Keeley Institute Stays.

The Keeley Institute is a permanent fixture in Auburn, in spite of all reports to the contrary. It will not be removed, but will remain. For some time rumors have gone out that this popular and valuable institution would be located elsewhere. We have interviewed the gentlemen in charge of it, and they assure us it will remain, as there is no reason for a change of location. It has so far been in control of a stock company. Now, Dr.J. C. Bowers and Geo. J. Byrider have obtained full control and will hereafter be sole managers. Both are well known to all our people, and to all the patients who have been treated at the Institute. Mr. Byrider has been secretary of the Institute from the first location here, and Dr. Bowers has for a long time been the physician in charge. Both are reliable and capable gentlemen, and under their control the Keeley Institute will continue to prosper and be an instrument of great good to the unfortunate who require its humane and valuable treatment.

Obituary.

Isaac Cobler, son of John and Jane Cobler, was born in Jackson township, DeKalb county, Ind., Dec 29, 1852; died at his home in Allegan County, Mich., Sept. 27, 1894, aged 41 years, 8 months, 28 days. The subject of this sketch was reared in Jackson, receiving there a common school education. Sept 12, 1875, he was married to Libbie Thomas, oldest daughter of Uriah and Lydia Thomas In 1874 he joined the Dunker church, of which he was a consistent and devoted member up to the date of his death. In 1889 he moved to Allegan county, Mich., where he purchased for himself and wife a nice, comfortable home.

The funeral services were held on the 29th of September, at the Methodist church in Lacota, Va Buren county, and were conducted by Rev. Barringh, of Barry county. The text for the occasion was selected from 2d Cor., 1, 5. The interment took place in the beautiful cemetery at Lacota. The community has lost a good neighbor, and the wife, a kind and loving husband.

A husband dear has gone to rest,
His sufferings now are o'er;
The Savior always does the right,
He's trod the way before.

Dearest Isaac, thou hast left us,
And we deeply mourn our loss;
But our sorrow bring us nearer
To the foot of Jesus' cross.

Dearest husband, I shall never
See your smiling face again;
But we know thou art with the angels,
Far beyond this world of pain.

Many years we've lived together,
Dearest husband, you and I,
And I know that you were faithful,
That you reached your home on high.

Let us live for Christ, our Saviour,
That when we shall come to die,
We shall meet with friends departed,
Ne'er to part, in heaven on high. —C. E. S

High School Answers in Canada.

A Canadian correspondent recently sent to the Spectator these answers to questions put at an examination at a high school in her majesty's dominions in North America. The genuineness of the answers is vouched for by the correspondent. In an account of Queen Mary one pupil added: "At my death the name of Calais will be found in my stomach, graven on my heart," evidently due to a remark in Collier's text book Another defined an abstract noun as "the name of something which has no real existence, as the virtues" Question: Name some of the chief instruments of tyranny under the Stuarts. Answer: The ax with which Charles I. was beheaded was one of these." A more advanced student wrote: "In old English the pronouns of the first and second person had a dual (dual) and both perished in Middle English." In explanation of "Tam O'Shanter." "catch'd by warlocks in the mirk." "warlock" was defined as 'the tuft of hair left on top of an Indian's head."—Public Opinion, London.

Waterloo Fair.

The week opened up cold and disagreeable, but yesterday was more favorable, and when the Auburn Band started out and played a few stirring airs, everybody began to think of the fair. By afternoon people were seen going by as in other years, and at this time it looks as if they would have a big crowd and a regular old-time fair.

Republicans and Silver.

State Register.

Now that the Republicans in their State conventions are declaring they are bimetalists—that they favor the use of gold and silver as money, etc., it will be interesting to study the record of the republican party on the silver question. What has the republican party done for silver? Read the record:

In 1873—The republican party demonetized silver.

In 1875—Defeated a coinage bill.

In 1878—Defeated the Bland free coinage bill and tried to defeat the silver purchasing and coinage act, known as the Bland-Allison act.

In the house, June 25, 1886, republicans for silver 25, against silver 130.

In the house, April 8, 1888, republicans for silver 30, against silver 93.

In the house, June 7, 1888, republicans for silver 15, against silver 158.

In the house, June 17, 1890, republicans for silver 15, against silver 25.

In the house, March 24, 1892 republicans for silver 11, against silver 19

In the house July 13, 1892, republicans for silver 19, against silver 60.

In the house Aug. 23, 1893, on the repeal of the Suerman bill, republicans for silver 13, against silver 111.

In the house on the Bland seigniorage bill, republicans for silver 15, against silver 110.

In the Senate on the same bill, republicans for silver 18, against silver 20.

Deeds, indeed, speak louder than words.

CHANGE OF VOTING PRECINCTS.

At their June session, 1894, the Board of commissioners of DeKalb county, state of Indiana, made the following changes in the boundaries of voting precincts, the same being now entered in the records of said session:

PETITION TO CHANGE VOTING PRECINTS IN UNION TOWNSHIP.

"The Inspectors at the last general election find from the ballots cast at said election that the Southwest precinct of Union township cast 308 votes; Southeast precinct cast 209 votes; Northeast precinct cast 208 votes; the Northwest precinct cast 193 votes. The southwest precinct having cast more votes than a legal apportionate, we therefore recommend that the Northwest precinct be increased by extending the line of said precinct to Ninth street in the town of Auburn, thence west along the center of said Ninth street, on a parallel line to the township line. And that the Northeast precinct be extended to center of Eighth street, thence east through the courthouse; and that the Southeast precinct be changed so as to include the block between Jackson, Main, Eighth and Ninth streets. And that the Southwest precinct will include only south of Ninth street and west of Main street and Ft. Wayne road."

J. WALBORN,
J. E. ENSLEY, Inspectors.
M. BOLAND,

Therefore the Board changes said voting precincts as recommended.

PETITION TO CHANGE VOTING PRECINCTS IN SMITHFIELD TOWNSHIP.

By George Strayer and others.

"It is ordered by the Board that the following precincts be established: Precinct No 1 to be composed of sections four (4), five (5), six (6), seven (7) and eight (8), and the voting place to be in the incorporated town of Ashley. And Precinct No 2 be the balance of the township and the voting place to be at Smithfield township center school house.

Mr Beuret, whose big advertisement is in the paper, does not confine himself to heating stoves alone, in his business, but handles some of the finest cook stoves in the market. He also makes a special point on cooking ranges that are now getting to be so popular. And in in the line of paints he keeps a large stock of the best in the market.

Bliss had a very savage personal article in his paper of last week, in which he tries hard to pick a personal quarrel with Mr. Gordon. Just what he expects to accomplish by this, is not very clear. While we are at sword's points with Mr. Gordon on political matters, we cannot see why his standing in the community is not as good as Bliss. And why lug the G. A. R. into a personal quarrel in which they can possibly have no interest?

Holmes Link, a well known farmer residing between this place and Garrett, died at Chicago Tuesday morning. He went up to the city a week ago, Oct. 5 to have an operation performed, to relieve him of some trouble, supposed to be piles. The operation seemed to be a success, but aftewards inflammation set in, and he rapidly grew worse. His brother Joseph, of this place, went up on the noon train Monday to bring him home. The interment is in Evergreen, to-day.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly." Sold by Robbins and McCord druggist Auburn Ind 34tf

A. J. Carmer brought in quite a curiosity last Saturday. It was an apple bough full of brigh, fragrant blossoms, the second crop of the year. People in the spring, when such blossoms are abundant, seldom stop to enjoy or admire them. But these late comers, were the wonder and delight of all. Everyone we showed them to stopped to admire their lovely, bright colors, and to inhale their delicate fragrance.

A letter from Gertie Wilson, at Little Rock, gives a vivid description of her experiences in the terrible cyclone that swept a portion of that city last Tuesday evening. She was writing the letter while the storm was raging, and though she realized that the wind was lifting off iron roofs, cellar doors, etc, she did not know it was as bad as a cyclone. They supposed it was but an ordinary rough storm that had done some little damage, and she writes her sensations in the most natural way, with the storm howling outside. But next morning, they learned of the fearful damage done. Many lives were lost and property estimated at a million was destroyed. In the part of town where the storm struck were situated the state prison and insane asylum. In each, several inmates were killed.

Rebecca Wilkinson, of Brownsvalley, Ind., says: I have been in a distressed condition for three years from Nervousness Weakness of the Stomach, Dyspepsia and Indigestion until my health was gone. I had been doctoring constantly with no relief. I bought one bottle of South American Nervine, which did me more good than any $50 worth of doctoring I ever did in my life. I would advise every weakly person to use this valuable and lovely remedy; a few bottles of it has cured me completely. I consider it the greatest medicine in the world." W. S. Purdy has so far failed to get any satisfaction out of the Shores family, over in Allen county, for the expense incurred when the daughter was sick at his house, of diphtheria, Mr. Purdy had quite a heavy expense. For two weeks his family were all compelled to remain indoors or within the yard, and no one could get out to get supplies except Mr. Purdy himself, and he had to be pretty sly about it. He even was compelled to make something of a doctor's bill for his own family, that he would not have had but for the sickness thus brought into his house. Then there was the care and worry, and the boarding of several people, in all a great expense, which Shores, who is well fixed, ought to pay, but will not. A suit has been commenced in Ft. Wayne to compel a settlement, and we hope Mr. Purdy will get a fair compensation. How many of us would like to have a severe case of the diphtheria in the family for any sum?

Lines on the Death of Laura Baxter.

BY MRS. JENNIE DICKINSON.

"There is no home, however tenderly cherished, but one dead lambkin's there."

Is Laura dead? Yes, here she lies
With folded hands and closed eyes.
Her voice is hushed in silent death;
To Him did yield her vital breath.

O, cruel death, what hast thou done
To make us sigh, and weep and moan;
To take our Laura thus away!
Could'st thou not let her with us stay?

Is Laura dead? I ask once more,
Yes, she is dead. Come back with power.
She's dead! She's dead, and we must part.
The thought, it breaks my very heart.

Hush, mourning tho'ts, no more complain.
She's gone to heaven with Christ to reign.
No more to struggle hard for breath;
No more she'll have to do with death.

"She died before her infant soul
Had ever felt a wrong desire,
Had ever spurned at heaven's control
Or ever quenched its sacred fire,
She died to sin; she died to care;
But for a moment felt the rod;
Then rising on the viewless air,
Spread her light wings and soared to God."

This blessed theme now cheers my voice:
The grave is not our loved one's prison.
The stone that covered half our joys
Is rolled away, and so she's risen.

Methinks I see her borne away
On angels' wings to realms of day.

Christian Church Convention.

There will be a convention of the Christian churches of the First District at Waterloo Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, to which all are invited. Able speakers will be present, and all departments of Endeavor, Sunday school and church work will be considered.

And Down He Went!

Harry Reed, who lives up towards Waterloo, wanted some apples to use last Sunday, and instead of making his wife go out and pick them as many a man would, he went out himself. Not being able to reach all he wanted he climbed up into the tree, and went for the fruit right and left. Something suddenly gave way, for Harry is no feather weight. He threw his arms out wildly, of course, and managed to catch a limb which he thought would hold him, but again his size was against him. The limb broke, and down he came, striking in such a way he broke his shoulder. He will be laid up for some time, and it is lucky that the accident was not more serious.

THEY speak of a last year's shanty as "an ancient landmark" in Oklahoma.

IF Italy deports 2,000 anarchists this year to Germany and other countries, Uncle Sam will do well to watch his imports. The "other countries" will be mostly this country.

A DEALER in horses recently took to Clyde, N. Y., a lot of horses that had been in use on a New York City street railroad. E. H. Cady purchased one. He was driving it home when a traction engine, which horses native to Clyde do not notice any more than they would if a sheep met them in the road. The city horse stopped, looked wildly at the strange thing for a moment, gave a shudder and fell dead in his tracks.

SINCE grass-growing has become a science and an art you may hire a man to create a lawn for you in a fifth of the time once thought necessary for such a creation. Thick and luxurious lawns are produced between spring and autumn and a lawn of two years under the modern forcing process may easily rival one of five years under the old-fashioned system. Artificial stimulants and abundant water are responsible for the new order of things.

A FATHER of some marriageable daughters, not far from Mount Vernon, N. Y., had occasion to have a sofa upholstered, and here is a list of what was found between the back and cushion: Forty-seven hairpins, 19 suspender buttons, 3 mustache combs, 13 needles, 35 cigarettes, 8 photographs, 217 pins, 76 grains of coffee, 46 cloves, 27 cuff buttons, 6 pocketknives, 15 poker chips, a vial of homeopathic medicine, 34 lumps of chewing gum, 50 toothpicks, 28 matches, 39 collar buttons, 11 neckties, 2 love letters, a few pieces of candy, 2 dimes, 3 quarters, 1 nickel, 5 buckles, 5 lead pencils, 1 pen and 4 button hooks.

LABRADOR, on the northeast corner of this continent, has generally been regarded as an immense bit of valueless waste. Late information from the expedition that has returned from that territory reports it one of great value. There is rich land that in localities is fit for cultivation. Besides, it has great lakes and rivers, abounding with the best fish and an unlimited supply of game. Immense herds of caribou range in the forests, and there are valuable fur-bearing animals. Without doubt these attractions will lead to settlement, despite the inhospitable climate, though this last has probably moderated from what it was when this land was first visited.

THE appearance of Messrs. Brodie and Corbett as "actors" reminds the Boston Journal that the present condition of the stage is but a repetition of history, and that the world does not change much. Dr. Doran, in his "History of the English Stage," speaks thus of the end of the seventeenth century: "The century closed ill for the stage. Congreve's play, 'The Way of the World,' failed to give it any luster. Dancers, tumblers, strong men and quadrupeds were called in to attract the town; and the elephant at the Great Mogul, in Fleet street, 'drew' to such an extent that he would have been brought on the stage but for the opinion of a master carpenter that he would pull the house down." And it is set down that the treasuries at both Covent Garden and Drury Lane were well-nigh empty, owing to the rage of the town for curiosities.

THE Gould nature hates a monopoly—some one else's monopoly. The family has declared war on the Diamond Match trust and will fight that hydra-headed monster—the phrase is customary—by means of a match factory which they have established at Passaic, N. J. The elder Gould, in his valued lifetime, was sometimes compared to Lucifer (after), but he never went into the match business. Watering match stock, we imagine, would be a hazardous undertaking. Edwin Gould, who is president of this new company, should have taken example from the older and craftier hand. But we wish him luck of his undertaking, although with the memory of the Vigilant-Britannia races and of certain exploits of one of the young women of the family in mind we are bound to say that the Goulds are not noted for their success at match-making.

THE great future which is before the agriculture of this country is hardly yet realized by our young men. When it becomes more generally recognized that a talented man with a taste for the calling has just as good a chance to distinguish himself as he has anywhere else, then thousands of our brightest young men will not hesitate to train themselves for the occupation. The talented young men of to-day, who are far-seeing enough to observe the chances before them, will be at the top of the ladder in due time. The foremost agriculturists of the future will be trained business and scientific men; in fact, they are already so to a limited extent. The young man of brains who has also a love of farming need not be afraid of wasting himself by choosing agriculture as an occupation. Let him work, and study, and learn, and his reward is sure.

HUMAN skeletons are quoted at an average value of $40. The closet variety comes much higher.

GRAIN will not grow and ripen for use the day it is planted, neither will an advertisement, but if planted in good soil and properly cultivated the harvest is very sure to follow in due time.

THE results of artesian well irrigation in South Dakota should be a convincing object lesson on the most obstinate and skeptical. That such irrigation, on a large scale, is absolutely indispensable to the prosperity of that State, ought no longer to be questioned.

THE lake region of Northern Ohio is one of the principal grape belts of the country. The land is level and slopes toward the lakes. The soil is of a light, porous character, and the nearness of Lake Erie prevents early frosts. This season nine hundred of the grape growers have united as the Northern Ohio Grape Company.

A MAINE Yankee, who settled in Guadalupe County, Texas, twenty-five years ago, owns a farm and cotton gin, preaches regularly for a colored Baptist church, takes no pay for his services, and has made almost the entire colored population of that county Baptists. Still, it isn't every Yankee that can go South and make such a record as that.

ACCORDING to the census the United States produced 457,000,000 dozens eggs in 1879, and 817,000,000 dozen in 1889. These figures are probably under the mark, but, at the figures given, the annual egg product of the United States amounts to $100,000,000. If to this be added the value of the property sold, we shall obtain a pretty high figure for the annual output of the department. One authority has placed it at $300,000,000. In 1893 the entire wheat crop of the United States amounted to 396,000,000 bushels, worth less than $300,000,000

ONLY a Kansas man would have the conceit to think that he could do shopping for a lady to her satisfaction. A more sensible man would avoid any such test of his ability, but William Inman, of Leroy, Kan., recklessly invited it. He entered the store of W. E. Willis and interrupted a couple of ladies who were looking at some dress goods. He thought he knew better than they what would be becoming to them, and proposed to buy the dresses provided he were allowed to make the selection. Of course it was foolhardy, for many a better man has got into trouble merely by undertaking to pay for gowns without placing his judgment above a woman's. But Inman persisted and was put out of the store. He still persisted and the proprietor shot him. We do not necessarily hold that he deserved the fate that overtook him, but his audacity and his conceit deserved some punishment. The idea of attempting to deprive a woman of the right to do her own shopping cannot be tolerated in this enlightened and progressive age.

IT is generally supposed that cooking meat will destroy any germs of tuberculosis which may exist therein. Too much reliance, however, must not be placed upon this belief. Experiment has shown that these disease germs will stand a high degree of heat. Light cooking will not destroy them, and in beef as often placed upon the table in a lightly cooked form, the living germ may still remain. People who like their beef rare done may wince at this statement. It has been proved by experiments that it requires thorough cooking to destroy the bacilli. Experiments were carried out by the local government board of Great Britain with the result that meat boiled from fifteen to forty minutes, and afterward fed to guinea pigs, produced the disease in these animals, which showed that the microbes were not destroyed by the cooking. When the meat was cut into small pieces, about an inch square, and boiled the same length of time, the disease germs were destroyed, and guinea pigs fed upon the meat prepared in this way, remained exempt from the disease. In the report of the experiments, Professor Brown says: "It appears that thorough cooking is effectual in destroying tubercle virus; but it is also evident that such cooking as was effectual in this case, could not be applied to large joints, nor to any kind of meat without destroying its flavor." This is rather unpleasant reading, and indicates clearly the great danger of using tuberculous meats for food.

A Profitable Reconciliation.

That is an amusing story which Lord Dufferin tells in his recent biography of his mother of that charming lady's first glimpse of the elder Disraeli. She knew the younger one; and, "the elder Disraeli being as yet more celebrated than his son, my mother had expressed a desire to see him. But the introduction could not be managed, inasmuch as at that particular moment Mr. Disraeli had quarreled with his father. One fine morning, however, he arrived with his father in his right hand, so to speak, in Mrs. Norton's drawing-room at Story's-Gate. Setting him down on a chair, and looking at him as if he were some object of virtu of which he wanted to dispose, Mr. Disraeli turned round to my mother and said, in his somewhat pompous voice: 'Mrs. Blackwood, I have brought you my father. I have become reconciled to my father on two conditions. The first was that he should come and see you; the second, that he should pay my debts.'"

REVIVAL OF BUSINESS

CALAMITY CROAKERS NOW OUT OF A JOB.

Prosperity Follows Close Upon the Heels of the New Tariff—Census Figures that Talk in Thunderous Tones—Wheat-Growers Are Benefited.

Facts that Are Facts.

Calamity croakers will have to take a back seat. Prosperity is following closer upon the heels of the new tariff bill than the greatest optimist dared to hope. Business of all kinds is starting up and prospects for the future are unusually bright. As an answer to those who insist that the new tariff law is destructive to business, the Syracuse, N. Y., Courier publishes the following list of concerns that have resumed, are making additions, etc. These facts relate to time prior to Sept. 15:

The Providence worsted mills are now running full time and full capacity.

The woolen mill at Manteo, R. I., is to be reopened after a shut down of several years.

The Gregory woolen mill of Wickford, R. I., is once more running full time.

The Stonewall Cotton Mill Company, Stonewall, Mass., is putting in new machinery.

The Ruddy Thread Company, Worcester, Mass., will erect a 100x50 foot dye house, two stories, with boiler house attached.

Bliss, Taft & Co., of Norwich, Conn., woolen waste manufacturers, have arranged to locate a branch office at Niagara Falls.

The new Dilling cotton mills, King's Mountain, N. C., will be in operation in about two or three weeks.

The Baltic Mills Company, Enfield, N. H., has enlarged its plant.

The East Pond Manufacturing Company, Newport, Me., is to add ten more looms to the woolen mills, which will give an output of one-third more capacity than now.

The Nemadji woolen mills, a new corporation at Superior, Wis., is capitalized at $20,000.

The machinery of the Riverside Woolen Company at Lebanon, N. Y., is being increased.

At a recent meeting of the stockholders of the Modena cotton mills, Gastonia, N. C., it was decided to put on 70 more looms and 3,000 spindles.

Hurst & Rogers, manufacturers of tapestry carpets at Philadelphia, contemplate putting in additional looms.

The erection of a cotton mill is contemplated at Tifton, Ga.

The Hartwell woolen mill, Old Town, Me., will be improved and new machinery added. An addition of 20x12 and another story are being built.

The Lowell, Mass., machine shop has orders on hand for 300 ring spinning frames from the Tremont and Suffolk, and one for like machinery for the Duffie mills of Fall River.

Enlargements are being made to Rhodes Brothers' factory at Ashton Mill, Pa.

The Edremount Company of Omaha, Neb., is building a woolen mill at Elgemount, Neb., and will begin production in three months.

The Linden Manufacturing Company, Davidson, N. C., is making plans for enlarging its mills by the addition of more looms and other machinery.

A company has been organized at Sauk Center, Minn., to manufacture woolen goods.

The Nonotuck Silk Company intends building an addition to its mill at Hartford, Conn.

The woolen mill at East Lyon, R. I., which has been idle for several years, has orders ahead for a year, and will start up.

The Pineville cotton mills, Pineville, N. C., have been sold to Stephen A. Jencks, of Pawtucket, R. I. The mills will be doubled in size.

The Globe Mill, Clark & Co., proprietors, Augusta, Ga., manufacturers of yarns, have lately put in four looms, and will manufacture drills, sheeting, etc. They expect to commence operation in three weeks.

A new mill, the Tuckapahaw, is being built near Wellford, S. C. It will be five stories high, 300 feet long and 100 feet wide, with a capacity of 30,000 spindles.

Nearly all the stock ($1,000,000) in the new Melrose cotton mill at Raleigh, N. C., has been taken, and the work on the factory will probably be commenced this fall.

The new addition now being built to Odell Manufacturing Company's mill at Concord, N. C., is to be a cloth and slasher building, two stories high, 65x30 feet. Fifty-four Whittin looms will be put in and 1,800 more spindles for manufacturing white cloth.

Hertzer & Donjes are building a new hosiery at Meterstown, Pa.

J. W. Wagley is about to start a small knit goods factory at Hannibal, Mo.

A new company has incorporated at Barnesville, Ga., to manufacture knit underwear. They commenced manufacturing Sept. 1.

New hosiery mills are reported as about to be built at Reading and Womelsdorf, Pa.

The Nazareth Manufacturing Company of Nazareth, Pa., has let the contract for additional buildings.

The Globe Knitting Mills, Norristown, Pa., have completed a three-story building.

About $25,000 are being expended by the Kilburn Knitting Machine Company in enlarging its plant at Martinsburg, W. Va., and erecting a dyeing plant.

The Forsyth Dyeing Company, of New Haven, Conn., is adding knitting machinery for the manufacture of hosiery.

Kelley & Elser is the name of a new concern running a knitting mill at Wakefield street, Germantown, Pa.

The Roxford Knitting Company, manufacturers of men and women's underwear, has been incorporated at Philadelphia, with a capital stock of $50,000.

A movement for the establishment of a knitting mill at Madison, Ga., has been inaugurated.

The Patent Knitting Mill is a new concern just started at Towanda, Pa.

J. Taylor, of No. 835 Arch street, Philadelphia, reports the sale of knitting machinery to James A. Parr, of Amsterdam, N. Y.; A. Boyle & Bro.; John Meir, of Valdese, N. C.; Joseph W. Durbin; the Patent Knitting Mill of Towanda, Pa.; the Forsythe Dyeing Company, of New Haven, Conn.; Kelly & Elser, of Germantown, Pa.; and Pfeiffer's Mill, of Riverside, N. J.

The Star Knitting Company and H. Strauss Knitting Works, Chicago, have put in a full line of Nye & Tredick automatic knitting machines for ladies and men's ribbed underwear.

James A. Parr is starting a new mill at Amsterdam, N. Y., for the manufacture of hosiery.

Farmers' Gains.

The additions to the free list in the new tariff will save the people of this country many millions of dollars. It will save them directly more than $11,000,000, the amount of tax paid in 1893 on the principal articles now added to the list. It will save them the much larger sum that the protected manufacturers and producers were enabled by the tariff to charge for the domestic articles.

The duty on some of the articles now placed on the free list was prohibitory. For example, the duty on petroleum shut out all foreign competition. The tax on binding twine was so large that it gave to the Cordage Trust the monopoly of the business and enabled it to fix its own price. It is evident, therefore, that the tax must have cost the farmers more than the $249,79[illegible] which was the whole amount collected by the government on binding-twine in 1893.

The duty on hoop and band iron manufactured wholly or partially into ties was also nearly prohibitory. In 1893 the government received only $12,211 from this tax, and this was paid by the farmers who grow cotton. But was not all that these farmers paid, however, for the tax of 40 per cent. permitted the ironmasters of Pennsylvania to increase their prices to the point at which importation was too expensive to be profitable. Under the new law the cotton-planters will be relieved of the tax on the iron ties for their bales.

The wheat-growers will be benefited still more. Besides binding-twine, burlaps and bags for grain are made free. The tax paid on these articles amounted in 1893 to the very large sum of $2,02[illegible],331. The farmer did not pay all of this, but he paid a good deal of it, and he will find that the removal of the tax will make his crops of grain more valuable to him.

Another article which is necessary to the farmer is salt. In 1893 the tax collected on salt amounted to $[illegible]02,000. For many years the fish-packers of New England have had their salt free of duty, but the farmers have paid the tax on the salt used by them for curing pork and feeding their cattle. Now both stand on an equal footing under the revenue law of the country.—New York World.

THEIR "NEW" LINE OF FALL GOODS.

Noisy high-tariff curbstone fakers are trying to do business at the old stand.

Saying Nothing About McKinleyism.

The most remarkable things about the present Republican campaign are the things not discussed. Not only is the "hated" income tax treated with silent contempt, but next to no thing is said about what kind of a tariff we may expect when the Republicans again have full sway. Even McKinley is not promising that his "bravest and best tariff measure ever passed," as the New York Tribune fondly styled it, will be re-enforced when the Republicans are again in power. The most that he will say is that the country must have "protection" and will not survive without it. Harrison and Reed are, if possible more unsatisfactory than McKinley upon this point. They confine their efforts mainly to the "hard times" that are the result of Democratic rule, neglecting to state that these hard times began while Republican laws were still enforced by Republican officials, and that prosperity has begun to return swiftly as soon as the McKinley law was abolished.

Thus far only one Republican orator could be inveigled into making any definite statements as regards the prospects for future tariff legislation under Republican supremacy. In Illinois Senator Cullom was asked by Franklin MacVeagh, the Democratic candidate for United States Senator, if the McKinley law would be re-enacted if the Republicans regained power. The Senator hinted the prediction that the McKinley law would not be re-enacted in its entirety. He said that after it had been in force four years it needed revising, and that if the Republicans had continued in power they would undoubtedly have revised it in accordance with their policy in the past. The Senator did not explain his Delphic answer by stating if he meant a revision upwards or one downwards. The "policy" of Republicans, as stated in their platforms, is to reform downwards: their practice has been to reform upwards. This leaves us still in the dark—just where all shrewd Republicans intend to leave us. They don't dare say McKinley bill to us again, and of course they can't promise to do just what the Democrats are doing. But it doesn't matter much, anyway. Republicans will never again make any tariff laws for us. There may be a few Republican victories this fall, but they are possible only because the people know the Republicans will be powerless to do harm. After one or two years of sober reflection under a Democratic tariff law, the people will conclude that they have no mere use for a party that stands for monopoly and nothing but monopoly.

By All Means Inquire.

An organ of the wealthy tax dodgers is urging voters to ask each candidate for the office of Representative in Congress: "Are you for or against the income tax?" This is a very proper inquiry. We trust that it may be made general and pointed.

The votes in both the House and Senate showed that an income tax was stronger in Congress than any other section of the revenue bill. It had 15[illegible] majority in the House and 16 in the Senate. It has been indorsed by every Democratic convention in the South and West, and has been denounced by very few, if any, Republican conventions in those great sections of the country. Tom Reed is prudently silent about it in Maine. The Indiana Democratic Convention was very emphatic in its approval of this most just measure for apportioning a part of the cost of government with special reference to benefits received and ability to pay.

Perhaps as significant testimony to the strength of the income tax with the masses as has been given is found in the speech of Franklin MacVeagh, Democratic candidate for Senator in Illinois, at the opening of the campaign in that State. By all means catechise the candidates.—New York World.

BANK AND LIBRARY.

DESIGN SUITED FOR A SMALL TOWN.

The First Story Is of Brick and Stone Construction, the Upper Story Being Shingled—Roof Covered with Black Slate—Interior Is Commodious.

Cost, About $6,000.

This design shows a good study for a bank and library, suited to the requirements of a small country town. The first or ground floor contains the banking-room, which is large and spacious, and adapted to the wants and requirements of both national and savings bank. The business room is reached by a separate entrance through a tiled vestibule. The vault is very large, and should be built upon a solid granite foundation interior lined with a steel case one inch thick, next to which should be granite stones one foot thick, doweled together with steel dowels, then outside of this one foot thick with best hard brick, laid in Portland cement; the doors to be double, with heavy iron vestibules, grouted in with Portland cement, the top covered with railroad iron, on which place a floor of granite thoroughly grouted, etc. A guard room could be here placed between the bank-vault and the library-vault. This room could be reached from lavatory, and by having an opening over vault door, the guard could control the entrance.

The private office would be found very useful for directors' meetings, and private business generally. The cellar contains the necessary room for heating apparatus, fuel, etc., and is reached by a stairway from directors' room, having no outside entrance. The side-wall desk in business room is an indispensable feature in all banks, and the settees placed each side of the front windows would be found very convenient during business hours. The bank counters, fittings and finish on this floor to be of ash, filled. Floors of hardwood with a neat border.

The second floor contains library, reading-room, etc., and is reached by a separate entrance and an easy staircase. The delivery-desk being placed in the position shown, renders it easy for those requiring books, etc., to get them without entering reading-room, and the librarian can thus see all who come and go, as well as see into the reading-room. The work-room is required for unpacking, covering and labeling books, etc., while the vault makes an excellent fire-proof room in which to store valuable papers, or to be used for town records, etc. The reading-room is a pleasant room, and with its open fire-place, in which a wood fire can be burnt, would be a pleasant place to while away an evening in reading. The book room is neatly arranged so as to store about seven thousand volumes, the alcoves containing the books being well lighted. This floor throughout being finished in pine in the natural color, with cut and incised work picked out in color. The stairs of hard wood. The floor of hard wood.

The first story is brick and stone construction, the upper story being shingled; roof covered with black slate. Such a building as this is an ornament to any town, and certainly is a paying investment, as it is by no means expensive, the whole of the work to be done in a substantial manner at a cost of $6,000.

Facts About Tomatoes.

The tomato is a useful and wholesome vegetable which rarely figures in statistics. It is not mentioned in the last census. But this is the fault of the census, not the tomato. The tomato pack in 1889 was 79,666,488 cans, which cost $6,000,000, and sold for $8,000,000. This is a tidy little industry, practically the work of the last fifteen years. Canning only began twenty-five years ago, with sweet corn in Maine and tomatoes some years later. One half the sweet corn is still canned in Maine, and five years ago 19,200,000 cans were put up yearly.

The tomato pack is three times as large, but, like corn, it has increased little in the last five to eight years. The pack this year is only 10 per cent. larger than in 1883, and the increase then for three years has not been large. It is true the production sank in 1885 to half the present amount, and taking the average of the years '83, '84, '85, compared with '86, '87, '88, the increase amounts to one-third. But if the last eight years be considered this important trade in turning out food has not kept pace with turning out railroads or buildings.—Philadelphia Press.

A LAWYER'S SPRAINED ANKLE.

How, in Consequence, His Wife Became Cashier of a Goodly Fund.

A lawyer's wife recently gave an amusing account of how she accumulated a considerable fund from her husband's business without his knowledge. He was a very prominent member of the bar in one of the rural counties, and at each session of the court was retained on one side or the other in nearly every case. One winter term arrived, and there were several hundred cases on the calendar for trial. In a large number of them, owing to the depressed financial situation, the defendants were fighting for delay.

The evening before the court opened, the attorney mentioned, who may be called Mr. X., fell on the ice and sprained his ankle. The next morning on the call of the calendar in court, when the first case was reached, a young attorney arose and stated that he represented the defendant, and that Mr. X., who was counsel in the case, had sprained his ankle the night before and desired an adjournment. The court announced that after the calendar was called he would dispose of all applications for an adjournment. A great many attorneys followed in the wake of the young lawyer in the first case, and announced that Mr. X was counsel and had sprained his ankle, and moved for an adjournment. The court stated that application to postpone cases would be decided in the morning, and then the court adjourned.

When evening came, Mr. X.'s doorbell rang, and a gentleman appeared, who inquired for Mr. X. His wife answered the call, and stated that Mr. X. was confined to his bed with a sprained ankle and could see no one. The stranger explained to Mrs. X. that he was a lawyer, and desired to retain Mr. X. as his counsel in a case, and handed her a roll of bills as a retainer to be delivered to her husband. The doorbell rang at least a dozen times that evening, and on each occasion a lawyer appeared and informed Mrs. X. that the services of her husband were desired in Roe vs. Doe, Smith vs. Jones, or some other case, and in each instance a generous fee was handed to her for her husband. Knowing her husband's nervous state, she said nothing to him about the calls.

The next morning in court the Judge announced that Mr. X.'s sprained ankle, on account of the large number of cases he was engaged in as counsel, would seriously interfere with the due administration of justice, and that he had dispatched a physician to Mr. X.'s house the evening before, who reported that Mr. X. would be out and able to attend to his business in about a week, and the court was accordingly adjourned for ten days.

The joke was on the lawyers who had come to the sudden determination to retain Mr. X.'s counsel in order to get their cases adjourned over a term, and Mr. X. was a very much surprised man when on his recovery a week later his wife told him the story of her evening callers and gave him a roll of money that amounted to close upon $800.

Uses of Cottonseed.

While cottonseed has been fed to cattle for many years, it is only within ten years that the hulls have been utilized in that way. Long after cottonseed oil became an important article of commerce the hulls continued to be burned. Last year about 400,000 head of cattle were fattened for the market on cottonseed hulls, while 100,000 milch cows were fed on the same material.

Cottonseed oil in its manufacture and uses may be considered a new industry. Its growth in the last ten or fifteen years has been enormous. In 1880 there were forty cottonseed mills, with an aggregate capital of $3,500,000. There are now 300 mills, having a combined capital of about $30,000,000. At present about 1,500,000 tons of seed are annually used by the mills, yielding to the farmers about $18,000,000 a year for a product which, until recently, was regarded as waste material. The total output is about 1,500,000 barrels, or 60,000,000 gallons of oil, 500,000 tons of cottonseed meal, 750,000 tons of hulls and 30,000,000 pounds of linters, the aggregate value of which will average about $30,000,000. The demand for oil is steadily expanding, and as only about one-third of the total cottonseed crop is now consumed by the mills, there is practically an unlimited room for the growth of the business.

The Country Home.

The home habit and the custom of conserving homes—in short, the love of home and land—is the basis of public tranquillity, prosperity, and safety. Permanent homes for all the people, and as many of those homes in the country as possible, are the best instrumentalities for strengthening and perpetuating popular government. Love of home is primary patriotism. No conspiracies, no anarchy, are evolved in the quiet homes of the country, and to them and the sacred and sincere love of them the friends of democratic government must look for the preservation and perpetuation of civil liberty in America. Only those who own and love the domicile wherein they dwell will properly conserve the republic. The United States is the concrete of homes of 65,000,000 of people. The homes are the integral parts of the American republic. It is made strong, virtuous, and perpetual by the character of its homes, and, as the Indian declared, with poetic pathos, "The land is our mother," so may the republic declare the cultured home its mother, and no republic can exist and thrive except as the conservator of all the homes of a cultivated, comfortable, and contented citizenship.—J. Sterling Morton.

A NEW high school building is to be erected at New Castle.

PETER McGIVERN took an overdose of chloral at Frankton, and died in a short time.

SAMUEL MAZE, an aged farmer near Shelbyville, dropped dead at the breakfast table.

An epidemic is reported among horses at New Albany. It is in the nature of a severe dry cold.

THE baking house of Russell, Dolman & Co., Kokomo, has announced that it will retire from business.

NEARLY every person in Rockville has signed the temperance pledge during the Francis Murphy meetings.

JOEL S. DENNY, prominent farmer near Salem, was stricken with apoplexy in a field. Died in a few hours.

WM. MITCHELL, while stealing a ride on a Big Four freight train, had his leg crushed between the couplers near Carbon.

DRUNKEN SAM POWELL, a glass blower, at Redkey, went to sleep on the railroad. The Glass Blowers' Union took charge of the remains.

THE headquarters of a gang of Lake Shore freight car robbers were found near South Bend. About $[illegible]00 worth of stolen clothing and dry goods was recovered.

WILLIE BARKER, the 10-year-old son of Ed. Barker, at Connersville, fell from a freight train while playing in the C. H. & D. yards, and had both legs cut off. He died two hours after.

AT Muncie the 2-year-old daughter of John Lawrence drank nearly an ounce of carbolic acid and died. The child thought the poisonous stuff was water until her stomach was as if on fire.

J. A. LAMBERT, General Manager of the Buckeye Manufacturing Company, at Anderson, has let contracts to Anderson contractors for the construction of a foundry that will give work to 125 men additional, making 300 in all.

OTTO AMMON of Russiaville, while bailing hay on the Luke Frey farm, near Kokomo, the plunger caught him by the right foot, drawing the leg into the machine, crushing it in three places. The mangled leg will be amputated and he may die from the injury.

A MAN of the name of William Mitchell, aged about 35 years, whose home is believed to be at Seymour, was crushed to death by a Big Four train at Carbon. Mitchell was beating his way from Indianapolis to Terre Haute, when the train was slackened and both his legs were caught between the dead wood.

ALBERT WALLS, employed in the Vancamp packing house, Indianapolis, attempted to repair a small drainage pipe during which he leaned over a two inch line of shafting. A protruding bolt caught his clothing and he was whipped around the shaft until he was literally but slowly beaten to death.

WHILE superintending the removal of gravel from a pit on the farm of James Cunningham, five miles south of Lebanon, Napoleon B. Osborne, for years a prominent citizen, was caught by a cave-in and buried under several tons of sand and gravel, receiving injuries from which he died. Several other workmen were injured, William Wooley perhaps fatally.

THE report sent out from Pittsburgh that every tin-plate plant in the United States would close down indefinitely, is untrue as regards the American tin-plate plant of Elwood. It will be kept steadily in operation, it only closing down three mills in order to make some repairs, and these will start again next week. All the rest of the plant will be kept in full operation pending these repairs, and the report is a fabrication.

RESIDING happily together near Memphis, Clark County, are Philip and Mary Stutz. Mr. and Mrs. Stutz have had a rather remarkable matrimonial experience, having been three times divorced and each time remarried after a short season, and the last time they again ventured to join their fortunes was last week in New Albany. Mr. Stutz is a well to-do farmer, and that his wife is fully able to take care of herself is evidenced by the fact that she was conducting a prosperous millinery business in New Albany when last married. They both declare that they have been separated for the last time.

THE prediction that the police had at last secured the guilty parties who wrecked the Big Four passenger train from New York at Fontanet, near Terre Haute, on the night of July 13, resulting in the instant death of Engineer Mohrman and Fireman Flick, has been fully verified. George Roberts and Rogie McDonald, two of the prisoners, have already confessed, and now Wm. Sourwine, the man who actually threw the switch, made a full confession. The other two suspects are implicated by all three confessions, so there is no doubt of the conviction of the whole gang for the heinous crime by which two innocent trainmen lost their lives. By all their confessions it appears they were enthusiastic union men, and had become so thoroughly imbued with the Debs strike idea that they started in to wreck a freight train carrying Sheriff Stout and his assistants, who had been at Fontanet all day suppressing riotous demonstrations against the railroad company. They threw the switch to catch the freight, but instead it caught the fast passenger train.

WALTER McGRAYEL, serving a six months' sentence in the Columbus jail for murderously a saulting Ambrose Dillman, was pardoned by the Governor.

FRANK FISKE, a resident of Fort Wayne, employed as track layer on the new railroad now being built into Fort Wayne, died of typhoid fever and was buried by the county authorities, although the Fort Wayne Medical College made a demand legally for the body. The Court granted a writ of replevin and the body was exhumed and is now at the college ready for dissection.

AARON H. YODER, aged 70, of Elkhart, while crossing the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway tracks, was struck by a passenger train and instantly killed.

THERE was a fire at Waveland, causing a loss of several thousand dollars. The flames originated in Moore's butcher shop, where the loss was $50. Other losses were: John R. Canine, grocer, $1,000; hotel building and furniture, $1,600; Cuppy barber shop, $450; harness shop of Mrs. Rhoads, $100; bank building, considerably damaged; Shular & Allen's livery stable, $75; barn of John Rice and contents, $350; office furniture of Dr. Kelso, $75. The insurance is unknown.

Distress in the Stomach

"I had trouble with my stomach for a long time and could not get anything that would do me any good. Last February I had Inflammation of the stomach and was so bad for a week that even light food would cause Great Distress and vomiting. The Ice Water Question.

"I am surprised," said a prominent physician, "to find how far back New York is on the question of cold water." Asked for an explanation, he said: "People go on drinking away at ice water, which ruins the digestion, and lays up a stock of ills for old age when they might as easily have water refreshingly cool, but not iced and free from the impurities of ice water. This is by simply connecting the faucet with an iron worm or tube running through ice packed in the cooler.

"The water comes out pure and cooled by the ice, but not absolutely ice cold, and therefore perfectly wholesome. Why it is not used in nearly every office I don't know, I am sure."—New York Morning Journal.

The Greatest Medical Discovery of the Age.

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, OF ROXBURY, MASS.,

Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston. Send postal card for book.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the right quantity is taken.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it. Read the label.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Sold by all Druggists.

Big Haul by Revenue Officials in Tennessee—Battle with Bandits in Arizona—New Grand Sire of the Odd Fellows—Coinage of Silver.

Diamond Is Deserted.

One final change was made in the tables of the base-ball league by the closing games. It was a rise of one point for the St. Louis Browns over the Cincinnatis. Comiskey's team has been farther from the pennant this season than ever before, bad as the Reds luck has been in former years. The Browns played their last game at home and fortunately had an easy team for opponents—the Washingtons. The Browns beat the Senators twice and as the Cincinnatis could not do better than tie with the Clevelands, the St. Louis passed the Reds and finished in ninth place. At Louisville Brooklyn won one and lost one. Chicago finished in the eighth place, which is better than its early performances in the year warranted. The season of 1894 is at an end. A complete record of all the games played by all the clubs in the National League follows. It shows how many victories each club won from all the other clubs, how many lost and to whom, and the closing position of each club in the race:

MOONSHINERS CAPTURED.

Largest Haul Ever Made in Kentucky—Men, Women and Boys.

The largest gang of moonshiners that ever left the Big Sandy Valley passed through Ashland, Ky., Monday en route to Louisville, where they will be given early hearings in the United States Court. The crowd was in charge of United States Marshal Reid Greer, of Johnson County, assisted by a score of deputies, and represented the hauls of two months past. In the past six months Greer and his deputies have destroyed thirty-seven separate stills and thousands of gallons of their product, commonly designated "moonshine." They have arrested about 125 offenders and spotted numerous others, who will be taken as soon as the opportunity offers. In the capture of the various gangs some thrilling work has been done, and some narrow escapes experienced. Seven of Greer's officers are now laid up for repairs at different towns in Floyd and Johnson Counties, while about twenty of the moonshiners are also regaining their strength in various up-Sandy jails. These latter will follow their more fortunate fellows to Louisville and to the penitentiary as soon as their condition will permit of a change of quarters.

In the gang Monday were 106 offenders. Their ages ranged from 15 to 50, and in the degree of their crime there was an equal variance. Some of the men have grown old and gray in the business, some had followed it but a short while, others had retailed the spirits for the makers, and others had boldly labeled it sorghum, and brought it out by the barrel in push boats. The boys were usually the sons of the old operators, who were forced into the work from childhood and literally knew nothing else. Several women were also among the lot.

FAMOUS CRICKETER.

Lord Hawke and His Celebrated Team in the United States.

The appearance of Lord Hawke in the United States, accompanied by his team of expert English cricketers, revives interest in the sport of old England in America. Lord Hawke, who is in charge of the English team, has been in America several times before. In 1892 he brought over a cricket team, and as the game was strictly their own, they expected to wipe the platter. This was a disastrous visit for them, however, as they succeeded in winning but one match. Lord Hawke felt chagrined at the result, and is now here with a stronger team than before, most of them being college men from Cambridge and Oxford. The series of contests he proposes to have with New York and Philadelphia will be watched with interest all over the country.

LORD HAWKE.

GRAND SIRE OF THE WORLD.

John W. Stebbins Elected to High Office by the Odd Fellows.

John W. Stebbins, recently elected Grand Sire of the world in Odd Fellowship by the Sovereign Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., at Chattanooga, Tenn., is 75 years of age. He is a native of New York, and resides at Rochester. After graduating from Union College he became principal of Macedon Academy. He studied law, was admitted to the bar and in 1856 was elected to the State Legislature. He was one of the committee of fifteen, of which Horace Greeley was a member, which drafted the terms of agreement that led to the uniting of the old Whig party with the Republicans. Mr. Stebbins became an Odd Fellow in 1850. He was Grand Master for two terms; seventeen years ago became a member of the Grand Lodge and was successively Grand Warden, Deputy Grand Master, and Grand Master. He has risen from Chairman of the Appeals Committee to the office of Grand Sire.

JOHN W. STEBBINS.

The Grand Sire in his annual report said that since the last convention in the South, held in Atlanta twenty years ago, the membership in the Southern States had increased from 5,000 to 50,000, and to the people of the South Odd Fellowship had become an established institution. The total membership of the order was now 780,000, or, including the sisters of the Rebekah degrees, 889,000. To this should be added a membership of 25,000 in foreign jurisdictions, making a combined membership of 900,000 men and women. The net increase in membership during the year had been 38,000. This was less than the year previous, but this might be accounted for in the United States by a season of financial stringency that lessened the resources of the people. In Canada the order has made greater progress than in any year of its history.

In no department of the work had there been such decided progress as in making provision for the aged members and orphan children. In many States new homes had been opened, while numerous jurisdictions were accumulating funds and preparing buildings for the laudable work.

WHEN WILL HE DIE?

Great Anxiety for the Health of the King of Siam.

The absorbing subject of conversation in Bangkok is the condition of the Siamese monarch. When will he die? What will happen afterward? Questions like these are heard on all sides. His death has been reported at least half a dozen times. Indeed, not a few believe he is dead and the intimation withheld for state reasons from the general public. The foreign representatives even share the general ignorance on the subject, and J. G. Scott, British charge d'affaires, deemed it advisable to bring down another gunboat from Hong Kong in view of the alarming rumors in high circles. The state of the city is thus one of intense excitement. It has been asserted that the King is but suffering from an attack of fever, brought on by residence at Colei-Chang an island in the Gulf of Siam. The real cause of ailment, however, is indulgence in anæsthetics. For years chloral has been the favorite drug of the Siamese monarch, and now its poisonous effects are felt with a severity that leaves small hope of recovery.

KING OF SIAM.

Maha Vajirunhis is the Crown Prince, eldest son of Chulalongkorn, who will probably succeed his father. In Siam, however, the right of primogeniture is not fully recognized as a fundamental law of the realm, and the Senabodee, or Council of State, upon the death of the reigning sovereign, may elect a king. The Crown Prince, whose full name is Somdetch Chowfa Maha Vajirunhis, is but 16 years old.

COINAGE OF SILVER.

Dollars to the Number of 1,597,223 Turned Out of the Mint.

Secretary Carlisle made a statement concerning the coinage of silver dollars under this administration, the coinage being under the unrepealed portion of the Sherman act. It shows that since the administration came into power $1,597,223 standard silver dollars have been coined, of which $520,079 have been seigniorage. The Secretary says:

While the law provides that redeemed treasury notes may be reissued, it also imposes an express limitation upon the power to reissue by declaring that "no greater or less amount of such notes shall be outstanding at any time than the cost of the silver bullion and the standard silver dollars coined therefrom then held in the treasury purchased by such notes."

When such notes are redeemed in gold there is no obstacle in the way of their reissue, because such redemption does not affect the stock of silver held in the treasury under the act of July 4, 1890, but when they are redeemed with silver coined from the bullion purchased under that act, they must be retired and cancelled, for otherwise there would be, after the redemption and reissue, a greater amount of notes outstanding than the cost of the silver originally purchased and then held in the treasury, and this is expressly prohibited by the statute. The purpose of Congress was to prevent the duplication of the currency, which would be the case if the notes and silver purchased with the notes could be outstanding at the same time.

Treasury notes received in the ordinary course of business, or redeemed in gold or exchanged for silver dollars not coined from bullion purchased under the act of July 14, 1890, are not retired and cancelled. All such notes are reissued. Prior to the last day of July, 1891, silver dollars to the amount of $36,318,264 were coined from the bullion purchased under that act. The so-called gain seigniorage arising from this coinage was $6,867,803, which was paid into the treasury as a miscellaneous receipt, leaving $29,480,461 to be held as a fund to provide for the redemption of the treasury notes, as provided by law.

BATTLE WITH BANDITS.

Three Men Hold Up a Southern Pacific Express in Arizona.

The boldest express robbery ever known in Arizona was committed near Maricopa Monday night. The train held up was the eastbound Southern Pacific, and the desperadoes are believed to have secured $10,000 in gold. The robbers were pursued and in a desperate fight with the Sheriff's posse one robber was shot and another captured. Two of the bandits who attacked the train were masked and the third, who was a mere boy, was not. The robber who previously climbed upon the train captured the head-brakeman and compelled him to turn on the air brakes and stop the train. The other bandit covered the engineer, who with the brakeman was compelled to go back to the express car and induce the messenger to open the door. The boy was then shoved into the car. While he was searching for express treasures the two bandits guarded each side of the train. When the boy came from the car the trainmen, who were under the bandits' guns, were compelled to march with the bandits a short distance into the bushes. There the robbers released their prisoners, and, mounting the horses, rode away.

Penalty Is Death.

The penalty for robbing trains in Arizona is death. The posse, led by Sheriff Murphy of Maricopa, found the trail of the robbers at the point where they had crossed the Gila River, seven miles east of Phoenix. Soon afterward they came upon a camp which the robbers had hastily abandoned. There they found three Winchesters and three horses. Not long after this they overhauled one of the bandits, whom they called upon to throw up his hands. Instead he turned upon the officers and fired, but a charge of buckshot from the sheriff's gun brought him to the ground. Another was afterward captured, but the third escaped.

IN the year B. C. 436 there was a drouth extending all over Europe. All the crops failed, and whole districts were depopulated. At Rome thousands of people drowned themselves in the Tiber and a pestilence ensued from the dead bodies in the river and on the banks.

An Eastern Shore Tragedy.

The succulent bivalve known as the oyster, formidable as it may seem as a producer of nightmare and unrest, when fried or richly cooked or eaten late at night, has never been considered as possessing a vicious or combative disposition, says the Baltimore American. It has been, on the other hand supposed to be a most gentle animal, the meekest, most harmless, mildest-mannered being known. But the meek and lowly oyster can sometimes become a revengeful as well a dangerous antagonist, as an unwary duck found to his cost a day or so ago over on the Eastern Shore. This careless duck, belonging to the tribe known as "Fishermen," was swimming about in search of food off the shore near Claiborne, when he espied an oyster—a nice, fat, juicy oyster he was—with shell widely parted, feeding, doubtless, on the simple and rather intangible diet upon which an oyster is supposed to feed.

The duck, true to his greedy instincts, dived for that supposed-to-be juicy morsel, and was about to swallow him whole, without salt or pepper even, when the angry passions of the oyster arose, and, snapping his shells together, caught the unsuspecting duck's bill in a vise-like embrace. The duck rose to the surface, shook his head, mumbled apologies, perhaps, through his tight-shut mouth; but the bivalve's heart was hardened, and he held on. Soon that constant load pulling down his head, and growing weightier and weightier, began to tire the duck, and his neck arched lower and lower, until finally it sank into the water and was drowned.

A deck hand on the steamboat Tangier saw the duck floating with head submerged and picked him up. The oyster was still clinging to his victim with a relentless, deadly grasp, and the tragedy that must have been enacted as described was revealed. Both the duck and his slayer were brought to Baltimore on the Tangier, and proved quite a curiosity.

Will Buy His Own Clothing.

One of the wealthy residents of Milwaukee avenue is a retired business man with large property interests and a bank account, who has never recovered from the frugal habits of his younger days. If he had his way he would wear "hand-me-down" clothes and wear them until they fell away at the seams. His wife has different notions. She would have him dress up. Last spring she had a tailor make him a handsome overcoat. It cost $50, but she told him it only cost $25. If he had known the truth he wouldn't have been happy a moment while wearing the garment, because he would have been calculating how many feet of lumber he might have purchased with that wasted money. As it was, he protested against the extravagance of paying $25 for an overcoat when he might have got one for $4.99.

One day a friend came to call on the close-fisted gentleman and happened to see this coat hanging on the nail. He admired it greatly and tried it on.

"How much did you pay for this?" he asked.

"That cost me $25."

"I'll give you $30 for it."

"Take it along."

And his friend who knew something about clothing, didn't back out. Then the frugal man went to his wife.

"I've sold that coat and made $5" said he gleefully.

"Indeed. That coat cost me $50."

Then he was mad. He has announced that hereafter he will buy his own clothing.—Chicago Record.

NICOTINIZED NERVES.

The Tobacco Habit Quickly Broken and Nerve Force Restored—A Boon to Humanity.

A number of our great and most inveterate tobacco smokers and chewers have quit the use of the filthy weed. The tarismanic article that does the work is no to-bac. The reform was started by Aaron Gorber, who was a confirmed slave for many years to the use of tobacco. He tried the use of no-to-bac, and to his great surprise and delight it cured him. Hon. C. W. Ashcom, who had been smoking for sixty years, tried no-to-bac and it cured him. Col. Samuel Stoutener, who would eat up tobacco like a cow eats hay, tried this wonderful remedy, and even Samuel, after all his years of slavery, lost the desire. J. C. Cobler, Lessing Evans, Frank Dell, George B. May, C. O. Skillington, Hanson Robinett, Frank Hershberger, John Shinn, and others have since tried no-to-bac, and in every case they report not only a cure of the tobacco habit but a wonderful improvement in their general physical and mental condition, all of which goes to show that the use of tobacco had been injurious to them in more ways than one. No to bac is popular with the druggists, as they all sell under absolute guarantee to cure or refund the money.—From the Press, Everett, Pa.

Hide Their Wheels.

The Massachusetts tax assessors are having difficulty in their efforts to assess the tax on bicycles provided for by a recent law of that State. They generally report that they have been able to get hold of hardly half the wheels in use, and in some places could not have made even that showing had it not been for the wheelmen's directories, published before the tax law was passed. Many of the wheels are owned by minors, whose property to the value of $1,000 can be exempted. The Massachusetts assessors had a similarly bothersome task a few years ago in the taxation of hens, of which the Legislature subsequently relieved them.

When Hanging Photographs.

Photographs ought to be delicately framed in carved maple, gold or light enamel frames. Silver and white also set off a photograph. For hanging photographs in a young girl's room ribbons of her favorite color may be used. Etching for hallway are prettiest, if there are enough of them, hung step fashion, thus bringing them to the climber's level, and making the erstwhile toil a pleasure. It is better to hang a picture too low than to high. One with much detail should always hang low.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Do You Wish the Finest Bread and Cake?

It is conceded that the Royal Baking Powder is the purest and strongest of all the baking powders.

The purest baking powder makes the finest, sweetest, most delicious food.

The strongest baking powder makes the lightest food.

That baking powder which is both purest and strongest makes the most digestible and wholesome food.

Why should not every housekeeper avail herself of the baking powder which will give her the best food with the least trouble?

Dr. Haines, of Rush Medical College, Consulting Chemist of the Chicago Board of Health, says: "Royal is not only the purest, but the strongest baking powder with which I am acquainted."

Vegetation on the Moon.

Louis Gathmann, a Chicago astronomer, believes he has discovered vegetation on the moon. In looking at the moon through his telescope the other night he saw a spot of vivid green. "The spot," he says, "was shaped much like a spool, lying in an easterly and westerly direction, and was, I estimated, about forty by seventy miles in extent, or about four times the size of Tycho. I made no accurate calculations of either its size or its exact position on the lunar surface that evening, and the next night when I attempted more elaborate investigation it had disappeared. I have not seen it since. To my mind the green spot could have been caused by nothing but vegetation in perfection of development—perhaps grass, perhaps forests. That it has not since been seen may be due to causes unknown on earth, but theoretically, quite familiar to the moon."

One of England's Oldest Trees.

One of the oldest trees standing in England is the "Tortworth" chestnut, which, as far back as the reign of Stephen, in 1135, was so remarkable for its size and antiquity that it was recognized as the terminal boundary of the manor of Tortworth in Gloucestershire. The wondrously old tree was cited by Dr. Ducard in his controversy with Daines Barrington as a convincing proof of the chestnut being indigenous to Great Britain. It is supposed to have attained its maturity in the reign of Egbert. In 1766 the Tortworth chestnut was fifty feet in circumference and fifty-two feet high, and many more centuries of tranquil existence were predicted for it.

What the Old Farmer Thought.

An unwise public administration may, it is true, work great harm to a country or State, but there is a limit to the mischief that can be done by even foolish rulers. A disgusted old farmer, living in a Western State, did not seem to recognize this limit when he said:

Things have gone from bad to wuss stiddily ever since Gov. Blank was 'lected, blame 'im! Look at the condition of things in this State to day, will ye? Business at a standstill, trade depressed, strikes all over the State, floods everywhere, an' the prospect of grasshoppers eatin' up what we do raise! That's what comes of 'lectin' men of the stripe of Gov. Blank an' his followers!

Don't Offer a Reward

For your lost appetite. All know that it is a valuable piece of personal property, but why go to the expense when Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will restore it to you. A course of that unparalleled tonic and corrective not only induces a return of the relish for food, but confers upon the stomach the power to gratify appetite without unpleasant sensations afterward. For the purpose of quickening digestion, arousing a dormant liver or kidneys, and establishing regularity of the bowels, no medicine can exceed this genial family cordial, in which the pure alcoholic principle is modified by blending with it botanic elements of the highest efficacy. Avoid the fiery unalloyed stimulants of commerce as a means of overcoming inactivity of any of the organs above mentioned, and use, instead, the Bitters. This professionally sanctioned medicine remedies malarial and rheumatic ailments.

Difficulties of French Journalists.

French journalists are not now allowed to say anything about anarchists which may displease the authorities, and are put to strange shifts. Henri Rochefort lately expressed his ideas on the subject in the deaf and dumb language. His leading article consists of a column of miniature hands with the fingers arranged to represent the letters, with his name printed at the bottom.

What Is a Mahdi?

"El Mahdi" can best be translated as "the guide." Moslems generally are looking for the coming of a prophet. Sunnis and Shiahs agree in expecting the appearance of a Mahdi or Messiah. But they differ as to the manner of his manifestation. Sunnis believe the coming Mahdi to be a new prophet. Shiahs hold that he will be an Inman, who has disappeared, but will reappear as the expected Messiah.—Blackwood's Magazine.

WHEN a man gets on his back, what funny things he dreams!

BUDS, Society buds, young women just entering the doors of society or womanhood, require the wisest care. To be beautiful and charming they must have perfect health, with all it implies—a clear skin, rosy cheeks, bright eyes and good spirits. At this period the young woman is especially sensitive, and many nervous troubles, which continue through life, have their origin at this time. If there be pain, headache, backache, and nervous disturbances, or the general health not good, the judicious use of medicine should be employed. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best restorative tonic and nervine at this time. The best bodily condition results from its use. It's a remedy specially indicated for those delicate weaknesses and derangements that afflict womenkind at one period or another. You'll find that the woman who has faithfully used the "Prescription" is the picture of health, she looks well and she feels well.

In catarrhal inflammation, in chronic displacements common to women, where there are symptoms of backache, dizziness or fainting, bearing down sensations, disordered stomach, moodiness, fatigue, etc., the trouble is surely dispelled and the sufferer brought back to health and good spirits.

"WOMAN'S ILLS."

MRS. W. R. BATES, of Dilworth, Trumbull Co., Ohio, writes:

"A few years ago I took Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which has been a great benefit to me. I am in excellent health now. I hope that every woman, who is troubled with 'women's ills,' will try the 'Prescription' and be benefited as I have been."

POPULISM DYING OUT.

News From All Over the Country Go to Prove it.

Our attention was called to this more forcibly, after writing our article last week, by reading in an exchange that the populist paper, "The Searchlight," at Michigan City had been discontinued for want of support. Then the elections last Wednesday in Florida and Georgia show the same way. In general, it was found that the vote of the new party had fallen off and people were losing interest in it. The more the populist theories are studied, the less people will think of them; and many, even in this county who voted with them two years ago, have got enough of them and their doctrines. It will depend on new recruits, whether they poll as many votes this year as they did then.

Some Reasons for Its Failure.

There are a number of reasons why a third party cannot succeed, and in this case, many why it should not. In the first place as to why it cannot succeed.

In this county, we have in round numbers, say 6,300 voters. At the last general election, this number was divided politically into four parts, thus: Democrats, 2,750; republicans 2,450; prohibitionists, 200; populists, 900. This is about the average vote of each. The democrats had 51 more on president, and the populists had 81 more on sheriff, and each party had candidates that went much lower. Now, say, the party that wins, must have over 2000 votes, for leaving out the prohibition vote of 200, as they do not claim any chance, we would have 6,100 voters left to divide between the three parties claiming to have a chance to win. Suppose this total vote stands this year at an even 6,000. Then the party that wins must have 2001 votes, This means, that if populists win, they must get 1100 more votes than they had two years ago. No one believes they can get this, for it means more than double what they then had. But suppose for the sake of giving them the argument, we admit they will have this 2001, Then if one of the other parties has 2002 votes it will win. And is it not perfectly clear, that even if the populists have 2500 vote, that one of the other parties will still have a few more? So it will be seen that not only must they have the 2001 votes first mentioned, which is as much as their wildest figures claim, but they must have several hundred more, or they cannot beat the old party which stands the highest.

Why They Should Not Succeed.

One reason why it ought not to succeed is, that it promises impossibilities. Its advocates go about telling people that if they, the third party get into power, they will improve conditions of county, or state or nations. But as a rule, they are not men who have themselves made a success of their own small business. How then could they run the business of a township, a county, a state or a nation? They also say they would "reduce salaries." But the democrats have already done this. Only a few offices in the state will be under the old law after Nov. 1, and those few will be only for two years longer. Then all will be taking the reduced salaries provided for by a democratic law. Again they say, they will reduce county expenses. How will they do this? By refusing to take their own salaries? Hardly. Will it be by making better bargains for the county? Hardly, for as we said, they have not made good bargains for themselves. The expenses of the county for the past year or two have been kept carefully at as low a figure as possible under the circumstances. How would they avoid the great court expenses we had last year? Will they agree to prevent men from killing their neighbors and so making us a great expense? They know they cannot. They are deceiving their hearers when they talk of reducing expenses. If entrusted with office, they would take as large fees as anyone. They would be as expensive in all ways as any we have had. They would be obliged to pay the county debt just as the democrats paid nearly $12,000 last year. And to do all these things costs money. And how could they get money except in taxes? So when they tell you that they will reduce taxes, reduce expenses and run business better than democrats, they talk what they know to be impossible, just as republicans do. It takes money to run any sort of government, no matter who runs it. The records of the county for a generation back show that democrats have run the county business in the main much better than did the republicans when they had the power. And it is not likely that a few hot headed persons who had got sore at the "old parties" would do any better. The man who listens to their unreasonable promises is easily gulled.

Another Reason.

Another reason why the populist party should not succeed is their dangerous tendency to dangerous doctrines. There have been for years, all over the country, men holding dangerous and unreasonable views as to property. We heard even a DeKalb man, several years ago, say the property of the wealthy should be divided among those having little or none. This is the first step in anarchism. This is the doctrine we heard Coxey's army preaching when we visited them in their barracks at Chicago a few days before they started to Washington. And all over the country, as well as in DeKalb, the men with these dangerous principles are all in the populist party.

Another Reason.

Again, in their ranks, we find those whose sympathies tend in another dangerous line. We refer to their openly expressed sympathies with the Debs rebellion, by which a million or two of property was destroyed by mob violence in Chicago, and many other millions lost by waste, delay and business stoppage over the country. With both these dangerous elements, the populists and their papers all over the country, openly sympathize. They condemn Cleveland and Gov. Matthews for sending troops to stop the rioting. In other words, they insist that the rioters were doing right, though many lives were lost, and that those who stopped this wholesale destruction of life and property were wrong. We have copies of their papers to prove this. Even the Times, published here in Auburn by their candidate for the legislature, is on record in favor of these dangerous and unsavory ideas. And if the leaders believe in Coxey and Debs, the rank and file cannot hope to escape the same stigma. It will not be many years before the greater number of those now in the populist party will be ashamed to own that they ever had anything to do with it.

Another Reason.

They are unreasonable and selfish. They claim to believe that all their neighbors and life-long friends who are still in the "old parties" are wicked, corrupt, dishonest and little if any, better than thieves. It is an old, but true saying, that it will pay to watch a man when he gets so he claims to be the only honest man in the neighborhood. It will pay to watch the new "corrupt party."

Their Wild Ideas.

Under this head will come the plan they propose to have government issue untold amounts of greenbacks which they purpose shall contain no promise to pay. But if they contain no promise to pay, they will be worthless and no one will take them. If they do contain a promise to pay, they will add this vast sum to the large debt we already have. As will be seen in another article, if they could have their way, there would be added to the debt of the nation, at least fifty thousand millions. Then add to this the state, county and city debts as proposed by Coxey in his speech at Auburn, and which the leading populists here endorse, where would our financial affairs run to. Now add to all this, the untold millions they are anxious to saddle on the country to buy railroads, telegraph lines, etc, then where would the country be? It seems strange that sensible people would own they belong to such a party or believe in its wild and dangerous doctrines. And it is the experience in all cases where they have gained control, that their rule has been disastrous. See how affairs have been managed by the populist governors of Kansas, Colorado, and South Carlolina. All these states have suffered greatly by mob rule and violence, while disorder and confusion have prevailed. The good name of all these states has been greatly injured.

Their Silver Plans.

These are no less wild and visionary. On the question of silver, we have distinct lines drawn already. The republicans are plainly on record for a gold basis pure. The democrats believe in coining more silver and using it as money. They believe in this and will no doubt pass a law to coin a certain amount each month and put it into circulation, as was done under the Bland silver law, that was in existence before the Sherman act wiped it off the statute books. And right here is where populists are very weak. They uphold the Sherman act which stopped the coinage of silver and say democrats did wrong by repealing it. The wrong was really done by the republicans, when they repealed the Bland law, under which several millions of silver dollars were coined each month, and gave us instead, the Sherman law which stopped the coinage of silver dollars, while it compelled government to go on buying 4½ million ounces of silver each month and lay it away as uncoined metal and let it go down on their hands. The government lost in this way 43 millions. Yet populists say the democrats did wrong to stop this loss. The populists have but one good idea that we recall, and that is the income tax law. But this law originated with democrats, and was passed by a democrat congress against strong opposition by republicans and populists.

Lastly.

When your populist neighbor comes to you, and asks you to leave the democratic party, and take a useless step that you will always regret, tell him if his proposed party should get into power in every branch of the government they would not do the things they are working for. They are only using these catchy, but false arguments for selfish purposes. Tell them to work for Indiana people, not the people of Colorado, to try some plan to raise the price of wheat, not of silver, if they care for the welfare of the people here. Let them show themselves friends of the people and not a party led by broken down, professional politicians.

Guaranteed Cure.

It receives the praise of every student who enters it. Do not delay but act. Write for catalogue to the president of College, J. E. DODDS, Fayette, O.

Acts in Harmony.

Perhaps some of our readers would like to know in what respect Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is better than any other. We will tell you. When this Remedy is taken as soon as a cold has been contracted, and before it has become settled in the system, it will counteract the effect of the cold and greatly lessen it's severity, if not effectually cure the cold in two day's time, and it is the only remedy that will do this. It acts in perfect harmony with nature and aids nature in relieving the lungs, opening the secretions, liquefying the mucus and causing its expulsion from the air cells of the lungs and restoring the system to a strong and healthy condition. No other remedy in the market possesses these remarkable properties. No other will cure a cold so quickly or leave the system in as sound a condition. For sale by Robbins & McCord. 43

THE SOLDIER'S FRIEND.

Democracy's Proud Record on the Pension Matter.

Nearly All Legislation Enacted by Democratic Congresses.

All the Laws Which Have Proven Especially Beneficial to the Veterans and Their Dependents Have Originated In Democratic Houses of Representatives. President Cleveland's Record In Signing Private Pension Bills—A Magnificent Showing.

Notwithstanding the persistent claims of the Republican party that it is the sole and only friend of the old soldier and the chief conservator of his interests, the United States statutes and the records of the pension office show that he has been better cared for by Democratic than by Republican congress.

Democratic houses passed these acts which were approved by a Democratic president:

Aug. 4, 1886—Increasing pensions of armless or legless veterans.

March 19, 1886—Increasing from $8 to $12 per month the pensions of widows and dependents.

May 15, 1886—Granting discharges to Missouri Home Guards.

May 17, 1886—To correct records, enabling thousands of veterans, otherwise debarred, to secure pensions.

Jan. 29, 1887—Giving $150,000,000 to Mexican veterans.

June 7, 1888—Granting arrears of pensions to widows from date of death of husband.

Aug. 14, 1888—Relieving members of marine corps of technical charges which prevented them from getting pensions. And all these bills originated in Democratic houses.

Aug. 16, 1876—Issuing artificial limbs to veterans.

Feb. 28, 1877—Increasing pensions of those who lost both an arm and leg.

March 9, 1878—Granting pensions to veterans of the revolutionary and 1812 wars and their widows.

June 17, 1878—Increasing to $72 per month the pensions of those who had lost both arms, both legs, or both eyes.

June 16, 1880—Giving $72 per month to totally disabled veterans.

March 3, 1879—Increasing to $37.50 per month pensions for hip joint amputation.

March 3, 1879—The arrears of pensions act increasing the pension roll from $33,000,000 to $57,000,000 at a single bound.

Dec. 21, 1893—Representative Martin's act making a pension a vested right.

Feb. 26, 1881—Protecting veterans in soldiers' home.

July 14, 1892—Pensioning at $50 those requiring partial attention from others.

Aug. 3, 1892—Granting pensions to army nurses.

July 4, 1884—Regulating fees of pension claim agents.

The Indiana Record.

United States Pension Agent Spencer for Indiana, upon the request of H. C. Bell, deputy commissioner of pensions, forwarded to that gentleman a statement showing the number of new names added to the pension rolls at the Indianapolis agency since March 4, 1893, when the Democratic party came into power, and also the number of pensioners who have been reduced in rate or whose names have been dropped from the rolls in Indiana since that time. These reports show that 3,902 new names have been added to the rolls in this state, and but 165 have been reduced in rate, and but 82 dropped from the rolls. So it will be seen that less than one in each county has been dropped, while an average of 42 new names in each county have been placed upon the rolls and an average of less than two in each county have been reduced in rate.

When it is remembered that there are over 68,000 pensioners residing in the state of Indiana it will be seen how clearly these figures show that the pensioners of Indiana have not been mistreated by the administration. The total dropped and reduced is 247, distributed through 72 counties.

Private Pension Bills.

During the 24 years of uninterrupted Republican administration — 1861 to 1885—2,001 private pension acts passed by congress became laws, an average of about 83 a year. During Lincoln's administration, 41; Johnson's, 431; Grant's, 490; Hayes', 303; Garfield and Arthur's, 736. In the first three years of President Cleveland's former administration —1885 to 1888—out of 1,560 submitted to him, 1,369 became laws, more than 33 times as many as during Lincoln's four years, more than three times as many as Johnson's four years, nearly three times as many as Grant's eight years, four and a half times as many as Hayes' four years, and nearly twice as many as Garfield and Arthur's four years. The average yearly number of these private pensions acts which became laws under Cleveland's former administration was 456, five and a half times the average annual number during the preceding Republican administrations.

The Average Pension.

In Indiana the average is 5,300 pensioners, receiving $900,264 per congressional district.

In Ohio, 4,904, receiving $825,080 por district.

In Iowa, 3,464, receiving $561,437.

Pennsylvania, 3,193, receiving $505,326.

Illinois, 3,124, receiving $500,906.

Massachusetts, 3,100, receiving $529,326.

Wisconsin, 2,761, receiving $437,885.

Rhode Island, 2,111, receiving $234,400.

Minnesota, 2,329, receiving $375,205.

The average number of pensioners in each congressional district in the United States is 2,711, and the average amount of pension paid in each congressional district is $440,282.

The pensioners in the state of Indiana are receiving annual average pensions equal to $169.87. In Ohio it is $168.25, in Iowa $162.10, in Illinois $160.34, Minnesota $139.81, Wisconsin $158.60, Pennsylvania $158.44 and in Rhode Island $111.04.

The Democratic Record.

During the four years of Democratic administration—from 1885 to 1889—over 80 per cent of all claims filed were allowed. During the preceding Republican administration the average was but 78 per cent, and during the last Republican administration (Tanner and Raum) only 67 per cent of the claims filed were allowed, notwithstanding the addition to the clerical force of the bureau of more than 400 persons.

During the four years of Democratic administration — from 1885 to 1889 — $296,458,741.25 were paid for pensions, $15,500,000 more than were paid during the 15 years of Republican administration from 1861 to 1875, inclusive; and including the estimates for the fiscal year, Democratic administrations under Judge Lochren and General Black, have, in five years, disbursed $5,750,000 more than all the Republican administrations in the 20 years from 1861 to 1880, inclusive.

The total disbursements for pensions since 1861 were in round numbers $1,730,500,000. During 16 years of that time, counting the present congress, the Democratic party in the house of representatives, under the leadership of Randall, Carlisle, Crisp, originated appropriation bills for 64 per cent of this amount, in round numbers $1,109,000,000; while during 18 years under the control of the Republican party, but 36 per cent, in round numbers $621,000,000, were disbursed, or a net ratio of nearly 200 per cent in favor of the Democratic party.

Soldiers of the republic, does this show the Democratic party has been ungenerous to the heroic men who saved the flag from tarnish or to their dependents? Wherein have Democratic administrations been inimical to the pensioners of the nation? Partisan Republicans in their carping criticisms strive for political effect solely. How plain a tale will put the prevaricator down?

WHAT POPULISM MEANS.

A TAX OF FIFTY BILLIONS OF DOLLARS ON THE PEOPLE.

Equivalent to a Tax of $700 on Each Man, Woman and Child in the Land. The Record of Really Insane Extravagance Made by the Populists In Congress.

When the McKinley congress went into office Corporal Tanner remarked "God help the surplus." That surplus, as everyone knows, was quickly dissipated and hundreds of millions of dollars appropriated ahead out of revenues to be collected in after years.

But even the reckless extravagance of the McKinley congress was but a drop in the bucket to what the country would have to face if the Populists were to be placed in power. Judging by the bills already introduced in congress by the Populist members all the property of the country would be required to pay the taxes made necessary by the first session's appropriations of a Populist congress. Just look at the appropriations which the Populists would make and figure out if you can where the money would come from to meet them:

Representative Davis' bill to make loans to mortgage debtors and appropriate	$10,000,000,000
(Senator Peffer has a similar bill).
Representative Clover's bill to loan to states 50 per cent of the assessed valuation of property would appropriate	12,000,000,000
Representative Clover' municipal loan bill would appropriate	10,000,000,000
Representative Kem's banking bill would appropriate	1,000,000,000
Representative Hudson's bill would appropriate	1,500,000,000
Representative Davis' industrial army bill would appropriate	500,000,000
Senator Peffer's charity bill would appropriate	6,300,000
Representative Boen's internal improvement bill would appropriate, beside annual appropriations	500,000,000
Representative Boen's bill to exterminate the Russian thistle would appropriate	1,000,000
Senator Peffer's rainwater bill would appropriate	20,000,000
Senator Peffer's resolution for government ownership of mines, railroads, telegraph, etc., would require an appropriation of	15,000,000,000
Grand total	$50,507,300,000

Even this enormous sum does not include the amounts which it would be necessary to raise for the administration of these measures, in salaries, etc., which would amount to hundreds of millions more.

These bills would put a tax of more than $700 upon every man, woman and child in the United States.

At that rate a Populist government would be a very expensive luxury indeed. As there is but about $10,100,000,000 of money in the world, it would be interesting to know where the balance would come from to meet these appropriations.

HEART DISEASE!

Fluttering, No Appetite, Could Not Sleep, Wind on Stomach.

"For a long time I had a terrible pain at my heart, which fluttered almost incessantly. I had no appetite and could not sleep. I would be compelled to sit up in bed and belch gas from my stomach until I thought that every minute would be my last. There was a feeling of oppression about my heart, and I was afraid to draw a full breath. I could not sweep a room without resting. My husband induced me to try and am happy to say it has cured me. I now have a splendid appetite and sleep well. Its effect was truly marvelous."

MRS. HARRY E. STARE, Pottsville, Pa.

Dr. Miles Heart Cure is sold on a positive guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. All druggists sell it at $1, 6 bottles for $5, or it will be sent, prepaid, on receipt of price by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

The Ladies Home Journal.

—For the first time in his literary career Jerome K. Jerome is about to write directly for an American audience. This work consists of a series of papers similar in vein to his "Idle Thoughts of an Idle Fellow," but addressed to American girls and women. The articles will begin shortly in The Ladies Home Journal, which periodical will print the entire series. Bret Harte is writing a story of American life and incident, Frank Stockton has given both of his new stories, with the quaint titles of "Love Before Breakfast" and "As One Woman to Another," to The Ladies Home Journal of Philadelphia.

Cure for Headache.

As a remedy for all forms of headache Electric Bitters has proved to be the very best. It effects a permanent cure, and the most dreaded habitual sick headache yields to its influence. We urge all who are afflicted to procure a bottle, and give this remedy a fair trial. Large bottles only fifty cents at Robbins & McCord's drugstore. 2

Every Christian Mother.

Should be careful with her children This damp atmosphere of our climate often brings on coughs colds etc., which if not attended to in time lead to that dreaded disease consumption, to prevent this it is the duty of all mothers to have a remedy near to check these coughs that your children may contract, and you cannot get a safer or more reliable remedy than Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup, the children's friends. You can buy this for 25cts. of your druggist. 43

The Only Remedy.

"During my term of service in the army I contracted chronic diarrhoea," says A E Bending, of Halsey, Oregon. "Since then I have used a great amount of medicine, but when I found any that would give me relief they would injure my stomach, until Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy was brought to my notice I used it and will say it is the only remedy that gave me permanent relief and no bad results follow." For sale by Robbins & McCord. 43

Only One Bottle.

Mr. Arthur M. Fisher, a reliable stock dealer, of Decatur, Ind. says: One Dollar Bottle of Dr Marshall's Lung Syrup completely cured me of a very annoying cough and pains in the chest, bordering on lung fever. I think it is the best cough syrup in the world and would not be without it. Sold by all druggists. Resp. Yours, A. M. Fisher, 43

Saved from Croup.

"I consider Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a specific for croup. It is very pleasant to take, which is one of the most important requisites where a cough remedy is intended for use among children. I have known of cases of croup where I know the life of a little one was saved by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy." J. J. LaGrange, druggist, Avoca, Neb 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord. 43

A Traveling Man

Mr B C. Wolfe, of Washington, Mo., writes that after taking Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism for one week, the pain had almost left him entirely. He slept better, had no more night sweats, and appetite was good. He also wrote that he would not take $100 for what the remedy had done for him. There is no waiting weeks and months to get satisfaction. The remedy attacks the disease at once. Send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and the full month's treatment of two large bottles will be sent to you by return express. Agents wanted. 42

To Vote a Straight Ticket.

To vote a straight ticket stamp anywhere within the large square that contains the rooster, the eagle, rising sun, or the plow and hammer, but stamp NOWHERE ELSE not even the small squares at the left. There is NO small square at the left of the words "Democratic," "Republican," "Prohibition," "People's Ticket." So no attention should be paid to these words. Stamp anywhere within the square, no matter if you do hit the rooster, the eagle, the rising sun or the plow. But if the stamp strikes outside the square, the ballot cannot be counted.

To Vote a Mixed Ticked.

DO NOT stamp in the big square at all, but go through stamping the small square at the left of each name you wish to vote for on any ticket.

How to Proceed.

The Poll Clerk hands you three tickets a pink one with state ticket of all four parties on it; a white one with all four of the county tickets on it; a yellow one with all four of the township tickets on it. Go into the booth and stamp each one, in the way directed above, then fold each one separately in such a way that all names are on the inside and out of sight, and the poll clerks' initials will be in sight on the outside, then come out of the booth, and give these three folded, separate tickets to the inspector, and give the stamp to the poll clerk. In addition we might say: Fix one ballot to suit you, first, and after folding it so that all printed names are on the inside, and the initials of the poll clerks are on the outside, lay it down by you and take the next ballot and fix that to suit you; fold it as you did the other, and then proceed in the same way with the remaining ballot. When all these ballots have been prepared, take all three to the inspector, as stated above. The way you vote one ballot does not affect the other. Each ballot is independent of the other. You may vote your state ballot straight, fold it and lay it down. Then you take up the county ballot and vote that either straight or mixed, as you see fit, and having folded and laid that down, take up the township ballot and vote that straight or mixed, as you see fit. One ballot has nothing to do with the other. If in doubt on any of these points, the election board will give information.

Henderson, Robert Culbertson, Erastus White, Rev. T. E. Lancaster, of Churubusco, and Rev. F. M. Hussey, of Kendallville, two excellent speakers. We noticed several smiles wreathe the faces and the little folks would glance at their mammas, as if to solve the mystery when Rev. L. would read two lines and then the entire audience would sing them. Several relics were on exhibition: wheel, reel, sickle, fire shovel 82 years old and a lighted tallow candle. Rev Lineberry, thinking himself an expert, snuffed the candle and burnt his fingers and turned the reel backwards. The meeting was conducted by Rev. Lineberry. The church was filled to its utmost capacity, as were also the carriages near the door.

"DEMOCRATIC TIMES."

Republicans Appalled by the Business Revival.

Their Organ Refuses Longer to Print the News.

But Nevertheless the Boom In Manufacturing Industries Goes Merrily Along — Thousands of Workingmen Once More Employed — Unanswerable Arguments For the Calamity Shriekers to Meet—Republican Testimony Proves the Return of Prosperity.

"Democratic times" has become a phrase which Republicans no longer delight to use. In fact they don't like to hear anything about "Democratic times" these days. "Democratic times" are right at hand and they are just what everybody wants — prosperous times.

When the Indiana Republicans opened their campaign they couldn't talk long enough or loud enough about the disasters that would follow on the enactment of the tariff law. But a Democratic tariff law was enacted and immediately business began to revive in all quarters. The revival was not a spasmodic movement, either, but has continued until trade in every line may now be said to be booming.

For weeks, in fact ever since the passage of the new tariff bill, the Indianapolis Journal has on every Monday morning been refuting calamity statements of its editorial columns by publishing a department of industrial news treating of the business situation in Indianapolis and vicinity. This department has been carefully prepared but evidently has not passed beneath the supervision of the political editor. Week in and week out this department has told of reviving trade, of factories starting up, of extensions being made in every line of business. This department has been to the party managers what the traditional red rag is to the sanguinary bull. They have labored with the management of The Journal to suppress the department or "cook" the news so that it would give a semblance of truth to the calamity howling of the orators and organs. The managers have protested and complained and threatened. But still the news in the industrial department of The Journal has continued to herald the return of prosperity.

At last, however, the state central committee has triumphed; the news instincts of The Journal management has given way to the political desires of the proprietors and the industrial department of The Journal, which has been one of its leading and best features for many years, fails to appear this week.

It is also to be observed that Republican papers all over the state, presumably by the direction of the state central committee, are giving no prominence whatever to announcements of resumptions of factories and other evidences of the restoration of business activity.

The action of the Indianapolis Journal in suppressing this valuable department of the paper is the best evidence possible that Indiana has at last fallen on "Democratic times;" and "Democratic times" means prosperous times—means Democratic victory in November.

REPUBLICAN TESTIMONY.

Manufacturing Institutions Running Their Full Capacity.

But the fact that Republican papers in Indiana refuse to print news of the revival of business doesn't prevent the revival from going right ahead, just the same, and a few Republican papers are honest enough to tell their readers so. The Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette in its Sunday issue has the following items of interest in connection with the resumption of business:

In General.

The Chattanooga plow works will enlarge its plant and double its force of 250 men.

The Globe woolen mills, Utica, N. Y., resumed with 30 more hands than formerly.

Mill operatives are looking forward to an advance in wages at the North Adams Manufacturing company, whose mill is at Braytonville, Mass., and which manufactures high grade woolens. A reduction of 10 per cent was made last March.

The manufacturers of Chicago are gradually employing more men and are slowly getting back into the condition in which they were prior to the hard times.

It is certain co-operative sleepingcar works will be built at Hiawatha, Kan.

The Pennsylvania steel works, Steelton, resumed with a full force in all departments.

A new bicycle factory of large proportions is soon to be erected at Weatherly, Pa., and when completed employment will be given to several hundred men.

The Cleveland Twist Drill company, Cleveland, O., is now running full capacity and 10 hours a day, with an increased force of men.

Pullman is to have another formidable competitor in the Goodwin Car Manufacturing company, which has just been incorporated at Des Moines, Ia., with an authorized capital stock of $2,000,000. Employment will be given to 3,000 men.

The silk industrial awakening is being strongly felt in Allentown, Pa., where the Adelaide mills, employing more than 1,000 hands, has restored the old rate of wages, which were reduced last winter. Another silk mill is in course of erection. The Barbour threadmill has recently resumed operations with several hundred hands and increased wages.

The Montour Steel and Iron company of Danville, Pa., is still running all departments of its works to the fullest capacity. The foundry, machine and blacksmith shops are busily engaged working full time.

The Lima (O.) Steel Casting company opened its new works on Oct. 1 and gave employment to about 60 men.

The Lakeside nailmill, Hammond, Ind., started up last Monday on full time.

The 25 potteries in East Liverpool, O., are all being operated with greater activity than at any time probably in their history.

The Ætna Standard iron and steel works, at Bridgeport, contemplates erecting an additional galvanizing works.

The Wheeling (W. Va.) Pottery company is turning out more ware than any time in its history, and the Warwick pottery, at the same city, is away behind with its orders.

September was the best month of the year with the West Virginia glassworks at Martin's Ferry.

In Indiana.

Greentown, near Kokomo, has two new factories in operation—a pressed-brick works and a tabl glass factory, the latter employing 200 hands.

All Kokomo factories are busy, and there are no idle men in town.

The McBeth lampchimney works at Elwood has put on its night force now running day and night. There is no thought of a cut in wages.

At the McLoy factory, Elwood, lampchimneys are being turned out at a rate never before equaled in the history of the factory.

The Elwood steam forge works has started up with 300 hands.

The Elwood windowglass works has started with a full force.

The iron works and radiator plants at Elwood report increased activity.

The Diamond Plateglass plant at Elwood is working fullhanded.

The new glass factory, to employ 150 hands, at Windfall, is completed.

At Alexandria the Depauw glassworks started Monday with 300 hands.

The glass strikers in the Lippincott works, Alexandria, gained their point.

Every windowglass plant in Anderson is in operation today for the first time in the past nine months.

The wiremaking record at the American wire nail works of Anderson was broken last week. During the six days' run of 24 hours each 925 tons of finished wire were turned out. The plant is in full operation, and has 700 men on the payroll.

Ground is being cleared this week and excavations made for the new Wright shovel works in North Anderson and the Riverview Agricultural works in Irondale.

Three hundred pressers at Ball Bros.' fruit jar factories at Muncie resumed work Thursday, but not at a reduction of wages. They have been idle several months, and the firm several times announced that they could not resume at last year's wages, but they did.

On last Monday morning the Indiana Iron company started all departments of the big mill, and now this company has over 700 names on the payroll. This is the concern that moved from Lancaster, O., to Muncie.

JUST TO THE SOLDIERS.

The Grand Army Gazette Praises the Administration.

This administration, and Judge Lochren's bureau especially, has done everything for the veterans that honor and justice demanded or could ask. If it set aside some unworthy pensioners, it gave the best of reasons for so doing. These reasons were not hearsay but official government records showing that the grossest favoritism in rating and rerating had been practiced by the Tanners, Raums, Squires and others, and the action taken in those cases should have been approved by the Grand Army encampments, not condemned as showing "hostility to Union veterans."

We confidently predict that the administration of the pension bureau under Comrade Lochren will stand forth in history as one of the wisest and fairest and most just; that it will never be smirched as were those two that preceded it, and that so long as such official action is continued at Washington it will be deemed an honor to be on the pension roll of the Union.—Grand Army Gazette.

THE FIRST A. P. A.

He Was Benedict Arnold of Unsavory Memory.

When General Benedict Arnold, lured by British offers, sought to betray into the hands of the enemy the important strategic point which he commanded, and fled to their lines, he addressed a proclamation to the officers and soldiers of the continental army in which he holds up to reprobation the conduct of the body governing the republic, saying:

And should the parent nation (England) cease her exertions to deliver you what security remains to you, even for the enjoyment of the consolations of that religion for which your fathers braved the ocean, the heathen and the wilderness? Do you know that the eye which guides this pen lately saw your mean and profligate congress at mass for the soul of a Roman Catholic in purgatory and participating in the rites of a church against whose anti-Christian corruptions your pious ancestors would have witnessed with their blood?—Benedict Arnold, Oct. 20, 1780.

TAXING GREENBACKS.

What the Failure So to Do Has Cost Indiana.

By reason of the Republican law exempting greenbacks and other sorts of money from taxation, to say nothing of the cumulative method of greenback taxdodging, the state of Indiana alone has lost, since the laws went into effect, the enormous sum of in taxes. And this enormous steal was upheld and sanctioned by Republican administrations, and would have continued if the Democrats had not got complete control of the government, and especially if Congressman Cooper had not secured its repeal by his persistent efforts. The repeal of this law will save on an average $221,000 in legitimate taxes annually. — Columbus Herald.

DO NOT MOVE,

If You Do You Will Probably Lose Your Vote.

Democrats should make it a point not to change their place of residence until after election day.

The election law of Indiana requires that a voter must have resided previous to the election day six months in the state, 60 days in the township and 30 days in the precinct in which he is to vote. It will, therefore, be apparent that if a man has changed his place of residence from one township to another since Sept. 5 he has lost his vote, and that if he changes his residence after Oct. 5 he will also lose his vote.

Democrats should therefore make it a point not to change their place of residence till after election day.

History Repeats Itself.

History repeats itself. After one or two encounters with ex-Governor Gray, when both were holding joint political discussions, Major Calkins found it convenient to fail in health. Mr. Owen succumbed after one engagement with his Democratic opponent, Mr. Myers. Merely a coincidence, of course. — Fort Wayne Journal.

Just Getting a Taste.

The Democratic boom is fairly on and will sweep the country in November. This may be thought an optimistic view now, but it will be verified. The people are just getting a taste of free trade and the prosperity which is already following. Revolutions never go backward. —Frankfort Crescent.

Examination of Havemeyer.

"Which do you regard as most favorable to the sugar trust, the McKinley law or the senate bill?"

"I regard the McKinley law much better for the sugar trust, of course."

Not a Homestead Tariff.

We hear of no bloody massacres like that of Homestead as a result of the new tariff law.—Evansville Courier.

One Saving.

In the cost of woolen goods alone the Democrats save the people $141,000,000.

VICTORY IS OURS

If the Democrats of Indiana but Do Their Duty.

The Republicans Are Running From the Issues.

Afraid to Discuss the Real Questions of the Day—The Hum of Factory Wheels Drowns the Shriek of the Calamity Howler—The People Alarmed by the Republican Threat to Repeal Wise Laws Placed on the Statute Books by Democrats—Chairman Taggart Reviews the Situation.

"Coming our way, sure!"

This was the response made the other day by Hon. Thomas Taggart, chairman of the Democratic state central committee, to an inquiry as to the way things political were going in Indiana.

"I am free to confess," he continued, "that 60 or even 30 days ago the outlook was gloomy enough for the grand old Democracy of the state. Business was dull, the Republicans were jubilant and confident and Democrats seemed listless and uninterested. It did look then as if there was some reason for the boastful claims of our friends—the enemy—that they would carry the state without much effort.

"But that was some weeks ago. The situation has undergone a complete reversal. Instead of being doubtful or despondent Democrats are now hopeful and confident. So complete has been the change that I now feel absolutely certain that we will carry the state by a substantial majority, and that Indiana will have as many Democratic congressmen in the next house as we have in the present one. The legislature will be Democratic by a safe and sufficient majority, insuring the retention on the statute books of all those wise and beneficial laws which have been placed there by Democratic legislatures in the past.

Reasons For Confidence.

"There are a good many reasons for this changed aspect of affairs," said Mr. Taggart in reply to further questions. "First and foremost among these may be placed the business revival which has followed so closely on the enactment of the new tariff law, and of which the evidences are to be seen on every hand. Early in the campaign the Republicans were charging all the hard times to the attitude of the Democrats on the tariff question. Since then, however, the people have had time to think. They have come to a realization of the fact that the panic of last year and the continuing depression were but the legitimate climax of the system of legislation which the Republicans, so long intrenched in power in the national government, had fastened upon the people.

"The people, too, are learning that freer trade, brought about be reforming the tariff laws, is doing all that Democrats have claimed it would do in the past. It is setting in motion the machinery of the factories, giving employment to tens and hundreds and thousands of people who had been idle under the system of protection, is cheapening the price of the necessaries of life and increasing the price of farm produce. It is putting commercial travelers on the road again and filling the stores of the merchants with customers. These things are rapidly answering the 'calamity howling' of the Republicans and thus rendering useless their sole argument.

"These facts serve to remind the people of what a return of the Republican party to power in the national government would mean. And the people don't wish a return to Republicanism and Republican hard times. Then again the people are reviewing the work of congress and finding it good. They find in it fulfillment of the party pledges to conserve the people's interests, to smash the trusts and monopolies and to reduce the national expenditures, which had grown to such enormous proportions under Republican rule. They begin to realize that their only hope of good government lies in the retention of the Democracy in power. These reflections are causing a return to their party allegiance of all those who, through personal disappointments, had become disaffected or apathetic.

The People Are Thinking.

"Another thing which is aiding the Democracy is the attitude of the Republican party on matters of state policy. Democratic legislatures have made a wonderful record in placing good laws on the statute books and in taking bad ones off. The Republicans have very unwisely chosen merely to stand in opposition to the Democracy's attitude. They have pledged themselves to repeal all the good Democratic legislation of the past and this threat has thoroughly alarmed the people. The masses are pleased with the labor laws, the election laws, the school book laws, the tax laws, the laws governing the charitable institutions of Indiana, and they are not ready to part with them. The aggressive declaration by the Republicans of their intention to repeal these laws has aroused the people and has done much to improve Democratic prospects.

"We are getting convincing proof of the improved Democratic prospects every day. Where a few weeks ago we were unable to draw crowds to our meetings we are now having difficulty in finding enough speakers to meet the demands or sufficient hall room to accommodate the crowds which turn out to hear them. Everywhere the interest of Democrats is aroused to a high pitch, the ranks are closing up and we are presenting a united, solid front to the enemy.

"Again I may say that victory is within our grasp. All we need now is conscientious, painstaking work all along the line and we will sweep the state next month. The Republicans are on the defensive now; they have sneaked away from every issue presented; have refused to meet them on the stump or through the press, and are only hoping to win the day by the aid of the taxdodging corporations and the apathy of Democrats. They understand thoroughly that they are in the minority in Indiana and that if the Democrats turn out at the polls they are hopelessly beaten. The Democracy has the victory won if it will only take advantage of the situation.

Tom Reed recently opened the Republican campaign in Maine with his jaw. If any one wants to know what little excuse the Republican party has for continuing in existence, he should read that speech.

By virtue of a Democratic law Pullman now has to pay for the privilege of running his cars through Indiana. In other states he goes free, as he did here under Republican legislation.

The Day Breaks.

The long night of Democratic uncertainty has passed away. The day breaks upon a solid Democratic battle line from the lakes to the river.—Evansville Courier.

IS HONEST AND TRUE

Democracy Never Fails to Redeem Its Platform Pledges.

The Splendid Record of Good Faith Made In Indiana.

It Has Been the Steadfast and Consistent Friend of the Laborer and the Taxpayer and the Persistent Foe of the Monopolies and Oppressors of the People—The School Book Law, Tax Law, Pinkerton Law, Fee and Salary Law and Other Beneficial Measures Enacted by Democratic Legislatures — New Pledges Given.

The Democracy of Indiana has never made fair promises for campaign effect, to be forgotten after election. Every pledge of the past has been carried out to the letter. Just look at the record:

In pursuance to its pledge of fealty to the interests of the workingman it enacted the Mechanics' lien law against the bitter opposition of the Republicans, the swindling contractors and grasping property owners.

Against Republican opposition it enacted a law protecting union labels from forgery.

Though the Republicans fought hard, it made eight hours a legal day's work in all state employment.

A Democratic legislature, against the fiercest opposition by Republicans and mine owners, enacted a law for the protection of miners while at work, which has proved so effective that not a mine disaster has occurred since the enactment.

Against the same opposition a Democratic legislature enacted laws compelling the payment of wages in cash, thus doing away with the enslaving "pluck-me" stores by which miners and other workingmen were kept always in debt to their employers.

Over the protest of Republicans, Democracy enacted laws prohibiting the blacklisting of employes by railroads and other great corporations.

A Democratic legislature enacted a law prohibiting the employment of Pinkerton's Hessians in the state of Indiana, though the Republicans, at the behest of their owners, the railroads, fought the bill at every step.

And, as a further boon to labor, a Democratic legislature, at its last session, enacted the employe's coliability law, though opposition to it was made a party policy by the Republican caucus.

A Democratic legislature enacted the Barrett improvement law, which gives property owners 10 years in which to pay for public improvements. It is needless to say that the bill, being in the interest of the taxpayer as against the taxgrabber, was fought tooth and toenail by the Republicans.

The new school book law, which cut off 60 per cent of the cost of text books used in the Indiana schools, was enacted by a Democratic legislature. Nearly every Republican paper in the state opposed it, and the Republican state officials to a man acted as lobbyists for the school book ring to secure its defeat.

Under Republican legislation and Republican manipulation Indiana elections had become a scandal and a fa[illegible] Democratic legislature enacte[illegible] which have prevented bribery [illegible]ruption and the Australian b[illegible] which gives an absolutely secre[illegible]ot, freeing from intimidation or bu[illegible]ng those employes of the great corporations and others whose votes had formerly been dictated by their employers. After fighting the enactment of all these laws the Republicans sought to beat them in the courts or to devise means to evade their provisions. All these efforts have proven ineffectual and Dudleyism, Dorseyism and all their concommitants of "crisp $2 bills," "trusted men" and "blocks-of-five" have passed away, never to return to Indiana unless the Republicans secure the legislature, when their first act will be to repeal the election laws.

The new tax law, so advantageous to the ordinary taxpayer and so odious to the great railroad corporations, is a product of Democratic legislation. It has put $271,595,000 of railroad and corporation property on the tax duplicate and compelled the owners of this property to pay $7,000,000 taxes, which sum is saved to the farmer and householder Not only was the law opposed by the Republican party, but the platform of that party refers to it as an "infamous law" and pledges the legislature, if Republican, to repeal it.

Against the opposition of the Republicans the fee and salary law, which saves the taxpayers of the state hundreds of thousands of dollars annually, was enacted by a Democratic legislature.

The state board of charities, a nonpartisan body created by a Democratic legislature, exercises supervision over the charitable and penal institutions of the state, and prevents the abuse or neglect of the insane, the poor and unfortunate wards of Indiana.

Thus have Democratic pledges been redeemed in Indiana.

NEW PLEDGES.

The Substance of the Platform of the Present Year.

The platform of the Indiana Democracy pledges:

The upholding and continuance of all the wise laws which it has placed on the statute books.

Vigorous warfare against the false and pernicious principle of tariff protection.

Steadfast opposition to monopoly and corporation rule, to trusts and combines.

Continual advocacy of the principle of electing United States senators by popular vote.

Support to the proposed constitutional amendment requiring congress to meet immediately after its election.

Undying hostility to every movement that, like the American Protective association, would deny any privilege of citizenship to any person because of his religious belief.

The absolute maintenance of law and order at all times.

Unwavering fidelity to the interests of the workingman, whose steadfast champion it has ever been.

Advocacy of laws to keep out vicious and pauper immigrants and to prevent the importation of alien contract labor.

A system of arbitration for the settlement of wage disputes between capital and labor.

The restoration of silver to its former place as the equal of gold in the currency of the nation.

Bountiful pensions for veterans of the war.

A state home for disabled veterans and their families.

Antagonism to all sumptuary legislation.

THE NATIONAL DEMOCRACY.

Its Pledges Redeemed by Congress at the Late Session.

In redeeming its campaign pledges the national Democracy, through congress, has been as faithful as the Indiana Democracy. The platform adopted in Chicago in 1892 made a number of solemn pledges to the people of the United States to be fulfilled in the event of Democratic success at the polls and Democratic assumption of the reins of government. These pledges have been religiously carried out.

The opening sentences of that masterpiece of political literature—the Chicago platform—called attention to the steady drift of the country toward a monarchical form of government under the influence of Republican legislation and pointed out the dangerous centralization tendencies of the Republican party as indicated by its expressed determination to enact the force bill into law. The Chicago platform promised the repeal of the federal elections law, by which hordes of federal marshals were in the habit of intimidating voters and controlling elections. The pledge to repeal these laws was carried out to the letter and the monarchical menace to the freedom of American institutions was removed.

Economy In Government.

Another pledge of the Chicago platform was that of a return to the economy in government expenditures which was practiced previous to the war, the very antithesis of which was reached by the criminal profligacy of Tom Reed's billion dollar congress. This congress, in a very saturnalia of reckless extravagance, not only squandered a surplus of more than $100,000,000, but mortgaged the country's revenues for the future to the extent of $600,000,000 more. In every direction since the inauguration of President Cleveland there has been a return to economy in government policy. The appropriations by the first session of the present congress have been reduced more than $28,000,000. In the departments at Washington thousands of useless clerks have been dispensed with and in every direction there has been a genuine return toward the economy practiced in the earlier days of the Republic.

The platform pledged the party to restore to the public domain for actual settlement by citizens the unearned portions of railroad land grants unjustly taken by the subsidized railroads through the connivance of Republican administrations, and under the presidency of Grover Cleveland more than 100,000,000 acres have been so restored.

Silver Legislation.

The platform of 1892 pledged the repeal of the Sherman silver law, which made the white metal merely a commercial commodity and made of the United States treasury but a market for the mine owners of the Rocky Mountains, many of them Republican United States senators. This law was repealed at the special session of congress, and the way thus paved for forcing universal bimetallism on the whole world. As a direct result of this repeal the movement for bimetallism has made wonderful strides everywhere and it is perfectly safe to predict that an international agreement for the use of silver as the equal of gold in the currency of the world will be secured before the end of Grover Cleveland's term as president of the United States.

Legislation for the regulation and prevention of trusts, monopolies and combines was promised and a death blow was dealt to them by the tariff act.

Laws for the restoration of undesirable immigration were promised. Many such have been enacted, and the Chinese exclusion act has been put into effect, while a treaty has been forced upon China by the state department which forever prevents the flooding of this land with Chinese cheap labor.

In addition congress has provided for an income tax by which wealth will be compelled to pay its share of the taxes and bear its proper share of the burdens of government.

Greenbacks have been made subject to taxation the same as other property, thus abolishing one of the most fruitful schemes of tax dodging ever devised by Republican legislation.

Labor day was made a legal holiday.

Laws for the payment of bounties to the sugar growers of the south and the maple sugar growers of Vermont were repealed, thereby saving to the people of the country $20,000,000 annually.

And more than 200 other laws for the benefit of the people have already been enacted by the present congress.

The Tariff and the Farmer.

The Democratic tariff gives the farmers of the country their agricultural implements and binding twine free of duty. These articles were taxed by McKinley There is more saved by the farmers of the country in a day through this removal of duties than was to be made by them in 100 years by a tax on wool.—Benton Review.

Going the Whole Hog.

It would require $25,000,000,000 to meet the expenditures proposed by the Populists. Let us see. What is the value of the United States?—Logansport Pharos.

SAVED TO PARENTS.

A Vast Reduction In the Cost of School Books.

The most substantial reform enacted by the Democratic legislature of Indiana is the new school book law which broke the power of the American school book trust and placed the books used in the common schools of the state at a figure that is reasonable and just. The following is a comparative statement of the cost of books under the reign of the book trust with that of the new school book law. It speaks for itself:

AN IGNOBLE TRIO.

POPULISM, DEBSISM AND COXEYISM.

A Dangerous Combination of Politics for Spoils.

OUR article last week contained considerable about the foolish and dangerous points of populism, yet we left much more unsaid. But among the undesirable features of the party of wild ideas, a few stand out prominent.

IT TENDS TO IRRELIGION.

Prominent in this regard is the fact that everywhere, and especially in the larger cities, there is a tendency against religious ideas and especially against the observance of the Sabbath. All these elements are with the populists. Come right back home to our own county. What political party since the county was organized, ever held a political rally on Sunday? The populists, and no other. Do not our church going people remember the great populist rally and feast of speech-making at Hamilton on Sunday, August 12, 1894. It was a political meeting and nothing else. Speakers were abundant and the big crowd from over the county took, what was to many, the first step in real Sabbath breaking.

THEY BELIEVE IN MOB LAW.

We have said that populists, especially their leaders, believe in mob rule, and find no fault with law breakers and rioters. This was plain during the great riots last summer. There was no excuse for law-abiding people to go out of their way to excuse the wanton destruction of property and life at that time. Every rioter broke the law, whether he burned cars or held up trains. But populists generally appeared to think they had done right and should not be punished. Populist papers were outspoken in this.

CLIPPINGS SHOW THIS.

The Auburn Times, July 12, says: "The officers have taken Debs' private mail and opened it like unto the practice of the Czar of Russia." "All unions have joined or will do so at once." "The Poles, Bohemians and other foreigners destroyed the property and led mobs." (But the editor of the COURIER saw with his own eyes, a large mob, controlled by "home talent," and three-fourths of the men, women and children in that particular mob spoke as good English as anyone.) In the Times of July 19, in reporting the big labor meeting at Chicago, when these riotous elements voted to join the populists, it has this: "E. V. Debs was lauded to the skies, and the very mention of Cleveland's name, was a signal for a torrent of hisses." When Richard Powers spoke, "He carried the audience by storm by the way he denounced the federal officials. He referred in scathing terms to the ordering out of the troops." W. C. Pomeroy "alluded sarcastically to President Cleveland, and the big crowd cheered till the chairman thought he never could secure order again. He told them there had been no trouble in Chicago till the troops were sent." (But the greatest riots were Friday night and the troops got there Saturday, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday after the riot. But they stopped the trouble at once.) The report goes on, that the speaker said, "Elect a man like Debs. He will not forsake you." "We love the old flag, but every time it floats over a republican or a democratic meeting it has to be fumigated." "When the people's party comes into power, corporate wealth will have no power, but you will be in command of the bayonets."

THEY UNITE WITH SOCIALISTS.

At this same meeting, they passed the following resolutions:

"Resolved, That this meeting of wage earners hail with feelings of joy the action of the trades unions, Farmers' Alliance, single-taxers, socialists and populists in joining hands in a common effort to restore the liberties of the people by means of the ballot.

Resolved, That in the future we, as trades unionists, socialists, federationists, single taxers, and all other ELEMENTS outside the old party machines, do now declare for independent political action and make a straight fight under the banner of the people's party."

The "other elements" named above will of course, include the anarchists. Then to emphasize these dangerous doctrines, Bliss copies approvingly in the same issue these extracts from the Omaha populist platform, saying it is a "wonderful document." Speaking of workmen, they give the soldiers another stab. "A hireling army, unrecognized by our laws, is established to shoot them down." And Bliss advises his deluded followers to "Get the whole document and read it." He says, "It reads like scripture." In the same issue he says, "If Christ had come to Chicago, they would have arrested him for treason or conspiracy." "Cleveland put his No. 14 foot in it when he sent soldiers to Chicago," etc., etc. All these stabs at Cleveland and the soldiers and the courts are, because they made the rioters stop their work of destruction.

FALSE REFORMERS.

In the name of reform, they go about seeking votes, but once in power, have shown themselves the most corrupt of parties. We cite one instance of many. We spoke last week of their misrule in Kansas. The Kansas City Times of September 18, has this, which we clip word for word:

"Between the republican and populist administrations of the metropolitan police law in Kansas City, Kan., there is this difference: The republicans paid over to the city treasurer each year between $5,000 and $7,000 excess blood money and blackmail to defray city expenses. Yesterday the city treasurer stated that the populist administration never paid over a cent."

And a long account of the nature and provisions of the law is given and the methods shown by which the officers and saloon keepers, gamblers, etc., manage between them to evade the law and divide the boodle. As stated above, the city authorities, all populists, put the fines, etc., down into their own pockets or into the coffers of the police department. The city now gets nothing. The copy of the paper named had a number of such cases, and of other sorts, in which the new party of pure morals was in a bad light.

FROM THE FORT WAYNE DISPATCH.

In this populist paper also, we find a similar defense of law breakers. In the Dispatch, which is the populist organ at Ft. Wayne, under date of July 29, '94, we find these: "The Gazette jumps into Debs with both feet and calls him 'anarchist,' etc., because he advised workmen to 'stand firm,' 'injunctions don't enjoin,' etc." (The injunctions these populists here object to, were the injunctions of the U. S. courts, ordering the rioters to stop destroying property, and the strikers from preventing trains from running.) The Dispatch, in the same issue, speaks of "Debs, the great labor leader, arrested on charge of contempt by a corporation judge, is out on bail." Much more of this stuff could be given, but we have given enough to show that the populist party papers, and therefore the party itself, is largely in sympathy with lawbreakers, and is denouncing the law and its officers for attempts to punish them. We have these papers and can show them to any who doubt the genuineness of the above extracts.

SECRET POLITICS DANGEROUS.

A political party having its origin in a secret association, is to be deplored in a free country. A political party whose workings must be shielded from the light of day, is un-American and dangerous. If a cause is right, it cannot be made too public: if wrong, it cannot be kept too private. The populist party had its origin in secret societies, such as the Alliance and the P. I. In these meetings, all work was laid out, and not in the knowledge of the public. In these rooms, with closed doors, American citizens were asked to make solemn pledges as to their political course, and these plans have not been altogether changed to this day. As we said in another article, the time will come when those who were deluded into acting with such a party, under such undesirable methods, will regret it. In our own time, we have seen prominent statesmen trying to prove to suspicious backers, that they never had anything to do with the old "Knownothing party." And if they did not succeed in convincing their friends that they were innocent of such charges, the result was disastrous to them and their aspirations. No citizen with whom it would be safe to trust the business of a public office, will try to reach that office by a secret stairway. Honest men do not fear the light.

Specimen Cases.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with neuralgia and rheumatism, his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shephard, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Table Talk

For the housekeeper and the mother, the October issue of "Table Talk" holds much of interest. For the help of the former, three dozen tested recipes are given in the Inquiry Department as well as Menus for many occasions, while the latter will eagerly read much in "The New Bill of Fare" and the Fashion Department. "Another View of Woman's Work," is given by Helen Campbell, our great authority of Domestic Science and Economy. It is well worth the small charge of 10 cents a number, or $1.00 per year. A sample copy, free is offered to our readers by Table Talk Publishing Co., Philadelphia.

In a Distressing Plight.

Must be the great host who have lost nerve and brain power, are listless by day and sleepless by night, with distressing aches and pains, shattered nerves, lassitude, nerve prostration and debility, mental depression, and the thousand and one other nerve troubles to which so many are subject. But a specific has been found, the "talk of Europe," just now introduced in America by the Hall Medicine Co., Toledo, O., and for sale by druggists generally. Will cure the most obstinate case of headache in an hour. It is called VITALINE AND NERVETONE. For sale by Fischler & Son. 42 for Infants and Children.

CASTORIA

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

GREATER NEW YORK.

A Plan to Annex All Contiguous Territory

New York special: The Greater New York Commission has issued an address to voters concerning the project which is to come up at the coming election. The area proposed to be joined under one government comprises 37.73 square miles and has a population of over 3,000,000, including the following civil divisions: New York City, Kings County—Brooklyn, Flatbush, Flatlands, Gravesend, New Utrecht, Jamaica Bay, Richmond County—Castleton, Middletown, Northfield, Westfield, Southfield, West Chester, part of East Chester, part of Pelham. Queens County—Flushing, part of Hempstead, Jamaco, Long Island City, Newton. Public improvements, it is urged, will be better devised, constructed, and administered under a single government. There will be fewer officeholders for the tax payers to support, administration will be less costly, and fresh impetus will be given to advantageous development.

Burned to Death.

Mrs. Jennie Harrigan and her three children perished by fire in the barn upon their farm in the outskirts of Elizabeth, N. J. The residence also was burned. The husband and father was absent at the time of the calamity. The general belief is that Mrs. Harrigan became suddenly insane and set the house on fire; that she then took her children and went into the barn and locking the doors set the hay on fire. As the flames began to close around them the mother gathered the children about her and held them there until they were all overcome. The eldest of the children was 6 years of age and the youngest 14 months.

Their Boat Capsized.

Brooklyn (N. Y.) special: A catboat containing four men was struck by a squall off Coney Island and capsized. The accident was witnessed by a number of persons on shore, and John and Daniel Bailey, of Coney Island, immediately started to the rescue in a small boat. They succeeded in rescuing one of the party, who was clinging to the overturned boat, and brought him ashore in an unconscious condition. He was finally resuscitated. He said that his name was Walter Booth, and that his companions who were drowned were Frank McIntyre, James Ford, and Frank Britton, all of New Brighton.

Americans Safe in China.

A telegram has been received at the State Department from United States Minister Denby, at Pekin, which is calculated to reassure persons who have friends in China who have been fearful as to their safety. The minister says that the reports of danger to the foreign residents of Pekin are exaggerated. There has been only one instance of an attack on Americans, and adequate punishment was meted out at once to the perpetrators. A proclamation has been issued by the authorities enjoining protection for foreigners.

Life Saving at Ashtabula.

The whaleback barge, "132," laden with iron ore, was driven ashore just east of the piers at Ashtabula, Ohio. She was lying at anchor, but the anchors could not hold and she dragged ashore. The boat is full of water on a rocky bottom and is likely to go to pieces. The new life-saving crew had its first work in taking the crew of seven men off the boat, which was accomplished with much difficulty. The barge was in tow of the steamer Thomas Wilson.

Rush for Columbian Half Dollars.

The demand for Columbian half dollars is beyond the expectations of the treasury officials. The indication now are that the supply will fall short of the demand. At the Sub-Treasury in New York $50,000 were exchanged for gold the day they were placed on sale. The demand in Washington is also unexpectedly heavy.

She Played Possum.

While in a drunken rage at Chicago, Albert Thurney fired two shots at his wife, who, though unhurt, fell to the floor in a dead faint. Thinking he had killed her, Thurney turned the revolver upon himself, sending two bullets into his head. He was taken to the hospital fatally wounded.

Grand Trunk Wreckers Confess.

Detective Sutherland says that Knowles and Bedewig, two of the accused Grand Trunk wreckers have confessed. Sutherland said George W. Johnson, a Battle Creek switchman, also accused, had been arrested.

Fifteen Fishermen Lost.

A special from Apalachicola, Fla., says: "The saddest feature of the recent storm was the loss of fifteen fishermen, all white, on Sand Island, about ten miles from Apalachicola.

Fatal Boiler Explosion.

The boiler in the Pretrous Lumber company's saw mill at New Madrid, Mo., exploded killing Volney Burton and James Holmes and fatally injuring G. Burton.

Women to Vote in Australia.

The steamship Arawa, which has arrived from Australia says: "The New South Wales Legislature has passed a resolution by an overwhelming majority in favor of extending the franchise to women."

Dragged to Death by a Horse.

Mrs. W. L. Albrittain, of Spratt, Ohio, was dragged to death by her horse running away. The saddle girth slipped and her foot caught in the stirrup.

Fire Bug Captured.

During the past month a dozen barns were fired by incendiaries in Limaville, Ohio. A vigilance committee was formed and the other night the barn of Jacob Kaiser, Mayor of the village, was discovered on fire. Two men were seen running from it and followed. Shots were exchanged between the parties. The refugees were found in a house. After parleying with the officers the suspected firebugs surrendered. They are Joseph Lynn, George Connors, and William Foonought, coal miners. The villagers were so infuriated that they attempted to take the prisoners from the officers and lynch them. The three men were arrested last summer and sent to the workhouse for fighting and the officers say they have burned out nearly every person who had any hand in their former arrest.

CRUSHED TO DEATH.

A Seven Story Structure Topples Over and Crushes a Lodging House Filled with People.

New York special: In the storm of wind and rain, which swept over the city at 3:30 o'clock Thursday morning, a big seven-story brick building in the course of erection, at 54 Monroe street, collapsed on a tiny brick front tenement and a dwelling house which flanked it on either side. There were nearly twenty persons in the tenement house and ten in a rear extension to the house on the other side of the collapsed building. Both were utterly crushed, and by 8 o'clock four bodies had been taken from the ruins, two of them mutilated almost beyond recognition and at least fifteen persons were under treatment for severe injuries received. It was just about 4 o'clock that an awful crash was heard from the east side of Monroe street. When the residents of the street looked out, a tall factory building which was going up at No. 74 for use as a tailor's sweat-shop, was not to be seen, and from a huge pile of debris rose a terrible wailing and groaning. A thick cloud of dust rose through the rain. As it cleared away, George Robinobitch, a photographer, who boarded at 72, crawled from the debris. He turned back and helped another man and his wife through the window of the wrecked house, through which he had crawled. Policeman Curry turned in the fire alarm and called all the ambulances out from every part of the city. In two hours four dead bodies had been taken from the ruins, and eighteen injured persons were being cared for.

MANY KILDED.

Frightful Boiler Explosion at Shamokin, Pennsylvania.

Four men were killed, two were fatally injured and several others were painfully burned by a disastrous explosion that occurred at the Henry Clay colliery near Shamokin, Pa. The entire steam supplying plant of the mine, consisting of thirty-six boilers, was totally demolished and in addition to the monetary loss, which will aggregate $30,000, the Henry Clay, Big Mountain, Sterling, and Peerless collieries will be unable to resume operations for at least a month. The explosion is the worst of its kind that has ever occurred in that region and its cause is a mystery.

The terrible accident came upon the boiler house employes without warning, and only one of them, a Pole, escaped uninjured. The others were buried beneath the debris and some of the bodies were not recovered for two hours.

The boiler on the western end of the house is supposed to have been the first to explode and then the adjoining boilers went up in quick succession, the repeated explosions resembling the roar of heavy artillery.

Only nine of the thirty-six boilers escaped destruction, and even these were so badly damaged that they are useless. Many of the boilers were torn apart near the center by the terrible force and the two parts would then take different directions.

PENSIONS.

The Report of the Commissioner for the Past Year.

The report of Commissioner of Pensions Lochren for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, has been submitted to the Secretary of the Interior. The report states that the number of pensioners on the rolls June 30, 1893, was 966,012. During the year 39,085 new pensioners were added to the rolls, 37,851 were dropped for death and other causes, and 2,398 previously dropped were restored to the rolls. The number of pensioners upon the rolls June 30, 1894, was 959,544; number of pension certificates issued during the year, 80,231 and 132,873 claims of all classes were rejected. On July 1, 1894, there were undisposed of in different stages of preparation and advancement claims for pensions and for increase to the amount of 619,027, of which 287,209 claims, originals, widows and dependents, are on behalf of persons not already on the rolls. The amount paid for pensions during the year was 139,804,461, leaving a balance in the treasury of $25,205,13 of the appropriation.

A BIG HAUL.

An Express Train Touched for $180,000.

The north-bound passenger train on the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad, was held up near Quantico, Va. The engineer and fireman were forced from their engine and the engine was cut loose and sent ahead. The express car was then entered, the messenger covered with pistols and the safe blown open and robbed. The runaway locomotive was stopped at Quantico by obstructing the track. The express messenger, B. F. Crutchfield, and his helper, H. Murray, barred the doors of the express car, but these were blown open with dynamite.

After the robbery, the thieves made off with their booty in the direction of the Potomac River, where it is supposed they had a boat in waiting to take them to the Maryland side. The express messenger said that the safe contained $150,000. The robbers secured this and all of the express packages containing money. It is thought that this amount will foot up to about $180,000.

Corbett and Fitzsimmons Will Fight.

There now seems to be but little doubt that, barring accident to either man, heavy weight champion Jim Corbett will defend his title against Bob Fitzsimmons. Friday the men met in the office of a newspaper in New York, and, after an hour's parleying, they and their managers came to terms. Jacksonville, Fla., will again be the scene of a fistic encounter, as the representatives of the Florida Athletic Club, Manager Charles E. Smith and Joe Vendig, succeeded in making arrangements which proved satisfactory to both pugilists, and the club can name any day after July 1, 1895 to bring the contest off.

Held Up for $1,000.

Bradford L. Eldridge, the 16-year-old messenger of the Second National Bank of Cincinnati, was robbed of about $1,000 in cash and papers for an unknown amount in front of the Commercial-Gazette office. He had been in the building and as he stepped out of the Fourth street entrance he was jostled by two men. He did not discover his loss until he was about to mount his bicycle at the curbstone. The robbery was reported at police headquarters and detectives put on the case, but they have no clew to the perpetrators.

Lost at Sea.

St. Pierre (Miquelon) special: Two hundred lives are believed to have been lost by the terrible gale which raged here for two days recently. More than fifty vessels are ashore and damaged, and several ships are missing. A fleet of about 300 vessels were forced to abandon the fishery by the gale on the banks on September 29 and 30. These vessels have returned here during the last few days with heavy losses of cables, anchors, lines, and dories. It will be some days before the full extent of the disaster caused by the two storms can be learned. There is mourning in all the fishing villages on the banks and here at St. Pierre. More than 800 men were at sea during the gales and more than 200, perhaps twice that number, have not been heard from.

Can See and Hear Now.

The medical fraternity of Zanesville, Ohio, is agitated over a remarkable case of the recovery of sight and hearing by William Jennings, who is 88 years old. He has been paralyzed for ten years, and for three years has been deaf and blind. A few days ago his daughter walked into his room to extend the morning greeting, and was shocked when he recognized her by sight, and when he showed that his deafness had nearly disappeared.

Russian Troops Moving.

It is announced, in a dispatch from St. Petersburg, that the Russian troops in the towns, villages, and passes on the Chinese frontier are being greatly reinforced, and that large quantities of provisions and war material are constantly arriving at these places. Everything, it is added, is being prepared for a forward movement into China if this should be decided to be necessary.

The Peacemakers.

Paris special: The Journal says that it learns that a conference of the representatives of the Powers will shortly be held at Peking, with the view of appointing a Board of Arbitrators to settle the war between China and Japan.

The British Government will shortly publish a statement in regard to its attitude toward the war between China and Japan.

Corbett Is Bound to Fight.

James J. Corbett told a reporter, at Buffalo, that nothing should prevent a meeting with Bob Fitzsimmons. "In the event that the fight is prevented in Florida. I'll go to New Orleans," said Corbett. "I am going to fight Fitzsimmons, and am perfectly willing to go where I can do so without interference. There'll be a meeting, even if it is to be for no more than a five-dollar note."

Four Vessels Lost.

The hurricane that passed over the island of San Domingo on the night of September 21 did considerable damage, and especially at the capital. Not a sugar estate escaped. Several small coasting vessels suffered, four being lost. On one vessel bound from San Domingo to San Chanzes eleven persons lost their lives, including a German family of five, mother and four children.

Armenians Imprisoned.

The Armenians of Boston are considerably exercised by a dispatch received from an Armenian merchant in Bayreuth, stating that the thirty-seven Armenian residents of Boston, Providence, and New York, who recently sailed from the latter port, were immediately imprisoned at Bayreuth on arrival.

Train Wreckers Captured.

The parties suspected of wrecking the Chicago and Grand Trunk train at Battle Creek, Mich., on the morning of July 16, during the strike excitement, and who were the means of killing Fireman Crow and injuring about twenty persons, have at last been arrested.

Sandusky Murder Mystery.

Christopher Schaefer, a young man residing at Sandusky, Ohio, with his widowed mother, was found lying dead by the roadside with two bullet holes through his heart and one through his head. No clew.

Riot Among Huns.

As a result of a drunken riot at Malthy, a small Hungarian settlement near Wilkesbarre, Pa., one person was instantly killed, two were fatally injured and two others seriously injured.

Chicago Gets the Viking.

The Viking Ship, which last year crossed the Atlantic to be one of the most attractive exhibits at the World's Fair, has been formally presented to the Field Columbian Museum of Chicago.

A Big Blaze.

Moellering Bros. & Miller's wholesale grocery house, Fort Wayne, Ind., was completely destroyed by fire, together with adjoining buildings. Loss, $250,000; insurance about $150,000.

The Fatal Gasoline.

Mrs. Amelia McClure died from the effects of burns caused by exploding gasoline at Yellow Springs, Ohio.

Depot Burned.

The C., H. V. and T. Railroad Depot at Canal Winchester, Ohio, burned to the ground recently.

Roasted to Death.

A little child of William Deason, of near Fairview, Ky., died from the effects of burns.

FORGOT HIS ORDERS.

CARELESS ENGINEER CAUSES A WRECK IN LOUISIANA.

Fails to Stop at a Crossing and His Train Crashes Into a Coach Filled with Excursionists — Took to the Swamps to Avoid Summary Punishment.

Nineteen Are Hurt.

Engineer Simpson of the East Louisiana Railroad is responsible for a frightful accident that occurred at the crossing of the Louisville and Nashville and the Northeastern roads, two miles from New Orleans; an accident that will result in at least one fatality, while nearly a score of passengers on the Louisville and Nashville railroad received severe injuries.

The Louisville and Nashville "across the lake" excursion train, consisting of eight coaches well loaded with pleasure-seekers, a large proportion of them being women and children, pulled out on time. As the train approached the crossing of the Northeastern tracks Engineer Hanley brought his train to a stop and whistled as the law requires. He then gave the signal to go ahead and proceeded across the tracks of the Northeastern.

The East Louisiana train, carrying excursionists to points in St. Tammany parish, was booming along its tracks and, with a wild shriek from its whistle for "down brakes," it crashed into the sixth coach of the Louisville & Nashville train. The collision threw a crowded coach completely into the ditch, while the attacking engine was derailed and buried its nose several feet in the soft mud. Passengers on the East Louisiana train were uninjured except for the shock of collision. Not so with the coast excursion, however. Just before the iron monster struck the coach several of the passengers saw it coming and a panic ensued. There was a wild rush to escape from the doomed coach, but before one of the passengers could reach either platform the approaching engine had struck, and the coach, with its living freight, was hurled from the track into the ditch. Women and children shrieked in their terror, while men fought their way blindly for some escape from the coach.

Seats were torn up and hurled in every direction by the force of the collision, and after the first wild panic had subsided there were heard piteous moans from different quarters of the wreck, telling of painful injuries. The greatest indignation and anger prevailed among the witnesses of the collision against Engineer Simpson, who had ruthlessly disregarded the law requiring him to stop and had caused the frightful wreck. Inquiry developed the fact that Simpson had escaped to the swamp.

VERY NEAR TO DEATH.

Brilliant Career of Comedian Scanlan Is About to Close.

It is believed that W. J. Scanlan, the Irish comedian, whose brilliant career on the stage was prematurely ended by hereditary insanity, is very near death. The Irish favorite has had a strangely romantic life. Many will be surprised to know that when a boy, he was a boot-black in New York. He gained many patrons by amusing them with imitations and sayings of a humorous nature, and often times would have as enthusiastic and admiring an audience about him, listening to his drolleries as he ever had in the days that followed. Finally it dawned on one of his more influential auditors that this youth was an embryo character actor, and he was taken to an uptown resort to do funny things for the pleasure-seekers. He scored a great success, and an interested and wealthy lady furnished money to train him for the profession to which he was so admirably adapted, and in which he has amassed a fortune now in the possession of the woman who proved his first real friend.

FEW ANIMALS BURNED.

Most of Them Escaped Before the Flames Overtook Them.

Immense numbers of wild animals and game have been driven by the late Western fires from the burned districts to the vicinity of the towns and when the hunting season opens it is believed it will be the most profitable ever seen. A gentleman living in the burned region declares that there have been very few wild animals burned, basing his statement on knowledge of the habits of deer, elk, moose and bear. He says that over a week before the fire broke out there was a decided movement on the part of all sorts of big game. He saw half a dozen black bear in one morning, all trotting along in the same methodical sort of way. Deer were all moving out, he says, and a dozen could be seen to cross the head of the lake in an hour if a close watch was kept.

"All these wild animals have a sharp instinct for impending danger," said he. "An old woodsman or hunter will begin to hustle for cover himself when he sees birds and beasts alike moving in the same direction. There have been several forest fires of greater or less severity since I have had to do with the country between Tower and the Canadian line, and each time I have noted that full warning was given of a coming disaster by the behavior of the wild animals in the forest. They know better than any human being when there is trouble coming, and you'll see them begin to dig for safety a full week before a fire sweeps across the woods."

TO BAR THE UNWORTHY.

Strong Movement Started in Boston to Restrict Immigration.

The restriction of immigration is a subject that has been more or less aimlessly discussed for many years; but now at length a movement has been started that will take practical steps to remedy whatever defects exist in the system. The new organization is named the Immigration Restriction League. Its object is to advocate and work for the further judicious restriction of immigration. It will issue documents and circulars in all the States, and in every way try to stir up public opinion to the necessity of some action. The league will by no means advocate the exclusion of immigrants, either of laborers or other persons of such character and standard as fit them to become citizens. It will endeavor to be a practical working body, aiming to place before the people all facts showing the need of further regulation and restriction, in the hope of bringing about some reform in the present system, of whatever nature it may be. It is significant that foreign born citizens are likewise interesting themselves in the movement, and the league's membership includes many prominent German-Americans and Irish-Americans. The labor organizations, led by Samuel Gompers, are preparing to second the new organization's propaganda, as it is directly in the line of the contract labor law and other legislation in which they are concerned.

The League is strictly non-partisan and non-political. The central headquarters are in Boston, and the Chairman of the Executive Committee is Robert DeC. Ward. It proposes three remedies. It would insist that each foreigner desirous of settling here should pay a money tax, should have certain educational qualifications, and should at the port of embarkation have secured a consular certificate, attesting his fitness to become a citizen of the republic. From carefully prepared statistics it is evident that we are getting the undesirable emigrants, while South America, Australia and even Africa are attracting those whose labors are especially desirable in the upbuilding of new countries. Such a condition of affairs the league hopes to reverse, and with such object in mind it will have a suitable measure introduced into the next Congress.

The league has collected valuable statistics illustrating the deteriorating process of immigration during the past twenty-five years. Here are some figures that are instructive:

Year.	Immigrants from Austria-Hungary, Italy, Poland and Russia.	Immigrants from United Kingdom, France, Germany and Scandinavia.
1869	3,515	260,983
1880	36,812	292,003
1886	71,734	240,770
1887	114,781	332,748
1890	154,873	562,749
1891	222,029	292,039
1892	259,967	312,502
1893	183,149	212,169
1894	120,587	151,951

The decrease in 1893 and 1894 of the number of immigrants coming to our shores is attributed to cholera in 1893 and to the panic for 1894. It will be seen from the above that while the immigrants from Austria-Hungary, Poland, Italy and Russia were about one one-hundredth of the number from the United Kingdom, France, Germany and Scandinavia in 1869, in 1880 they were one-tenth and in 1894 nearly equal to it. There are now 10,000,000 persons of foreign birth in the United States, and over 21,000,000 of foreign birth or parentage.

Statistics have also been prepared showing that 41 per cent. of our foreign born population are settled in cities, and that the same class constitutes one-third of the insane of the nation. Literature containing facts like these will be presented to the people so that a sturdy sentiment shall be created in favor of the proposed changes.

JUDGE THOMAS CASWELL.

The New Grand Commander of the Southern Jurisdiction of the Scottish Rite.

Judge Thomas Hubbard Caswell, the new Grand Commander of the Southern jurisdiction of the Scottish Rite, was born in Otsego County, N. Y., in 1825. His Masonic life began in Nevada City, Cal., in 1851, when he was made a Master Mason. He was exalted to the Royal Arch degree in 1855, and created Knight Templar in the same year. He was crowned an active inspector general, 33d degree, of supreme council for the southern jurisdiction in the city of Baltimore in 1870, and in 1883 was made grand minister of state of the supreme council, 33d degree, for the southern jurisdiction of the United States. In 1893, he was elected deputy grand commander by the supreme council of the southern jurisdiction of the Scottish Rite.

Liquor War Imminent.

A second decision has been rendered by the Supreme Court of South Carolina relative to the constitutionality of Gov. Tillman's pet measure, the dispensary law, whereby the State conducts the sale of all intoxicating drinks. Last spring the State was virtually in a condition of rebellion owing to the manner in which the law was being enforced, but a quietus was fortunately put on the matter at the time by a decision of the Supreme Court to the effect that the law was unconstitutional. Since then the personnel of the Supreme Court has changed, a Tillmanite having been promoted to the bench, and now there is a second decision that the law is constitutional. The effect of the decision will be to resume the crusade against all individuals engaged in the sale of liquor, and we may expect a renewal of the disgraceful scenes at Darlington, Florence and other places which gave South Carolina a notorious prominence several months ago.

TRIBUTE TO HEROES.

SOLDIERS' MONUMENT AT FORT WAYNE, IND., UNVEILED.

The Ceremonies Take Place Under the Auspices of the Eighty-eighth Regiment—A Beautiful Piece of Workmanship Worthy of the Sleeping Heroes.

A Day of Patriotism.

A special from Fort Wayne, Indiana, says: Wednesday afternoon, with the pomp of martial pageantry, the music of bands, the booming of cannon and the eloquence of patriotic orators, the soldier's monument at North Side Park, Fort Wayne, Ind., was unveiled.

It was originally proposed to have the unveiling ceremonies take place during the centennial celebration which was to have been held here this fall, but which was abandoned for various reasons. October 10 having been selected as the date of the reunion of the 88th Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and Fort Wayne as the place, it was arranged to have the unveiling ceremonies take place under the auspices of that regiment.

The parade and subsequent exercises at North Side Park were inspiring and full of patriotic interest. The parade was one of the largest seen in the city for some time. Capt. Ferd Boltz, officer of the day, proved that he had lost none of his old time ability, and the long line comprising Indiana troops, veteran soldiers and citizens, was ably handled. Arriving at the site of the monument, the veteran soldiers and the military companies came to parade rest and an immense concourse of people assembled to do honor to the day. Anthony Kelker, park commissioner, presented the tribute to the city and Mayor C. B. Oakley responded in a very happy manner, expressing the feeling of the citizens and of the soldiers. Hon. R. C. Bell, in his usual eloquent manner, in behalf of the donors, Messrs. Centlivre and J. B. Reuss, presented the monument to the soldiers of Allen County. Col. C. E. Briant, of the 88th, expressed the honor felt by the heroes of the late Rebellion, and accepted the monument in an appropriate speech. A guard of honor was then placed about the pedestal and on the first report of the salute, Miss Minnie Dougall and Miss Kickley, daughters of the regiment, unveiled the classic figure of the monument. The exercises were continued by an address in German by Capt. Christian Hettler and closed with a speech by that splendid old warrior, Col. I. N. Walker of Indianapolis, who delivered the address of the day.

SOLDIERS' MONUMENT AT FORT WAYNE.

The ceremonies closed with a patriotic selection by the First Regiment band and the procession was again formed and marched back to the city.

The monument consists of a stone pedestal surmounted by a bronze figure. The statue represents a veteran of the civil war in the uniform of a private soldier, kneeling with rifle in hand, while above him stands a heroic statue of the Republic extending a wreath in her right hand, as though about to crown the soldier. In the other hand the figure holds upright a staff, about which is draped the folds of the standard of the United States.

The figures of the statue are of heroic size, of strong yet graceful outline and lifelike and expressive. The statue is eleven feet high. The pedestal is of gray Bedford stone and is eight feet six inches in height. It is of sharp and graceful design and harmonizes well with the figure above it. The eastern face of the stone bears this inscription:

A TRIBUTE FROM PATRIOTIC CITIZENS TO THE HEROIC SONS OF ALLEN COUNTY, WHO FELL IN DEFENSE
OF THE UNION, 1861-65.

The south, west, and north faces bear respectively the inscriptions, "Chickamauga," "Vicksburg," and "Gettysburg."

Above the faces there are four medallions. That on the east side is the coat-of-arms of the United States. That on the west side is the emblem of the Grand Army of the Republic. The north and south medallions have not yet been cut.

The erection of the monument is due chiefly to the efforts of the Messrs. Centlivre and John B. Reuss.

The bronze figure was designed by J. G. C. Hamilton of Cleveland, and cast by Bureau Bros. of Philadelphia.

Not Their Specialty.

A Chicago man in Lexington, soon after Garfield's death, was talking of the bungling of the surgeons, when one of the Kentucklans present remonstrated against the terrible treatment and its results. "Well, a Kentucky surgeon would have done no better," said the Chicagoan. "You are right, sah," replied the other; "Kentucky surgeons know nothing about treating wounds in the back, sah."

An Interesting Test.

The British admiralty is to try an innovation in transporting seamen. The Gibraltar, a first-class cruiser, is to be manned by a crew which will take it to Australia and there relieve the crew of the Orlando, the flagship of the station. The crew of the Orlando will then take the Gibraltar home. Thus the Government will save the expense of a troop ship. The officers and men will be under the regular discipline of the navy, and the new cruiser will be tested by a long voyage.

BURGLARS visited Eva Harvey, a lone woman residing a few miles north of Liberty, and, after terrorizing her, forced her, at the muzzle of a revolver, to tell where her little savings were, and took it all—$16. She is almost prostrated from nervous shock. The thieves wore masks and made their visit at 10 o'clock at night.

LOUIS MARQUIS, an aged citizen of Kokomo, committed suicide in a novel manner. He was a helpless paralytic and was confined to his bed, unable to move hand or foot. He induced his 5-year-old grandson to become his executioner. The lad innocently passed a saucer to his lips containing a carbolic solution. The old man drank it down and died in an hour.

THE crew of a south-bound freight on the Michigan division of the Big Four road found a man badly mangled and unconscious along the tracks at a point north of Marion where the Big Four line runs side by side with the Toledo, St. Louis, and Kansas City. The man was unknown. All his limbs were broken and he was hurt internally. He cannot survive.

STATISTICS of farm and home proprietorship in several States are given in a census bulletin just issued. It shows that in Indiana over 29 per cent of the farm families hire and the remainder own the farms cultivated by them. In the State of Oregon almost 19 per cent. hire and 81 per cent. own, and in Mississippi over 62 per cent. hire and almost 47 per cent. own. The percentages of home families are: Indiana, almost 53 per cent. hire and the remainder own; Oregon 53 per cent. hire; Mississippi, 62 per cent. hire. Liens on owned farms are as follows: Indiana, $46,751,153; Oregon, $6,841,047; Mississippi, $2,899,191. Debts on owned homes aggregate in Indiana $19,967,067; Oregon, $6,619,499, and Mississippi, $583,528.

TIMOTHY CROWLEY, an eccentric character of Peru for many years, aged 83, an old soldier, died from heart failure, at the home of John Devine, where he has lived for the past five years. For ten years or more he has been considered an object of charity. When the undertaker began changing his clothes he made a discovery of wealth. Throughout all the clothes on Crowley's person, including the undergarments, were found cunningly contrived pockets, in which were secreted gold, silver and greenbacks to the amount of $1,000. In another pocket was found a certificate of deposit in the First National Bank to the amount of $2,000. Crowley was an old soldier and has always posed as a poor man, and has practically lived on charity for ten years. There are no immediate relatives to the estate.

AT Columbus a force of men were at work removing the debris of the late St. Denis Hotel fire when a huge partition wall fell and buried Christian Shields in the mass. Shields had been warned of his danger, but regarded it as a trifling matter. His back was broken and he will die.

THE Adams Express Company auctioned off unclaimed articles at Anderson. The sales amounted to over $500, but the goods sold were not worth $20. The packages contained patent medicines, etc.

THOMAS DAVIS, a United States prisoner, convicted of robbing the Somerset (Ky.) postoffice, and sentenced to serve four years in the Indiana Prison South, was hurled by a belt to the shafting above. His left arm was literally torn from the socket, left leg broken in two places and his breast badly crushed. Davis was tightly fastened to the shafting, and several minutes elapsed before the machinery was stopped. He will die.

"GO abroad, mother, is what I have about decided to do, after all."

He who said this, suddenly and just a trifle sharply, had been sitting, reading, at the furthest end of a very handsome, not to say gorgeous, drawing-room, where a group of four ladies, whose clothes well matched the apartment, sat conversing. For I have no doubt they would have called it "conversation"—of a highly interesting and improving kind.

The young fellow in the distance, however, did not seem to find it so. He was at the age when men are very critical of women, especially of their mothers and sisters, unless these happen to be sufficiently beautiful ideals to remain such unto son and brother from the cradle to the grave—an exceptional happiness which befalls few, and it had not befallen Roderick Jardine.

The stout lady who, the instant he spoke, pricked up her ears with a cheerful "Eh, my dear?" was (eccentric nature will sometimes have it so) very unlike this, her youngest child and only son—as unlike as it was possible for mother and son to be. Light and dark, fat and lean, large-boned and slender, phlegmatic and nervous, they came of two diametrically opposite types, physically and mentally. Morally—yes, there was similarity there, for Mrs. Jardine was a good woman, and Roderick was, as she ceaselessly declared, being very outspoken as to her feelings, the best of sons, though he was a little "peculiar," like his poor, dear father, of whom he was the very image.

This was true. Her three daughters—now married and settled, except the last, who was just about to be—all took after herself. Not her present self, perhaps, but the comely lassie she must have been once—fair-haired, round-cheeked, with a wide mouth and slightly projecting teeth—though possessing sufficient good looks to be a belle in Richerden. Roderick alone "favored" the other side of the house—the tall, dark, rather sad-looking father, who came of old Highland blood, and not being in business like most of the Richerden folk had led a rather retired life, keeping himself very much in the background, even amid his own family. Nobody really knew him, or thought much of him, until he died, which event happened just before his son went to college. Since then his widow had gradually blossomed out into great splendor; married her two daughters, taken her independent place in society, Richerden society, as a woman—I beg pardon, a lady—ought to do who has a large fortune, a fine family, and a great capacity for managing both. People had said that she managed her husband; but those who knew Mr. Jardine questioned this. Gentle as he was, he was not exactly a man to be "managed" by anybody.

"What were you saying, Rody, my lamb?"

Now, if there was a pet name the young fellow disliked, it was his childish diminutive of "Rody." And no man of five-and-twenty is altogether pleased at being called "a lamb."

"Can you spare two minutes from that very delightful conversation of yours to listen to me, mother?"

"Ou, ay, my dear."

The young man winced a little. "Wouldn't 'yes' do as well as 'ou, ay?' But never mind, it doesn't matter, mother, dear," added he with a sigh, more of weariness than impatience.

"Rody, my boy," said she, coming to him half-deprecatingly, "were you saying you wished to go abroad? It's late in the year, to be sure, but I'll not hinder you. Only you must promise me not to be climbing up Alps and tumbling into glaciers." Glaziers, she called them; and her voice had the high-pitched shrillness which Richerden ladies seldom quite get out of, even when they fancy they have merged their native accent in the purest of English. "Wherever you go, remember you must be back in time for Isabella's marriage."

"Certainly—and, mother, don't be afraid of my tumbling into a glacier, or of an avalanche tumbling down upon me. I shall only see the Alps at a distance. At this time of year one must content one's self with towns."

"That's hard, laddie, when you are so fond of the country. But do as you like—do as you like—only don't forget the marriage. You will have to give away the bride, Rody. Ah! your poor father!"

The widow's eyes filled with tears. If she had not understood her husband, she had loved him certainly, and more perhaps after his death than before it.

"We'll we'll talk the matter over another time," cried Roderick. "At this moment I'm busy—I mean, I—I have an engagement. Good-by, everybody. I'll be back at dinner-time."

"A little before dinner-time, please, my dear. Remember we have company—twenty at least—a regular dinner party."

"Oh, yes, a 'meeting of creditors,' as my father used to call it," said the young fellow somewhat bitterly. "No fear, mother; I'll be back in time, and do my duty to all the old fogies."

"They're not old fogies; there are some as nice girls as you could wish to see, if you'd only look at them, Roderick," said Bella, who, going to be married herself, quite lamented that her only brother seemed determined against matrimony.

"Well, I will, Bell, I promise you, only let me go now." And snatching up his hat—a Glengarry bonnet which he persisted in wearing, though his sisters told him it made him look like the Highland porters at the quay—he fairly ran away.

Rapidly the young fellow walked on through park and square, through street and wind, or "vennel," as such dreary dens are often called here; shrinking from and detesting alike the poverty and the riches, the splendor and the rags. It began to rain heavily, but he heeded not. Though brought up in luxury, he was not luxurious by nature, could stand a good deal of hardship, and had a young man's instinctive pride in "roughing it." Still "an even down-pour," as his mother would have called it, is not an agreeable thing; and as in reality his only "engagement" was with himself, whose company he felt free to enjoy as much as anybody else, he stopped his walk and turned into a railway station, where at least he could sit down quietly and read his letters, which he had snatched up from the hall table on going out.

But having no very interesting correspondence—for he had left behind at Cambridge few intimates and no duns, also being, I fear, of a rather dilatory turn of mind, and given to the bad system of laissez-aller—Roderick left the letters unopened in his pocket, and sat idly watching the passengers gather for a train just about to start.

And when he heard the guard calling out the name of a place where he and his father had spent many a happy day, on a sudden impulse he sprung into the train without a ticket ("just like Rody, silly fellow," they would have said at home), and was borne away.

As he swept along in the train, and, quitting it, started on an old familiar walk, along high cliffs which gave him a view of the country—land and sea—for many lovely miles, Roderick's heart was very full. Not only of his father, but of himself and his own new future, which lay before him like a map; the map of an untraveled country—untraveled but yet not undiscovered, for there were in it more certainties than lie in the lot of many young men of his age.

Poor fellow! so young, so ignorant of life and its burdens. Yet he thought himself quite wise and quite old, and felt his burden very heavy indeed, and himself a most unfortunate fellow, on being obliged to go back to that "meeting of creditors" which he detested.

"But I'll enjoy myself here to the very last minute," thought he, and sat down on a heather bush—for on that high ground everything looked as if it never had rained and never would rain again, till the next time, which would probably be within twenty-four hours. Wrapping his plaid about him, he felt perfectly happy. That lovely outline of hills—he must just put it down; so, hunting in his pocket for the pencil that was always a-missing, he turned out the letters that he had crammed in there, and looked them over.

None attracted him, except a black-edged one, which, opened, he found was one of the "intimations" of death, customary in Scotland, acquainting him that there had died "at Blackhall, aged sixty-nine, Miss Silence Jardine."

Silence Jardine! Surely a relation! Who could she be? For he knew his father and he were the last of their family.

However, thinking a minute, he remembered that in the business arrangements after his father's death, which, he being under age, had been managed entirely by his mother, she had told him that Blackhall, the ancestral property, "a queer tumble-down place, which nobody would care for," was to be inhabited, so long as she liked, by Miss Jardine, a second cousin. This must be she who had now died.

"I wonder, ought I to go to her funeral?" However, consulting the letter, which had traveled to Cambridge and back, he found this was impossible. She must have "slept with her fathers" for some days already. "Poor Cousin Silence! What a queer name, by the by. I wonder what she was like, or if I ever saw her?"

And then, by a sudden flash of memory, he recalled a circumstance which in the confusion and anguish of the time had entirely slipped away—how, not many hours before his father had died, there had crept into the sick-room a lady—an old lady, nearly as old as Mr. Jardine, and curiously like him. At sight of her a wonderful brightness had come into the dying face. "Cousin Silence?" "Yes, Henry," was all they said, but she knelt beside him; and they kissed one another, and he lay looking at her till the last gleam of consciousness faded away. After that—for he did not actually die for some hours—she sat beside Mrs. Jardine, watching him till the end. And after the end, Roderick remembered she had taken his mother out of the room and comforted her, staying a little while longer, and then leaving, no one thinking or saying much about her, either at the time or afterward.

Now, recollecting his father's look, and hers, too, the whole story, or possible story, presented itself to the imaginative young man in colors vivid as life, and tender as death alone can make them. And when, carelessly opening another letter, he found it was from the lawyer of this same Miss Jardine, stating that she had left him—"Roderick Henry Jardine, her second cousin once removed"—the whole of her small property, as also a diamond ring, "which his father gave me many years ago," he was deeply touched.

"I wish I had known her! I wish I had had a chance of being good to her—poor Cousin Silence!" thought he.

And as he sat watching "the light of the dying day," which died so peacefully, so gloriously over the western hills, he, with his life just begun, pondered over the two lives now ended, the mystery of which he guessed at, but never could know, except that they were safely ended.

When the sun set, going down like a ball of fire which dyed the river all crimson, and the sudden gray chill of an October twilight came, Roderick started up, a little ashamed of himself, and still more ashamed when he found he had entirely neglected to ask the time of the return train to Richerden.

"Just like me, mother will say," and, half laughing, but vexed, for it always vexed him to vex his mother, he tore along as fast as his long legs could carry him, to the railway station. The train was just going, and it was at the risk of his life—to say nothing of a penalty of forty shillings—that this foolish young fellow contrived to leap into it, breathless, exhausted, having nearly killed himself in his endeavor to "do his duty."

So he represented to himself, at least, and felt a most tremendous martyr all the way to Richerden. It did not occur to him that simply looking at his watch and the time-table would have saved all. But at his age we are apt to overlook the little things on which, like the coral islands of the South Sea ocean, our lives are built. How far we build them ourselves, or Fate builds for us, God only knows.

Tearing up in a cab to his own door (or rather his mother's—he already began slightly to feel the difference), ringing as if he thought the house was on fire, and being met by the imperturbable butler with the information, "Yes, sir, dinner is served; Mrs. Jardine waited half an hour, and then asked Mr. Thomson to take the foot of the table"—all this did not contribute to Roderick's placidity of spirit. When he at last walked into that blaze of gas-light—that dazzle of crystal and plate—that strong aroma of dainty dishes and excellent wines, and clatter of conversation, which makes up a Richerden dinner-party, he was not in the best frame of mind to enjoy the same.

His mother was so busy talking, and the silver-gilt epergne was such an effectual barrier between the upper and lower ends of the table, that she never noticed that her son-in-law-elect quitted his place and her son slipped into it, till the deed was done. Then Roderick might have received a good hearty scolding, not undeserved, had not something in him—was it his father's look?—repressed the ebullition. She merely said: "Oh, my son is there, I see! Better late than never." And the dinner went on.

When, the ladies having retired, he still had to keep his place and "pass the bottle"—which he loathed—to elderly gentlemen, ay, and young ones, too, who evidently did not loathe it—listening meanwhile to talk in which, whether it was his own fault or not, he could not get up the smallest interest, this young Cantab—who for three years had lived in what was a little better atmosphere than that of Richerden—socially, as well as physically—was a good deal to be pitied.

So was his mother, too, when, having succeeded in luring the guests upstairs, he—her only son—went and hid himself in the drawing-room and "sulked," as he overheard her say, lamenting over him as a black sheep, in the loudest of whispers, to a lady he particularly disliked.

But it was not sulking, for he had his father's sweet temper. It was only the utter weariness of spirit, which, in uncongenial circumstances comes over the young as well as the old.

And then, with the habit he had of passing over things at the time and recurring to them afterward, there came into his mind a sentence in the letter from Miss Jardine's lawyer, explaining that in making her will she had said to him that her only other kindred were some distant cousins, living, she believed in Switzerland, whom, if they were poor, she left to Roderick's kindness.

"Capital idea! I'll go straight to Switzerland and find them. It would at least be something to do."

And the mere notion of this brightened up the young fellow's spirit and warmed his heart—he was, I fear, but a foolish young Quixote after all; so that when his mother called him to do civility to the departing guests, he came forward with an air of cheerfulness, such as he had not worn all the evening. Ay, even when he had to escort the most honored quest to the very carriage door, from an unsteadiness of gait, politely ascribed to gout, but which Roderick, with a contempt so sad to see in the young to the old, even when the old deserve it, soon perceived to be—something else.

"Mother," cried he, indignantly, as he returned to the drawing-room, where the two ladies stood on the hearth-rug of their "banquet-hall deserted," hot, weary, a little cross, and not a little glad that "it was over," "mother, I wonder you let that old fellow enter your door! He has not an ounce of brains, and less of manners. Didn't you see he was drunk?"

"What an ugly, vulgar word! And to say it of Sir James, who holds such a good position here, and is Mr. Thomson's father, too! Rody, I'm ashamed of you!"

"And Bella is more than ashamed, angry. Oh, Bell," and with a sudden sense of brotherly tenderness, half regret, half compunction, he laid his hand on her shoulder, "have you thoroughly considered this marriage? Are you quite sure of the young man himself? These things run in families. Suppose he should even turn out a drunkard—like this father!"

"Stuff and nonsense," said Bella, sharply. "And even if Sir James does enjoy his glass—why—so do many other gentlemen. It isn't like a common man, you know, who never knows when to stop. Now, Sir James does. He is not 'drunk,' as you call it, only 'merry.'"

"Roderick," said his mother—and when she gave him his full name he knew she was seriously displeased—"the Thomsons are one of the first families in Richerden, and live in the best style. Isabella is making the most satisfactory marriage of all her sisters, and I desire you will not say one word against it."

"Very well, mother." And with a hopeless sigh Roderick changed the conversation.

"Mother, have you thought over what I said this morning about going to Switzerland?" said he, impelled by the sad longing of much-worried people to run away. "Because, since then, I have found an added reason for my journey." And he gave her the two letters which had come on from Cambridge. "I suppose you had not heard of Miss Jardine's death, or you would have put off the dinner-party?"

"Why so? She was only a poor relation. Nobody knew anything about her here. Her death was not even put in the newspapers."

"Then you did know of it? But, of course, one could not mourn for a person whose death was not important enough to be put in the newspaper."

Mrs. Jardine looked puzzled, as she often did when her gentle-speaking "lad" spoke in that way; she could not make out whether he was in jest or in earnest.

"Weell, go, if you like. But it's just a wild-goose chase; that's what I call it."

"So do I, mother. Only I'm not the hunter; I'm the wild goose, and I want to take a good long flight and stretch my wings. Then I'll come back as tame as possible, and settle down in the dullest and smoothest of ponds."

He determined to go, the very next day, to visit Blackhall, which he had never yet seen, and knew little about, for his father rarely named it, though it had been the home of the Jardines for many generations. Also, they must have had a burial-place, for he had some recollection of his father's having once expressed a wish to be there, only his mother had overruled it in favor of the grand new cemetery on the outskirts of Richerden, where she had afterward erected a beautiful white marble sarcophagus with an urn at the top. What matter? Henry Jardine slept well. And far away, somewhere beyond those moonlight mountains—near the very places where they might have played together as children, or walked together as young people—slept also Cousin Silence.

But the waking? If it be possible that the life to come shall heal some of the wounds of this life—oh, the heavenly waking!

BISMARCK'S EPITAPH.

Tributes Called Forth by the Chancellor's Pathetic Remark.

The rumored reports of Prince Bismarck's failing health serve to recall the circumstance that soon after his retirement from public life—the consequence of a rupture with Emperor William—he remarked pathetically: "I have only one ambition left. I should like to have a good epitaph."

This mournful expression excited a good deal of comment at the time, and, curiously enough, epitaphs upon the ex-Chancellor were attempted by a number of writers, although, to quote from a contemporary, "to discuss during a man's lifetime the form to be adopted for his epitaph is a questionable proceeding." Many of these experiments in epitaphy were very clever. Here is one that is exceptionally meaty:

Bismarck lies here, early and late
He strove to make his country great
Did he succeed? Let Sedan, Paris, tell;
But silence keep on how, himself, he fell.

Much more conventional is the following, which, as we recollect, was submitted by a writer for the London newspaper press:

Around this tomb hovers the spirit great
Which for too brief a span did animate
The mighty frame that silent lies below,
Leaving the world to wonderment and woe.
Bismarck, the Iron Chancellor, whose nod
The anxious nations watched, as of a god—
He forged an empire, swayed it in its pride.
And then, to show that he was mortal, died.

And these other contributions are not wholly without merit:

I ruled as king, and not in vain;
I tamed the Austrian and the Dane;
I curbed proud France (for Europe's good),
I placed her borders where she stood;
I made Germania One and Free,
I fell. I saw adversity.

Look kindly on this spot. Here Bismarck lies
Death kissed away the terror of his eyes;
And the brave heart by leisure has been made
A child's of which the world was once afraid.
Cleansed is the 'blood,' the 'iron' lost in love,
And now earth's prince is crowned a king above.

Here on the verge of Prussia's border,
Moulder the bones of Prussia's warder;
Sound may he sleep when the coming thunder
Shall rock his castle walls asunder.

The most graceful of the many epitaphs called forth by the ex-Chancellor's pathetic words appears to have been the following:

If dust ye seek and dust alone,
Prince Bismarck sleeps beneath this stone;
But if ye seek his soul, depart—
His Germans keep that in their heart.

Ill-Mannered English Dowagers.

A writer in an English newspaper has uttered a wail concerning the degeneracy of the age, says the New York Sun, and cites examples of the great falling off in manners in what are generally called in Great Britain the upper circles to prove it. If half he says is true he makes out a very good case. He asserts that in London ball-rooms one finds the chaperons, ladies often of mature years, struggling for seats like so many foot-ball men in a scramble. He objects to what he calls "their calm insolence and their tricks and devices to get the better of one another." He alleges that a couple of dowagers will, when seated on each side of a third, talk across her for an hour or more so eagerly that their chins almost meet in front of the sufferer. Dowagers have offended him seriously. The critic notices the recent stringent rules at the Queen's drawing-rooms, and says that they were necessary. Nothing milder, in his opinion, would check the crowding and pushing which have now converted the scene of a great state ceremonial into a lively bear garden. Then there is the ill-mannered chatter with which occupants of stalls and boxes at the theaters interrupt the performance. This censor of public manners finds that the most hopeless feature is the behavior of the rising generation.

First American Boys in Japan.

The first American boys who visited Japan were set ashore with great ceremony near the city of Yeddo, or Tokio, on Thursday, July 14, 1853. They wore the uniform of the United States navy, and every gilt button and buckle was polished till it shone like gold. They carried between them a large square envelope of scarlet cloth, containing two beautiful round boxes made of gold, each box inclosed in a larger box of rosewood, with locks, hinges, and mountings all made of pure gold. Each of the gold boxes contained a letter to the Emperor of Japan, beautifully written on vellum and not folded, but bound in pure silk velvet. To each letter the great seal of the United States was attached with cords of interwoven gold and silk, with pendent gold tassels. The names of these boys are not known to the writer, but it would not be surprising if some young American should write to the Young People. "My father was one of these boys."—Harper's Young People.

Trend of the Feminine Mind.

There are many straws which show the reaching out in these days of the feminine mind. Here is one: In Hallowell, Me., the free library statistics for last month show 1,141 books given out. Of these women took 407, girls 410, against 151 taken by men, and 173 by boys.

ALL the grandsons of Charles Dickens bear the name of Charles. One of them, Gerald Charles Dickens, son of Henry Fielding Dickens, Q. C., has recently entered the British navy.

WE don't know whether it is woman suffrage or not that causes it, but have you noticed these days how soon after marriage a man begins to fade?

THE GIPSY-MOTH.

Thousands of Dollars Spent to Eradicate the Dangerous Pest.

Almost every one knows that the gipsy-moth is a dangerous pest, and that the State of Massachusetts has expended several hundred thousand dollars in an attempt, only partially successful, to eradicate it. Most people know, too, that the little creature which has done so much damage is an alien. But how many know just where it came from, and how?

We owe so many benefits to scientific research that it is not singular there should be some entries on the other side of the account. The incursions of the gipsy-moth are directly traceable to the unfortunate curiosity of a French scientist, who made his home more than twenty years ago in Medford, Massachusetts.

This Frenchmen busied himself with experiments with silk worms. He was desirous to find out whether there were any other species of insect which could be cultivated, from whose cocoon the thread could be unwound directly by machinery better than can be the thread of the cocoon of the silkworm.

To facilitate these experiments he had sent to him from France specimens of several species of insects, among which he hoped to find a substitute for the silkworm. With the rest he received Ocneria dispar, or the gipsy-moth.

He experimented with his insects upon trees under netting, but through some accident the netting was broken and the moths escaped. When he communicated his loss to the towns-people, it made little impression upon them; but after several years the foliage on the shade trees in Medford began to disappear as if by magic. Trees that were a delight to look upon one day were completely stripped the next.

The pest spread, slowly, but systematically, until most of the towns and cities in Northwestern Massachusetts were visited and great havoc was wrought to vegetation. Then came investigation, an organized movement for extermination, a commission appointed by order of the Legislature, and large appropriations to carry on the warfare.

In France, it seems, there is a parasite which preys upon the moth and holds its destructiveness in check; but the inquisitive Medford Frenchman neglected to import the parasite, so that the gipsy-moth was permitted to ravage undisturbed until the State of Massachusetts began to make war upon it. It is doubtful whether, since Pandora opened her box, so much destruction has been occasioned by so slight a cause.

HAS MADE MONEY IN FICTION.

Mrs. Humphrey Ward's Income Said to Be Over $30,000 a Year.

MRS. WARD.

It is only about six years since "Robert Elsmere," Mrs. Humphrey Ward's first notable book, was given to the public, but already her earnings from her pen have been over $200,000. This is an estimate made by James Payn, himself a novelist of considerable note. The two great books so far produced by Mrs. Ward have been "Robert Elsmere" and "David Grieve," but a novel now in the hands of the publishers is expected to be as successful as either. Orders in advance of publication have been so numerous that its appearance has been delayed in order that all demands may be simultaneously supplied. The late George Eliot received in the aggregate considerably more than $200,000 for her works, but she did not earn all this in six years. Mrs. Ward is said to have received $80,000 for the English rights of "David Grieve" alone, and it is doubtful if an English writer of fiction has ever made the same amount in such a short space of time.

A Home-Made Inhaler.

Inhalations of aromatic vapors such as those from terebinthine, eucalyptol and pinol are recommended for most affections of the larynx and bronchial tubes, and hence it may be useful to show how an inhaler can be made from a teapot or kettle and a pair of bellows. The mouth of the teapot should be closed by a bung, through which an india rubber tube is passed into the liquid to be vaporized. The other end of this tube is joined to the nozzle of an ordinary domestic bellows; and a funnel or mouthpiece is added to the spout of the teapot. On working the bellows the medicinal liquid in the teapot is agitated and the fumes are blown from the spout into the mouth of the patient, who inhales them at his pleasure. To make the process as effective as possible, the liquid should first be heated by placing the teapot or kettle beside or on the fire.

The Electric Light.

It is probable that large numbers of the German soldiers will be equipped with portable electric batteries weighing about half a pound. A small lamp goes with it, and the invention will be of great value to the men employed about powder magazines. They are also to be used for signaling from balloons at night, and can be fixed to the helmet when the men have to dig trenches after dark.

LIFE IN HONDURAS.

Glimpse of a Country Where the Wheels of Progress Have Not Moved.

There are few countries in the world in which the march of progress has been felt in less degree than in Honduras. Nothing could be more primitive than country life in the land, upon which nature has bestowed her choicest blessings, that need but the aid of skillful human hands to convert into a veritable paradise. Many persons there are who assert in all seriousness that Honduras was the Garden of Eden. "Never were there more fertile valleys, more genial suns, softer breezes, fairer skies by day or lovelier by night," says a writer. The houses are of adobe, with roofs of red, funnel-shaped tiles and floors of wide, flat bricks. The rooms are usually very large, but few in number. There are no cellars, closets, pantries or other conveniences in which the true housekeeper glories. There are no outbuildings, stables or other places necessary to country life. There is a wide porch or corridor at the front and rear of each house into which the horses are ridden, and frequently other less agreeable domestic animals have the freedom of the corridor. Water is carried from the nearest stream, which may be a quarter of a mile, while a little digging at the very door, perhaps, would be rewarded with good water.

The Japanese are noted for the "civilized emptiness" of their homes, but the residents of Honduras can surely rival them in this regard. Of furniture there is next to nothing. Two or three plain, unvarnished tables, some rude benches, with a few chairs made by the carpenter of the nearest village, and some cruel beds, comprise the interior furnishings of some of the best country houses. Beds deserve special mention. Nothing on earth is as hard as a Central American bed. It is made by stretching an untanned cowhide, as tight as a drumhead, over an iron or wooden frame. On this couch, destitute of mattress, with a sheet below and a blanket above, one is expected to "lie down to pleasant dreams."

The platano and the hammock are largely responsible for the backward condition of Honduras. The platano grows almost without care and furnishes food on which a native can comfortably subsist year in and year out, should he have nothing else. With his bread thus ready made to his hand, as it were, he sees no reason for exerting himself, particularly, when his hammock invites him to repose. The hammock is much used in that country, where it is wide, long and luxurious.

CHAIN OF WOOD.

A Pretty Experiment for Boys with a Knack for Whittling.

A pretty experiment, which boys with a knack for carpentering will find interesting, is the making of a chain out of a single block of wood. This is how the feat is accomplished. This diagram almost explains itself.

Take a piece of very soft wood an inch square by six inches long. Out of this cut a piece like that shown in

A WOODEN CHAIN.

Fig. 2. Then mark off the links as shown in Fig. 3. Hold this piece sidewise and cut out the darker portions shown in the illustration. Do the same thing on the other side of the piece. A small bit of wood will be left between each of the links. Cut through this, and they will loosen. Round out the pieces and sandpaper them down. The illustration shows only three links, but a chain of about 24 links can be made easily, and it will serve many useful purposes.

MAJOR GEORGE J. OAKES.

The New Commander-in-Chief of the Union Veterans Union.

Major George J. Oakes, the new Commander-in-chief of the Union Veterans' Union, is a native and resident of Rochester, N. Y. He was born in 1838, and educated in the Rochester public schools and at St. Charles College, near Baltimore. He was in the mercantile business when the war began, and promptly volunteered as a private in the Thirteenth New York and was with the regiment in the first battle of Bull Run. He served with distinction throughout the war, became a Captain of the One Hundred and Fifty-first New York Regiment, was brevetted Major for conspicuous gallantry on the field and was honorably discharged in 1865. Returning to Rochester, he resumed his mercantile pursuits. He is a prominent musician of Rochester, is a choir leader and a quartet singer.

Great Cat for Water.

A San Francisco fisherman has a cat that is said to love water as much as other cats love a rug in front of a grate fire. When he goes fishing the cat lies quietly in the boat and does not appear to mind how wet he gets. When the seine with its load of live fish is hauled in the cat seizes the largest one, trying to shake it as he would a mouse. He does it entirely for sport, as he never attempts to eat the large fish, and lives almost wholly on the smaller ones used for bait.

The Hon. J. K. Spear a former greenback, will speak at Franklin Center to-night, Oct. 18, and at Jackson Center to-morrow night, Oct. 19.

Home Market Fallacy.

Republicans say all we need to make prices of what we produce, high, is a home market. What nonsense! Try it Auburn makes windmills, buggies, hubs and hardwood lumber. Now, according to republican teachings Auburn should consume all this herself. Now as most of our manufacturers believe in this "home market plan," let them stop and think how it would work. The Kiblinger factory makes on an average 5,000 buggies and carriages a year. The two other factories, Zimmerman's and Eckhart's, make at least as much more. Now, would it make the price on these buggies higher to be compelled to sell the 10,000 all in Auburn? This is "home market" in a nutshell. Give us a market outside of the "home market." Wheat is down because we cannot sell our increasing crops abroad. Our people have always consumed as much at home as they could.

Ridiculous Republicans.

We looked over our republican exchanges and found them full of stories of how prosperous we had been "under republican rule from 1860 to 1890." We had gained in wealth, in acres of cleared land, in the bushels of wheat, corn and potatoes raised, had gained in sheep, in hogs, in cattle, in population, and all, they said, because the country had been under republican rule. And now, as the democrats are coming into power, it was plain, they said, that this era of prosperity was over. We would raise less wheat, corn, potatoes, etc. to the acre, a given factory would turn out less buggies, or windmills, or articles of any kind they were making, all on account of democrats. Population would not increase, for they evidently believe no more babies will be born now. Sheep industry will die out, as there will be no more lambs. Factories will close, as no more cloth will be needed when people go naked under a democratic rule. This is, in substance, what will take place in the view they take of it. If their talk don't mean this, what does it mean? It is all ridiculous'

Coming Lecture To be here November 21.

Hon. John H. Littlefield, of New York, (formerly law student of Abraham Lincoln), will lecture under the auspices of the Epworth League, in the M. E. church on Wednesday evening, Nov. 21. His subject will be "Personal Recollections of Abraham Lincoln." He was a law student, as well as for many years a warm personal friend, of the "Martyr President," and is better qualified to speak of him than any other living lecturer.

The Waterloo Fair.

The week was not a very good one in point of weather, but after a bad Monday and Tuesday, it came up fair for Wednesday forenoon, and turned bad again in the afternoon. But Thursday, there was a good attendance and fair weather, Friday it was bad weather again, a cold drizzle a part of the day, keeping most of the people away. There were good races Thursday and Friday, and the displays were all about as good as usual. This was especially true in Agricultural Hall, where Uncle George Denison was in charge as usual. The apples, peaches, pears, quince and grapes, were fine and very abundant, being a much better display than people had expected this year. Mr. Denison reports to the COURIER 358 entries in fresh fruit and 301 in canned fruit and other canned goods, jellies, etc, which is up to the usual display. Owing to disagreeable weather, we did not see much of the stock. There was the usual amount of stands for the sale of almost everything, and a few good shows. The irrepressible Billy Stewart, of Ft. Wayne, was there with a new attraction. This time he had the wild animal that was caught over east of Ft. Wayne, in the edge of Ohio, not long ago. It had been killing hogs, and other small stock and scaring the people half to death. It is in fact a strange animal, resembling the peccary, a wild animal of hog kind found in South America. It may be one of these, escaped from some menagerie and having grown to an unusual size and of more than ordinary ferocity, may have caused the farmers, in whose neighborhood it was caught, a good deal of trouble. It is a fierce fellow, at any rate, and drew a good many dimes into Billy's pocket. The most complete display on the grounds, however, was of candidates all parties being pretty fully represented. Altogether, the fair would have been as big as ever, if they had good weather. We should not fail to note the success of Harry Chamberlain, as starter in the races or the politeness and painstaking of President Lockhart, Secretary Johnson, Treasurer Leas, Henry Hood, and in fact all connected with the management. They left nothing undone to make things pleasant for all. We learn that the receipts will cover all expenses.

Indiana's Last Regiment.

The South Whitley News has this interesting item:

The 34th Indiana regiment, which held a reunion at Alexandria last week, was the last regiment mustered out of the service of the war for the union. "The reason of this," says Col. J. O. Hardesty, a member of the regiment, "was that when peace was declared it was at Brownville, Texas, opposite the city of Matamora. At the time Maximillian was emperor and a war was in progress in Mexico to overthrow him. This made it imperative to garrison the border. The regular army had been distributed through the central south, leaving no troops available to go to the Rio Grande and relieve the Indiana men. The regiment was compelled to remain on duty there until February, 1866, nearly a year after the war was over, and the army had gone to their northern homes.

Almost a Fatality.

Ligonier Banner.

Last Saturday the Lake Shore elevators was the scene of what might have been a terrible catastrophe. Edward Miller, Ira Albright and Arthur Post, all of Elkhart, were engaged in fumigating the bins to kill the weevil that has lately infested the elevators. A large crock containing sulphuric acid had been placed in one of the bins and some other preparation had been added when a dense vapor arose. Before the men could get away they were overcome by the fumes, but Miller managed to crawl to the opening near the engine house and in his efforts to get away he fell about fifteen feet, where he was found by Lee Graffis. He was able to tell what had occurred, when his companions were rescued, unconscious and nearly dead. It is safe to say that if Miller had not fallen into the engine room all would have died of asphyxiation. Miller was badly hurt by the fall, striking upon his hand.

Court.

We were too crowded last week, to get in the court news, but try it again now Work has been going in fair shape, much of it being unimportant steps taken in settling estates. Drusilla Conrad, formerly Drusilla Shull, was allowed a divorce from Henry Conrad and custody of the children. A. Hablawetz, guardian for Clara Countryman filed a report, and was continued in charge two years Same report for John Heitz, guardian of Calvin Heitz. Peter Dittmars made a report as guardian of Susan West. Ruth Babb was appointed administrator of the estate of the late Thomas Bubt. Berhalter Bros. had a claim of $35 allowed against the estate of the late John Buchanan, of Fairfield. Albert Buchana, administrator. James R. Duncan was discharged as guardian of Rebecca Rainer, she being of age. Worthy Baxter was admitted to the bar. Sarah and Charles Baker were divorced. The case of Dick vs. Grand Rapids road, was dismissed. Lyman Lockwood's trouble with the Long Distance Telephone Co. was settled, by appointing Hon. S. S. Shutt, Talma Rummel and Henry Aldrich to appraise the damages for crossing Lockwood's farm. They fixed on $125. W. S. Dancer made a report as administrator of Mary A. Gragg, and was continued to next May term.

Divorces were granted to Arvilla and Charles Hogel, Hattie and George Hessler, Sarah and C. F. Rogers, Nathan and Tracy Elliott, Sarah and Charles Baker, and the divorce case between Richard and Stella Haskins was dismissed.

The Dispatch on Taxes.

In its article last week, the Dispatch did an injustice to some at least, of those it claimed had paid no taxes. We give elsewhere, Sheriff Ralston's statement of the taxes he has paid each year since 1869, which shows he has never been delinquent. It will be seen that the later taxes are in his wife's name, or her and his together. The facts are, she has property of her own from her family, and of course it is proper to have it in her name.

In such cases, it is always the customs to have the husband's personal tax put in the tax book along with hers, as he pays it altogether. In this way, it happens that Ralston's name is not in the list, but he pays it all. He is over 50 and pays no poll. Surveyor VanAuken's case is the same. When he bought the piece of ground he lives on, he had the deed in his wife's name, as she was seventeen years younger than himself, and would likely survive him, and with grown up children, it would be a wise provision for her. So his name is not on the list. But his taxes have never been delinquent. He pays taxes in Steuben on property of his own. We presume there are some of the others of both parties, named in the Dispatche's article, who have the same injustice done them. We feel Mr. Campbell did not intend to mislead. Yet this is just what he has done. Our two articles will explain all as far as we have investigated. But we had not time to examine books further. It is our belief that Mr. Crimmins has been left off the list by the assessor, as he has lost a leg, and is not liable to a poll tax.

A WOMAN WITH WHISKERS!

Is no more a curiosity than a man who wears clothes out of style and whose personal appearance would indicate that he was too lazy to wash his feet. Don't get into a rut. Spruce up; wear decent clothes; dress warm, and you will feel "More like a Man" and people will look at you and say, "that man has got a raise in his salary." It is not the highest priced clothes that is necessary to make a man look "Dressed Up." We have a nice long Frock Clay Weave suit for $11 50, that will make you look like a dude. We can fit you out from Head to Foot in the latest thing in Clothing the market affords. Our stock was never more complete than at the present time. Undeawear for men and boys. A whole suit of underclothes for 50 cents. Shirts from 35 cents to $1.50. We want to call special attention to our line of Neckwear which takes in everything in the new stuff. Our Glove Line at this time of the year is a very important feature in our furnishing trade, which includes a full line of Kid and Mochas in both gloves and mittens, lined and unlined, Jerseys, Buckskin, Oil Tanned Goat, Horse Hide, Moose, Wool, Canvas, Driving and Working. Hats and Caps in any style or color. The Dutch shape in plushes are the things. If you want to inspect a complete line of Furnishings we invite you to come and see us, knowing that we can suit the keenest tastes in showing you our immense line. Reefer Overcoats for the children in numerous patterns in prices ranging from $3.50 to $8

A CORRECTION.

AUBURN, IND., October 15th, 1894.

To WALLACE B. CAMPBELL,
Editor of "Auburn Di patch."

Below please to find a statement by me made from the records in the Treasurer's Office, in DeKalb County, in the State of Indiana, as taken therefrom, from the records in the office of the Treasurer of said county from the year 1869 to date, except the corporation taxes of the Town of Auburn, in said county, which I have not included therein, as the same was not paid to the Treasurer of said county, but was paid to the Marshal of the Town of Auburn, of which I have made no statement, showing the taxes paid by me since said year 1869, and of which no one else has paid any part, which you will please to publish in confutation of an article appearing in your paper of last week, stating that "The name of George C. Ralston does not appear upon the Tax Duplicate."

Previous to my assessment on April 1st, 1893, I had drawn upon my salary the sum of $333 64, instead of $2,200 00 as stated in your said issue.

I do not desire to enter into any controversy with you, but simply to place the facts before the public, as I presume you are desirous of doing, in order to not place anyone in a false light. You will therefore please to publish the following, without any comments, and oblige me.

When you go to Ft. Wayne, and arriving there, inquire for the leading furniture and carpet house, you will be told to go to the Foster Furniture & Carpet Co. By virtue of the largest and most stylish stock and by reason of lower prices for well made goods than can be found elsewhere, that establishment has secured the run of the best trade of that city.

The parties living along Railroad street have been putting in the sidewalk that was called for by the town board. This gives children on the west part of town a good walk to the school house. There has never been a walk leading south from West Seventh at any point west of Van Buren street as the way that part of town was platted, there were no streets going north and south till one reaches Railroad street.

Mrs. G. W. St. Clair came down Saturday, from her home in Branch county Mich. and will visit her relatives a week or two. She is a daughter of the late Henry Lindorfer, of Jackson township, and after staying over night with Charlie Pommert's family here she went to her mother's home for a few days. Then she will visit her husband's father, Ex-Sheriff J. C. St. Clair at Waterloo, and his brother A. M. St Clair near there, as well as the other relatives. They have bought a nice farm in Branch county and like the country there very well.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly." Sold by Robbins and McCord druggist Auburn Ind. 34tf Ligonier Banner:—We dropped into J. L. Dunning's grocery store Tuesday and while there the sugar question was discussed by several customers who were present. The declaration was made that sugar is much cheaper now than it was in October of last year, whereupon Mr. Dunning hunted up his bills for that month of 1893, which disclosed the fact that he had paid at that time one cent more per pound for the same grade of sugar than he was called upon to pay now. The difference was even greater in September as sugar fell a little in October. Sugar is at least a cent cheaper just now than it was in September 1893, when the McKinley bill was in force.

The Sons of Veterans have organized a drum corps, the final arrangements having been completed last Thursday evening. They expect to make themselves proficient in that line. The object of the organization, is, first to furnish martial music for the Camp on any occasion when music may be needed, and in the second place, to furnish music for G. A. R. on such occasions as that body may need. Of course, they will be ready to help out the general public whenever they are not especially engaged in the two lines for which the organization is more especially designed. Flora Hoffman and Nellie Barns returned Monday evening from Indianapolis. They were full of enthusiastic words for the great Christian Endeavor meeting they went there to attend. The most perfect arrangements had been made for their convenience and comfort, the city being conspicious with white caps, that designated the young men and women who were to take them in charge and care for them. The meetings were superb, and of course they fell in love with the beautiful city that is our state capital. While there, they were joined by James Hoffman and his wife, who came down from Purdue, partly to meet Miss Hoffman, and partly to see the game of foot ball between Purdue and Butler. The two girls were guests of Mrs. and Mrs. Nick Ensley and were royally entertained, of course.

R. W. Cobb returned from the East on Saturday from a trip over 300 miles on his Chainless. When leaving Auburn the cyclometer or mile register on his wheel had recorded 3946 miles. On the return trip 4206 miles. He made two "century runs" one each way. The first Oct. 8 from Bryan to Fremont, O., via Wauseon, Napoleon, Grand Rapids, Bowling Green and Stony Ridge 111½ miles; elapsed time 12 hours. 30 minutes; actual time 9 hours 5 minutes. Weather was cloudy and half the distance the roads were very rough and of a corduroy nature. Returning, Mr. Cobb left Berlin Heights, O., at 6 a. m., October 12, and clipped off 102 miles to Delta, running by way of Norwalk, Bellevue, Clyde, Fremont, Stony Ridge, Perrysburg, Maumee, Holland and Swanton. The last 35 miles was against a heavy head wind and in the rain. Last 16 miles he pumped over the railroad ties. At Swanton, he stopped for supper, at which point he had covered 96 miles. He then rode to Delta, 6 miles, in the driving rain, where he arrived at 6:20. He was surrounded by many, curious to see the wheel without a chain which was all covered with mud except the gears or running parts, which were unaffected. Elapsed time for this run, 12 hours, 20 minutes; actual time, 9 hours 15 minutes. While Mr. Cobb has not made a business of riding during the past season, it has been his business to do considerable of it.

Pocket Picked.

At the Waterloo fair the business of picking pockets, seems to have started anew. It flourished several years ago, and at one time seemed to be almost beyond control. But we got a Pinkerton man one season and he cleaned them out so thoroughly, that they have hardly recovered yet. But there have been cases, now and then. Last week, Mrs. Ed. Ross, of this place, had an experience on the fair ground, Thursday with the long-fingered "industrials." Some one jostled against her in such a way as to attract her attention, and soon after, he did this again. Then the man walked off. A few minutes later she found that her pocket book was gone. She had noticed a scar on the man's neck, and she started to look for him. Meeting her brother, J. J. VanAuken, she told him to shadow that man, which he did. The man noticed him, and turning about, denied having picked her pocket, and offered to let them search him. This they did, but found nothing. Later on however, Mrs. Ross had sheriff Ralston and H. E. Trout help her, to get the man again, as she felt sure he had her money. This time he went to some comrade and got the money and paid her back. From some suspicious actions they thought he had given his stealings over to a man named Carpenter, from Pleasant Lake, the same man who brought that suit against Frank VanAuken a few years ago for whipping Carpenter's child. At all events he seemed thick with the gang. Mrs. Ross feels grateful to Sheriff Ralston, H. E. Trout, J. J. VanAuken and Martin Marsh, for their timely help, in bringing the thief to time.

BUSINESS MEN TALK.

EFFECTS OF THE NEW TARIFF LAW ON PRICES.

The General Tendency Is Toward Lower Prices or a Better Quality of Goods For Prices Formerly Paid For Inferior Goods.

[Peru (Ind.) Sentinel.]

Four years ago The Sentinel laid before its readers statements of a number of our leading merchants as to the effect of the McKinley law upon the prices of merchandise and upon trade generally. That law having been repealed, and a new tariff law enacted by the last congress to take its place, we have thought proper to interview the same merchants as to the effect of the new law on prices and upon trade in their various lines. We herewith publish the statements of 1890 and 1894, in parallel columns, and submit them to our readers without comment, leaving them to make their own deductions from the statements of the persons interviewed, all of whom are well known leading business men of our city:

1890
John S. Lenhart, of the firm of Lenhart & Sons, said:
"Houses with which I do business have sent out notification that owing to the passage of the McKinley bill many goods in our line have been advanced. Looking glasses have advanced from 10 to 25 per cent. Coffin trimmings of all kinds have advanced from 10 to 15 per cent. All kinds of upholstered goods are demanding an increased price on account of the increased price of the material used in upholstering. Varnish has also been placed up a notch. I have noticed that the general tone of all manufactured goods is upward and yet I haven't heard of manufacturers paying any more to their hands. There is general dissatisfaction all over the country among business men with the effects produced on trade."

John S. Lenhart, of the firm of Lenhart & Sons, says:
"The passage of the new tariff law has had the effect of cheapening all goods in our line and of stimulating trade. Trade has improved perceptibly within the past month and as the new schedules of wholesale prices have enabled us to buy our goods cheaper than formerly we can afford to and do sell them cheaper. The placing of lumber on the free list will not benefit furniture manufacturers as much as users of pine lumber and other timber and lumber in building, but it will have a tendency to make furniture cheaper. The heavy cuts in plushes, velvets, carpets and other materials used in upholstering, also the reductions on glue, paints, oils, varnishes, plateglass, etc., will enable retailers to sell a much better quality of goods at the same price they were formerly compelled to charge for inferior goods and to sell the inferior goods at a less price than under the McKinley law."

J. W. Ellis, of the firm of Ellis, Stiles & Co., said:
"There has been an advance in all kinds of material going into the manufacture of carriages and buggies. Manufactories in this country have advanced their prices. The cloth and finishings have all advanced. Axles and steel tires are higher since the passage of the bill. An increased price for material means an increased price for the finished product, which means fewer sales. Fewer sales means the employment of fewer hands. I regard it as a most unjust measure. It affects all classes and the consumer has to pay it all in the long run. When will the people have the sand and moral courage to rectify the wrongs that are being heaped upon them?"

J. W. Ellis, of Ellis, Stiles & Co., carriage manufacturers, says:
"The passage of the wool schedule of the new tariff law has enabled us to give our customers a better grade of cloth in trimming for the same price they formerly paid for lighter goods. We can now give them cloth weighing 18 ounces to the yard for the same price we formerly had to charge for 16 ounce cloth; about the same for 16 ounce that 14 ounce cloth cost under the McKinley law. Reductions in cotton fabrics will also enable us to use better and heavier grades of enamel goods, buckrams, etc., without increasing the cost of finished vehicles. Free lumber will probably enable manufacturers of hubs, wheels and bodies to make lower prices to vehicle manufacturers, as will also reductions in paints, oils, varnishes, leads, etc., as well as iron and springs. The result will be a very much better grade of vehicles for the same prices formerly paid under a high tariff system for ordinary work."

Beck & Reilly, when approached on this question, said:
"There has been an advance in many things handled by us and nearly all kinds of hardware have already advanced since the passage of the bill. Tin was advanced from $10.50 per box to $12.50 per box, and solder from 15 cents to 18 cents per pound. Of course the man who now has a tin roof put on his house or desires anything in the tin line will have to pay the extra cost. We regard it as a very unjust measure, and it will fall heavily upon the consumer."

John H. Beck, hardware, stoves and tinware:
"Prices of foreign cutlery will be much lower than under the McKinley law by reason of the reduction of import duties on the same. Tin and manufacturers of tin will also be lower for the same reason. Builders' hardware will probably remain about the same as at present. Nails will be some lower; glass will also be considerably cheaper; paints will tend downward, as will nearly all goods in my line. Builders will notice quite a difference in the cost of tin roofing from the rates that we have been compelled to charge for the past three or four years. They will be doubly benefited by the new law, as they will be able to buy a much better quality of roofing tin for less money than they have heretofore had to pay for poor tin."

Ed T. Gray, when approached on the question, said:
"I haven't investi- ed the subject very h, but from notices ed from wholesale houses I have informed that er has been in- sed from 10 to 15 cent. I am certain at all kinds of cloth will be higher, especially in plush goods. Horse blankets will be higher, but as I bought all my goods in that line before the bill took effect, prices will not be materially changed for the present at least."

Ed T. Gray, dealer in vehicles, harness, robes, horse furnishings, etc.:
"The new tariff law tends to make all goods in my line cheaper. I bought a bill of goods last week 3½ per cent less than I was compelled to pay for the same class of goods under the McKinley law. In fact, the bill I laid in last week is a better grade of goods than we were offered under the old system of high tariff. My customers will, of course, get the benefit of the reduced wholesale rates, because having purchased my stock at lower figures I can make my regular margin of profit and still sell them at lower prices than those which have prevailed heretofore."

1890
Julius Falk said:
"The goods in my line that are bought from this time on will be very much dearer, especially is this so in worsted goods. The retailers will be compelled to charge the consumer the advance in price. I have been keeping an eye on the McKinley bill and to forestall a rise in prices bought $10,000 worth of goods which I now have on my shelves, and over $25,000 worth of staple goods for next summer. I have now lying in Chicago more worsted goods than any 10 retailers in Chicago have, which I bought before the bill affected them. Yes, it will be hard on the fellows who buy now."

Julius Falk, the clothier and gents' furnisher:
"My business for the months of August and September of this year has been much heavier than during the same period of last year, but not up to the mark of 1892. I am selling woolen suits, overcoats, hats, caps and underwear lower than ever before and the demand seems to be for the better grades of goods. The reason why customers are buying the higher grades of goods this year is because they can get the best in the market for about the same prices that we have had to ask them for inferior goods heretofore. There can be no question but what the removal of the import duties from raw wool will have the effect of lowering prices and of improving the quality of woolen fabrics at the same time. There is a marked tendency toward improvement in the style, quality and finish of all kinds of clothing. The sharp competition among manufacturers has naturally brought this about. Footwear and rubber goods have changed but little in price, but the same rule of better values for the same money applies to those lines as well as to all others in which I deal."

1890
Felix Levy of the French Bazaar said:
"I have received many circulars from wholesale houses in which they refuse to fill orders at the old prices. Plushes have advanced from 30 to 35 per cent, and those that cost $5 per yard before the enactment of the law are now selling at from $6.50 to $6.75 per yard. The goods affected most are of a cheaper nature, those selling from 15 to 50 cents per yard—that is, woolen goods and cashmeres. We handle a corset that formerly cost $24 per dozen, and we are now informed that they will cost us $27. The bill is a hard blow to the merchants, as it will be a difficult matter for them to make their customers believe that the advance was made necessary by the new law. It will work great hardship."

Felix Levy of the French Bazaar:
"As a result of the reductions on cotton goods domestic cottons are selling 25 per cent lower than under the old system. Prices of woolens remain about the same, as the woolen schedule of the new tariff law will not go into effect until Jan. 1, 1895. After that date I think prices of the cheaper grades of woolen goods will fall 25 per cent and of the finer grades about 12½ or 15 per cent. The general tendency of prices on all goods in our line where the tariff rates have been reduced will be downward. The present stocks were purchased under the McKinley law and prices will probably not change materially until after Jan. 1. Then I anticipate an adjustment of retail prices to correspond with the new law. There is no doubt but what better goods can be sold under the new law after all the schedules are in force for the same money inferior goods have brought under the high tariff laws."

1890
Hugh McCaffrey, when asked what goods handled by him would be affected most, said:
"I have not had the time to investigate all the phases of the bill, but from what I have learned from word sent out from the large wholesale houses, I can say that queensware, glassware, cutlery and tinware will all be made higher. The American factories are all stiffening up their prices on account of the McKinley bill. The consumer will have to pay the advance."

Hugh McCaffrey, of McCaffrey & Co., grocers:
"I have been too busy lately at the mill and with other matters to carefully examine all of the schedules of the new tariff law bearing upon the grocery business. I can say, however, that word received from home manufacturers, jobbers and wholesalers indicate that there will be reductions in many lines. By reference to our advertisement in this issue of The Sentinel your readers can see for themselves what we are doing in the way of cutting prices. There is no guess work about our statements in our advertisement. They are the prices we are offering our customers. There are many phases of the grocery business which would require much space to speak of in detail. A list of the prices at which we are offering goods tells the story."

George C. Miller, of the firm of Shirk & Miller, said:
"There can be no question that the new law is having a very decided tendency to increase the prices of many lines of goods. Especially is this true in worsted goods, tin, carpets, queensware and boots and shoes. While I do not think that the bill is brought to bear so heavily on leather goods as upon some other classes, the tariff on the raw material going into the manufacture of them greatly enhances the prices. I am in favor of free raw material for the manufactories. Most of our merchants made their purchases before the bill went into effect, and its effects will not be felt until the merchants go to restock."

George C. Miller, of Shirk & Miller:
"Business is considerably better than it was last year, but not up to 1892. The general tendency of the new tariff bill is to lower prices of goods in nearly all lines. We are selling woolen goods, such as flannels, blankets, dress goods and woolen clothing, underwear, carpets, hats and caps, etc., cheaper than we did last year. There has been a disposition on the part of manufacturers for some time past to improve the style, quality and finish of goods, which, taken in connection with the gradual drift toward lower prices, enables merchants to sell their customers a better quality of goods for the same prices they have been compelled to charge them for inferior goods in times past. Cotton fabrics have been steadily declining in price for some time and are now selling at low figures. There has been very little, if any, change in the cost of footwear, but we are able to give better values for the same money. Queensware is selling at a lower scale of prices than formerly. The reduction of duties on imported queensware has materially reduced retail prices of foreign ware. Prices of tin have declined and will probably continue to do so. American manufacturers are constantly improving their methods of manufacture and the result will be a higher grade of tin for about the same or lower prices than tin has sold for in the past. Builders' hardware was never so cheap as now. To sum up, I am of the opinion that there is a universal tendency to improvement in the quality of all goods. There is less shoddy put upon the market each year. The natural result will be consumers will get better goods for their money than formerly."

It will be seen by reference to the various interviews that the consensus of opinion is that the new system will result in a cheapening of goods and improvement in their quality. "A condition devoutly to be wished."

The Sentinel has always contended that high tariff meant high prices for necessaries, and we think the unbiased statements of facts of persons in a position to know whereof they speak fully supports that view of the matter.

Seeing the Effects.

Democratic prospects grow brighter each day. The party has weathered the storm of a Republican panic and its ranks are closing. The fainthearted have taken new courage as they begin to see the good effects of legislation for the whole people.—Frankfort Crescent.

The Democratic Argument.

Twenty-five to 50 per cent reduction in the price of all garments, whether for male or female, is the Democratic argument that is finishing all that is left of protection.—Evansville Courier.

LABOR'S CHANCE.

Its Opportunity as Seen From a Non-Partisan Standpoint.

"The next legislature is sure to be Democratic. It would take a Republican majority of 50,000 in the state to wrest the legislature from Democracy. This being true, with the additional fact that every law upon the statute books in this state favorable to labor was placed there by the Democratic party, it would seem the part of wisdom to aid in the selection of legislators of that political faith who are known to be favorable to labor interests. It is a proposition which needs no argument. Union men who sincerely desire the enactment of just laws favorable to labor will appreciate the wisdom of conciliating rather than antagonizing influences which are bound to control in the next legislature.—Indianapolis Labor Signal.

A Continual Object Lesson.

The new tariff law in all its parts will itself be a continual object lesson to voters, teaching them that the imposition of needless taxes can never benefit the people as a whole, but that every removal of them is a national boon.—Harper's Weekly.

THE HARRISON PANIC

LAST YEAR'S DEPRESSION THE RESULT OF HIS ADMINISTRATION.

Under His Leadership the Surplus Was Dissipated and the Treasury Bankrupted—The Nation's Wealth Squandered on the Bondholders—The Story of Harrison's Shameful Administration.

Ex-President Harrison recently delivered a speech in Mr. Wilson's district in which he said: "If you have felt the effects of the depression; if you think more of those effects and prefer not to lead the country through the slough of despondency, show it by defeating Wilson."

The country was in the "slough of despondency" before Harrison left the white house. Who steered it into the "slough?" Who foundered the ship of state by running it into the quagmire? are pertinent and important questions for discussion in the present canvass.

That President Harrison was an incompetent or reckless pilot, to use very mild terms, will clearly appear from an examination of the records of the treasury department which his subordinates made. He must stand by these records, and they show that he was responsible for the financial panic. It was a Harrison panic, deliberately brought upon the country. Every month the treasury issues a debt statement. The form of this statement was deliberately changed three times while he was president, for what purpose will be discussed later.

Juggling With the Statement.

By a comparison of the debt statement issued March 1, 1889, with the one issued March 1, 1893, it will appear that the same items which are included in the available cash in the treasury March 1, 1889, shows that Cleveland turned over to Harrison the fabulous surplus of available funds of three hundred and thirty million three hundred and forty-eight thousand nine hundred and sixteen dollars and twelve cents ($330,348,916.12). In addition to this enormous sum there was nearly $400,000,000 in the treasury on March 1, 1889, which was held to pay gold, silver and currency certificates then outstanding, the total amount of cash in the treasury being $723,666,555.56.

When Harrison surrendered to Cleveland on March 4, 1893, the same items which made up the $330,000,000 available cash on March 1, 1889, amounted to only one hundred and sixty-two millions four hundred and ninety-three thousand nine hundred and twenty dollars and sixty-eight cents ($162,493,920.68). The sacred $100,000,000 of gold reserve is counted in both amounts.

It will thus be seen that Harrison turned over to Cleveland in 1893, $167,854,995.34 less available funds than he received from Cleveland in 1889. A large part of the surplus had vanished. In 1887 Cleveland saw that the enormous accumulation of surplus was a menace to business and the result of unjust tariff taxation. He proposed to stop unjust and oppressive tariff taxation, but a Republican senate objected, and the surplus continued to grow in amount.

The ship of state, with its rich cargo, accumulated by grinding tariff taxation and the economy of Cleveland's first administration, passed to the control of Pilot Harrison and commenced its voyage. It soon encountered pirates, and before the cruise ended it was in the mud, quagmire or "slough" as Harrison terms it. It is interesting to examine the logbook and see who attacked the rich treasure while Harrison was at the helm.

Helping the Bondholders.

First came the bondholders, those favorites of the Republican party. During the first seven months of Harrison's administration $66,954,500 was expended in the purchase of bonds at a premium. See Windom's report for 1890, page 27.

But this did not satisfy the bondholders, or Harrison, and the raid on the surplus was continued through 1890 and 1891, when it ceased only because there was no more surplus. During three fiscal years—1889-'90-'91—the enormous sum of $47,997,807.32 was paid to the bondholders as premiums on bonds purchased. See recent publication of coinage laws by the senate, page 313.

The ship in 1890 would have run into the "slough" if John Sherman had not come to its rescue with his "makeshift" silver law, which provided that the trust fund for the redemption of national bank notes should be turned into the available cash in the treasury, and July 1, 1890, $58,388,475.75 of this fund was transferred to the available cash. Thus Harrison was enabled to continue the purchase of bonds at a premium. But the monthly debt statements began to show a depleted treasury, and in order to make a better showing on paper resort to juggling with the statements commenced. Treasurer Nebeker, Harrison's special friend from Indiana, in his report for 1890, page 7, says: "Since June, 1890, the form of the published monthly statement of assets and liabilities has been twice revised." On page 9 he says it was "recast." Why it was "revised" and "recast" is plain. If the old form had been continued it would have shown that there was not a dollar of available cash in the treasury. But this was not the last time it was "revised" and "recast" as will appear further on.

The Dime Administration.

Ex-President Harrison said in his speech that "delicacy forbids me to say much of the last admidistration," but for his subordininates he says "that there was an attempt to act for the best interests of all the people." It was a very feeble "attempt."

Was it "for the best interest of all the people" that the public debt statement should be three times "revised" and "recast?" that $30,105,013.25 derived from profits on coinage during the fiscal years 1889 to 1891 should be used to buy bonds at a premium, paying as high as $129 for them, at a time when the treasury was on the verge of bankrupty? and was it "for the best interest of all the people" that $47,997,807.03, collected from "all the people," should be paid out to the few favored bondholders as a premium on their bonds? The enormous surplus turned over by Cleveland, the bank redemption trust fund transferred to the available cash, and the profits on coinage furnished a rich harvest for the bondholders. The tax levied on the people by the tariff laws continued to replenish the depleted treasury. The protected manufacturers wanted some part of the plunder under the Harrison administration.

The McKinley bill was passed in October, 1890, and the receipts from customs fell from $219,523,205.25 in 1891 to $177,452,964.15 in 1892. This had its effect on the cash balance, and, with the billion dollar congress, created consternation in the treasury. Another juggle with the debt statement must be made. Again it must be "revised" or recast," or it would not show a dime of "available cash" in the treasury. The statement for June 1, 1891, gave the net cash balance at $33,349,200.86. This looked like bankruptcy, and July 1, 1891, the statement was "revised" or "recast." Prior to this date the nickels, dimes, quarters and half dollars appeared on the statement as unavailable funds. The nickels, dimes, etc., are now trotted out and made to do duty as available cash, and thus help swell the cash balance. By this transfer the available cash balance was increased to $53,893,808.83. This resort to nickels, dimes, etc., was a humiliating act for the Harrison administration, and properly designates it as the DIME ADMINISTRATION.

The Panic Came.

But business men were not to be fooled by making available funds out of nickels and dimes. Capital became alarmed and the gold stream started across the ocean. Under Harrison the excess of exports of gold over imports was $157,889,803, while under Cleveland's first administration the imports largely exceeded the exports. In the meantime the McKinley act with its vicious provision for paying drawbacks make another drain on the treasury, $8,614,439.14 being the amount repaid importers in 1891 and 1892. [See secretary treasury report of 1892, page 23.]

From July, 1891, until the close of Harrison's administration the treasury was practically bankrupt. The last statement issued March 1, 1893, by Charles Foster, secretary of the treasury, places the net cash balance at $34,128,087.88. The same statement shows that of this amount $11,497,839.74 was nickels, dimes, etc. Harrison started with hundreds of millions and closed with dimes. Verily, he had run the ship into deep mud or a morass or a quagmire, or, as he terms it, a "slough."

He knew, as did his secretary of the treasury, that the government was bankrupt. The latter gave orders to prepare for the issue of bonds; the plates were prepared, but the man who had inherited hundreds of millions and was reduced to dimes haughtily announced "that there should be no increase of the national debt while he was president." He preferred to turn the treasury over in its bankrupt condition and force Cleveland to issue bonds.

Before the close of his administration the ruinous effects of his "miserable makeshift" silver purchasing law, with the bankrupt condition of the treasury, lost the confidence of the world, and millions of our securities were returned. The foundations of the panic had been laid wide and deep, and then the very men (General Harrison being the most prominent) who had laid them commenced their scarecrow work and have kept it up to this day. This may be statesmanship, but if it is the country should pray to be delivered from it. Above every souphouse should be erected the sign, "Harrison Souphouse."

THE HARRISON CAMPAIGN.

Everything In Readiness to Spring the Presidential Boom.

The Benjamin Harrison presidential boom is already on tap for 1896. The bung was driven in last Friday when Benjamin started on his "swing around the circle" in Indiana. He swung in a special train provided by the railroads which want the Indiana tax law repealed so that they may avoid paying their share of the expenses of the state government.

It is understood that Mr. Harrison is not perfectly pleased with the result of his journey through the southeastern part of the state. His itinerary had been extensively advertised and the most earnest efforts had been made by the state and county committees to secure big crowds for him wherever the train stopped. At Evansville, the Mecca of his pilgrimage, a fairly good crowd was gathered, but not nearly so large or so enthusiastic as had been anticipated. This was something of a disappointment in itself. But the ex-president's reception elsewhere was positively discouraging. In many places the crowds (?) at the depots numbered only the ordinary every day depot loungers. In some places at which he had been advertised to speak there was no one at all and the proposed speech-making was abandoned.

The result of this tour was so barren of results that Mr. Harrison is said to seriously contemplate a refusal to make the journey to Fort Wayne, advertised for the latter part of this week. The committee realize that this would be as disastrous an admission of weakness as was Owen's refusal to meet Captain Myers in joint debate, and they are making desperate efforts to induce the ex-president to carry out the programme.

POPULAR SCIENCE.

MEASURED by our time standard, there are forty years of constant daylight, followed by forty years of unbroken night, around the poles of Uranus. And the sun rises in the west and sets in the east there.

LONDON has an annual average rainfall of but 25 inches, Paris 22 inches, Manchester 36 inches, and Edinburgh 38 inches, while Boston shows 46 inches, New York 45 inches, Philadelphia 41 inches, and Chicago 36 inches.

SIR WILLIAM THOMSON is forced to conclude that the hitherto supposed connection between terrestrial magnetic storms and sun spots has no existence, and that the seeming agreement between the periods is a mere coincidence and nothing more.

SHOOTING stars are small cosmic bodies generally weighing only a few grammes, often much less, and composed mainly of iron and carbon. They travel in swarms through space, and, like comets, move around the sun in very elongated eclipses. When these cross the path of the earth, shooting stars become visible. They are not luminous in themselves. Their brilliancy is the result of the transformation of their rapid motion into heat.

PASTEUR, the French scientist, has shown that all fruit and vegetables when undergoing even partial decay, contain bacteria, which, if taken into the stomach may cause disease. Fruit grown near the ground may contain the bachteria of typhoid fever, tetanus, diphtheria or cholera, which may have found their way into the material used for fertilizing, or may have become incorporated with the dried dust. Hence one should never neglect to cleanse fruit. Especial care should be taken with imported or shipped fruit—more particularly that from districts where there are infectious diseases.

Duplicate Streets in Washington.

It is generally supposed that the designation of the streets in Washington by numbers and letters makes perfectly clear in what part of the city a given address can be found. Yet the Baltimore Sun's correspondent complains that Washington is beginning to be as badly off as London in respect of duplicate street names. He says that Washington has five King streets or places, eight Madison streets or alleys, seven thoroughfares named after Grant, six after Lincoln, six after Jackson, six after Washington, five after Pierce, and many duplicates of small streets named after residents of local note, besides six Prospects, eight Pleasant thoroughfares and six "T" streets or alleys, and about 100 duplicates of other names.

PARTY IS HAMPERED.

OBSTACLES ENCOUNTERED BY TARIFF REFORMERS.

Democrats Took the Reins of Government Under Supremely Grave and Difficult Circumstances — Protection and Prosperity Strangers to Each Other.

Legacy Left by Harrison.

No fair man will sit in judgment upon the efforts of the Democratic party who does not recognize that it has been hampered by two great obstacles at every stage of its work, for which it was not itself at all responsible. The first was that its control of the Senate proved to be more nominal than real. In a full Senate it would have had a majority only by the casting vote of the Vice President. With the existing vacancies in the Senate it could spare but one vote, and still have a majority. And no one will deny that party fealty sits rather lightly on more than one Senator accredited to the Democratic party. The second was that the party came into power when the sky was already darkening with the clouds of a financial storm, and that the storm soon broke in great fury, despite the faithful efforts of the administration to allay it.

Of course partisans like Mr. Lodge are quick to charge the new administration with the resulting disasters, but other people have longer and better memories. For months before the Harrison administration ended, the treasury was in great pecuniary straits. New taxes or new issues of bonds would have been needed to meet ordinary running expenditures had not the Sherman law passed to the available cash of the treasury more than fifty million dollars deposited by the national banks for the redemption of their notes, and had not Secretary Foster, by a change of bookkeeping, still further increased that cash by twenty million dollars of token and subsidiary coin, not before treated as a treasury asset. The Secretary himself frankly informed the Ways and Means Committee, just prior to March 4, 1893, that additional income of at least fifty million dollars a year would be needed for the easy running of the government. Moreover, the free gold in the treasury began steadily to diminish from the date of the passage of the Sherman law.

It was under these supremely grave and difficult circumstances that the Democratic party took the reins of government for the inauguration of its "new policy." The long threatened financial panic came, and soon hardened into a severe commercial crisis. But neither was the Democratic party responsible for it, nor for the vicious laws which, if they did not beget the panic and the crisis, certainly quickened their coming and added to their fury. Its work had to be undertaken, therefore, amid those "counsels of calamity" which, as Mr. Burke said, "are seldom wise," and in the face of a rising outcry from partisans like Senator Lodge, who use the logic of Goodwin Sands and Tenderden Steeple, to charge that the physician himself was the cause of the very ills he was called upon to cure or to alleviate.—Hon. Wm. L. Wilson, in North American Review.

Protection and Prosperity Are Strangers.

Two articles in the Investor's Review (London) for September present a gloomy picture of the industrial condition in Australia. It says the farmers in Australia will soon be unable to pay interest on the money they have borrowed. The condition in cities is even worse. Fifty thousand of the 200,000 men in Sydney are out of employment and many are working only on short time and at very low wages. "As many as 10,000 names have been registered at one time as applicants for employment at the Sydney Government Labor Bureau—nearly all workingmen." Melbourne is in a worse condition. "The difficulty of the bulk of the Australian people at present is to obtain the means of existence." The unemployed are often given free railroad passage "just to be rid of them up and get them distributed and out of sight." The country is greatly troubled to provide enough work and food to keep their own unemployed from crime and starvation and to protest against the sending of more unemployed to their districts.

This is the condition of affairs that began soon after protection became thoroughly established in all the colonies about three years ago. And yet we are told by the Republicans of New York State that "The path of protection is the path of prosperity." Of course Australia might have had a depression if all her colonies had refrained from high protection. It is certain, however, that ruin and starvation have followed in the wake of protection in Australian colonies. Another certainty, not in harmony with Republican claim, is that the first colony to drop protection is now the only prosperous one. In 1891 New Zealand adopted free trade and direct taxation and soon became the most prosperous spot on earth. Thousands of unemployed have emigrated from protected continental Australia to free-trade New Zealand, to get out of the path of protection prosperity. Another event that may disturb the Republican theories is the recent decision of New South Wales and Victoria to return to free trade. Victoria has been the most pronounced protectionist colony; but even she has become sick and tired of protection prosperity.

Wages Advancing.

More wage earners in protected industries have had their wages increased since the Wilson bill became law than during the four years of McKinleyism. The American Economist, the protectionists' organ, published a list of twenty-eight firms that claimed to have advanced wages in 1890, 1891, and 1892. The Reform Club investigated all of these advances, and found reductions instead of advances in over twenty cases. In a few cases labor unions succeeded in having the wages of a few years before partly restored. In only one of these cases—of cotton workers at Fall River—were any considerable number of workers concerned, and the rise in wages to a few thousands of these amounted to only about 5 per cent.

Since the passage of the new tariff bill several thousand of the textile workers in Fall River and New Bedford have gained substantial advances in their wages, and thousands of others are still on a strike with fair prospects of winning. In New York City about 10,000 workers on garments, who have been getting from $3 to $6 per week by working twelve, fourteen, or sixteen hours a day in "sweat shops," are now getting from eight dollars to ten dollars a week for working ten hours a day in factories. Protectionists may claim that reduced duties had nothing to do with the case of these "sweaters." Perhaps, but it is strange that the "sweaters" were always unsuccessful during the McKinley times, but were successful as soon as lower duties began to bring about general prosperity.

Wage advances are occurring in many protected industries. The Wool and Cotton Reporter, of Sept. 6, says that the weavers in the employ of Rawitzer Brothers, of Stafford Springs, have secured a 25 per cent. advance in their wages. Other textile workers are now on strike for advances. Of course some reductions are still occurring. The protected manufacturers have become so accustomed to forming trusts and reducing wages that they expect to continue this sort of business indefinitely. Their expectations will probably miscarry. General prosperity will put everybody to work, and laborers can then have some say as to what shall be their compensation.

Senator Hill Accepts.

David B. Hill has accepted the Democratic nomination for governor of New York. His action is a manifestation of superb courage and of party devotion which the people admire. It is a sacrifice to what he regards as a public duty which it would be cowardice to evade. In his speech of acceptance Senator Hill says:

I shall confidently appeal to the plain people of the State who have always sustained me in the past when I have espoused their cause. I shall present to them the issue of Democracy versus plutocracy; the issue of no public taxation except for public purposes; the issue of opposition to the centralization of all powers in the general government; the issue of personal liberty as against religious intolerance; the issue of good government, liberal and just excise laws, economy in public expenditures, the promotion of the dignity of labor and protection for its rights, municipal home rule and the uprooting of corruption and the correction of abuses everywhere, whether in Republican or Democratic localities.

No Room for Protectionists.

"It is to be hoped," says the Rochester Union (Dem.), commenting on the secession of the Louisiana sugar-planters from the Democratic party, "that all the other protectionists in the Democratic party will follow the example of the Louisianians. If they do not get out of their own accord, they will receive a posterior assistance in that undertaking that will not be altogether agreeable. The havoc that they have wrought with the Wilson bill shows that association with them is no more possible than with scorpions."

An Object Lesson.

The Ionia Standard contains the following object lesson on the effect of free wool: Some two months ago, the late James Whitaker, of Pewamo, was desirous of disposing of his large purchase of wool. He invited bids, and the best offer made still left him loser by some twelve hundred dollars. About two weeks ago, and after free wool was a certainty, Mr. Ruel sold Mr. Whitaker's wool at the increased market price, and at a figure which netted the latter a profit of $1,800.

FOR PHOTOGRAPHING METEORS.

Remarkable Cameras for Taking Pictures of the Stars.

It is a common thing nowadays for stars to have their pictures taken. Nearly every little twinkler has been before the camera. The man in the moon has had so many experiences that he has, no doubt, altogether lost interest in the process. Long-tailed comets have had their day as favorites, and scintillating meteors are now in style. A new instrument, called a sextuple photographic telescope, made by a Cleveland firm, has just been placed in one of the Yale observatories, and, though intended for general astronomical photography, began its picture-taking with the appearance of the August meteoric displays. In certain respects, says the Cleveland Leader, it stands unique among photographic telescopes. It has six cameras instead of one, and together they cover a field in the sky equal to that which would be occupied by 2,400 full moons. By its use on the meteors the astronomers of Yale expect to develop some new facts relating to their height. They will place single telescopes at distances of two miles from the sextuple instrument, and by means of electrical connections will photograph simultaneously. The plates will then be compared and calculations will be made with a view to establishing the height of the meteors. In the new astronomy, in which is included astronomical photography, the sensitive plate often has to be exposed from one to three hours to enable it to gather the light from the finest stars and imprint it on the plate. This is necessarily a tedious piece of work for the astronomer, as he must watch the plate very carefully during the entire exposure. The noted astronomer, Dr. W. L. Elkin, of Yale College Observatory, wishing to accomplish more in the same space of time, devised the plan by which six photographic telescopes could be placed in one mounting. Each of these carries a plate which will cover a space of ten degrees square in the heavens. These cameras are so arranged as to have the field of one just reach the edge of the field of its neighbor, so that at one setting the six photographic telescopes will cover a field of 600 square degrees in the sky, and as they are all carried on one equatorial mounting, the care exercised in operating them is no more than if a single telescope was being used. The picture illustrating this unique instrument will be easily understood by any one familiar with astronomical instruments.

hundreds of spectators would guess the scheme. The operator presents a head of paper mache, which he hangs to the ceiling by means of a pair of cords, the lower ends of which pass through two holes in the ears of the head. When the head is adjusted the juggler places a speaking trumpet into the mouth of the unique sphynx, and asks one of the spectators to whisper in his ear any number, which the head will repeat through the speaking trumpet. One of the cords by which the head is hung up is an acoustic tube in perfect disguise. This issues from above the files, descends from the ceiling, penetrates one of the ears, and passes close to the mouth provided with the trumpet.

The spectator whispers the number, the prestidigitator communicates it to his partner up in the flies by means of the fingers of his left hand, the partner repeats it into the acoustic tube, and the sound is carried through the speaking trumpet, the head apparently pronouncing the number, to the great astonishment of the audience.

This design has been carried out by the Masonic lodge of a New England town of 3,500 inhabitants, and is a well-arranged building for the purposes for which it is intended. The ground floor makes a very large and commodious store, being well lighted, ventilated, etc. The front platform and show windows are covered with a slated hood, serving as a protection to the goods displayed from the weather, as well as sheltering the entrances and show windows to the store from the heat and storm. The side front door is arranged so as to divide the store in two if required, as it was considered an excellent place in which to arrange the post-office on the right-hand side of center entrance. There is a cellar under the whole building, with a stairway from store placed under main stairs, and also an outside entrance on the rear, which, as the building stands upon a corner lot, is very convenient and easy of access.

The entrance to lodge rooms is placed on the side front, and is thus isolated from the store. The entrance is protected by a cozy porch, over which the second story is extended, making the necessary recess for organ in lodge room. The lodge room, with its ante-rooms, closets, etc., will at once be seen, by those who are initiated in the mysteries of Masonry, to be all that is desirable, and arranged to suit the requirements of a regularly constituted lodge of A. F. & A. M. The east end of the lodge room is very neat and effective, the recess behind the W. M. having a circle head, with the round stained-glass window placed in the upper part, in which is worked the all-seeing eye and other appropriate emblems. The other windows have transom lights, filled with stained glass, in which is worked such designs as are emblematic of Masonry.

The woodwork is all in pine, finished with varnish, chamfers and cutwork, ebony. The lodge room ceiling is sixteen feet high, the two sides being cut off with the slope of the roof, which forms an excellent surface for the brethren artistically inclined to show what they know about fresco work suited to such a place. The stairs leading from Tyler's lobby extend up to a large room over the ante-room and preparation room, whose ceilings are 10 feet 6 inches high, arranged for storage purposes, and which will be found useful to accommodate the paraphernalia required in working the degree of a chapter. Some of our Masonic friends may say there is something wanting, which always goes with a lodge room for a chapter. To which we would say: be not alarmed; all this has been thought about and provided for; and we would say to those requiring such plans that there is here room for everything required in working every degree known to Masonry in a manner suited to the requirements of a lodge of this kind—and we speak understandingly and from experience.

The construction throughout is of wood, built in the most thorough manner; hard pine floor in store; lodge room floors double and thoroughly deadened; frame sheathed and covered with heavy felt paper, and the roof is of black slate, with ridges of terra cotta; tower finial of iron. The cost of this building complete is $3,000; and we think that no country town having a lodge of Masons can afford to be without such a building as this, as by owning such a building, they are fulfilling one of the tenets of Masonry, besides being a monument of the taste, spirit and liberalty of its founders.

HOSPITALITY OF THE ZULUS.

A Tribute to the Generosity and Courtesy of the African Savages.

On leaving Lamb's, says a writer in the Digger News, we were directed to take a short cut across country, which would bring us on to the new road to Etshowe, but whether it was we mistook the path or the natives of that part of the country think nothing of hill climbing, I don't know; the fact remains that at noon, after four hours' stiff walking through grass up to our necks, and covered with burs and ticks, we found ourselves toiling painfully up an almost perpendicular hill 500 or 600 feet high, with the thermometer showing 110 degrees, and no shade anywhere, and, what was worse, no water. It is true that the view which unfolded itself to our gaze as we ascended higher, higher and higher, was beautiful beyond description, for on every side were hills and valleys teeming with foliage of every hue, while far away on the horizon could be discerned the deep blue of the Indian Ocean. But the beauties of nature are wasted on a man suffering from a parched mouth, and the grandest sight of all, to our state of mind, was when, on attaining the summit, we saw at a short distance from us a large kraal. Our flagging spirits at once revived, for here at least we could get what we so much required—water. Tired as we were, we covered the intervening ground in time worthy of a wanderer's sprint.

Our approach had been observed from the kraal, and when we arrived there were quite a dozen natives waiting to receive us and inquire what we wanted. Our stock of Zulu was limited, but we knew enough to tell them that we were thirsty, on which they brought forth water. Then the head man, who appeared also to be a petty chief, came out of his hut, and, beckoning to us, led us into an open kraal, where he bade us sit down. He seemed pleased to see us, and all his wives and young men perched themselves around us, while he had a huge bowl of Kaffir beer brought out for us to partake of. He also wanted to cook an enormous piece of meat for us, but, on our dissenting, insisted on our snuffing with him. After we had stayed about an hour in the kraal we rose to start off again, when what was our surprise as well as gratification to find that the old fellow had instructed one of his "umfaans" to go with us to show us on to the road, which was some four or five miles away. One frequently hears the Kaffir decried, but I must say that even from white men one rarely experiences such true courtesy as this, and I may here mention that we have met with similar kindliness from all the Zulus we have been brought in contact with.

CHIEF OF PYTHIAN SISTERS.

Mrs. Hattie A. Robinson, of Dayton, Ohio, a Most Interesting Person.

The Supreme Chief of the Pythian Sisters, Mrs. Hattie A. Robinson, of Dayton, Ohio, is a most interesting person. She was the first woman in Ohio to sign an application for a charter in the sisterhood, which was formed in 1888 by permission of the Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias, at the Cincinnati session. Its members are the wives, mothers, daughters, sisters and widows of Knights. At the organization of the Grand Temple in 1889, Mrs. Robinson was elected to the office of Grand Chief, and at the organization of the Supreme Temple at Indianapolis later in the same year she was elected Supreme Senior. She possesses excellent ability as an executive officer, and in other orders has gained high rank.

S. WOODS, M. P.

One of the Foremost Men in English Labor Circles.

One of the foremost men in English labor circles is Mr. S. Woods. He is a member of Parliament and was recently elected Secretary of the Parliamentary Committee of the Trade Union Congress. He is also the Vice President of the Miners' Federation and had charge of most of the recent strikes and negotiations of that great combination. He is a typical miners' leader—drove a pit pony when he was 11, and was in turn pitman, checkweighman and miners' agent. Mr. Woods is now 48 years of age. He is a Baptist local preacher, a Sunday school teacher, a teetotaler and a Gladstonite.

S. WOODS.

And It's Good.

A traveler from the South described recently one of the oldest and most popular dishes in Kentucky, which is known as "burgoo." It is an outdoor concoction and many massive pots of it are said to have simmered over a hot fire in the open at political gatherings in Kentucky. The making of "burgoo" is thus described: In the bottom of the big pot some red pepper pods are thrown; then potatoes, tomatoes and corn are added; then a half-dozen nicely dressed prairie chickens are thrown into the pot, and also a half-dozen of the fattest farmyard chickens are added; then a couple of dozen soft-shell crabs and three or four young squirrels are thrown on the heap. Enough clear spring or well water is poured into the caldron barely to float the varied contents, and then the fire is started. It must be allowed to simmer slowly for six hours, and an old superstition is that it must be stirred with a hickory stick in order to give it the best flavor.

Old "Daddy-Long-Legs."

Almost every one is well acquainted with that extraordinary insect called "daddy-long-legs," which makes its annual first appearance in the month of May. But every one does not know, what Mr. S. H. Scudder has recently abundantly demonstrated, that this strange little creature, towering high above its fellows on its thread-like stilts, is probably, as its name may be thought to imply, a more ancient inhabitant of America than any representative of the human species.

Far back in tertiary time, at the very dawn of the modern world, its ancestors lived in great numbers in that part of the continent which we now call Colorado. The fossil remains of these insects show the characteristic features that mark them to-day, although new species have taken the place of the old; for even daddy-long-legs knows what evolution is, and has attained to something that in his view is, perhaps, a kind of civilized existence suitable to the exigencies of life in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries

Three Suns and an Inverted Bainbow.

The following is taken literally word for word from a rare copy of the Brighton (England) Advertiser of June 6, 1797: "A rare phenomenon is reported from St. Malo. Recently during the afternoon, between the hours of 4 and 5, three perfect suns were seen all in a row above the Western horizon. The sky was very clear at the time, and there was no one who saw the unusual sight that believes it to have been a mirage or other atmospheric illusion. The central sun seemed more brilliant than his two luminous attendants, and between the three there seemed to be a communication in the shape of waves of light composed of all the prismatic colors. At about the same time a rain bow made its appearance at a short distance above the central sun, upside down; that is to say, the two ends pointed toward the zenith, and the bow's neck toward the horizon."

Incredible.

Bridget Hoolohan came over from Ireland, and the day after her arrival in this country, "took service" with a resident of Governor's Island.

"Sure, ma'am, an' phwat's that n'ise?" demanded Bridget of her mistress, as the sunset gun boomed, on the evening of her arrival.

"That? Oh, it's the sunset," replied the lady.

"Is it, indade, ma'am!" ejaculated Bridget, with her hands raised in astonishment. "Why, afther hearin' that n'ise all yure loife, Oi suppose yez'll harrdly belave me, but in Oirland the sun goes down jist as aisy as aisy can be, ma'am, wid niver a bit av a sound!"

An Ample Fund of Pleasure and Health May be derived from an ocean voyage and foreign travel. But before one gets one's "sea legs" on, as the sailor says, the abominable qualms, begotten of sea-sickness, have usually to be gotten over. Delicate people suffer, of course, more than the robust from this ailment, but few sea-travelers escape it. Against the frightful nausea it produces, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a reliable defense, and is so esteemed by tourists, commercial travelers, yachtsmen and mariners. An ailment akin to sea-sickness often afflicts land travelers with weak stomachs. This is often brought on by the jarring of a railway train. Disquietude in the gastric region from this cause is always remedied by the Bitters, which also prevents and cures chills and fever, rheumatism, nervous and kidney trouble, constipation and biliousness.

Apple Exports.

The apple export season opened with a good demand from Great Britain. The European crop has been a very poor one this year, and there is every prospect that our exports will approach nearer the figures of 1892 than those of 1893. In the former year the apple exports from the United States and Canada amounted to 1,204,000 barrels, while in 1893 only 175,000 barrels were exported. The American crop is unfortunately only a half one this year. The Canadian crop is good.

Rapid Development in Alaska.

Some late reports show that Alaska has been rapidly growing in commercial importance. Very few know the size of the United States or appreciate its value. It is as large as England, Ireland, France, and Spain together. It is a spacious territory, filled with mineral wealth and likely in time to become of the first importance to this country. Even now its fisheries stand in the front rank, and its production of gold increases year by year, and in time it may develop into a new California or Australia. Immigration is increasing and the statistics of exports and imports show a steadily growing volume. Business has grown so rapidly that there is a demand for a revision of the statutes and the enactment of a code to govern the concerns of the territory.—Cincinnati Tribune.

The other day she obtained an addition to the number who, after making all necessary arrangements, asked the old lady for her address. "Ya-as, sir, Colonel, mah 'dress, cert'ny, Colonel. Well, I lives on M street in the rear of de alley, not far from de hydrant, whar de boys play ball, and across from de bureau" brewery.—Washington Post.

"Canuck" is a colloquialism for a Canadian. In the Dominion a Canuck is a French Canadian. The word is said to be a corruption of "Connaught," the name given by the French Canadians to the Irish settlers.

ASSIST NATURE a little now and then in removing offending matter from the stomach and bowels and you thereby avoid a multitude of distressing derangements and diseases, and will have less frequent need of your doctor's service.

Of all known agents for this purpose, Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the best. Once used, they are always in favor. Their secondary effect is to keep the bowels open and regular, not to further constipate, as is the case with other pills. Hence, their great popularity with sufferers from habitual constipation, piles and their attendant discomfort and manifold derangements. The "Pellets" are purely vegetable and perfectly harmless in any condition of the system. No care is required while using them; they do not interfere with the diet, habits or occupation, and produce no pain, griping or shock to the system. They act in a mild, easy and natural way and there is no reaction afterward. Their help lasts.

The Pellets cure biliousness, sick and bilious headache, dizziness, costiveness, or constipation, sour stomach, loss of appetite, coated tongue, indigestion, or dyspepsia, windy belchings, "heartburn," pain and distress after eating, and kindred derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels. In proof of their superior excellence, it can be truthfully said, that they are always adopted as a household remedy after the first trial. Put up in sealed, glass vials, therefore always fresh and reliable. One little "Pellet" is a laxative, two are mildly cathartic. As a "dinner pill," to promote digestion, or to relieve distress from over-eating, take one after dinner. They are tiny, sugar-coated granules; any child will readily take them.

Accept no substitute that may be recommended to be "just as good." It may be better for the dealer, because of paying him a better profit, but he is not the one who needs help.

DON'T TOBACCO SPIT AND SMOKE YOUR LIFE AWAY

Ah! what a warning to millions of America's men who are daily tearing down their naturally strong physical and nervous system. Stop a moment! Did you take to tobacco naturally? Well, no! And now you want it—why? Because tobacco tastes good? No, but to gratify a feeling hard to explain, and only satisfied by nicotine.

LIFE'S SHORT! THE USE OF TOBACCO MAKES IT SHORTER. We have not the time, much less the inclination, to preach printed sermons for the sake of making a man quit tobacco, IF HE DOESN'T KNOW THAT IT HURTS HIM. We want to talk to the man who realizes that he is TOBACCO spitting and smoking his life away, who WANTS TO STOP AND CAN'T. Tobacco has produced a diseased condition of the nervous system, and from time to time, you are compelled to feed the never ceasing demands, and you may have, like millions of other men,

A TOBACCO HEART. Nearly every day the newspapers give an account of some eminent man falling suddenly dead at his desk from heart disease. As a rule, no middle-aged man in active business dies thus suddenly unless poisoned, and that poison, in a majority of cases, is tobacco. Meanwhile the slaughter goes on. The press and the pulpit seem muzzled, the majority being participants in the popular vice, and those who are not seem hypnotized and afraid to speak out.

VITALITY NICOTINIZED

Tobacco destroys manhood. Tens of thousands of men feel the darkening clouds of early decline, because nature, not exhausted naturally, but burdened with the taking care of a tobacco-poisoned blood, has slowly and surely succumbed to the frightful effects of tobacco upon the vital forces, that makes strong men IMPOTENT and DESTROYS THEIR MANHOOD.

YOU ASK FOR PROOF.

Test NO-TO-BAC under our Absolute Guarantee; feel how quickly No-To-Bac kills the desire for tobacco, eliminates the nicotine, steadies the nerves, increases the weight, makes the blood pure and rich and tingling with new life and energy. Hundreds of letters from aged men testify to years of tobacco slavery, and tell how No-To-Bac destroyed tobacco's power and brought back feelings long since dead, while sensations of a younger existence once more warmed the cockles of the old man's heart. Gloomy days were gone, the sunshine was brighter; the warble of the little birds all spoke of love; the old man made young again and—happy.

IT IS TRUE, NO-TO-BAC DOESN'T CURE EVERYONE. What's the use of telling a lie to get caught at it? You know and so do we, that the claim "never fails to cure" is a quack lie, and fraud's talk. Our guarantee is clean cut and to the point. Read it. We would rather have the good will of the occasional failure than his money. Beware of the man who says, "Just as Good as NO-TO-BAC." It stands alone, backed by men of national business reputation and integrity, who are personally known to the publisher of this paper, who also indorses our guarantee.

TENS OF THOUSANDS OF TESTIMONIALS

Have been received from enthusiastic users of NO-TO-BAC. We print a few to show how NO-TO-BAC does the work. We do not want our testimonials doubted, for they are truth—pure and simple. We know it and propose to back them up by offering a reward of $5,000 to anyone who can prove that any testimonial published is false, or that we knowingly and willingly cause to be printed testimonials that do not, so far as we know, represent the honest opinion of the writers. Signed, H. L. KRAMER, Treasurer.

Obituary.

Anna Elizabeth (Russell) Fretz, wife of L. B. Fretz, and daughter of Wolcott M. (deceased) and Adaline C. Russell was born near Leesburg, Scott township, Kosciusko county, Indiana, April 3, 1871. After a brief illness of nine days' duration, died Oct. 8, 1894, at the home of her mother at Syracuse, Ind., aged 23 years 6 months, and 5 days. She was converted to the christian faith at Mt. Tabor church, in the winter of 1888, under the spiritual labors of Elder J. W. Stringfellow. Baptism soon followed, since which time she was identified with the Church of God; being enrolled as a member at Mt. Tabor, until the removal of her parents to Syracuse, in the spring of 1890. Since then, her labors and membership have been with the church at the latter place. As a girl and until she arrived at the age of womanhood, Miss Russell was known as a very studious pupil. She attended the high school at Syracuse, Warsaw and Nappanee, and graduated from the latter with honors, June 15, 1889. After her graduation, much time and personal attention were given to Normal work. During the winters '92-3, she taught the Oak Grove school in Van Buren township. As a teacher and Sunday school worker, her chief aim was to develop the moral nature of man. To this end, she was continually devising legitimate means for the attraction and attention of pupils. She deemed a good character of more value than title or large estates, hence she was among the foremost in promoting the church's welfare. The loss of her is no less keenly felt in the social circles where she moved than in the home of her family.

June 14, 1893, she was united in marriage to L. B. Fretz, of Syracuse, but formerly of Auburn. With happiest anticipations for the coming years, she entered upon the duties of matrimonial life, bringing with that same love of the true and beautiful as characterized her action and life previous to that. After less than sixteen months of unalloyed bliss, she courageously and unmurmuringly gave herself as a sacrifice on the altar of maternity. A husband, an infant daughter (Eva Triumph), a mother, four brothers, and a sister, besides a host of relatives and friends are left to mourn her untimely departure. During the years of converted life, she lived consistent christian; her recourse for every trial bring in prayer and the Holy Scriptures. When the last hours drew nigh, she seemed to rejoice in that she was going home. She called her husband at about 1:30 o'clock a. m., on the day of her death, and requested that he pray with and for her. Soon after, those around her were asked to sing. "Oh, My Jesus I Love Thee." "Jesus Lover of of My Soul," and "Was that Gate Left Ajar," were selected, consecutively, she joining her voice with the rest and continuing till the songs were finished She added. "My God has called me, I am going home. We shall meet again." She gave directions as to the future of her baby, and took an affectionate farewell of her husband. The interment was at Stony Point cemetery, Oct. 10, services by Elder I. W. Markley, of Columbia City. E. E. D.

Obituary.

Holmes Link was born in Ashland Co. Ohio, Oct. 9, 1841, and departed this life Oct 9, 1894 in the city of Chicago, age 53 years. In 1853 he came to DeKalb Co., Ind., where he lived until his sad death. On the 12th day of February 1864 he was united in marriage to Lucy J. Noel. To this happy union were born 8 children, 6 sons and 2 daughters. Two of whom preceded the father to spirit land. Mr. Link leaves behind him to mourn his death, a wife, 5 sons and 1 daughter, besides a host of dear friends. Mr. Link was endeared to his family and friends by his kindness and open heartedness. He endeavered to live an honest, upright life among his fellows. He was a most excellent citizens and neighbor. He was industrious and full of energy. He took great pleasure in ministering to the wants of his fellows; but however closely we may be related to each other, however much good we may do, yet we must say "good by" at last, and go the way of all the earth. The funeral services were conducted from the house last Thursday, Oct. 11, at 1 p. m. Interment took place in Evergreen cemetery, Rev. J. D. Brosy officiating.

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Canajoharie, N. Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it, if procurable. G. A. Dykeman, druggist, Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best cough remedy; that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested. Trial bottles free at Robbins & McCord's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1. 3

The Bay View Reading Circle.

One year ago the new Bay View Reading Circle was launched. It had a shorter, lower priced and more modern course than the Chautauqua Circle, Instantly it met with popular approval and at the end of five months was in use over much of the country. The new course for 1894-5 is just out, and is said to be even finer than the first. The four books and monthly magazine, which constitute the course, cost only $3, and the three great subjects to be studied—France, Social Reform, and Art, promise to be as useful as they are sure to be enjoyable. A reader of the Bay View Course will, at the end of a few years, have a useful body of classified knowledge which the desultory reader never has. J. M. Hall, Flint Michigan, is the person to address for circulars of information.

Relief In Six Hours.

Distressing Kidney and Bladder diseases relieved in six hours by the "New Great South American Kidney Cure." This new remedy is a great surprise on account of its exceeding promptness in relieving pain in the bladder, kidneys, back and every part of the urinary passages in male or female. It relieves retention of water and pain in passing it almost immediately. If you want quick relief and cure this is your remedy. Sold by Robbins and McCord druggists Auburn Ind. 34tf

THE best investment in real estate is to keep buildings well painted. Paint protects the house and saves repairs. You sometimes want to sell—many a good house has remained unsold for want of paint. The rule should be, though, "the best paint or none." That means

Strictly Pure White Lead

You cannot afford to use cheap paints. To be sure of getting Strictly Pure White Lead, look at the brand; any of these are safe:

North Yakima bank a draft for $110, the paper being drawn upon the Citizens' National bank of Tacoma. The money upon it was obtained from the North Yakima financial institution. The draft was sent here, arriving to-day, and was returned indorsed "No funds" A warrant for Hazzard's arrest was immediately sworn to, being placed in the hands of the sheriff of Yakima county for service. Hazzard was advised of the facts by friends here, who had been notified of the proceedings against him by telegraph. He spent several hours scurrying about town to-night, requesting the assistance of friends, and says money to fully release the obligation will be on hand when the Citizen's National bank opens its doors for business to-morrow morning.

Foolish Waterloo Press.

Bro. Willis has always been full of weaknesses, when it came to showing a knowledge of political affairs. Now, while running for an office, this weakness seems to be growing stronger, if we may use such a term. So now he laid himself out last week:

He said among other things: "A traveling salesman told us last week that clothing is cheaper in this country than in Europe." Well, why should it not be? We have always said that our manufacturers could do the work cheaper than abroad, as we have faster workmen and better machinery. All we deeded was free wool. And that we now have, thanks to democrats. So we are now in shape to send woolen goods all over the world and beat England at her own game. This will allow us to make more goods, and increase the demand for home wool. He speaks of cheap goods as if it were a crime.

Again, he says: "A clerk at Hamilton says they have to keep a book with a list of every bill of paper money they take in. It is necessary to protect them from bad bills." And adds, "Under republican rule this was unnecessary, for we had the best money ever circulated." Did anyone ever hear such twaddle? We have precisely the same money we have had since 1879. Before that we had republican money much below gold in value. There has not been a penny of any new sort made since democrats came into power. He continues, "All our money has been made payable in gold." And we add, we are using only republican money now, and no one is asking even for any other kind. Will the Press name an issue of "democratic money?"

Again, he says: "When the republican party is returned to power in 1896, there will be no occasion for labor unions to insure their members against loss of employment." But any man knows, and Willis knows, that labor unions have existed for a generation or more, just as they exist today, and with the same objects in view, which is, to prevent the reduction of wages by the encroachment of capital, and to assist unfortunate members when they need help Another untruthful statement he makes is, "Republican rule makes employment for all who wish it" But every man knows that for thirty years or more, we have had great bodies of men unemployed, disastrous strikes and lockouts. We mention two only of many thousands, the great labor troubles that caused so much bloodshed in 1876 at Pittsburg, and the Carnegie-Homestead trouble near the same city a few years ago. A man ought to know most of the things we have set him right on, before taking Free Kelly's old seat in the legislature.

Only One Bottle.

Mr. Arthur M. Fisher, a reliable stock dealer, of Decatur, Ind. says: One Dollar Bottle of Dr Marshall's Lung Syrup completely cured me of a very annoying cough and pains in the chest, bordering on lung fever. I think it is the best cough syrup in the world and would not be without it Sold by all druggists.
Resp. Yours, A. M Fisher. 43

Acts in Harmony.

Perhaps some of our readers would like to know in what respect Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is better than any other. We will tell you. When this Remedy is taken as soon as a cold has been contracted, and before it has become settled in the system, it will counteract the effect of the cold and greatly lessen it's severity, if not effectually cure the cold in two day's time, and it is the only remedy that will do this. It acts in perfect harmony with nature and aids nature in relieving the lungs, opening the secretions, liquefying the mucous and causing its expulsion from the air cells of the lungs and restoring the system to a strong and healthy condition. No other remedy in the market possesses these remarkable properties. No other will cure a cold so quickly or leave the system in as sound a condition. For sale by Robbins & McCord. 43

"DEMOCRATIC TIMES."

Republican Testimony That They Are Here at Last.

Business Reviving and Factories Resuming Everywhere.

The Cincinnati Commercial Gazette and Indianapolis Journal, Though Both Harrison Organs, Are Forced to Admit That Their Calamity Howls Are Absolutely Baseless—The Busiest Time in the History of Many of the Indiana Factories—The Revival Extends to All Parts of the Country—Facts From the Record.

A controlling interest in the Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette was recently purchased by Steve Elkins in order that the paper might be used to boom Ben Harrison for president in 1896. That paper, however, is very much of a newspaper, and in spite of the calamity howling of its editorial columns permits its news columns to bear truthful testimony to the magnitude of the business revival under the operations of the new Democratic tariff law. In its Sunday issue The Commercial-Gazette under the heading:

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

MILLS AND FACTORIES THAT HAVE BEEN IDLE ARE RESUMING ALL ALONG THE LINE, has these items:

The Union ironworks at Erie, Pa., have resumed operations after a long idleness.

The Gadsden (Ala.) carworks have resumed after a long period of idleness. Employment is given to several hundred men.

Work has been resumed at the Pittsburg locomotiveworks, the plant having been shut down for several weeks. All the old employes were returned to their places, at the old scale of wages.

The large papermills at Valley Falls, R. I., which have been for a long time idle, are to be converted into factories for the manufacture of cotton wraps. Employment will be given to several hundred men.

The Gaffney (S. C.) cottonmills are adding new machinery. Twelve thousand spindles and 300 looms will be operated day and night, requiring several hundred operatives.

The extensive silkmills at Carlisle, Pa., which have suspended work during the past eight months are now running full time, with an increased force of men.

Within two months over 9,000 men have resumed work in the mills, factories and workshops at Wheeling, W. Va., Martin's Ferry and Bellaire, O. The major portion of these men are now receiving steady work for the first time in 14 months and an air of prosperity is plainly visible.

The largest leatherboard factory in the state will be put in operation at Townsend Harbor, Mass., about Oct. 1, giving employment to 1,000 men.

From 15,000 to 20,000 workmen have been given steady employment at Braddock, Pa., during the past five weeks.

The Youngstown (O.) Iron and Steel Roofing company is a new concern, which now has under construction a number of large buildings suitable for the manufacture of metal roofing, siding and ceiling. When completed, employment will be given to several hundred men.

The Standard Wheel company, manufacturers of wagon and carriage wheels, expect to start up their several factories in Indiana by Oct. 1. Except the Terre Haute works, these plants have been idle for nearly two years.

The puddling mills of the Old Dominion iron and steel works of Richmond, Va., have been put in opration and a large portion of the plant is now at work.

The City Manufacturing company, New Bedford, Mass., started on Monday morning at the old scale of wages. This means that 350 of the operatives out on a strike were given employment, as the mill employs this number.

The citizens of New Lisbon, O., have raised $52,000 of the $60,000 required to secure the location of a large tinplate manufactory, and the remaining portion is expected to be obtained shortly. The concern, when completed, will give employment to several hundred workmen.

Work has been resumed in every department of the New Haven Clock company's works at New Haven, Conn., giving employment to 500 persons.

The Spring Valley (Ills.) miners returned to work last Monday, after being idle nearly four months. Rents and coal will be reduced in proportion to the reduction that the men suffer under the Columbus scale.

The American Manufacturing company of Brooklyn announces that while bagging is now free of duty it will continue to pay the old scale of wages to its employes.

The Morton tinplate works at Cambridge, O., will be in operation by Dec. 15, giving employment to several hundred men.

Conditions continue to improve at Nashville. During the week several factories put on extra men and it can now be safely said that there are no skilled workmen idle in Nashville.

Pope, the bicycle man, is erecting a $750,000 plant for rolling steel tubing at Hartford, Conn. It will employ 2,000 men.

IN INDIANA.

Republican Testimony Regarding the Industrial Boom.

AT ELWOOD.

The same issue of the Commercial-Gazette contains also ample evidence of the industrial boom which has come to Indiana since the enactment of the Democratic tariff law. From the Commercial-Gazette's Indiana dispatches the following points are taken:

The labor and manufacturing outlook in Elwood is getting brighter every day, and the busy hum of industry is rapidly filling every house in the city with thrifty workingmen, who do much toward filling the very air with prosperity.

Elwood is putting down several miles of street paving.

Moison & Weiskoppf's bottle works resumed with 200 hands.

The McCoy lampchimney plant is running at full capacity in all departments.

The canning factories are in full operation.

The Elwood hoop factory has resumed.

At the Elwood iron works the plant is running night and day and is constantly adding more machinery and putting on more men. The business is increasing rapidly and the men employed there earn good wages and are prosperous. The Holland radiator works, owned by the same company, are 60 days behind in their orders, while the works are running at their fullest capacity.

The Diamond Plateglass factory is just at the present turning out some of the largest and finest glass ever turned out in the United States. There has been no disposition shown to reduce the wages of employes and it is believed no reduction will be made. The factory is running at nearly full capacity, full time.

AT ALEXANDRIA.

The trouble at the Lippincott Alexandria glass factory has been adjusted and a full force of men resumed work yesterday.

The preliminary arrangements for resumption of work at the DePauw Plateglass works at Alexandria are making and in a few more days 400 men will go to work in this plant alone.

The Alexandria Windowglass company has already begun operations.

The DePauw plant resumed yesterday and 300 men began to make glass.

The Kelly Ax Manufacturing company is having a great rush of work and is increasing its payroll daily. All the smaller Alexandria factories are running full time and business is on the increase

The city is putting in a $60,000 waterworks plant.

AT ORESTES.

At Orestes 150 new residences are to be built at once and be ready for occupancy by Nov. 20. Factories are all in operation.

AT ANDERSON.

Mattler's tinplate plant is surely secured. It will employ 800 men.

The Anderson Iron and Bolt works will build a plant at once. The total number of men that will be furnished employment by new concerns by the first of the year will reach the 1,200 mark. This will, by July, be increased to 1,800.

The resumption of the Victor Glass works Wednesday and the action of the North Anderson in putting factories 1 and 2 into operation Saturday and the announcement that the Union would resume Monday has had its effect in manufacturing circles, and things are beginning to show a decided improvement.

The Buckeye Manufacturing company's plant will be put in operation the first of the month, employing 300 machinists.

The Butler Flintglass company is enlarging its plant from a 7 to an 8-mill concern. The force of 150 workmen will be increased in proportion.

There has been a decided improvement in the labor conditions within the past two weeks. But few men are now loafing and they could, with proper exertion, get employment.

The American Wire Nail works, which moved here five years ago from Covington, Ky., and is now employing 700 men, is being enlarged by the addition of a 60 by 100 feet galvanizing room.

Work begins Monday on the building for the new tinplate mill, the new shovel factory and the Riverview Agricultural works. All of these plants are to be in partial operation by the first of the year.

AT KOKOMO.

The industrial situation in Kokomo continues to be encouraging.

The Bit works is operating at about two-thirds capacity, and a fairly good prospect of full resumption soon.

Ford & Donnelly, founders and boilermakers, have added another line. They are now manufacturing tinplate machinery, and supplying new mills at Anderson, Atlanta, Montpelier and other tinplate factories starting up. They are also shipping goods to Pittsburg.

The canning factories are in the height of the tomato packing season, and 1,200 employes work day and night.

The Union Febroid mills, the paper mills and pulp mills continue to run steadily.

The American Strawboard mill, down for a year, will resume as soon as the river rises sufficiently to give them water. The Kokomo Enameling works, the largest in the United States, is operating full force, and with encouraging orders.

The plateglass factory, since increasing the force at the Elwood branch, has ceased Sunday operations, but continues to run night and day.

The close down of our factories last winter and spring cost the country $15,000 in "aid to poor," the idle workingmen having no recourse but to appeal to the authorities for support of their families. The indications are more favorable for the approaching winter.

Right Arm Paralyzed!

Saved from St. Vitus Dance.

"Our daughter, Blanche, now fifteen years of age, had been terribly afflicted with nervousness, and had lost the entire use of her right arm. We feared St. Vitus dance, and tried the best physicians, with no benefit. She has taken three bottles of Dr. Miles' Nervine and has gained 31 pounds. Her nervousness and symptoms of St. Vitus dance are entirely gone, she attends school regularly, and has recovered complete use of her arm, her appetite is splendid."
MRS. R. R. BULLOCK, Brighton, N. Y.

Dr. Miles' Nervine Cures.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is sold on a positive guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. All druggists sell it at $1, 6 bottles for $5, or it will be sent, prepaid, on receipt of price by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

CORRESPONDENCE

BUTLER.

The Waterloo fair was very liberally patronized by our people.

Samuel Tyson's oldest child, Rose, was buried last week, death caused by sore throat of some kind.

Our water works failed to work from some cause last Sunday, and the town went "dry" for one day. We believe they were making some needed repairs.

It is rumored now that most of the stockholders in the Butler Manufacturing Co. have been frozen out, and that the new company will push the enterprise to successful operation.

Mrs. Minnie Needam, nee Norford, died very suddenly at her home in Ft. Wayne last week. Her remains were brought to Butler and funeral services held Monday, and interred in the cemetery at this place. Mrs. Needam was a bright and companionable lady, and her death, while yet in the prime of early womanhood, is a severe blow to her husband, brothers and sisters.

There seems to be some loose joint somewhere near Butler in Uncle Sam's mail business. It recently took twenty-one days for a letter to reach Butler from St. Joe Station, ten miles away. Another mailed from Metz ten days ago, is still somewhere in its flight between these two points, fifteen miles apart. Another was nine days getting out of the Cincinnati post office, with many other annoying losses.

The ordinary voter who has not given much attention to politics has some rather strange experiences these times The number of candidates for office being doubled and half made up of former shining lights out of each of the old parties, one is often confused when buttonholed by some well known democrat or republican to make the awkward expression, "why, I thought we nominated Mr ——— for that office, and how comes it that you are asking for it?" and receive the strange reply, "why, I am on the populist ticket." The revelation is generally very unfavorable, as a change from one party to another generally smacks very strong of a desire for office rather than for the good that is in sight in the new relation. Ruin generally follows in the wake of him who seeks new goods.

Dead Letter List.

Unclaimed letters remaining in the postoffice at Auburn, for the week ending October 13, 1894 Herbert T. Morey, M. M. Moody, J. D. Taylor, Mariam Willanes, Shell Wilson. Claimants will please call for letters in advertised list,
SILAS J. BRANDON, Postmaster.

Every Christian Mother.

Should be careful with her children This damp atmosphere of our climate often brings on coughs colds etc., which if not attended to in time lead to that dreaded disease consumption, to prevent this it is the duty of all mothers to have a remedy near to check these coughs that your children may contract, and you cannot get a safer or more reliable remedy than Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup, the children's friends. You can buy this for 25cts. of your druggist. 43

The Only Remedy.

"During my term of service in the army I contracted chronic diarrhoea," says A. E. Bending, of Halsey, Oregon. "Since then I have used a great amount of medicine, but when I found any that would give me relief they would injure my stomach, until Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy was brought to my notice I used it and will say it is the only remedy that gave me permanent relief and no bad results follow." For sale by Robbins & McCord. 43

Saved from Croup.

"I consider Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a specific for croup. It is very pleasant to take, which is one of the most important requisites where a cough remedy is intended for use among children. I have known of cases of croup where I know the life of a little one was saved by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy." J. J. LaGrange, druggist, Avoca, Neb 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord. 43

A Traveling Man

Mr B. C. Wolfe, of Washington, Mo., writes that after taking Drummond's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism for one week, the pain had almost left him entirely. He slept better, had no more night sweats, and appetite was good. He also wrote that he would not take $100 for what the remedy had done for him. There is no waiting weeks and months to get satisfaction. The remedy attacks the disease at once. Send $5 to the Drummond Medicine Co., 48 Maiden Lane, New York, and the full month's treatment of two large bottles will be sent to you by return express. Agents wanted. 42

Election Sheriffs, Etc.

The new election law, the Logansport Pharos says, provides that the board of commissioners must appoint election inspectors, but the chairmen the committees of the two parties casting the greatest number of votes have authority to designate the election judges and the poll clerks, as well as the deputy sheriffs. A list of the persons recommended for judges must be filed with the county board a week prior to the election, and the poll clerk at least four days before election. The county sheriff appoints the deputy sheriffs. They are chosen from the two parties casting the largest number of votes, and the persons appointed must be recommended to the county sheriff for appointment five days before the election.

To Vote a Straight Ticket.

To vote a straight ticket stamp anywhere within the large square that contains the rooster, the eagle, rising sun, or the plow and hammer, but stamp NOWHERE ELSE not even the small squares at the left. There IS NO small square at the left of the words "Democratic," "Republican," "Prohibition," "People's Ticket." So no attention should be paid to these words. Stamp anywhere within the square, no matter if you do hit the rooster, the eagle, the rising sun or the plow. But if the stamp strikes outside the square, the ballot cannot be counted.

To Vote a Mixed Ticked.

DO NOT stamp in the big square at all, but go through stamping the small square at the left of each name you wish to vote for on any ticket.

How to Proceed.

The Poll Clerk hands you three tickets a pink one with state ticket of all four parties on it; a white one with all four of the county tickets on it; a yellow one with all four of the township tickets on it. Go into the booth and stamp each one, in the way directed above, then fold each one separately in such a way that all names are on the inside and out of sight, and the poll clerks' initials will be in sight on the outside, then come out of the booth, and give these three folded, separate tickets to the inspector, and give the stamp to the poll clerk. In addition we might say: Fix the ballot to suit you, first, and after folding it so that all printed names are on the inside, and the initials of the poll clerks are on the outside, lay it down by you and take the next ballot and fix that to suit you; fold it as you did the other, and then proceed in the same way with the remaining ballot. When all these ballots have been prepared, take all three to the inspector, as stated above. The way you vote one ballot does not affect the other. Each ballot is independent of the other. You may vote your state ballot straight, fold it and lay it down. Then you take up the county ballot and vote that either straight or mixed, as you see fit, and having folded and laid that down, take up the township ballot and vote that straight or mixed, as you see fit. One ballot has nothing to do with the other. If in doubt on any of these points, the election board will give information.

ASHLEY.

LAST WEEK

The dedication of the new Christian church on last Sunday was a complete success, Rev. W. M. Range, of Cincinnati, O., having charge of the dedication exercises. The amount to be raised was $1,000, which was subscribed or paid in twenty minutes after the weighty sermon delivered by Rev. Range. This is a great improvement to Ashley, and the people of Ashley can never repay a few of the farmers from south of town for their energy and generosity in the erection of this beautiful church, the first one for Ashley.

Our schools are in splendid working order, the last report being 170 pupils, a gain over last year of over 40 pupils.

M. W. Davis' fine residence is about ready for occupancy.

Oda Shaw has an engagement at the Times office.

If winter holds off one month, Ashley will be well supplied with walks.

Manager Geary is reroofing his three-story business building.

WATERLOO.

Miss Belle Blair, daughter of B. F. Blair, of Newville, has been here a week or so visiting her uncle, Gen. Blair, and daughter Rose.

Mrs. Sarah Edge expects soon to move to Wauseon, where her son, Sherm, has charge of the station on the Long Distance Telephone line. He has a good salary, and his mother will keep house for him and his little girl. We understand Mrs. Barnhart will rent the hotel and conduct the business hereafter.

The directors and officers consider the Waterloo fair a success. Certainly there was an immense crowd out Thursday, a very good one Wednesday, and very many more on Friday than could be expected under the circumstances—a cold, rainy day, part of the time pouring.

A child of Mr. and Mrs Robinson died Monday, and another is sick.

Isaac Brown's children are all sick—three boys and a girl. Mrs. Brown is also ill.

Mr. and Mrs Dilgard buried a child Wednesday, said to have had diphtheria. He was five years old.

Shepard & Son have been paid $1,700 by the two companies with whom they insured their mill, so recently burned.

The heavy frost Monday was like a small fall of snow and most effectually finished all freezable vegetation that had escaped before.

Monday, the weather moderated considerably, It rained a little in the evening. Tuesday the weather was mild, the sun shone, and there was every appearance of several weeks of fine weather.

Mrs. Dora Locke and daughter Lucille returned home Tuesday morning, after spending a week visiting friends and taking in the city. Dell Locke has been riding a wheel this last summer to take off some of his surplus flesh.

Monday of last week Henry Booser received quite unexpectedly a letter from the firm with whom he is engaged, wishing him to go at once to Buenos Ayres, South America, in the interest of their business. He left Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock, expecting to return in about two months. It is a fine opportunity for a young man to be able to take such a trip, to have his expenses paid and receive a salary besides. Mrs. Booser will visit her mother at Angola during her husband's absence.

"There is a Salve for every wound." We refer to DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, cures burns, bruises, cuts, indolent sores as a local application in the nostrils, it cures catarrh, and always cures piles.

Non-pull-out is an arbitrary word used to designate the only bow (ring) which cannot be pulled off the watch.

Here's the idea

The bow has a groove on each end. A collar runs down inside the pendant (stem) and fits into the grooves, firmly locking the bow to the pendant, so that it cannot be pulled or twisted off.

It positively prevents the loss of the watch by theft, and avoids injury to it from dropping.

IT CAN ONLY BE HAD with Jas. Boss Filled or other watch cases bearing this trade mark—

All watch dealers sell them without extra cost. A watch case opener will be sent free to any one by the manufacturers.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the New Tax Law's Benefits to You Personally?

And of How the Railroads are Made to Help You Pay Taxes?

Comparison of the Assessments on Railroad Property Under the Old and New Laws—Railroad Assessments Increased More Than 100 Per Cent, With a Corresponding Saving to Other Taxpayers.

Did it ever occur to you to note what the new tax law had done in your county to increase the assessment of railroads and to compel them to pay their just share of the taxes in your county? Did it ever occur to you that the average increase in railroad assessment was 135 per cent under the new law? Did it ever occur to you that under the new law the railroads are paying double the taxes that they did in 1890 and that the extra amount they pay is just so much taken off the burdens of taxation resting on the farmers and other taxpayers residing in your county?

If you have never done this it is well that you should do so for the fate of the new tax law is at stake in the approaching elections. The Republican party is pledged to repeal this law if it gets the power. In other words the question is put to the people of Indiana whether they will take $91,000,000 of railroad property off the tax duplicate, and lose thereby the taxes on that amount, every bit of these taxes being placed upon the people of the state. It is a question whether the railroads or the farmers shall pay taxes on this $91,000,000 of property.

It is a very easy matter by the aid of the figures appended to determine just how much taxpayers of each county would be called upon to pay as a result of a fulfillment of the Republican pledge to make this donation to the railroad corporations. Just note the increase in the assessment under the new law, then take the rate of county taxation and compute the size of your county's gift to the railroads and the amount of your share in that gift. The figures will prove startling.

The assessment of railroad property in the various counties in the state under the old and the new laws was as follows:

Railroad assessment by counties of the state of Indiana for 1890 (old tax law) and for 1891 (new tax law).

It will be seen that the railroad assessment under the new law is more than double what it was under the old law. That means a great deal to the taxpayers of Indiana.

And yet this law, which is conceded to be the best law ever devised for compelling the railroads to bear their share of the public burdens, the Republicans are pledged to repeal if they get the power. Voters should figure out in dollars and cents just what this means to each of them.

Cause of the Business Revival.

Unquestionably the Democratic papers are right in attributing the great business improvement to the settlement of the tariff question. Republican papers can acknowledge this without leaving themselves open to an imputation of disloyalty to party.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat (Rep.).

Stands For Corporate Rule.

The Republican party is pledged to repeal the law that compels corporate wealth to bear its just share of taxation

Thus during the four years of the Harrison administration the diminution of the public revenues reached the figure of $58,000,000. And here we have a comparison which teaches a lesson: An increase of the revenues under a Democratic administration of $50,000,000 and a decrease under the administration of the Republican party of $58,000,000. Here is a showing of expenditures during the four years of Republican administration under Mr. Harrison: The first year, $413,000,000; the second year, $355,000,000; the third year, $345,000,000, and the last year, $373,000,000. The surplus during the first year of the Harrison administration fell to $37,000,000; the third year to $17,000,000, and the last year to $2,000,000.—

THESE DEMOCRATIC TIMES.

MORE REPUBLICAN TESTIMONY IS PRODUCED.

Showing That the New Democratic Tariff Is Rapidly Bringing About a Return of Prosperity — All Industrial Enterprises In Indiana Enjoying a Veritable Boom — The Outlook Was Never Better.

The Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette continues to bear testimony to the business revival which has followed on the taking effect of the new tariff law. In its Sunday edition appear these headlines, among others:

THE INDUSTRIAL SOUTH.

RECENT DEVELOPMENTS OF OIL INDUSTRIES.

NEW ENTERPRISES CREATING A DEMAND FOR LABOR IN WHEELING.

IN BUCKEYE FACTORIES.

A GENERAL IMPROVEMENT NOTICED AMONG DAYTON INDUSTRIES.

The Indiana division of the Commercial-Gazette's industrial page is especially interesting. Following are the headlines and a few of the items:

THE GAS BELT BEEHIVE.

IMMENSE DISTRIBUTION OF MONEY IN WAGES AT MUNCIE.

GLAD HEARTS AND HAPPY HOMES.

MANY OF THEM AT ELWOOD WHERE ALL IS ACTIVITY AGAIN.

MUNCIE, Ind., Oct. 5.—The payroll of the several manufacturing concerns in Muncie last week by far exceeds any week in the history of the city.

The Muncie Iron and Steel company is preparing to add six furnaces to its plant, giving employment to a large number of hands.

At Albany the papermill, two glass factories, furniture factory and all others are running full time.

Eaton, north of Muncie, reports great prosperity among the several manufacturing concerns.

The Early, Jones & Baur Windowglass company is running full force.

The Ames buggy works, with 25 hands, the Bartlett collhoop works and the Standard washboard works, each with about 25 hands, are running full capacity.

The Excelsior factory and the Eaton pulley works are other important industries that are working many hands.

The shoe factory at Daleville will soon be ready for a large force of hands.

LIKE YE OLDEN TIMES.

GENERAL RESUMPTION OF ALL INDUSTRIAL ENTERPRISES AT ELWOOD.

ELWOOD, Oct. 6.—During the week just past abundant indications of returning prosperity have been manifest and the outlook is decided improved. There are not enough houses in the city to accommodate the workmen.

The Elwood steam forge works will be running at full capacity by Oct. 15.

Thursday morning the last of Elwood factories resumed operations.

The Nivison & Wieskopff bottle factory is steadily increasing its force.

At the Holland radiator works a steady increase in payroll is reported.

The Elwood hoop factory is unable to supply the demand for its product and will increase its plant.

At the McBeth lampchimney plant things are being rushed at a rate wholly unknown before in the history of this factory.

At the W. R. McCloy lampchimney factory several new hands have been added.

AT OTHER POINTS.

The glass business is looking up materially in Frankton and it will not be long until every industry in the place will be running.

Indications are also very favorable for the location of an immense iron foundry and machine works at Frankton to employ a large number of men.

Next Monday the Lippincott Glass company at Alexandria will put on an extra force of 20 shops, thereby giving employment to 80 or 100 additional men. Nearly 600 men are now at work at the plant.

The situation at the other Alexandria factories may be summed up as follows: The Alexandria Windowglass company is now employing 25 additional men and business is encouraging. At the plateglass plant of the DePauws the 300 men are making things hum day and night.

The Kelly ax factory at Alexandria has added between 75 and 100 men since last week to its force, and is behind with its orders. The new waterworks system is being completed rapidly, and employment is given here to a large force of men at remunerative wages.

The Anderson Coil Hoop company was organized in this city Wednesday. In all departments about 60 men will be employed.

The contract was let Wednesday afternoon for the construction of the buildings for the new Buckeye Manufacturing company,s steel casting works at Anderson. The entire plant will employ 400 men.

W. P. Collum, John A. Magee and Porter Haskell, all of Clarion, Pa., have closed a lease on a big tract of land at Alexandria for the purpose of building a tinplate plant. The plant they propose to erect will employ 250 men, and will be put into operation about the first of February.

The tinplate manufacturing company that located in Anderson two weeks ago, and which has been known as the "Mattler company," was incorporated Tuesday. The corporation will be known as the National Tinplate company. The company will erect the largest tinplate plant in the United States, with terneplate and steel rollingmill combined. Eight hundred mem will be employed.

Contracts will be let Monday for the erection of the Riverview agricultural implement and supply buildings at Anderson.

The American Wire Nail company at Anderson will keep its plant in operation night and day from now until the first of the year.

Work begins Monday on the buildings for the new Wright shovel works in North Anderson.

WITH INDIANA ORATORS.

Pithy, Pertinent Points Made by Democratic Speakers.

If there is anything it this world that is settled for ver it is that a high protective tariff for the purposes of protecting classes can never again prevail in America.—Charles L. Jewett.

In all the great traits of character, in all the elements of manhood of the world's famous people, our president is the greatest exponent of manhood in the world today.—John Gil Shanklin.

If you will take the statutes of our state and canvass them as I have done you will find that every law in existence today upon the subject of labor was enacted by Democratic legislatures.—George W. Cooper.

TO ENSLAVE LABOR.

Ever the Aim and Object of the Republican Party.

Origin and History of the Contract Labor Law.

Enacted For the Purpose of Giving Employers Cheap Labor—Perpetuated to Keep the Laborers Who Had Returned From the War From Securing Employment at Good Wages—Remarkable Reports on the Bill Made by Republicans In Congress.

In 1864 congress passed an act substantially entitled an act to encourage immigration. This was its ostensible purpose, but its real object was to clothe contractors, mineowners and manufacturers with power to contract with and import laborers from Europe to supplant American workmen, and to reduce the price of American wages.

Mr. E. B. Washburn, in reporting the same to the house, said:

The vast number of laboring men, estimated at nearly 1,250,000, who have left their peaceful pursuits and patriotically gone forth in defense of our government and its institutions, has created a vacuum which is becoming sesiously felt in every portion of the country. Never before in our history has there existed so unprecedented a demand for labor as at the present time. This demand exists everywhere. It exists in the agricultural districts of the northwest and in the central states; in New England, and among shipping interests of the lakes and seaboard, and is felt in every field of mechanical and manufacturing industry. The dearth of laborers is severely felt in the coal and iron mines of Pennsylvania; in the coal mines of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois; in the lead mines of Galena, and in the gold and silver mines of California, Nevada, Idaho and Colorado. It is believed that the demand for laborers on our railroads alone will give employment for the entire immigration of laborers in 1863.

Held the Laborer's All.

The second section provides that contracts may be made whereby immigrants shall pledge the wages of their labor to repay the expenses of their immigration, and further provides for the enforcement of the contract and that it shall operate as a lien upon any land acquired by the immigrant when recorded in the county where the land is situated.

So drastic were the provisions of this measure that it gave to the importer of laborers not only a lien upon any land they might enter, but upon the wages they might earn.

Senator Sherman in reporting this measure to the senate very adroitly tried to conceal its real purpose, but inadvertently disclosed the secret before concluding the statement. He said:

The special wants for labor in this country at the present time are very great. The war has depleted our workshops and materially lessened our supply of labor in every department of industry and mechanism. In their noble response to the call of their country our workmen in every branch of the useful arts have left vacancies, which must be filled or the material interests of the country must suffer. The immense amount of native labor occupied by the war calls for a large increase of foreign immigration to make up the deficiency at home. The demand for labor never was greater than at present, and the fields of usefulness were never so varied and promising.

It was true as stated by Senator Sherman that there was "a noble response to the call of their country" by the workingmen, but while absent fighting its battles their vacant places should not have been filled with cheap laborers imported from Europe under contract. Paupers unable to get to this country under the terms and provisions of this law could virtually enslave themselves in foreign countries to American contractors and American manufacturers and the contract would be enforced here to the fullest extent.

Amounted to Slavery.

The second section of this law reads as follows:

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That all contracts which shall be made by emigrants to the United States in foreign countries, in conformity to regulations that may be established by said commissioner, whereby emigrants shall pledge the wages of their labor for a term not exceeding 12 months to repay the expenses of their emigration shall be held to be valid in law and may be enforced in the courts of the United States or of the several states and territories, and such advances, if so stipulated in the contract, and the contract is recorded in the recorder's office in the county where the emigrant shall settle, shall operate as a lien upon any land thereafter acquired by the emigrant, whether under the homestead law when the title is consummated, or on property otherwise acquired until liquidated by the emigrant; but nothing herein contained shall be deemed to authorize any contract contravening the constitution of the United States, or creating in any way the relation of slavery or servitude.—United States statutes. At large, volume 15, 1863-65.

The extent to which the authors of this measure knew they were going is apparent from the last lines of the section—"but nothing herein contained shall be deemed to authorize any contract, in contravention of the constitution of the United States, or creating in any way the relation of slavery or servitude."

A further provision of this law exempted the immigrants imported under contract from military service. The American workman might be taken from his place in the shop at any time, but the imported laborer was in no danger.

Why Did They Continue It?

We ask Republicans why they took advantage of the absence of the wage-workers who were in the army? They say it was necessary. Labor was scarce and wages was high. Will they answer why, when the war was over, when the armies disbanded and the men returned home to take their places, this law was not repealed? Will they inform us why, when half a million of men were discharged from the mills or factories in 1875, this law was kept upon the statute books? Will they answer why during that long period of depression, when hundreds of thousands of men were out of employment and seeking work, it was necessary to import as was done under this law, large numbers of European laborers? The fact that this statute remained in force nearly 20 years, 18 after the war had closed, and that every effort to repeal it in the interest of American labor was thwarted is sufficient to satisfy the most skeptical person that it was fashioned and framed in the interest of the contractor and manufacturer. From the time of the enactment of this law till its repeal over 6,500,000 immigrants came to our shores. How many of these left their native land and came to us voluntarily upon their own resources because of their admiration for our institutions, and how many debased and vicious characters were brought over cost. Laborers were imported under the provisions of this law up to the time of its repeal, and the statutes now in force prohibiting the same are still being evaded in many ways by men who cry loudest "protection to American labor!" The Republican party, supreme in all departments of the government, was cognizant of the fact that while honest laborers were unable to secure employment importations under contract were constantly being made, but no step was taken to protect them from this competition.

It remained for a Democratic house to repeal this law at the session of 1884-5, which was done by the bill of Representative Foran of Ohio

INDIANA TAX REFORM.

Invaluable Service to the People by the Democratic Party.

History of the Tax Law of 1891 and Its Beneficent Results.

A Barbarous System Replaced by a Just and Equitable Code—Burdens Equalized and Taxes Proportioned to Possessions — Illinois and Indiana Contrasted—Former Still Complaining of Partiality In Exemptions and Favoritism to Corporations—Latter Favored at the Expense of the People—Facts and Figures In Illustration—Superiority of the Indiana Plan—Democracy's Great Triumph.

For many years the necessity for reform in the system of taxation was one of the most pressing questions in the state of Indiana. It was recognized that the prevailing system was unjust, vicious and oppressively unequal in its operations, but every effort for a change long proved abortive. Under the old laws prevailing in the state up to the year 1891, the corporations always managed to evade payment of their just proportion of taxation. The corporate influences appeared to be in complete control of the machinery for levying taxes, and for years, by means known only to themselves and the revenue officials, shifted almost the entire burden of taxation to the shoulders of individual property owners. While only a small per cent of the taxes were paid by corporations and railroad interests, their holdings largely exceeded the total assessed valuation of the entire state. Hundreds of thousands of individual property owners throughout the state were for years assessed at from one-third to one-half the actual value of their possessions, while the corporations were either entirely overlooked by the local assessors and state board of equalization, or succeeded in having their aggregations of wealth listed at one-tenth, or even one-twentieth, of its value. Nor was this all or the worst. Many rich corporations, such as the Pullman Car company, escaped taxation altogether. Though doing business in the state on a large scale, enjoying the protection of her laws and getting the benefit of her rich resources, they returned not a dollar to the treasury in compensation. The attempts to remedy this iniquitous system long proved vain. The Republican party, though often in power, refused to do anything. The demands of the people were unheard or unheeded. The old code, out of date and unjust to the last degree, was allowed to remain on the statute books.

Such was the situation when the Democratic party assumed control of the legislature in the winter of 1890-91. The leaders of the party had determined to make a sweeping change in the whole system of taxation and the session was largely taken up in framing and passing the new law. It was carefully studied and framed on scientific principles, in accordance with the views of the most enlightened and progressive students of political economy. Its passage was opposed at every step by the privileged corporations, backed by the Republican party. It was only after a bitter struggle that the measure finally became a law. The Republican press and speakers assailed it with utmost virulence, attacking both its principle and details, and calling upon the people to defeat the Democracy and restore the old system. In fact, opposition to this great law was made one of the cardinal Republican tenets in 1892, and had that party been given power there is no doubt that it would have been repealed. Every device was resorted to to prejudice the people against it. The operation of the law was obstructed in every possible way, payment of taxes was resisted and suits were brought to declare the law unconstitutional.

The basic principle underlying this law is that all persons shall pay taxes in proportion to their means. While none are allowed to escape, they will all be assessed equitably. The wealthiest corporation must bear its burden equally with the small farmer or householder. While according equal rights to all, special privileges will be allowed to none. How unjustly the old plan operated and the inestimable reform that has been accomplished by this great Democratic law may be judged from the single item of railroad property. The total assessments of railroad properties in the state of Indiana for the year 1890, under the old system, was $69,762,676. For 1891, after the new law came into effect, the assessment of the same properties was $161,039,169. For 1892 it was $160,595,802 and for 1893 it was $159,248,873. It will be seen that the aggregate for these three years was $480,883,844, as against $209,288,028, which would have been the assessment during these three years on the basis of 1890, showing an excess under the new law of $271,595,816. But while railroad property, being the largest item, attracts the most attention, the operation of the law worked a similar reformation proportionally in all kinds of corporate property which had theretofore escaped taxation in whole or in part. This enlargement of the list of taxables, while greatly increasing the state's resources, also operates to relieve the smaller taxpayers of the unjust burdens put upon them by the inequitable operation of the old method.

Perhaps no better way can be employed to bring into bold relief the public benefits conferred by the great Democratic reform law of 1891 than to contrast the present conditions of the two neighboring states of Indiana and Illinois. In the latter the old system still prevails, the tax law there being very similar to the one in operation here up to 1891. The state boards of equalization of the two states have been in session during the past two weeks, and the merits and demerits of their respective laws may readily be compared. In Indiana no complaints are heard except from a few big corporations, who are begging for a lowering of assessments on account of hard times and bad business. The people generally are satisfied, understanding that they now have a law that is perfectly just in its provisions and only needs honest and fearless administration to secure ideal results. In Illinois the complaints are loud and deep and a demand comes up from every quarter of the state for the passage of a tax law similar to that in Indiana. The records in Illinois show that more than $100,000,000 worth of railroad property does not pay a cent of taxes, while every acre owned by the farmer is assessed to the fullest extent. The same records show that the colossal corporations of the state, with capital stock reaching into the hundred million figures, pay taxes on but $5,363,947. It goes without saying that such a condition of affairs constitutes a crime against every individual taxpayer in the state. It is wholesale robbery of the people by the trusts and corporate monopolies, aided and abetted by officials chosen by the taxpayers to secure an equitable distribution of the burdens of taxation. Farming lands throughout the state are assessed at from $12 to $50 per acre, while a corporation like that of the Pullman Palace Car company, having a paid-up capital of $36,000,000, owning a city in itself and possessed of assets valued at $50,000,000, is permitted to pay taxes on less than $2,000,000, or about 4 per cent of its real value. Owners of humble homes worth from $2,000 to $5,000 are assessed at from $1,000 to $2,500, or half their real value, while railroads owning $20,000,000 worth of property are allowed to escape on an assessed valuation of less than $1,000,000. Real estate experts estimate the value of railroad property in Chicago at $600,000,000, yet the state board of equalization places the assessed value at less than $13,000,000 and in the entire state of Illinois at $82,000,000, although known to be worth $1,000,000,000. In other words, the individual taxpayer has to pay taxes on about one-fourth the real value of his property, while the big railroad corporations escape with assessments of from one-tenth to one-twentieth of the real value of their holdings. The $30,000,000 paid-up capital stock of Pullman's Palace Car company is assessed at the pitiful figure of $672,346. This same company has never paid a dollar of taxes in Indiana until the present year, which is the result of a law passed by the last Democratic legislature of Indiana. It has made millions of dollars in the state during the last 30 years without returning a single dollar in taxes. The remedy for this glaring abuse is due solely to the Democratic party.

Last year the total assessed value of property in Illinois was $847,191,516, of which $760,837,855 was placed on real estate and personal property, $79,531,738 on railroads, and $5,363,947 on capital stock corporations other than railroads. This tells the story of how the people pay the taxes while the corporations, which have the people by the throat, escape the burdens of government. Precisely similar to this were the conditions prevailing in Indiana until the legislation of 1891 plucked up the abuse by the roots, made mandatory provisions for equal and just assessments and compelled all classes of property to bear their fair share of the taxation. How it has operated as to the railroads is illustrated in the figures above given, contrasting the assessment of 1890 with subsequent years. But it is not simply necessary to have a good law to insure justice to the people. To the Democratic party of Indiana belongs the credit of first enacting the tax law and then enforcing it with vigorous impartiality and stern justice to all. The administration of the law was resisted by one of the most powerful combinations ever formed for such a purpose. All the railroad companies of the state united in refusing payment of taxes and in a suit to declare the law unconstitutional and void. This litigation involved more money than any other tax case ever before tried in the United States. How it was fought through for the state and finally won by the Democratic attorney general; how the railroads were compelled to come to time and settle their long withheld dues, are matters of recent history and form one of the proudest triumphs of the Democratic party. Valuable as was the service to the people of enacting such a law, the honest and fearless enforcement of its provisions constitute a still stronger claim for public approval and public gratitude.

REPUBLICANISM AND DEMOCRACY.

Look Upon This Picture and Then Cast Your Eye Upon This.

As another campaign is on, it is well to contrast the records of the two great parties now contesting for supremacy in Indiana. During its tenure of power at various times in the last decade the Democratic party has done these things:

It passed the mechanics' lien law.

It passed the law giving laborers a lien upon the product of their labor for wages and material furnished.

It passed the law protecting labor organizations.

It passed the law providing for the safety of miners and the proper ventilation of mines.

It passed the law constituting eight hours a day's labor in public employment.

It passed the law prohibiting the blacklisting of employes.

It passed the law prohibiting "pluckme" stores.

It passed the employes' liability law.

It passed the law prohibiting the importation of Pinkerton detectives.

It passed the law against the importation of alien or foreign laborers.

It enacted the school-book law.

It enacted laws to purify elections.

It enacted the Australian ballot law.

It devised and passed the present tax law.

It passed the new fee and salary law.

It enacted the Barrett improvement law.

It passed the state board of charities law.

The Other Side.

Every one of the above mentioned laws, now admitted to be valuable, was opposed to the last by the Republican party.

It fought the school book law with utmost desperation.

It arrayed itself against the labor reform laws.

It opposed the 8-hour day law.

It was against the employes' liability bill.

It was the champion of Pinkerton detectives.

It fought all the laws to purify elections

It arrayed itself like a stone wall against the Australian ballot law, which it regarded as an attack upon its inalienable right to buy votes.

It was savagely against the present equitable tax law and fought it at every stage, and if returned to power is pledged to repeal it and go back to the old system of corporation favoritism.

It opposed the fee and salary law.

I have that confidence in the intelligence and justice of our people, that they will again confide the destiny of their state into the hands of a party that has been the party of progress and reform in Indiana and that has proven it can be trusted.—Claude Matthews.

There is a useful and delightful destiny connected with the Democracy. The good angel of destiny has saved our party through a hundred years. Our party has been saved that the masses of our people may prosper, and that the cause of the common people may triumph.—E. V. Brookshire.

COMPANY K. WILL RE-ENLIST.

A Talk About the Present and Future of Auburn's Crack Company.

NEVER say die, in a good cause, and never let go a good thing when you have it. A good militia company is a good thing. A poor militia company is of no account in peace or in war. But Auburn has a good company, one of the very best in the state, and we are justly proud of it and of its officers and members. Let us have a little timely talk about it.

The three years' term of service of Co. K, 3d Infantry, will expire Jan. 12 next, and the members are already considering a reorganization. A paper for signatures will be circulated in a few weeks and the re-muster will probably be made in December. The new company will be made up of a majority of the old members and recruited by young men of Auburn and the immediate vicinity between the ages of 18 and 45 years and of good character.

The company was mustered into service by Col. J. K. Gore on the evening of Jan. 12, 1892, with 50 members. On June 27th of the same year, they passed the general inspection, second in the regiment of twelve companies, ranking next below Co. F. of South Bend, which at that time was the best in the state.

The company attended a battalion encampment at Angola July 2, 3 and 4, with three other companies. July 23 to to 29 they were at Camp Chase, near Frankfort, attending the annual camp of instruction. Here Co. K. was selected by Col. Haste to escort the colors.

The "Escort of the Color" is a ceremony usually performed on the last day of the encampment and the post of honor is given to the company that has the best grade at general inspection. As Co. F. had been given the honor at the previous camp, the Colonel selected the "Auburn Rifles" for the post of honor. While the regiment was formed on the parade ground, the chosen company led by the regimental band, escorted the colors from the headquarters of the Colonel and presented them to him in front of the regiment. The marching of the company on this occasion was excellent, and they were complimented by the officers of the regiment.

The next trip of the company was on October 19, to attend the dedication of the World's Fair buildings. They were quartered and fed in the fair buildings, passed in review before Vice-President Morton with the troops of the regular army and the state forces of Indiana, Ohio, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa and Missouri. They returned on the 22d

During the last week in July, 1893, they attended the annual camp at Terre Haute. September 4 and 5 of the same year they were at Roby with eleven other companies to stop the prize fighting of the Columbia Athletic Club, the presence of this force having become necessary to stop this disgraceful business, as all other authorities had been persistently defied and set at naught.

July 17, 1894, at 3:30 a. m., they were ordered to Hammond to protect property during the railroad strike. The company started from Auburn at 9:34 a. m. with 43 men. They were at Hammond two days and were then sent to Whiting, where they were quartered in passenger cars with a Ft. Wayne company. Here they staid ten days, and then after all the other companies had been sent home, they were ordered back to Hammond at the urgent request of Sheriff Fredericks of that, Lake, county, and the mayor of Hammond, who had telegraphed the governor at the last moment. Here they staid two days and then were sent home.

They were given a reception by the citizens of Auburn on their return, and several weeks ago were presented with a beautiful flag as a token of the appreciation of their services and soldierly qualities, by the citizens.

The company has an excellent armory which is well furnished and makes a very pleasant place for drill and social meetings.

The troops will be supplied with overcoats, campaign hats, and leggings. As the old company has acquired so good a record, the new company will have no trouble in maintaining a good standing among the troops of the Indiana Legion. A committee will be appointed to select recruits from among the applicants so that only desirable men will be enlisted. We speak of this matter at this early date so that every encouragement may be given them, and every facility be extended to make the selection of such new material as may be accessible a matter of care and judgment. Much depends on the choice of this new material. But we have a good supply from which to draw more than enough to fill the company to the maximum limit. Anyone who stands on our streets these pleasant evenings and watches the squads of finely formed, stalwart young men go by, cannot but see we have abundant material. The veterans of the company are no longer objects of solicitude. Their past record is honorable, and such as enter the new organization will prove valuable in keeping it, also, in the front rank of our State troops.

MARSHAL GOBBLED 'EM.

Ft. Waynelites Wanted to Paint the Town Crimson, but Were Interrupted.

AMONG happenings of last Sunday, six young men from Ft. Wayne started out to have a lark They claimed they were going up the Jackson road a few miles to gather nuts. So they loaded a keg of beer onto a handcar and started. The nut business did not seem to delay them a great deal, for by about noon, they had reached Auburn. They lost no time in getting up town and at once began to make themselves a nuisance. They yelled and howled and "talked horsey" to everyone they could see. Marshal Baker objected and went to arrest them, but they took a sneak for the Lake Shore station, and jumped aboard their car and started for home. But Baker was too quick for them and threw a chunk of wood across the track, and when they struck it two of them were thrown off. One lost his hat, and in trying to get it he allowed the marshal to out-flank him, and so was arrested. The marshal also got the other man who fell off. But they afterwards let him go. The man who was held was brought up before 'Squire Walborn and fined. He would probably have been hit pretty hard if the justice had known fully, the tough character of the crowd, and all about their doings. Those who escaped will be apt to give Auburn the go-by for some time.

The Effect of the Democratic Tariff Law is to Reduce Prices of Necessaries.

THE business man looks at things as they are, and not as he would talk about them if he were a politician looking for votes. Hence we find all over the land, the business men, like John Wanamaker, advertising "reduced prices as effects of the new tariff." Democrats have all along said their new tariff law would bring down the price of the necessaries of life that could be affected by it at all, for they had reduced the tariff on nearly everything except sugar. When the McKiney law went into effect, it caused a rise in all prices except sugar, as the on all things except sugar had been raised. Now under the democratic law prices are going down so that good, clothing, etc, can be had cheaper. Do not our people remember how the ladies objected to the rise in prices of dress goods, at once, when the McKinley law went into effect? Now, they see the same goods getting cheaper. But to come back to the admissions of busieess men. Right here in Auburn we see how Bishop & Lackey view it. See their advertisement for three weeks past in the Dispatch and the COURIER. It reads:

	Last yr.	Now

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

DOINGS OF THE DAY.

SUMMARY OF THE NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Four Children Perish in the Flames Which Destroyed Their Homes—A Father Kills His Son and Commits Suicide—Shot by a Tramp—Fire Near Akron, Ohio.

FATAL FIRE.

Four Children of Rev. Taylor Lose Their Lives.

Four grand-children of Rev. Wm. Taylor, Methodist Missionary Bishop of Africa, perished in the elegant house of their father, Rev. R. Taylor in South Nyack, N. Y. In addition one man was so badly burned that he can scarcely recover and two others were seriously injured.

It was a little after 4 o'clock when Mrs. Taylor was awakened by the smell of smoke. She aroused her husband. They found the halls of their home filled with smoke, the fire having evidently obtained great headway. From the first it was plain the house was doomed, while the condition of the inmates was almost beyond hope. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor succeeded in grouping their way through suffocating smoke to the open air, without having been able to extend a helping hand to their six children or others of the household. People on the streets had seen the fire, and as Mr. and Mrs. Taylor emerged from the burning building the fire department arrived. The energies of all were directed toward the rescue of those who still remained in the doomed structure. The two eldest of the Taylor children, Stewart and William, were aroused in time and, jumping from the window of their chamber, were caught without being seriously injured. Four other of the children perished.

Besides the Taylor family there were in the house Michael Mulladey, a laborer, and two house decorators named Edward Linta and William Ruth. All three had been sleeping in the third story. When aroused, escape by the stairway was cut off, and they jumped for their lives. Mulladey was so badly hurt that he can scarcely recover. Ruth and Linta sustained serious injuries, but they will probably recover.

NICHOLIS II.

He Will Be the New Czar of Russia.

Berlin special: The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Tageblatt finds that all preparations in the Russian capital point to the succession of the Czarewitch, Nicholas. He says that the war office holds in readiness the standards of Nicholas II.

"The czarewitch's marriage with the Princess Alix of Hesse," he adds, "will be hastened in view of the house law, declared by Emperor Paul I, that no unmarried heir should succeed to the throne. Should the czarewitch be childless upon ascending the throne, the Grand Duke Michael, his younger brother, would be declared the heir presumptive."

Attempt to Wreck a Train.

An attempt was made to wreck the late train on the Alton road two miles east of Sag Bridge, Ill. Fortunately the attempt was a failure, for there were about 300 passengers on board. Ties had been placed along the track just inside the rails. The engine pilot struck them in such a manner they were thrown off the track. It is believed by some the obstruction was placed on the track by tramps. The officials of the road were at once notified and detectives have been sent to investigate.

A Terrible Affair.

John Waldz, an old resident of Cambridge City, Ind., shot himself and his 3-year-old son and both will die. Family trouble is given as the cause of the act. In each case the bullet pierced the abdomen. Husband and wife have been separated for two weeks and she has been staying with relatives. She arrived, however, at the bedside of the dying ones within a few minutes after the deed had been done. The affair has created unusual excitement.

Fire Near Akron, Ohio.

A special from Akron, Ohio, says: For forty-eight hours a fierce fire has been raging west of this city. It started in a swamp but has spread into the highlands and 700 acres of timber and farming land has been burned over. The damage already done will amount to $45,000.

Burned Alive.

The residence of Sylvester Yeagle, near Carlisle, Ohio, was struck by lightning and entirely consumed by fire. It is thought that Mrs. Yeagle and two children were instantly killed and their bodies consumed by the flames, as they cannot be found.

Shot by a Tramp.

Cassius Heppler, 14 years old, was shot by a tramp in the shoulder at Elkhart, Ind. The boy was left at home while his parents went to church. The tramp ransacked the house and escaped. The boy will recover.

Twenty Millions Missed.

Irregularities in the Bank of Brazil, involving $20,000,000 have been discovered. They occurred during the recent revolution.

Killed by a Fall.

Rev. J. S. Sellers of South Marion, Ind., fell off a load of hay and was instantly killed.

The Indiana Tax Law.

The United States Supreme Court has refused a hearing of the Indiana railroad tax cases decided at the last term of the court. The cases involved the legality of the Indiana railroad tax law.

Big Catch of Whales.

The steam whaler Narwahl has arrived at San Francisco from the Arctic and reported a catch of sixty-nine whales valued at nearly half a million dollars.

Old Man Frightfully Tortured.

Olney (Ill.) special: Clement Miller, aged 74, a bachelor living on his farm, was assaulted by three masked men. They ordered him to tell where his money was. He refused and they bound and beat him and put greased paper on his feet, limbs, and back, setting fire to it, but he would not tell them They then set fire to some greased paper on his face and beat him again, breaking three of his ribs and left arm. He became unconscious The theives ransacked everything about the place, but found no money. Some time after the old man returned to consciousness, and struggled to a neighbor living 400 yards distant. Since then he has been unconscious. A physician pronounces his case critical.

THE TEXAS WAY.

An Express Train Held Up and Robbed.

Fort Worth (Tex.) special: The west-bound Texas and Pacific through train for California, leaving here at 9:05 a. m., was robbed about 12 o'clock Saturday. The robbers secured about $20,000 from the Pacific express company and but for their inability to open the safe of the Texas and Pacific coal company, containing $20,000, in gold, would have made a better haul. Four men did the deed. They came upon a section gang about noon, covered them with Winchesters and forced them to spread the rails and flag the oncoming train. The engineer and fireman were then lined up with the section gang and guarded while two men entered the express car and covered the messenger before he was aware of their presence. Messenger Marshall was ordered to open the safe containing the money of the Texas and Pacific Coal Company. Telling them he could not do this, they seized a pick and ruined the combination, remarking, "If we can't get that money, those d—d miners at Thurber shan't." The robbers fled southward and no trace of them has yet been secured. Rewards aggregating $1,000 have been offered for their arrest. The money secured was taken from the way safe.

A LIVELY CRANK.

Refused $1,000, He Commences to Shoot.

A crank entered Clinton Place bank, Astor Place, New York, and demanded $1,000 from Paying Teller Hind. The teller told the crank to wait. As Hind turned away the crank fired a revolver point blank at him. The bullet flew by Hind's head burying itself in the adjoining woodwork. The crank was seized and turned over to the police. The officials of the Clinton Place Bank a few days ago received a postal card from a man saying he would call in a few days for a thousand dollars. Saturday he presented this draft: "Astor Place Bank, after date I promise to pay to the order of God Almighty the sum of $1,000 when presented by Charles Freeman. Penalty if not forforfeited—death." On the back was written: "Notice: This draft of one thousand will be all I will claim from one bank. I am authorized by God to draw upon all banks to whatever amount I see fit and the penalty refused me means that I have the right to shoot the person dead that refuses, and by the power of God, no man can stay my hand."

HOSTILITIES EXPECTED.

The Japanese and Chinese Armies Nearing Each Other.

Tien Tsin special: The Norwegian steamer Peik, from Shanghai, was recently overhauled and searched by the Japanese warship off the Sham Tung promontory. Nothing which could be classed as contraband of war was found on board the Peik. The captain of the Norweigan steamer reports that he sighted a fleet of Japanese warships thirty miles off Taku The Chinese fleet which has been undergoing repairs at Port Arthur as a result of the naval fleet engagement fought off the mouth of the Yalu River last month, was ordered to leave that port. The Japanese Army is expected to cross the Yalu River at a point thirty miles northeast of Cheulang Cheng, where the Chinese Army headquarters is situated. General Sing is in command of the Chinese forces at that place.

Attempted Train Wrecking.

McKeesport (Pa.) special: Dynamite was placed on the track of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad at Longrun bridge, and a serious wreck was narrowly averted. The stick of dynamite was tied to the rail. The Bissell accommodation encountered it. The explosion damaged the track and tore off one of the front wheels of the locomotive. The passengers were badly frightened and somewhat shaken up, but no one was seriously injured. No motive can be assigned for the deed. It is believed, however, that the explosive was placed on the track to wreck the eastern express train due at Longrun at the same time as the accommodation train, but the explosive being placed on the wrong track, the express train escaped an almost certain plunge over the high bridge.

Sounds Fishy.

Cassopolis (Mich.) special: Dr. A. B. Conklin, who has been missing from his home since the night of September 2, returned to the city the other night. He claims that he was abducted by two negroes on the night named, and that after being kept in close confinement in the house of some negroes some distance away from here for two weeks, he was turned over to some white men who traveled with him and kept him hid in the daytime. He was released last Tuesday in a strange locality, and after walking for some time found himself in Cincinnati. The doctor's clothes were not changed, but he was minus his mustache. He says he was rendered unconscious the night of his abduction and knows nothing of what has happened during the last six weeks.

The Czar Dying

St. Petersburg special: The Czar is at death's door and all members of the royal household are hurrying to his bedside. The bourse has been paralyzed, the dealers awaiting the cue from abroad. The commercial world is disturbed no less than the political world. St. Petersburg has not been so shaken with anxiety for years.

The Official Journal, containing the latest bulletin sent from Lavadia at 11 o'clock Thursday evening, was posted at the street corners throughout the city before midnight. It was read with intense interest by anxious crowds. The text is: "The condition of the Emperor has changed markedly for the worse. General debility and weakness of the heart are increasing." He can only last a day or two at best.

Three Men Injured.

Louisville (Ky.) special: Three men were injured, one fatally, at the Louisville and Jeffersonville bridge. The accident was caused by the falling of a part of the false work under the fourth span, which has just been completed and locked. The men were engaged in removing the false work, which is to be transferred to the fifth span to be completed. They were at work on the first bent, or division, of the structure. The top timbers had nearly all been removed and the remainder of the section collapsed. Harry Williams, Tom Prosney and a third man, whose name could not be learned, fell with it. All dropped into a bage below and was terribly maimed.

Terrible Fate of a Child.

A shocking accident happened about two and a half miles northeast of Goblesville, Ind. A little 3-years-old son of Elmer Kates was playing around the table and, grabbing hold of the cloth, pulled the lamp off. It exploded and the oil ran all over the child, and in an instant his clothes were in flames. The fire was extinguished as soon as possible, but not before the child was burned beyond recovery. His screams of agony were terrible and in a short time after the accident he expired.

Bigger Army Wanted.

Adjutant General Ruggles has made a separate report to General Schofield, commanding the army, in which is a recommendation that the enlisted strength of the army be increased to 30,000 men, so as give a maximum of 25,000 as to the regimental fighting force. This maximum, he says, will enable the Government to reorganize its artillery into seven regiments for coast defense and field artillery, and its infantry into three battalion regiments without interfering with the strength of the cavalry.

Miss Pollard's Case.

Washington special; The Breckinridge-Pollard case is now formally out of court, the notice of appeal given by Col. Breckinridge at the close of the trial having been docketed and dismissed on motion of Calderon Carlisle, Miss Pollard's counsil. This ends the case with a judgment for $15,000 standing in Miss Polland's favor against Col. Breckinridge. Col. Breckinridge is not known to have any property which can be attached to satisfy it.

A Fiery Monster.

In the Citizen's Gas Field, near Fountaintown, Ind., the company's twenty-fifth well had been bored to a depth of 500 feet, when a tremendous volume of gas had been struck. It was accidentally ignited, and the flames leaped forty feet in the air, burning the derrick, machinery, and licking the clothing, hair, and flesh from the six persons engaged in the work. So far all efforts to extinguish the fire have been fruitless.

Fatal Fire.

Fire started in the yards of the Thayer Lumber Company at Muskegon, Mich. Over 200,000 feet of lumber were destroyed. A pile of lumber forty feet high toppled over, and as it fell, caught Assistant Fire Chief John Ellens. He was rescued in twenty minutes. His back, arms, legs, skull, and chest had been broken by the weight of the lumber and his body was frightfully burned. He died in ten minutes.

Mask Robbers.

Parsons (Kan.) special: The Missouri Pacific passenger train No. 223, on the Kansas and Arkansas Valley branch, was held up by four or five masked men at Coretta siding, seven miles east of Wagoner, I. T. An empty car was placed on the main track and the train struck it The robbers commenced a terrible onslaught, and four or five persons were shot. The reports are meager.

A Chinese Victory.

A dispatch received from Shanghai says that according to Chinese advices a severe battle has been fought on the lower portion of the Yalu River. The Japanese are said to have crossed the river and to have attacked the Chinese, but it is reported that after fierce fighting the Japanese were repulsed. Both sides are said to have lost heavily.

Their Home Gone.

Thirty-five blind unfortunates who were comfortably housed under the care of the State of Ohio, at the little town of Iberia, six miles south of Galion, are wandering homeless, with only the roof of a deserted barn to keep the frost off their meagerly clad bodies. The State Working Home for the Blind was totally destroyed by fire.

Another Investment Company Stopped.

A special from Jackson, Miss., says: The Postoffice Department has declared the Mississippi Co-operative Loan and Investment Company of this city a lottery, and that it cannot use the mails. William Henry, Adjutant General of the State, is President of the concern, and it has been doing a land-office business for six months.

Two Girls Burned to Death.

The residence of Herman Barthold, a farmer living half a mile from Green Springs, Ohio, was destroyed by fire. Barthold and his wife and son barely escaped with their lives and the two daughters aged 12 and 7 were burned to death.

'Twas Only a Match.

Wm. Abel, clerk in Freiberger's hardware store, Fort Wayne, Ind., dropped a match in a powder can. The entire front of the building was blown out and Abel hurled into the air. He is in a critical condition.

His Head Was Gone.

The Headless body of John McHughes, an old veteran, was found near the Pan-handle bridge at McFolle's mills, near Marion, Ind.

A Crossing Horror.

Mrs. Mary Sawyer and two young daughters, aged 16 and 18, were killed while driving over the Burlington tracks near Dorchester, Neb.

Fitzsimmons Signs.

Fitzsimmons has signed the articles for a fight with Corbett, the champion having made a number of concessions.

Victim Number Five Dead.

Theodore Ammerman, the fifth victim of the rioting at Washington Court House, Ohio, has died.

THE WAR IN THE EAST

GREAT BRITAIN WOULD LIKE TO INTERFERE.

Other Powers Will Not Support Her—Japan Is Meantime Threshing China—Russian Activity—Combatants Will Be Left Alone for the Present.

Struggle in the Orient.

As the war between China and Japan progresses, the situation becomes more interesting and more critical. Affairs have now reached a pass where some of the European governments would like to interfere, but their mutual jealousies and conflicting interests and the possible result of a general intercontinental struggle limit interference thus far to diplomatic talks. It would be manifestly to Great Britain's commercial interest to have the struggle come to a speedy end, and with such object in view she has sounded other governments' intentions. Germany is averse to any interference; Russia is professedly pro-Japanese, and will brook no interference to the injury of Japan; France, which secretly rejoices whenever the British lion gets a kink in its tail and which is the ally of Russia, has no desire to meddle in the matter, and Austria, following the example of Germany, does not seek to embroil herself in a matter that does not directly concern her. Italy alone of the great powers hearkens to England's wishes, for she is anxious to divert the attention of her enslaved millions from maladministration at home to some possibly brilliant exploits abroad. But Italy would be a frail reed for England to rely on in any interference in oriental affairs, and thus the combatants in the far east will be left alone for the present to settle their difficulties.

Russian Activity.

In the expected final defeat of China and the possible dismemberment of her territory there doubtless will be European interference. The nations most intimately affected outside Japan are Russia and England, and their interests are as antagonistic as they well can be. Russia will unquestionably endeavor to secure an increase of Manchurian territory, with the object of establishing a new sea port on the Pacific. Several years ago she asked such a grant from China, but was refused and now it seems as though the present war turned up most opportunely for her purpose. For some reason she is now busy mobilizing troops in eastern Siberia. She has a powerful fleet of war vessels at her Pacific port of Vladivostock, and has there collected an army of 30,000 men. At Irkutsk is another army of 30,000 and all along the line of the Amur River are the Cossack settlements, which are bound to contribute a large number of men on any demand made on them by the Czar. Thus without moving a ton of freight or a single man from her western departments, Russia has a strong available army and fleet in the east, and when the time comes that it suits Russia to declare herself she will be ready to strike a strong blow in carrying out her traditional policy of establishing the vast empire on a broader and grander basis on the shores of the Pacific. How soon that time may arrive can only be conjectured. It probably will not be before spring. One thing is certain, that the Muscovite will not allow the present opportunity to pass without availing of it to establish his power permanently in the Pacific. Such action by Russia England would resent. Long ago she threatened that if Russia would acquire any port in Corea she would seize Port Hamilton, which commands the entrance to the Japanese Sea. It is altogether probable that the two nations may begin their long threatened quarrel over India, not in Afghanistan after all, but in the seas that wash the coast of sluggish China.

Japan's Successes.

Meantime Japan is making strenuous efforts to force the war to a finish. Since the beginning of hostilities she has maintained the upper hand by land and sea, and is now concentrating her efforts to invade China and march upon Pekin, the capital of the empire. Her Corean army, after having driven the Chinese out of the peninsula, is marching rapidly on Moukden, capital of the Chinese province of Manchuria, and after the capture of that city of 200,000 souls, which should not be very difficult, this army is to march on Pekin. Meantime another Japanese army is ready for the invasion of China and if a successful landing can be made on the Gulf of Pechili both armies will unite under the walls of Pekin.

This is believed to be the Japanese programme; but in war programmes cannot always be carried out as drawn up and something may yet occur to mar Japanese plans and protract the struggle beyond the present year.

While Japan is thus prosecuting the war with vigor, China is divided and distracted. The government itself is in disunion, one faction contending for war to a finish, the other for peace. Among the masses dissatisfaction exists and petty rebellions are cropping up. The navy, defeated by the Japanese at the mouth of the Yalu River, has lost its courage; the army is badly organized and equipped, and among high and low there is corruption and distrust. Relying on its boundless resources the government, however, hopes to be able to overcome the advantages hitherto gained by its adversary, but it will be many months before the work of organizing war material can be carried out, and meantime Japan has ample time to deal deadly blows at China and even capture Pekin itself.

LIFE IS EBBING AWAY.

Count Honore Mercier a Leading Canadian Politician Dying.

Count Honore Mercier, for 15 or 20 years a leading Canadian politician, has been ill for some time, and his life is now slowly ebbing away. Honore Mercier was born at St. Athanase, Que., in 1840; was educated at the College of the Jesuit Fathers in Montreal; studied for the bar and began to practice at St. Hyacinthe in 1865. He edited the St. Hyacinthe Courier for a time, but resigned to enter politics. He attempted to make Quebec an independent province for the French and for Rome. In 1872 he was elected to represent Rouvelle in the House of Commons, where he made a deep impression. In 1886 he was chosen Premier of Quebec, and became famous as an extreme Nationalist. He was created a Count of the Holy Roman Empire, when Pope Leo invited him to Rome, but on his return to Canada, he was confronted by charges of corruption in office, was deposed from the Premiership, and has since lived a retired life in Montreal, beloved by his friends and adored by his little family.

HONORE MERCIER.

MAY END CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

A Fatal Case in New Jersey to Be Brought Into Court.

There will soon be tried in Riverton, N. J., a case which promises to be one of the most important which have come before the courts in many years. It involves points which, if the prosecution is successful, will practically end the practice of the doctrine known as Christ an Science in the United States. It will at least be a long step in that direction. Realizing this the Scientists are going to make a great fight, and opposed to them and equally determined are the doctors. Back of it all is the death by consumption of a young woman named Sadie Bell, of Riverton.

Sadie began to cough about ten months ago. A physician was consulted and declared the girl to be in the early stages of consumption. He thought it possible for her to be cured provided the closest attention was given to her medically. One of Sadie's friends, hearing of her illness, sent Mrs. Bessie T. Glenn, a Christian scientist, to her, and after one sitting with the girl the latter was so impressed with a belief in the woman's power that she told her parents they had better tell the physician not to call again. This they did and Sadie found herself solely in the hands of the woman.

Sadie's cough grew worse. But still she had faith in Mrs. Glenn and that woman intimated that she should have some recompense, although she had declared that she never took money. In all $53 was given her, Sadie all the time getting worse. A few weeks ago Sadie died. Mrs. Glenn was not competent to give a certificate of death, and when the local physician was appealed to he refused, as it was not his case; and so Sadie's death had to be reported to the coroner. In New Jersey there is a law which provides that a person who practices faith cure or under the guise of Christian science attempts to make cures by religious means, commits a crime and must be punished by not less than thirty days in jail nor less than $100 fine. So when the facts of the case came to the knowledge of the jurymen, they were but a short time coming to the conclusion that Sadie Bell would have lived longer had a regular physician been employed: and having proof that Mrs. Glenn was a practicing Christian Scientist she was held in bail to await the action of the grand jury.

When her case comes up in court the interest of many persons throughout the country will center in the little New Jersey town, and if Mrs. Glenn is convicted and sent to prison it will be the greatest blow Christian Science could receive. Other States, too, may take counsel from New Jersey and laws of a similar nature may go on the statute books all over the United States.

IN THE POLITICAL SWIM.

George Denny, Jr., the Republican Leader in Breckinridge's District.

Of interest is George Denny, Jr., Republican candidate for Congress in the Ashland District of Kentucky, W. C. P. Breckinridge's old district. For years Judge Denny has been one of the most prominent Republicans in the State. He has earned the honor bestowed upon him by his hard work for his party. His political career was begun by his election as County Judge of Garrard county in 1878. The following year he was made Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee. As a delegate from his district he attended the conventions of 1884 and 1888 at Chicago. Judge Denny stumped the State for the Republican ticket in 1892.

Morris B. Beardsley, recently nominated for Lieutenant Governor of Connecticut by the Democratic State Convention, was one of the leading candidates for Governor. Mr. Beardsley resides at Bridgeport, was a representative of that city in the Connecticut General Assembly, and was conspicuously active in progressive legislation. Prior to his election to the State Legislature he served for many years as Judge of Probate at Bridgeport. He is well-schooled in law, is practical and methodical, and a man of equable disposition.

M. le Myre de Vilers Bears France's Ultimatum to the Island.

No personage has been more to the front since the attempt of the French to establish a protectorate over Madagascar than M. le Myre de Vilers, French envoy to the island. He has demanded that the entire northeast coast, including the best harbor, be ceded to France: that she control the northern peninsula, and that concessions of any kind be invalid unless approved by her. In short, France is to dominate in the island regardless of other people. The strained relations existing between France and England were caused by this action of the French. M. le Myre de Vilers is at present the bearer of an ultimatum to Madagascar.

MADE FROM MOLASSES.

Pure Spirits Now Manufactured from the Syrup of Sugar Beets.

An experiment of great commercial value has just been successfully tried in Omaha, Neb., namely, the production of pure spirits from beet sugar molasses. The consequences of this will be far reaching. It will cause the production of an entirely new industry and it will afford great additional profit to the sugar manufacturers, as hitherto the molasses incidental to the making of beet root sugar has not been used for anything and has been a total loss. The process consists in the application of a secret chemical preparation, which transforms the molasses into a sort of glucose, perfectly adapted to distillery uses.

FIRE UPON THE MOB.

OHIO SOLDIERS SHOOT INTO WOULD-BE LYNCHERS.

Scenes of Bloodshed About Washington Court House, Ohio—Citizens, Eager to Wreak Vengeance on a Negro, Storm the Jail—Threaten to Use Dynamite.

Three Killed and Many Hurt.

At Washington Court House, Ohio, three men were killed and about a dozen injured, some fatally, by the militia, in the endeavor to keep mobs from lynching William Dolby, colored. Dolby assaulted Mrs. Mary C. Boyd, aged 55, at Parrott's station a week ago, and was captured at Delaware, Ohio, and brought into court at Washington Court House. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to twenty years in the penitentiary. An angry mob gathered about the jail after Dolby had been identified by his victim, and Sheriff Cook called to his assistance the local militia company. This action increased the fury against Dolby, and Gov. McKinley was appealed to for additional assistance, and troops from Columbus were sent, Col. Coit in command.

The mob surrounding the jail and court house attempted to take Dolby from the officers when removed from the jail to the court house for trial, but were kept at bay by the free use of bayonets and clubbed guns. When brought to the court house Dolby broke down. While bringing him from the jail the mob charged and almost succeeded in getting him. Henry Kirk, the brother-in-law of the assaulted woman, was knocked down the steps and badly bruised. Another man was bayoneted through the finger, while a bayonet was thrust through the clothes of another. Deputies, with revolvers drawn, guarded the prisoner in the court room.

Dolby cried like a baby and kept looking around for help. Soldiers were marched in to keep the crowd quiet. After the sentence the prisoner was taken to the grand jury room. A mob gathered about the Court House, and it was impossible to get the prisoner through to take him to the train. The officers were powerless to get Dolby from the Court House to the jail or to the train, and Sheriff Cook wired the Governor to send more troops. The mob grew rapidly in numbers and desperation. Col. Coit made a speech, asking the crowd to disperse, but it was received with jeers. The prisoner was prostrate from fear and lay crying and moaning all the time.

Guards Fire Upon the Mob.

The mob kept Dolby and his guards prisoners in the courthouse until 6 p. m. and then made an attack. The militia repelled them without firing at first, but at 6:45 p. m. the south door was forced open. This door opens upon the street, which was filled with men, women, and children. The detachment of the guards finally fired on the attacking party. None of the latter was hurt, but a dozen or more persons in the street were struck, two killed outright and five more were fatally wounded, one having since died. The wounded were all hurriedly removed from the scene by friends.

The people were frenzied and threatened to dynamite the court house. Additional troops were ordered from Cincinnati, Columbus, Chillicothe, and other points.

BOMB AT AN IRISH MEETING.

Dastardly Attempt to Blow Up the Blake Reception in New York.

The reception given by the Irish National Federation to Edward Blake, M. P., at the Lenox Lyceum, in New York, was productive of some results never dreamed of by its originators. In the heart of the meeting, and while all eyes were turned upon Mr. Blake as he stood upon the platform delivering one of his most impressive speeches, a stoutly built, frowsily dressed man walked swiftly around the back of the front tier of boxes until he reached the last one nearest the platform and to the left of the proscenium arch. In his hand he carried an old, bulky, green gingham umbrella, which he seemed to hold with peculiar tenderness. Outside the box he stopped, hesitated a moment, and then entering, took a chair in a corner nearest the stage. The old man left in a minute.

It might have been a minute or two later when a sharp cry from the women in the box, resounding through the house, startled everyone from their seats and stopped the speaker. At the same moment there leaped out a gush of flame and smoke, and then followed the shriek of "Fire" and the simultaneous movement of 500 panic-stricken creatures to the door, but even as they turned Patrolman Lilley rushed into the box, violently dancing on something with his feet, while the voice of Mr. Blake rang through the big building calling on his audience to keep their seats. "The fire's out. Come back," cried those on the platform when the flame had gone and the smoke disappeared.

As Lilley stooped to pick up the burning frame he saw lying among the fragments of the umbrella a small, stout tube or bottle The tube was eight inches long and two in circumference, and capped with a covering of gelatin. The tube was filled with a white liquid, which the police think is nitric acid. Attached to the gelatin had been a piece of fuse half burned away.

MUST IMPORT WHEAT.

European Crop 116,000,000 Bushels Short—Estimates by Countries.

The condition of the crops of Europe for 1894 is given in the forthcoming report of the statistician of the Agricultural Department for October. The estimated wheat harvest amounted to 1,435,410,000 Winchester bushels, against a regular consumption of 1,553,500,000 bushels. The harvest by countries is as follows:

	Production, bu.	Consumption, bu.
United Kingdom	61,824,000	239,000,000
France	343,425,000	350,000,000
Germany	113,500,000	12[illegible],000,000
Spain and Portugal	110,500,000	115,500,000
Italy	122,959,000	149,000,000
Austria-Hungary	217,000,000	190,000,000
Roumania	41,000,000	15,000,000
Bulgaria	31,000,000	20,000,000
Russia	310,000,000	2[illegible],000,000
Belgium	16,500,000	25,000,000
Holland	6,115,000	35,000,000
Denmark	5,100,000	8,500,000
Other countries	54,500,000	43,000,000

This gives 116,000,000 bushels as the approximate requirement from abroad.

Owing to unfavorable harvest weather, only a small part of the wheat in Great Britain is fit for milling purposes. The oat crop is considered excellent. There is about 2,475,648 bushels of last year's wheat crop in first hands. The amount necessary to be imported to meet all demands will be about 189,798,680 bushels, at about 3,646,000 bushels a week. Official estimates of the crop just gathered in France show the quantity of wheat in excess of the average. The harvest makes France practically independent of outside supplies, but some wheat will probably be imported. The wheat crop in Roumania is the smallest for five years, the rye crop falls below that of last year, and the yield of barley and oats per acre is the lowest in five years. There was about half a crop of corn.

In Germany wheat shows a falling off in quantity and quality from last year and the potato crop is very disappointing. The Austrian wheat crop is expected to measure 50,000,000 bushels. Barley and oats have an average yield, but corn does not promise so well. Italian grain is reported excellent in quality. The corn crop, damaged by drought, is looked upon as lost in many districts. Belgian wheat harvested under very unfavorable conditions is inured in quality. Hungary's wheat fields yielded 167,000,000 bushels: rye, 61,000,000; and corn, 60,000,000. There is an average rye crop in Austria, except in quality, which is deemed poor. In Russia the approaching completion of the Siberian Railroad is expected to open up to commerce a new field, and "a new and vigorous competitor," says the statistician, "will before long be found in the markets of Europe," as an enormous quantity of fertile land will be brought under cultivation by the railroad.

WANT TO BE GOVERNORS.

Men Who Seek High Honors at the Hands of the People.

Ernest Cady, whom the Democrats of Connecticut have chosen as their leader in the gubernatorial contest, is the present Lieutenant Governor. He is a prominent Free Mason, a Grand Army man on the strength of service in the navy during the civil war, a wealthy manufacturer and leading citizen of Hartford. He was born Sept. 6, 1842, at Stafford, Tolland County, lost his father when but nine years old, and thereafter supported himself by his own labor. His education he received at the winter terms of the public schools. Since 1862 he has been in the firm of Pratt & Cady, manufacturers of steam-boiler appliances at Hartford. Mr. Cady has twice been elected Lieutenant Governor on the ticket with Lu on B. Morris.

The Republican nominee for Governor of Massachusetts, Frederick T. Greenhalge, was born in England in 1842. Early in the '50s his family came to the United States, and settled in Lowell, Mass., where the subject of this sketch entered the public schools. In 1859 he entered Harvard College, but three years later was obliged to leave because of the death of his father, which left him the main support of his mother and six sisters, he being the only son. He was admitted to the bar in 1865; held several city offices, and in 1885 entered the State House of Representatives. He also served in the Fifty-first Congress. He is a very popular man in his State.

FEEDING WHEAT.

Report by the Kansas Board of Agriculture Says It Is Decidedly Profitable.

Farmers can not fail to be interested in an elaborate and able report just published by the Kansas State Board of Agriculture on the advantages and disadvantages of wheat as a food for farm animals. The conclusion reached is that, at the present price of wheat, there is decided profit to be gained in feeding wheat instead of corn.

In order to get at the truth in this late phase of the cheap-wheat problem, the Secretary of the Kansas State Board of Agriculture recently sent a carefully prepared list of questions to 1,000 wheat growers, stock growers, feeders and dairymen, and after editing the replies found himself in possession of 400 very useful contributions on the subject. From the answers and estimates of these observant and practical men he compiled the following interesting conclusions:

Of the 24,827,523 bushels of winter and spring wheat raised in Kansas in 1893 there has been used as feed for farm animals 4,059,323 bushels, or 16.4 per cent. When fed whole, especially to hogs, 25 per cent. of the wheat grains are swallowed unmasticated and go through the animal undigested—a shameful waste. Yet three-fourths of the men reporting, representing fifty counties, state that, pound for pound, wheat is superior to shelled corn for fattening hogs—even with the one-fourth waste. This superiority is estimated variously at from 7 to 35 per cent., the average placing the superiority of wheat over corn at 16 per cent. As to how much live pork may be expected as a fair return per bushel of wheat fed to hogs, the average of all the answers is eleven pounds. It is also of interest to note that the cost of raising a bushel of wheat in Kansas ranges from 56¼ cents, where an acre yields only 10 bushels, down to 26 cents where an acre yields 35 bushels.

The Secretary sums up his conclusions thus: Under existing conditions wheat has become a very unusual and important factor in the grain feeding of all classes of farm stock. It is superior to corn in producing healthful, well-balanced growth in young animals. Mixed with corn, oats or bran, it is much superior to either alone for working horses

CHAPTER II.

Roderick Jardine was not, I hope, a worse young fellow than most others of his age, or less soft-hearted.

Yet when he had fairly bade good-by to his good, tearful mother—who, he knew well, would do anything in the world for him, except let him do what he felt was best for himself—this parting once over, he breathed more freely than he had done for many weeks.

His "wild-goose chase" had resolved itself into a deliberate purpose, or as much so as was possible to his nature, and at his age. He had not been to Blackhall—he hardly knew why, except that his mother had thrown a good many impediments in the way of the journey, so that perceiving that she did not like it, he gave it up. But he had a long correspondence with Mr. Black, the old factor there, who knew all the family affairs.

From him Roderick discovered that there had been, half a century back, three branches of Jardines—represented by Silence Jardine, Archibald Jardine, and Henry Jardine, his father. Thence Archibald had suddenly disappeared abroad, taking his little patrimony. After many years he was heard of as a "pasteur" in some Swiss canton; no very great change, he having been intended for the Scotch Church; and he was said to be married, with a family. But he had never revived acquaintance with either of his cousins, and what were his present circumstances, whether he were alive or dead, nobody knew.

He had only been able to catch one clew whereby he might find his cousin. Mr. Black, the Blackhall factor, a strong Free Church man, had taken some interest in a similar disruption in the Swiss Church, and in one of the controversial writers therein, a "professeur" or "pasteur," or both—the good man's ideas on the subject were misty—at Neuchatel. To this M. Reynier Roderick brought a letter of introduction, but, on delivering it, found the family were still at their summer retreat in the Jura Mountains. So he decided to make the best of a bad business, and amuse himself till they came back. He knew the language—that was one comfort—and he was not of the stolid Saxon temperament, which refuses to take in any new ideas, or to see any perfection in things to which it is unaccustomed. He was a true Celt, impressionable and flexible by nature, ready to love, quick to hate, until the experience of life should teach caution in the one and tolerance in the other. "The world will go hard with you, my boy," his father had sometimes said, half tenderly, half pensively; and Roderick, shaking his black curls, had only laughed, afraid of nothing.

Nor was he discouraged or afraid now. In fact, he rather enjoyed this dropping from the clouds—oh, what scaling clouds!—into a new place and new people. Not so very new after all, for when on Sunday morning he followed the dripping multitude up the steep street which led to the cathedral—now a Protestant church—he found everything so like home that but for the language he could have imagined himself "sitting under" his mother's favorite minister at Richerden. Only when the psalm arose, to a quaint and beautiful tune, and it was a beautiful psalm, too, for he read it out of his neighbor's book, beginning—

"Grand Dieu, nous te louons, nous t'adorons, Seigneur," it contrasted favorably with the nasal hymns which so tormented him in Scotland. It was sung not badly, especially by one pure high soprano, a few seats behind, a voice so good that he vainly tried to catch sight of the singer; and in its sweet musical French it seemed to express what he missed so often at home, the sense of cheerfulness in religion. To the last verse—

Nous n'esperons, O Dieu, du'en ta grande bonte;
Tu seul peut nous aider dans notre adversite.
Rendrè nos jours heureux et notre ame contente, the invisible singer behind gave such pathos that it went right to his heart. The young man, called often "irreligious" by his mother, because his religion lay very deep down, longed earnestly for those jours heureux, that ame contente, and wondered if, by any means, he could attain to the like—he, all alone, with nobody to help him to be good, hundreds ready to allure him to be bad.

It was a small thing, one of those trifling incidents which befall us all—only some of us note them and others do not; but long afterward he remembered it with a strange solemnity, like a person who, believing he was walking in his own way, on his own feet, finds out that hands unseen, unfelt, have been leading him all the while.

Plunging back through the muddy streets, "home"—what a ridiculous word—to the dreary hotel, Roderick made up his mind to give one day's more chance to the weather, and to the absent Professeur Reynier, upon whom, all his famille charmante, the garcon dilated enthusiastically; for everybody seemed to know everybody in this innocent little town. If, on the morrow, it did not cease raining, and some token did not come in answer to his letter and card, Roderick resolved to change his quarters, and try "fresh woods and pastures new"—take, in short, to pleasure instead of duty, and pursue the search after this vague distant cousin no more.

But the next day in rising, behold a change! And such a change!

The mist had entirely lifted off from the lake. Its wide bosom lay, still gray, but motionless and clear in the soft dawn. And beyond, their intense purple sharply distinct against the bright amber of the sky, was the long line of Alps. Through one deep indentation, between the Jungfrau and the Fensterhorn, the sun was slowly rising, dyeing the snows rose-color, and then, as he mounted above the cleft, pouring a sudden stream of light right across the lake—that "golden path of rays," which always feels like a bridge whereon delivered souls might walk—they to us or we to them—those that on earth we see no more.

Roderick, as he gazed, was conscious of the same sensation which had come over him a few days before—that intuition of approaching fate—bliss or bale, which by those who have it not is esteemed mere fancy, and supremely ridiculous; and even those who have it have need to be rather afraid of it, just as a very imaginative person would be less in fear of the ghosts he beheld than of the ghosts he created.

"Abeit omen," murmured Roderick, as, having stood in an ecstasy, watching the gorgeous sunrise, he saw it melt into common daylight, as all sunrises do, in November especially. A dull, rainy mist began once more to gather on the distant peaks. "Another wet day, after all. Richerden itself could not be worse than this. Shall I go home again?"

But it was so ignominious to go home, having done nothing, seen nothing, that he thought he would make an effort at least to get to Berne and back before the short day closed. And descending, beside his solitary plate at the dreary table d'hote breakfast he found a letter, the daintiest, most politely worded billet, inviting him, in the name of M. le Professeur and Mme. Reynier, to pass the evening at their house.

"Six o'clock, and a soiree! What simple folks they must be here!"

But, finding, he could be back in time, he accepted the invitation in his very best French, and started off to the railway station, on his little bit of solitary sight-seeing.

No one shared his carriage—abroad there is a saying that nobody travels first-class except fools and Englishmen—so he admired all alone the picturesque country which skirts the long chain of lakes; very comfortable, but just a trifle dull. Not that Roderick disliked his own company; on the contrary, he preferred it to that of most people he met—but he had had so much of it lately. It would have been rather pleasant to have somebody to whom he could say that Berne was a most curious old town, with whom he could have thrown buns to the bears, those important personages, "rentiers" on their own account; still better, when inquiring his way to Terrasse, and finding the view hopeless, the mountains being again "couverts," he had to content himself with admiring the river which flows below it, circling the pretty town like a tender arm. Still more would he have liked somebody, anybody, beside him, with whom he could lean over the low wall and argue about the sensations of the man on horseback, who leaped down—Heaven knows how many feet—without being killed; and what sort of sermons he preached—since, the inscription says, he at once entered the Church and was a minister in it for many years.

"Suppose I, Roderick Jardine, were to jump down now, just to feel a sensation, or create one—Folly!"

And laughing at himself, and his inordinate vexation at the dull gray day, the miserable mountains, the solitude, everything! he went to feed at a restaurant, and lounge away the time till return train.

Just before it started, by a sudden impulse, hoping against hope, he walked back to the Terrasse, and turned a last look in the direction of mountains. One instant—one wonderful, bewildering instant—and then—

"If, after my death, I open my eyes in Paradise, I know, I feel, it will look like that."

Such was the thought which passed through Roderick's mind—the only thought, for every feeling was absorbed into mere gazing—drinking in through eyes and soul a vision, utterly indiscribable to those who have never seen it.

The Jungfrau in the sunset, spiritualized by a clear amber glory, till it resembles nothing earthly, only that new Jerusalem "coming down from heaven like a bride prepared for her husband"—Roderick gazed and gazed, almost out of himself with ecstasy, thinking of nothing, seeing nothing, though there was a little group beside him gazing too. But he never noticed them, till, stepping backward, he came against somebody, and said, "Pardon, madame"—then turned and saw it was not madame at all—mademoiselle.

She had never observed him—not in the least. Her eyes were too fixed upon the mountains, in entire absorption—large, calm, blue, almost English eyes. And her short, curly fair hair might have been English too. But when at the second "Pardon" she turned, there was an unmistakable foreign grace in her slight acknowledgment. She and her companion, an older lady, exchanged a word or two, but it was French, spoken with the purest of accents. So if Roderick had had any hope of finding a countrywoman it faded out at once.

Faded—as the lovely vision of the Jungfrau and Fensterhorn already had begun to fade. Yet still the little group stood silently gazing, in a common sympathy. Roderick never looked even at his young neighbor, until, suddenly turning, their eyes met. Both were full of tears:

"At the first sight
They have changed eyes."

People dispute this truth, and yet it is a truth to some people and under some circumstances.

Startled to a degree that almost annoyed him—bowing instinctively, and then blushing deeply to think that he had done so, that he had taken such a liberty with any strange lady, Roderick hurried away, having indeed waited so long that his swift young feet and the happy tardiness of Swiss railways alone saved him from losing his train and the Reynier soiree.

"But I will come back to Berne tomorrow," thought he. "It is a far prettier town than Neuchatel; and—I wonder if she is a Bernois? I wonder if I shall ever see her face again?"

Just then—was it possible?—in the dim light a gray gown passed him and slipped into a third-class carriage. And he had an impression that she wore a gray gown.

"Nonsense," laughing at himself as he lounged back in his luxurious wagon; "a creature like that couldn't possibly travel third-class."

So he tried to forget her, and think only of the Jungfrau; then secondarily, of the means he must take to interest M. Reynier in his search for Archibald Jardine—in whom, it must be confessed, his own interest was fast dying out. Anything tedious, or dull, or unpleasant, was so new to him. He did not appreciate it at all.

The train being late, he had only just time to dart out and fly to his hotel to dress for the evening.

He had a fine face and a graceful figure, a bearing that was "every inch the gentleman"—and manners—well, he could not have said a harsh or discourteous word to a woman—any woman, high or low, ugly or pretty, young or old—for his life! Thus he appeared as he entered the salon of M. le Professeur Reynier.

It was very dimly lighted, with shaded lamps, so that at first Roderick distinguished nothing; then he became aware of a gray-haired gentleman, a matronly lady, and a cloud of young people of different ages, down to quite small children; of a courteous and kindly reception, and of passing into a salle-a-manger, where was laid out a simple but abundant meal, corresponding to the "hungry tea" of Scotch habit. Everything, indeed, was extremely simple—but so pretty! from the shiny parquet floor to the tastefully decolated table, with its dainty china, flowers, and fruit. One missed a little the bright English fire, and the stove gave a certain closeness to the room—a sense of warm darkness, which, however, was not unpleasant; there was a sort of mystery about it, and youth likes mystery. Roderick glanced round him at the party, evidently quite a family party.

It was an odd thing, a very odd thing; but dropping down as if from the clouds upon this little town which a week ago was to him a mere dot on the map, he felt himself quite at home there—he a Cambridge man and a man of fortune—more at home than he had done in Richerden society all his days. And when, re-entering the salon, he found a few other guests, scarcely visible in the dim light, and was introduced expressly to a "Mees Somebody from Edimbourg," who responded, with painful blushes, in the broadest of Scotch accents, he heartily wished his own country-people were—well, that they were all safe at home!

"And here, monsieur," continued his host, leading him up to another lady, middle-aged—"here is one of our best friends, though but newly settled near us, who I doubt not will have the pleasure of conversing with you in your own tongue—Monsieur Ardon—Madame——"

Roderick was so amused by the transformation of his own name that he scarcely caught the lady's, but he was too shy still either to correct the one or inquire about the other.

"Monsieur Reynier is very polite," said his neighbor, still speaking in French. "But he forgets that it is my daughter who knows English so well; her papa took the greatest pains to teach her. For me—I was always too busy, and too stupid. Besides," with a slight sigh, which directed Roderick's attention from the gentle face to the widow's mourning—though not exactly "weeds"—"my husband loved French best. It was the language of his adopted country."

"He was not Swiss-born, then?" asked Roderick, sitting down by her. She was neither beautiful, nor even pretty, never could have been; but there was a charm in her manner—a mixture of French grace and Swiss earnestness—which attracted him much.

"No, monsieur, he was English, or rather Scotch, naturalized here. My daughter!"—but no translation can express the tender intonation of that word ma fille—"will you come and tell this gentleman the name of the place—I cannot pronounce it—where your papa was born?"

Roderick's gaze followed madame's to a tall, slender girl, dressed, not like her mother, in black, but in pure white; no floppy, flouncy muslin, but a thick, soft woolen material, up to the throat and down to the wrists. She had a small, well-set curly head—actual curls, like a child's—and turning quietly round she met him with those calm, blue eyes, the very same eyes which had filled with tears at the sunset beauty of the Jungfrau.

Once more the young man started, absolutely started. He seemed taken, nay, clutched, by the very hand of destiny itself. For on entering the room he had looked into every fresh face of these pleasant Swiss girls, vaguely hoping to find again those wonderful blue eyes. They faced him in entire unconsciousness and with a direct, child-like simplicity, corresponding with the childish curls.

"Mamma," she said, bowing to the stranger a grave, dignified, self-possessed bow, more like a young English woman than these timid foreign maidens. "Pardon. I am just going to sing with Sophie Reynier; but I will come back presently, as Mr. Reynier desired me, and speak English with this gentleman, if he wishes it."

HOW HE BANISHED RATS.

The Quaint German Legend of the Pied Piper of Hamelin.

There are few more curious legends than that of the Pied Piper of Hamelin, a subject that has been immortalized by the poet, Robert Browning, and which attracted the artistic brush of the eminent painter, William Von Kaulbach.

Hamelin is a town of Hanover, Germany, and toward the close of the thirteenth century was infested by rats. They were so numerous that in the words of Browning

They fought the dogs and killed the cats
And bit the babies in the cradles,
And ate the cheese out the vats
And licked the soup from the cook's own ladles,
Split open the kegs of salted sprats,
Made nests inside men's Sunday hats
And even spoiled the women's chats.

While the mayor and authorities were in consultation over means to rid the city of the pest a strange figure, dressed in yellow and red, entered the room and offered for 1,000 guilders to expel the rats. The offer was accepted, and going into the street he began playing on his pipe.

Then out of the houses the rats came tumbling.
Great rats, small rats, lean rats, brawny rats,
Brown rats, black rats, gray rats, tawny rats,
Brothers, sisters, husbands and wives
Followed the piper for their lives.

The piper led the way to the River Weser into which the rats plunged and were drowned. Returning to the mayor the piper demanded his 1,000 guilders but was refused. He again entered the street and began playing another tune. Immediately children began to flock around him and he led, under the spell of his music, to Koppelberg Hill, where they entered through a door that suddenly opened and were never again seen. Numerous efforts were made to discover the whereabouts of the piper and have him restore the little ones, but the piper was never again heard of.

A Vast Ruined City.

A party of scientists have recently explored the ruins of the great city of Ancor, or Angor, situated in what are now the almost inaccessible forests of Cambodia. These ruins were discovered only a short time ago, comparatively, though rumors of the existence of such a place have long been current in the country. The ruins as described would indicate that Ancor must have been one of the largest cities in the world, if not the largest. Temples, palaces and edifices of vast size in a fine state of preservation lie scattered over a wide territory, intermingled with mounds and masses of crumbling stone and brick. Large forest trees are growing upon the debris and in the courts of palace and temple. Little is known of the history of Ancor, though it is stated that it could send forth a million or more fighting men. The portions of the walls still standing are cyclopean. How it should have fallen into such complete desuetude it is difficult to conjecture.

Deserters from the Navy.

The statement has been recently made that 1,200 sailors deserted from the navy last year. This is in proportion of one desertion for every seven enlisted men. The explanation is that we cannot keep men in the service without some encouragement; that the men realize there is no future for them: that they get discouraged and desert in order to enter some other vocation.

Things Quaint and Curious.

The art of the Renaissance made a great change in architecture and the change was soon exemplified in furniture. Italy, under the Medicis, began, in fact, to refurnish the world. But restless fashion, which changes with the seasons, accepts no permanent criterion even when it comes to elegance and comfort. Thus the beauty of form and perfection of detail noticeable in the furniture of the sixteenth century retrograded in the seventeenth all over Europe, when the framework grew heavy and the carving coarse and gross. There was a revival of artistic industries in France under the first empire, when it returned to stiff classicalism. Fortunately the current tendency is to reproduce the elegant, graceful styles of Louis XVI.

Returning to a practical phase as it concerns us to-day, if one cares to know the largest furniture-making center on earth, it is well worth noting that Grand Rapids, Mich., is entitled to that honor; as for the largest exclusive furniture store in the world, it is in the city of Chicago. Chicago, however, is so new that one never thinks of it as a repository for antiques, particularly as it pertains to furniture, yet in the flotsam and jetsam of the auction rooms one occasionally finds a bit of curious furniture amid the cheap and tawdry assortment and general dilapidation. The expert searcher for the quaint, the curious, and the artistic unique is ever making his way about quiet streets, studiously avoiding the thoroughfares where the spirit of trade throbs restlessly from dawn till dark; where the great windows dazzle with creations to captivate the eye of fashion; where the rush and roar of the great city jars upon the soul. With him the yesterdays and their associations possess a more potent appeal than their fevered speculations in the hopes and fears of the morrow.

Passing down Rush street, at the southeast corner of Chicago avenue may be observed a house whose windows are filled with a medley of quaint ceramics, rare bronze candelabra, rusty old flintlocks that look as though they had been gathered by some cyclone collector, and left suspended like Mahomet's coffin to amaze the passer-by. About the front door is a tangled fence of andirons and brass fenders, a big bronze lamp that looks old enough to have come from Pompeii, and a crazy-looking table that mischievous boys in the neighborhood occasionally loosen from its moorings and skate down the sidewalk. The sign on the outer wall states that this is the domicile of John F. Gepke, dealer in curiosities of all descriptions.

The first curiosity you meet when you pass the portal is Gepke himself. He has a shop-worn appearance in sympathy with the surroundings; affable and loquacious, with the politeness of a Frenchman and the shrewdness of a German, he appears to be absolutely guileless. But he was not born yesterday, as one soon learns when Gepke begins to discourse business or describe his objects de vertu.

Scattered about his room, in what might be termed artistic confusion, are carved chairs, highly ornamented tables, long graceful couches, an enormous bed whose carved posts reach the ceiling, quaint clocks that have ticked for a hundred years, odd bits of china ornate with arms and aristocratic monograms, tarnished candelabra, rusty swords with richly carved hilts, glass decanters, champagne glasses and curious ceramics. The whole atmosphere appears to be surcharged with must, mellowness and antiquity. A thousand and one romances are associated with these objects, which in their time have played an active part in the old palaces and plantations of the wealthy Southern people, who brought into their homes the best that Europe could furnish.

Gepke, who is a cabinet maker and a recent arrival in Chicago, ten years ago settled in New Orleans. The result of the Exposition in that city inspired a fad for old furniture which he took as opportunity not to be slighted. All the money he could rake and scrape together he promptly invested in old furniture and the apparently dead surplus of the auction rooms. Then he began to carefully and systematically search in the poorer quarters of the city, where the solid and indestructible furniture of the ante-war period had found lodging. He traveled far and near, visited old plantations, made note of every sale and secured all the souvenirs of artistic value that could be procured for a song. Much of the furniture was in a very dilapidated condition, armless chairs, trembling tables, mirrorless sideboards, crazy, curious old beds, battered, rusty and blistered through carelessness or by disuse, made a strange and weird collection, but the buyer's judgment was vindicated when it came to artistic repairing and renewing.

Every bit of wood that he secured was solid Santa Domingo mahogany, or hard oak richly veneered with mahogany. All of this furniture had been imported from France to New Orleans long before the war, when the South was in its halycon day of prosperity and its artistic taste demanded the best of foreign importations. During the troubled war times, and after the settled period of peace, modern ideas made encroachments, and the old furniture of the fathers was gradually abandoned in favor of the newer and more fashionable patterns. Much of it, considered merely as old lumber, was stored in garrets or given away to colored servants as useless, cumbersome, and antiquated. There are many homes happily in New Orleans that were able, through great stress of trying circumstances, to retain their rich quaint furnishings; but enough of it had gone adrift to furnish employment to the wide-awake cabinet makers and supply the people from the North who love the substantial and old-fashioned articles, massive but beautiful in their proportions, despite rough usage and the change of fashion. Gepke states that at one time he had over 100 four-post carved beds. There is now in his shop a massive carved four-poster that General Lafayette occupied during his stay in New Orleans in 1824.

On a card-table near by is an astronomical clock, graceful in its proportions and complicated in its working. It shows the movements of the sun, earth and moon, the circle of the zodiac, indicates the month, day and hour, and rings tunes on the large, concealed music-box in its base every half-hour. It was found in a garret of the house of Governor Romero, in St. James parish. The sword of General St. Clair hangs near by, and people interested in firearms will find the most curious example of the primitive repeating rifle. There are many other rare and curious objects to be found scattered about this room that have more or less historical value. The furniture will, however, command quite as much attention, for it is wonderful to see what beauty can be brought from the pieces that look sorry and unpromising enough before the hand of the repairer begins to work the restoration. Much of the wood is 200 years old and over. When the repairer begins his work of resuscitation he goes carefully over the wood with a sharp steel scraper, removing all the varnish, stains of time and scratches that deface the rich carving (for almost every piece is ornamented). It is then sand-papered and filled. Broken bits of carving are replaced with old mahogany, carefully shaped to comply with the original design. After this it is polished and varnished, retaining the rich dark hue of age, and is quite good and sound for service as it was a century ago. The veneered mahogany in panel work is very rich, and even the solid carving takes a polish and looks exceedingly well, and is singularly free from the semblance of newness that appears in more highly polished and modern furniture.

The long old sideboards have been very popular, particularly those with side curved panels, carved pillars and heavily carved top pieces. It is also stated that four-post beds have been very salable, as some of these weigh upward of 200 pounds, have posts from seven to eleven feet high, heavily carved, and are crowned with canopies. Old chairs are always in demand and they are now quite difficult to obtain. The greatest call is for tables. These are seen in great variety and are considered highly desirable, as the legs and bases are usually broad and free in their decorative treatment and are handsome centerpieces for modern furnished apartments. Bureaus, desks with the fascinating nest of concealed drawers, and carved front washstands are apparently popular as individual pieces.

Many romances might be spun about these curious old pieces that once ornamented the chambers and drawing-rooms of the Southern nobility. Famous men and women, distinguished foreign visitors, and reigning beauties of the day have in times past lolled at ease in these chairs, reclined gracefully on these couches, long ago. Then through a long season of disuse the old furniture lay in darkened garrets, when the troubled tides of war swept back and forth over the South, and again is it, by some natural or unnatural retrogradation, passed into the hands of the former slaves, and dusky dames loll lazily where their aristocratic mistresses once took their siestas. They tell sad stories of the "pinch of poverty" of the once wealthy owners, who tried to save them for their associations and have been compelled reluctantly to part with them for the bare necessities of life. And now they all are reclaimed again, revivified befitting their sphere as artistic luxuries, unique exemplification of the "survival of the fittest."

CARDINAL SVAMPA.

Many Believe He Will Be the Next Occupant of the Pontifical Throne.

There are many who believe that Cardinal Svampa, Archbishop of Bologna, will be the next occupant of the Pontifical throne. The superstitious take his name as a sure sign that this will be the case, for a curious old book of Latin prophecies, giving a motto for each of the Popes, gives for the successor of Pope Leo XIII., "Ignis ardens," (a burning fire) and Svampa, in Italian, means flame. His coat of arms also is a sun, surrounded by rays of fire. Before being Cardinal Svampa was Bishop of Forli, in Romagna. Some prelates have said of Cardinal Svampa that he has no sin but his age. He is only 43, but, as according to Professor Lapponi, the Pope's doctor, Leo XIII. will probably live at least ten years more, what has been termed the only sin of Cardinal Svampa will be corrected.

The Swift-Footed Moose.

To one who knows nothing of big game, it is amazing to see how fast a moose can run, his stride being much longer than that of a horse. A light freight train was running on the Northern Pacific, in the upper part of Minnesota, when the engineer saw a big moose standing on the track, and as soon as the animal saw the engine he took to his heels down the track. There was a perfectly straight run for four miles, and the engineer determined to test the speed of the moose, of which he had frequently heard. At first the gait of the moose was a sort of trot, and even when the engine gained speed the animal did not seem to exert itself. Faster and faster sped the engine, but still the moose trotted ahead, and all the power of steam could not prevail over this monarch of the forest. At last, after covering four miles, and turning a curve, they came upon a gang of section hands, and the victorious moose leaped the track, and was lost to view in the forest.

All Iron.

J. H. ROSENTHAL, an Indianapolis baker, began work at the Fienna Bakery in Anderson. He was unused to using natural gas and turned on the gas for some time before applying the match. The gas exploded and burned his hands, face, breast, and head badly. All of the hair was burned off and the flesh cooked until it fell off. It is thought that he will die. He suffered untold agony.

ADJUTANT GENERAL ROBBINS has completed the classification of the various expenses incurred during the railroad and coal miners' strikes. The total cost of the summer's labor troubles will reach $53,000, every dollar of which the State must pay. Ten thousand dollars of the amount will be paid to the railroads for transportation of troops. The pay roll amounts to $43,000, which sum has already been paid by Gov. Matthews. Telegraphic communication between the troops and the state officials cost $300. Aside from the salaries, which were paid out of a private loan negotiated by the Governor, the other bills will not be paid until after the session of the General Assembly, when an appropriation will be made for the purpose.

THE home of Charles Purrier, colored, on Hart street, Vincennes, was blown up with dynamite. The house was badly wrecked, but no one was killed. There are various rumors concerning the probable cause, but no lucid explanation is known. Mr. and Mrs. Purrier are quiet and inoffensive colored people. They own their home, and are comfortably situated. The husband was a Union soldier and draws a pension which supports him and his wife. Mrs. Purrier has the confidence and respect of all her neighbors, so far as is known to the public. They had a snug four-room cottage nearly new. It is now badly wrecked. The dynamite was placed upon a back porch, and shattered the entire rear portion of the house.

JOHN KOEPPEN, for twenty-five years connected with the mailing department of the Indianapolis Journal, died recently, a victim to the Christian Science craze. A few days ago Koeppen contracted a bad cold, but thought if he could convince himself that there was nothing the matter with him he would in reality be in good health. He talked to a number of the brethren in the faith, and they assured him that he was on the right track. His condition became alarming, and he consulted a physician, who told him he had an attack of congestion of the lungs. Koeppen was advised to remain in his room, but he again took the advice of the Christian Scientists, and went about his work. He determined to fight it out on that line, and remained on his feet as long as he could stand. He finally went to bed, and in two hours was dead.

JACK STEVENS and William Henine had hot words over a glass of beer at St. Maurice, near Greensburg. Stevens drew a revolver and shot Henine dead. This was the third murder in that neighborhood within the past year.

AFTER a five weeks struggle, the Kokomo City Council passed an ordinance prohibiting the use of screens in saloons. The measure permits the use of screens during legal hours, but at nights, Sundays and legal holidays screens or anything that obstructs the view must be removed so the officers can see the entire interior of the building.

JACOB DERR, a wealthy farmer of Lawrence County, was killed by a Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern passenger train while returning home from Vincennes at the Twin trestles while crossing the track. His body was hurled 100 feet. Death was instantaneous.

JAMES SEWARD, aged 76 years, met with a serious accident at Columbus. He was driving a spirited horse that ran away, throwing the old gentleman against a barbed wire fence. One arm was broken and the flesh torn in such a manner that amputation was necessary. An ear was torn loose and there were other injuries that make his recovery doubtful.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, post-office as second-class matter.

THURSDAY.....OCTOBER 25, 1894.

TOM TAGGART, Democratic state central committeeman, has organized a colored democratic club at Indianapolis numbering nearly 200.

DEMOCRATS should feel proud that our new tariff law is accepted by the leading republican, Tom Reed, of Maine. He says the people have decided against returning to McKinleyism.

BLISS says the democra ic poll books show 2,000 populists in the county. But he never saw these books. The truth remains that they will poll less than 1,000 and will not elect a man on the county ticket.

Two of the striking firemen who caused a fatal wreck on the Grank Trunk, at Battle Creek, Mich., the 16th of last July, have been arrested and will be tried for murder. Will populist papers come to their defense?

MRS. LEAS, the Kansas populist leader is in trouble again. A man she got appointed to take charge of the State Deaf and Dumb Asylum, makes oath that she advised him to fix his accounts so as to steal $20,000 and give her half PROTECTION is not necessary, as we have often said. Now under free lumber, instead of seeing Canada come in and out sell the Michigan lumber men, the Michigan men are sending vast quanities of their lumber over into Canada. Stafford Township Ticket.

The democrats of Stafford held their caucus last Saturday and nominated an excellent ticket. Henry Webster for trustee, Lee Strole for assessor, L. C. Loveland for justice in south and Joseph H. Miler in the north. For constable south, Cassius Smith, and for the north, James Campbell. These are to our personal knowledge all excellent men, and the people of Stafford will make no mistake by electing them.

Not a Good Record.

Owen, the republican candidate for secretary of state, has not yet cleared up the scandals against him in his management of the office of superintendent of immigration. It will be remembered that he was defeated when he run for congress the last time, in 1890. So that winter he planned to retain some sort of position after March 4. He was chairman of the committee on immigration and fixed up a bill which he had referred to his committee, creating a new bureau, that on immigration, and fixing the salary at $4000 a year, with several clerks. By the help of Reed who was then speaker, he got this bill passed, and March 3, Harrison, then president, signed it. But before making the appointment, Harrison asked his secretary of state, as to the wisdom of the law, Foster, then secretary, was absent, but his first assistant, Gen. Nettleton, replied that there was no need of this extra expense, as the work was being done by regular clerks. But in spite of this, Harrison made the appointment, giving it to Owen, as had expected. About a year later, Owen had so abused the office, that Senator Chandler, republican, had him investigated. It turned out that he had permitted paupers to come in, and men under contract for labor, both being against the law under which he was acting, and that he himself had framed. It was shown, also, that a flagstaff he put up on Ellis' Island N. Y. harbor, where the immigration station had its chief location, had cost $1,600. Various other things were proved against him, as shown in the congressional Record. Still the republicans have put him at the head of their state ticket, and are going to vote for him, as against a man like Capt. Myers.

THE STATE TICKET.

The democratic state ticket is one of best we have ever put in the field, though we have a personal acquaintance with but a few of them. Yet the testimony of those who do know them is strong in their favor. We will speak for those we know personally.

SECRETARY OF STATE.

Capt. W. R. Myers, our candidate for this important office, is known to most of the people of this county, as he has addressed political, school and society meetings in several of our towns, at various times for many years past. He has made two speeches in the county this campaign, and always leaves a pleasant impression on men of all parties. He has served as secretary of state several years and no complaint has ever come up against him.

CLERK OF THE SUPREME COURT.

Mr. C. W. Welman is a man of excellent ability and wide altainments, having been school superintendent of his county, Sullivan, an office he still holds. He is editor of the Sullivan Times, a leading democratic paper in that part of the state, and is president of the Democratic State Editorial Association. To our personal knowledge of his worth, we add an extract of an article that recently appeared in the Evansville Courier, the leading democratic paper in that half of the state, and edited by Hon. Gil. Shanklin, who was at one time our secretary of state.

Mr. Welman has made speeches in nearly every county in the state and reports democracy eager for the fray.

Mr. Welman is proving to be a strong candidate. He is a fluent speaker, a good mixer and meets friends everywhere as he is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, the Knights of Pythias, the Independent Order of Red Men and the Masonic fraternity. On account of the course of his paper during the recent miners' strike, he is also strong with the miners and organized labor generally. A resolution passed June 26, 1894, "proclaiming the feeling of the people of Star City and vicinity and indorsed by local assembly 680, of the Knights of Labor, was as follows:

"Resolved, that we return a vote of thanks to the editor of the Sullivan Times, C W. Welman, for the impartial way he has edited his paper and the way he has treated the miners in their time of trouble."

Mr. Welman is county superintendent of Sullivan county and is also popular with the school officers of the state. At the county teachers' institute, last August, a committee of nine, only three of whom were democrats, reported the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, that we congratulate our worthy county superintendent, C. W. Welman, on his nomination for one of the highest offices in the state and commend him to the people, irrespective of party, as an honest, upright and capable man."

Populists Same Everywhere.

We have in one of our articles alluded to the fact that the populists, while claiming to be opposed to office seekers and office seeking, are in fact led and controlled by those very elements. Look over our county and townships and notice the men on their tickets, county, township and district. Where is there a man who has been so long and so continously an office seeker as Free Kelley? The county ticket is no better. Half the men on it are men who have repeatedly sought office. It is true that Bliss has not been an old office seeker in this county, as he is a carpet-bagger and never voted here at a general election. He has not been here much more than long enough to get a vote. But like the rest he is ready to run for an office. One man on their ticket, J. L. Smith is at present assessor of Richland township, an office to which he was elected by the democrats, and which he still holds on to while doing all he can against the democrats who put him there. This we suppose is in the interest of "pure politics." And so we might go on through the township tickets. They have the best organized machine in the county; so strong is it, that the bosses control everything, and deluded followers have no voice in the matter. All the common voter is allowed to do is to hurrah for Coxey's big plan to increase the national, state and county indebtedness, and to howl about the "great crime of 1873," But we started out to say they are the same everywhere.

OUT WEST.

In the west, they have in places got into power, and their way of running things proves what we have said. We copy a little from the Argus, at Albion in Boone county, Neb.

"At first the populists claimed to oppose caucus rule. Where is a party that is worse caucus ridden than the pops? They claimed to want railroad legislation. They got control of the legislature and purposely passed a freight bill so high, they knew it would never become a law. They declared in favor of lower expenses in the legislature, and having full control, made that term more expensive and corrupt than its predecessors. The populists believe in class legislation. Democrats do dot. They want to Mexicanize Nebraska, by bowing down to a silver king, and obeying the silver plutocrats Democrats believe in neither. They claim to stand for principle, but experience shows they are after office only.

Married.

Mr. Franklin Jones and Miss Mary Loveland were united in marriage by Rev. A. S. Wooton Wednesday night, the 17th. The weddihg occurred at the home of Mr. Jones; near Auburn. There were present Mr. and Mrs. Lafe Miller and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Daily. Mr. Jones has a beautiful home for his bride. He is an upright and industrious citizen. Mrs. Jones is a lady of most excellent qualities of mind and heart. Their many friends wish them a most pleasant voyage over the sea of life.

SYMPTOMS OF CHRONIC CATARRH

As Described by Dr. Hartman, one of the Greatest Authorities and Writers on Catarrh.

The symptoms of chronic catarrh vary according to the stage and exact location of the disease. The first stage of catarrh of the nose and head produces discharge from the nose, sneezing, pain in the eyes and forehead, weak, and sometimes watery eyes, occasionally loss of memory. In the last stage the discharge ceases, and dry, offensive scabs form in the nose; polypi growths sometimes form in one or both nostrils, and the pain in the head and eyes is much less. Unless something is done to prevent, the catarrh will follow the mucous membrane into the lungs, where it will be followed by cough, night sweats, rapid loss of flesh, and other dread symptoms of consumption. Pe-ru-na is a specific for every case of catarrh, whether the disease is located in the lungs, kidneys or stomach. The dose of Pe-ru-na should be a large tablespoonful before each meal and at bedtime. Women and some delicate men should begin with a teaspoonful, and slowly and gradually increase to the above full dose. Free books on chronic catarrh, la grippe, coughs, colds and consumption are being sent to any address by the Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, of Columbus, Ohio.

Crimmins Not Delinquent.

We said last week, we thought the Dispatch mistaken in regard to Mr. Crimmins, our candidate for recorder, not paying his taxes, Mr. Crimmins showed us a number of tax receipts yesterday, proving that he has paid them faithfully. He is a hard working man, and we are told has supported his mother's family, by his own labor, and kept up all expenses. We hope to see the Dispatch set him right this week.

POPULISTS in Kansas are split in two factions and the one running an independent ticket is accused of being under a contract with the republican state committee whereby he is to receive $20,000 if he gets 10,000 populist votes, as that would elect the republican state ticket.

HOWARD, vice president of the American Railway Union and Debs' second in command, reported to the Chicago police last week that he had been robbed of about twenty railway passes, including free passes on Pullman cars, the very cars he and Debs were fighting against. How is that for honest labor leader.

Seed Potatoes for Sale.

J. C. Cramar, east of town, has several hundred bushels of fine potatoes for seed which he will sell. The chief one is the new "Michigan Beauty," a kind that he brought from Michigan last year. They are very large, yield well, and are pretty certain for a crop. Besides, they are excellent keepers. They will keep good and fresh up into July. Call on him and see them. 43-45

WEDDED IN CHURCH.

Eugene C. Altenberg and Hattie E. Casebeer were married in the M. E. church yesterday, October 24, at 10:30 a. m. There was a large attendance of invited guests to witness the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. A. S. Wooton, the pastor. The wedding march was played by Mrs. Moss, and at the appointed time the groom entered the church by the east aisle, escorted by his brother, Quin Altenberg, and at the same time, the bride, escorted by her father, Dr. J. B Casebeer, came in at the west aisle. They met before the altar, where Mr. Wooton read the impressive marriage ceremony of the M. E. church. At the conclusion, the organ pealed forth another march and the wedding party, preceded by the bride and groom, left the church. At Dr. Casebeer's there was a wedding lunch, to which quite a number of the friends and relatives were invited. The young couple took the 12-23 train west on the Wabash and went to Indianapolis, where they will be "at home" after Nov. 20, at 542 East Eighth St. They leave warm friends here, who wish them a bright future.

What Republicanism Teaches.

It is difficult to conceive, but it is nevertheless true, that one of the great political parties of Indiana has pledged itself, if restored to power, to repeal or change all of the beneficial legislation aobve enumerated. The Republicans give the people to understand that the Australian ballot law is not good for their health. They yearn for the return of the Dudleys and the Dorseys. They sigh for the "good old days" when vote-buying was a fine art and a "vested right" of Republicanism. They look mournfully at the Democratic law which ruined this Republican industry and insists that steps shall be taken to "protect" it again. The same party wants the old loose tax system and the ring schoolbook system. In fact, they want to carry the state back a decade or two to the days when cheating at elections was easy, when tax dodging was in full vogue and when favored cliques controlled school supplies. For all these and other abuses the Republican party mourns, like Rachel for her children, and refuses to be comforted because they are not. If they get back into power, they say, there shall be a general smashing of reform laws and an undoing of all the good things that Democracy has done for the state in the last 10 years.

Some Republican papers are complaining that the new bill makes such radical reductions in the tariff that prices on most articles will be reduced below what American manufacturers can afford to make them for. Other Republican papers are gloating over the alleged Democratic failure to accomplish any substantial tariff reduction. These assertions are inconsistent. Which one do the Republican leaders propose to adopt in making their campaign attacks on the new tariff?—Omaha World-Herald.

All the panics of the last 35 years have occurred under a high protective tariff, if not because thereof. Yet the Republicins would have us believe that it was "the threat of free trade" that made the country wilt and wither. Common sense teaches that it is what has happened and not what is going to happen that causes financial depression either to individuals or nations.

A WOMAN WITH WHISKERS!

Is no more a curiosity than a man who wears clothes out of style, and whose personal appearance would indicate that he was too lazy to wash his feet. Don't get into a rut. Spruce up; wear decent clothes; dress warm, and you will feel "More like a Man" and people will look at you and say, "that man has got a raise in his salary." It is not the highest priced clothes that is necessary to make a man look "Dressed Up." We have a nice long Frock Clay Weave suit for $11 50, that will make you look like a dude. We can fit you out from Head to Foot in the latest thing in Clothing the market affords. Our stock was never more complete than at the present time. Undeawear for men and boys. A whole suit of underclothes for 50 cents. Shirts from 35 cents to $1.50. We want to call special attention to our line of Neckwear which takes in everything in the new stuff. Our Glove Line at this time of the year is a very important feature in our furnishing trade, which includes a full line of Kid and Mochas in both gloves and mittens, lined and unlined, Jerseys, Buckskin, Oil Tanned Goat, Horse Hide, Moose, Wool, Canvas, Driving and Working. Hats and Caps in any style or color. The Dutch shape in plushes are the things. If you want to inspect a complete line of Furnishings we invite you to come and see us, knowing that we can suit the keenest tastes in showing you our immense line. Reefer Overcoats for the children in numerous patterns in prices ranging from $3.50 to $8

CORRESPONDENCE

WATERLOO.

Mrs. Winslow has two good sized box stoves to sell, also an upright heater suitable for store or large shop.

Mrs. Huber is visiting in several different places in Ohio, one her old home or birthplace. She will be absent several weeks.

Last Week Friday Charley Meeks lost his fine Jersey heifer. He was offered fifty dollars last summer for it, which he refused, thinking it worth more, and now to have it die, on his hands is rather hard on him.

Mr. and Mrs. Dilgard, south of Town, have lost another child by death. It died either Sunday or Monday of this week with diphtheria. The parents surely have the sympathy of all in this their second similar affliction.

The notice last week of the death of a child of Mr. and Mrs. Robinson, was a mistake There was such a report and it was told to the writer so positively by two different persons as to leave no doubt of the fact. The child is nearly well we are happy to state.

A lady living near the south side of the Lake Shore road killed a snake over a foot in length and as large around as one's little finger that had entered her dining room, probably through a crack between the floor and baseboard which mice had enlarged for their own use.

George Derthic and wife desire through the columns of the COURIER to express their thanks to those who so kindly did all in their power to save their property from the flames, at the time of the burning of the mill, and in their absence. They feel deeply grateful, and that without such effort on the part of others, they might have returned to find themselves homeless.

One day during the fair, three tramps attempted to gain entrance to three different houses on Franklin street in broad daylight. One was Robert Patterson's, just before Mrs. Patterson was leaving for the fair ground, but this decided her to stay at home. Another was Archilbald Smith. The family were already away, and the house fastened, yet these tramps boldly sought to obtain an entrance, at first through the back door, then the windows were tried, but without success. The name of the resident of the third place we did not learn.

CORUNNA.

Rev. Lacy is preaching in the Disciple church. His sermons are well received, and he draws full houses. He does not say how long he will continue.

Walter Britton and bride will reside in Hudson where the groom is engaged in the hardware business. Our people wish them all a long and prosperous journey through life.

Dr. Rudolph has gone to California, and if he likes the climate and county, he will move his family to, or near, San Francisco. We are sorry to lose such good people from our midst.

David Shaffer, of Hudson, who has been clerking for Mr. Fried for several years past, has moved back to town and will clerk for Mr. Kauner. Mr. Fried has removed his store to some other place, we are informed. Mr. Loomis, of Kendallville, is moving his store, or part of it, in Mr. Fried's old place and he will be glad to find many new customers, and promises rare bargains.

Wedding bells have been sounding in our ears the past week. Two wedding in one week is something new for this place. Rev. Sumwaldt and bride being serenaded two evenings in succession probably on account of his position They took a short trip returning Saturday afternoon and will make their home with her parents for the present or until spring on account of being sent elsewhere in the ministry.

Milo J. Thomas, in riding a bicycle, and Ed. Gushwa, in driving a team and turning a corner, some way collided. The team becoming frightened, became unmanageable, throwing Mr. Thomas off his weel. Mr. Thomas is again able to be out, but Mr. Gushwa will be laid up for some time with a sprained ancle It will be some time before they try another race, as Mr. T. came within one of being killed, the wagon passing over his body. He was very fortunate in receiving no permanent injury.

Captured the G. A. R.

The Grand Army boys are not much given to surrendering, but that kind of luck will overtake the best of men once in awhile. And this was what happened Monday evening to the entire DeLong Post. They were in session in due form and all quiet, when suddenly there was an assault on the door. That barrier was forced, pouring into the hall came a body of "armed and equipped" veterans. There was no stampede in the Post, for the "enemy" were recognized as brethren. It was the Grand Army Post from Garrett, and the Post Commander here at once surrendered, delivered up his arms, and the entire post, with its material of war, etc., fell into the hands of the invaders. Then "good times" began, and they made the hours so pleasant that they grew short. The incident was such a pleasant one that the old vets are still talking about it. It helped to make still more firm, the warm relations that have always existed between the two posts, as well as between all grand army men.

To Our Subscribers.

Since the prospect of poor crops caused by the wet spring of 1892, we find that many of our subscribers have been allowing their subscription to get behind. Those back one year then, are back three years now, and as the years go by, the sum grows larger, till it is harder to pay. Even people we know are in good circumstances have allowed themselves to fall behind in this way, until our subscription accounts have fallen to the lowest ebb we ever had them, even in the days when our list was much smaller. Now, we wish to urge every one owing us on subscription more than a year to make an effort to settle it. This condition of things cannot be made a success. It works against you, as well as against the COURIER, and it is for the interest of both, that we urge you to attend to this before it grows larger. Come in and see us. If you cannot come, send by some one, or by letter. There are not many who are unable to spare a small sum each year to pay for a paper. Let us have a settlement every year. No man can carry on a business that costs as much each week and month, as it does to run a paper, unless his patrons pay promptly. Our own expenses are cash and have to be met promptly. How can we do this, if our patrons make us wait from two to six years? Please look up your receipts, and see how you stand, and if in arrears, do not fail to heed this friendly call.

The 100th Indiana.

The old 100th Indiana Veterans have their 9th Annual Reunion this year at Portland, Nov. 22. Great preparations are being made in that lively gas belt city to illuminate everything for the "boys," and everything is being done to make their brief stay pleasant, as well as to do the city credit while honoring them. Every member should attend who can possibly do so.

Big Improvement.

Willis Madden and I. O. Bachtel are more or less interested in a pretty extensive improvement. We refer to the big canal or ditch north of seventh street bridge. There on the line between Mr. Madden's farm, the old Baker farm, and Mr. Bachtel's lots that run east from his mill, a ditch has been dug, beginning just west of the bridge and running north as far as Madden's land extends, which is a half mile. The ditch is intended for the future channel of Cedar Creek, and is deep enough to receive the water from the old channel whenever it is turned in. At present it is nearly dry, and Mr. Backtel has had teams there for several days, scraping out the earth, widening and deepening the channel and hauling the dirt away to fill up his lots. In this way the two improvements go on at once, the filling of lots and the widening of ditch. Mr. Bachtel will have some valuable lots there in time, and Mr. Madden will so straighten the creek channel that there will be less danger from high water, Besides he will in this way get the channel out into the middle of the wide bottom, and farther away from his house, at which point it has been washing down the bank for some years. When the bridge is rebuilt, as it will soon have to be, it will be set about a length further west, and then the channel can be still more improved. It is only a question of a few years when the creek channel from Waterloo to Auburn will be straightened and hundreds of acres of good land brought into cultivation and the nuisance of floods and consequent sickness be entirely done away with. This half-mile ditch is only a starter. But it is on the line that was surveyed a few years ago.

Mr. Allison Mundy, of Montpelier, visited over Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. John Kruger jr. Mrs. Kruger is his daughter.

Chris. Ashelman was home from Toledo a few days last week to look after his property interests here. They are well suited with their new home.

MARRIED:—Sylvester Zimmerman and Alice Stiman, both of Spencerville Ind., at the parsonage of the Reformed church, Auburn Ind., by Geo. Engelman pastor, Oct 18, 1894.

Congressman McNagny had a full and overflowing house at his speech here last Thursday evening. Men and women of all parties attended, and were evidently well pleased with his speech.

Trustee Wilson, of Stafford, came to Auburn Monday to transact some business, and, as a juryman was needed, they hustled him on whether he wanted to or not. So he had to stay several days.

Perry Long was up in Michigan last week to visit his people and the other friends and other DeKalb folks. He left them all in fair health and good spirits, and generally well suited with the country.

Dr. P. A Skinner, of Texarkana, Arkansas, is an enthusiast in the praise of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. He used it for rheumatism, and says: "I found it to be a most excellent local remedy." For sale by Robbins & McCord. 43

INSURANCE AGENCY:—People desiring good insurance should remember that Geo. Lanning has an office at the Davis Harware store, and works some of the very best companies in the country. Good farm risks taken. Call on him. 32tf

"I always objected to Harry's smoking in the house, but since he began using Kessler Bros.' Receipt, I let him smoke in any room. They are so fragrant."

Mr. Elmer Humphrey and Miss Emma Stayner were united in marriage at the M. E. parsonage by Rev. A. S. Wooton, Oct. 23, 1894. These young friends live near Orland, Steuben Co. They are prosperous farmers. Their friends wish well for them in life's voyage.

Charlie Rugman has been engaged for a week or so in opening and fitting up for travel, the new road that runs north from the Metcalf neighborhood, along the line between Union and Wilmington. It is new land, and in places pretty rough, and the new road is about a mile long.

Do you want a wrap? If so attend the Grand Opening of our Cloak Department, Oct. 3, 4, 5 and 6. Louis Wolf & Co., 54 Calhoun St., Ft. Wayne Ind.

Wm. Schoup, of Richland, was in town Saturday, for the first time in about three years. He has been in poor health, but this shows he is improving. We hope the improvement may continue till he is in sound health again. And the first thing he did on getting here, was to pay the COURIER.

George Gould, with a company of friends, went through here on a special train over the Wabash Sunday evening. They were going to Texas on a hunting party. Soon after passing here, word came back that their train had killed a man near South Whitley. He was crossing the track with a buggy and the train struck him.

J. K. Stafford and wife are now located in Auburn. Good enough. We can stand the advent of any number of such. They occupy the H. E. Coe property on South VanBuren. Mrs. Stafford and Mrs. Sophie Baird were assistants in the school at Waterloo in 1869 and 1870, and this move brings three of the old teachers into the same neighborhood.

The L. L. C Ladies go to Angola tomorrow as a club and will have their regular meeting and usual work there, instead of meeting here Saturday. They go in carriages in charge of Dell Myers about nine a. m. and return in the evening. At Angola they will be entertained by Dr. Lida Leasure and Mrs. Alza Ralston Scott. It will be a fine trip if the weather is favorable.

John Pepple came home over a week ago from Taylor, Texas, where he has been so long, an engineer on the M. K, & T. road. He says our friend Sam. is well and sound as ever. We are not able to swear just what brought John home, but Auburn has some of the nicest girls in the Union, and that may have something to do with his visits. But we are satisfied that he came back partly to see his folks and the many other friends.

Charlie Emanuel is not a model Coxeyite, or he would not run the risk of cutting his feet off splitting wood, a menial employment that the followers of the immortal Jacob S. Coxey believe should be followed only by women. Here is where Charlie made a mistake for in splitting some wood last week, the ax handle came out, allowing the ax to strike his foot. He at once joined the "lame brigade" and was a consistent member for a week or so. One good thing he had let his ax get so dull it did not cut deep.

Rebecca Wilkinson, of Brownsvalley, Ind., says: I have been in a distressed condition for three years from Nervousness Weakness of the Stomach, Dyspepsia and Indigestion until my health was gone. I had been doctoring constantly with no relief. I bought one bottle of South American Nervine, which did me more good than any $50 worth of doctoring I ever did in my life. I would advise every weakly person to use this valuable and lovely remedy; a few bottles of it has cured me completely. I consider it the greatest medicine in the world." Warranted the most wonderful stomach and nerve cure ever known. Trial bottles 15 cents. Sold by Robbins and McCord druggists Auburn Ind. 34tf

Charles EcKhart and his son Frank represented the Eckhart factory at the big meeting of carriage makers in Philadelphia last week. F. T. Zimmerman, represented the Zimmerman company. All are at home again except Mr. Zimmerman who with his wife, are visiting friends in New Heaven, Conn.

Do you want to spend a half hour in solid enjoyment and feel at peace with all mankind? Spend 5 cents for a Young America, sit down in a shady corner and take a quiet smoke.

There was a freight wreck up the Wabash Saturday at North Morenci. The west bound train jumped the track and about a dozen cars were smashed. It took a wrecking crew till Sunday night to clear it away. Trains were not delayed much, as they could pass on the side track. It is supposed that one of the car trucks broke.

The windows going into the Kiblinger factory, as we mentioned last week, are for the offices of the company. They are fitting up a long room, or suite of rooms, at the northwest corner of that block and will have in a safe and all other office fixtures. Here will be located all the clerks, typewriters and other office assistants, and the company itself will have its private office and counting room. It is a very sensible move to get the business together into the factory.

Luther Hoffman, who came home last spring will likely remain a year or two and conduct the farm. This he does mainly to regain his health. He had been closely confined in his school work for about six years, at Minneapolis where he was in charge of the largest high school building in the city. For the past year he has been at Cornell University at Ithaca N. Y., taking an additional course of studies. He hopes by staying on the farm for a time to regain his health fully.

Mrs. Sherman Dickinson and little daughter Hazel were here Saturday. Mrs. D. had a paper that is published in the interest of the deaf mutes, in which are items that recall her classmates and teachers at the Indianapolis Institute for the Deaf and Dumb. Rev. P. J. Hasenlab, a classmate, is pastor of the First M. E. church corner of Clark and Washington streets, Chicago. He speaks with his fingers, and Rev. H. C. Hammond speaks it to that part of the congregation who can hear. The latter gentleman was one of Mrs. Dickinson's teachers.

Bliss wants everyone to come and hear the chief's daughter, an Indian woman that he has got to talk for the populists and give them some ideas of civil government. Is it possible the people of DeKalb county have sunk so low, that such people as Indians, tramps like Coxey, and such straddlebugs as Bliss must be imported to teach them? The whole program stamps the populist party as one that no self-respecting or intelligent man will be found acting with. A party that will accept such leaders and teachers, is a disgrace to American citizenship.

Mrs. J. W. Leonard, of Columbia City, came over here to court last Saturday to negotiate arrangements for a partnership with Judge Powers in the practice of law at Angola after the Judge's time expires. Mr. Leonard has been in the employ of Marshall, McNagny & Clugston at Columbia City for some time, and has also been official stenographer for Judge Adair for three years. He is a practical stenographer and typewriter and a man of high character and standing. We did not hear whether the arrangement was completed or not, but presume it will be.

There was quite a wreck on the Wabash at Montpelier Tuesday evening. The west bound train that reaches here at 7:35 was just pulling out, when an engine and tender by some mistake was backing from a sidetrack to the main track. The train struck the tender and demolished it, and injured the engine. The passengers felt the train bounding over the ruins of the tender, sometimes going up two or three feet, yet strange to say, they alighted on the track at last, not a car being derailed. But the engine and cars were so much injured, that all had to be left and a new train made up.

The Omaha Evening Bee of October 13, reports the result of the recent city primary election in which our friend, C. L. Thomas, is again triumphantly selected as the candidate for councilman in the Seventh ward, which he has represented so long. Though no longer a boy, Mr. Thomas gets a front seat like so many of the Old DeKalb "boys." We might add in this primary election, Mr. Thomas made his canvass by sending out a circular to each voter, in which was a manly statement that if the voter found Mr. Thomas' record satisfactory he would like his support. But he left the decision fully to the voter himself. This is a sensible plan.

S A REPUBLICAN AID.

he A. P. A. Merely a Part of the Republican Machine.

s Absurd and Scurrilous Attacks Circulated by the Republican National Committee, Which Sells Republican Congressmen's Franks With Which to Circulate Obscene Literature—The Illinois A. P. A. Trying to Re-elect the Edwards School Law.

The American Protective association as at last about thrown off its mask nd no longer pretends to be much more han an adjunct to the Republican party. n every state and county in the union is assisting the Republican party, frequently openly and aboveboard, but ore often in secret. Over in Illinois e state president, C. P. Johnson, has ued instructions that members of the rder shall support the whole Republican state ticket, although the A. P. A. as a separate and distinct ticket of its wn in the field. President Johnson is specially urgent in behalf of those legislative candidates who favor the reactment of the Edwards educational w which prohibited the attendance of hildren at parochial schools. This law as repealed by the Democratic legislature and the A. P. A. hopes to have it e-enacted by a Republican legislature.

The Same Everywhere.

But what is true of Illinois is true in reater or lesser degree in every state in e union. In Missouri it has practically captured the Republican organization which is making a knownothing mpaign in many of the congressional stricts, notably in the Sixth, in which ansas City is situated.

Here in Indiana the A. P. A. is everywhere working in harmony with the epublican machine. In Marion county dictated every nomination on the unty and legislative tickets. The me is true of Allen county. And at erre Haute all the leading Republican ficeholders are members of the order.

At the National Capital.

At Washington it has come out that e Republican congressional committee behind that knownothing movement lled the A. P. A. and is furnishing e money to print and circulate their cuments. Already over 2,000,000 pies of Congressman Linton's [Republican] attack on the Catholic church and members have been paid for and circlated by the Republican congressional mmittee and a sum, said to be not less an $100,000, has been raised by the publican committee to assist in organizing the A. P. A. movement in ortful congressional districts.

The most recent publication stealthily culated by the Republican committee a pamphlet entitled "Popery in New rk and Washington," in which the urd charge is made "that a cardinal l prince of the church from his throne the cathedral at Baltimore, the capi of this archdiocese, dictates the poal activities of the capital of the ited States in the interests of the sovign from whom he derives his title l his powers, placing the sovereign hority of this nation, as legally conuted, in practical subordination to t of his foreign and usurping master."

The Republicans Help.

Every sane American knows that there ot one word of truth in this statent—no one knows it better than Mr. bcock, the chairman of the Republn congressional committee—and yet has descended to the dissemination ch falsehoods, knowing them to be h, with the hope of creating a religs, or more properly speaking, an antigious sentiment that might be the se of picking up here and there a btful congressional district.

erily, the late "Grand Old Party" st be in dire straits, when it can lend lf to a knownothing movement, ch at the best can have but a tempor effect, and must, inevitably, in the injure any party that touches it.

ut the paragraph we have quoted is nt as compared with some others tained in the publication mentioned. e is one specimen of the less decent he assertions made in this pamphlet ed by the Republican congressional mittee. Touching on the governt printing office the pamphlet in tion says:

where you will over that immense ding which contains 2,500 workmen the air is foul with the filth of fors whose arrival in America is so re that the odors of the steerage still lin about them, while the Irish brogue ronts you at every step. We have seen come from early mass at St. Aloysius, into an Irish "she-been" in the localget drunk as a fiddler's dog, and then ger into the government printing office to sleep on a pile of papers in the room and sleep off the drunken stupor ours, and promptly draw their pay a payday comes around. And as to department in which women are emed—well, for the sake of the few reable women employed there we will by this phase of that delectable instiin.

uly, how low has the party of Lin and of Sumner descended!

Selling Republican Franks.

hen the immortal Jefferson was t to lay down this mortal life, he ted the inscription to be placed upis last resting place. Upon his head he did not direct to be cut the long f honorable offices which he had but simply to commemorate the that he was the author of the Vir declaration for religious freedom.

the beginning of the government is day the Democratic party has upon the rock of separation of ch and state and the largest freedom he individual. It has never coed with religious or anti-religious ments. It has seen knownothing expire in the arms of its Whig , and will yet witness the death of A. P. HOW TO VOTE.

What Every Voter Should Bear In Mind.

t your ballots of the polling clerk election room. No other ballots nted to be used.

2. Stamp within the large square containing the rooster and nowhere else.

The stamp must be placed within or on the square or the ballot is void and cannot be counted. Do not stamp elsewhere on the ticket if you stamp within the square at the head of the ticket.

3. Do not mutilate your ballot, or mark it either by scratching a name off or writing one on, or in any other way, except by stamping on the square as before mentioned. Otherwise the ballot will not be counted.

4. After stamping your ballots first see that the ink from the stamp is thoroughly dried; then fold them separately so that the face of them cannot be seen and so that the initial letters of the names of the polling clerks on the backs thereof can be seen. Then hand your ballots to the inspector, the stamp to the polling clerk and leave the room.

5. If you are physically unable to stamp your ballots, or cannot read English, so inform the polling clerks and tell them how you wish to vote and they will stamp your ballots for you. But the voter and clerks must not permit any other person to hear or see how the ballots are stamped.

6. If you should accidentally or by mistake deface, mutilate or spoil your ballot return it to the poll clerks and get a new one.

NOTHING TO OFFER.

Republicans Mean Only to Tear Down, Not to Build Up.

One of the prize puzzles of this campaign is what the Republicans intend to do in the event of a Republican victory. Benjamin Harrison doesn't say. McKinley is trotting around the country declaring that it means the restoration of the law which bears his name—a law which closed down every factory in the land, lowered the price of all farm products and increased the cost of every manufactured article used by civilized man. John Sherman lifts his weather-beaten voice to state that Republican victory means a restoration of the single gold standard of money, with the resultant transfer of control of the treasury to the bondholders. Senator Cullom is prancing up and down the prairies of Illinois loudly vociferating the pledge that the Republicans will let the Democratic tariff law stand. Naturally enough, people are puzzled to know what the future has in store for them in the event of Republican success. Some of them have been asking the Indianapolis Journal, the organ of the Indiana Republicans and first fiddle of the Harrison boomlet, what they may expect. And here is The Journal's answer:

"As there is no possibility of the Republican party gaining control of all three branches of the government before March 4, 1897, it is not necessary to formulate any plan of remedial legislation at present."

Was ever such a confession made before? Here is the Republican organ and the special spokesman of Harrison admitting that the party has not any fixed principles, any definite plan. It has nothing to offer, no hope to hold out. Its object is to be merely a destroyer, not a builder. It is purely anarchistic, only desiring to wipe out the existing order of things, leaving chaos behind and trusting to chance to bring some order out of this chaos later on. It is the theory of the materialist. It promises death for a certainty and gives no hope of life hereafter.

INTERNAL STRIFE.

The Row Between Ketcham and Gowdy Goes Merrily On.

The Republican camp is being torn by internal dissensions. The Harrison-Gowdy-Journal crowd never did like William A. Ketcham, the candidate for attorney general. The beginning of dislike dates back to the time when Ketcham filed a law brief charging Harrison with selling out a client. The Journal people also had some sort of grievance against Ketcham and fought his homination vigorously, threatening even to bolt it if made. But they didn't. However, there was no purpose on the part of Harrison, or the Journal, or the committee which is controlled by them to permit Ketcham to become prominent. He is an aggressive, bold fighter who never knows when he is whipped and has ever been in outspoken opposition to Harrison. It was quickly recognized that if he came well to the front he would prove a formidable foe to the future presidential hopes of Harrison. So from the first the machine began to knife him. At the outset he was compelled to pay a $3,500 assessment, though the salary of the office to which he aspires is but $2,500. Then a systematic series of snubs was put upon him. His dates for speaking at large cities were canceled and his meetings in small towns were unadvertised, so that he had no crowds. Then the committee threatened to leave his name off the ticket when it was certified to the election commissioners. But this was not done. Now Ketcham is running his own campaign, regardless of the committee, as Hovey did in 1888 and Chase in 1892. The committee is knifing him wherever it can without hurting the whole ticket, and there is some reason to believe that his friends are doing a little cutting in retaliation themselves.

THREE VIEWS OF THE A. P. A.

As Set Forth In the Platforms of the Parties.

DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM.	REPUBLICAN PLATFORM.	POPULIST PLATFORM.
We believe and declare that the policy and principles of what is called the American Protective Association are illiberal, unwise, unpatriotic, undemocratic and unamerican. In the spirit of that religious freedom which characterizes our constitutions and laws, and the spirit of that wise toleration and generous statesmanship which seeks to accord to all the right and privileges of American citizenship, we call upon every man to do battle against such an organization.

Who dare now say that the Democratic party has not made good its historic claim of being the party always opposed to religious persecution against whatever creed?

OWEN'S BAD BREAK.

As Testified to by His Superior Officer of the Treasury.

It Called Forth a Congressional Investigation.

Assistant Secretary Nettleton Charges Owen With Neglect of Duty, Shameful Incompetence and With Trying to Secure the Payment of Fraudulent Vouchers—Owen Nullifies the Alien Contract Labor Law.

Few men who have ever come out for political office have as unenviable a labor record as William D. Owen, the candidate for secretary of state on the Republican ticket. While superintendent of immigration under Harrison, an office which he created for his own especial benefit while a member of congress, he time and time again violated the law against the importation of contract labor. By completely setting aside this law which was passed by the Democratic congress of 1878 he allowed the country to be flooded with cheap labor. This was done in the interest of the tinplate gang, headed by Niedringhaus of St. Louis, who had promised to give remunerative employment to American workmen. American workmen were too high priced to suit them and they demanded the pauper labor of Europe. Owen was constantly in trouble with his superiors because of his insolence and refusal to obey orders. An investigation of his office was finally begun, in the course of which all of the charges that had been preferred against him were substantiated. The following letter of Hon. A. B. Nettleton, assistant secretary of the treasury under Harrison, shows that Owen's methods of conducting his office were most objectionable:

Treasury Department,
Office of the Secretary,
WASHINGTON, March 28, 1892.

To the Honorable Secretary of the Treasury:

SIR—It has become my official duty to invite your attention to the following facts which I am able to substantiate in every particular and to ask that such action be taken by the secretary of the treasury and by the president as those facts may seem to warrant:

1. Mr. W. D. Owen is unfit and incompetent to perform the duties of the office which he holds.

2. He is thoroughly untrustworthy in the performance of his official duties.

3. He has been guilty of circulating malicious slanders against his superior officers.

4. His ideas of official regularity and integrity are slipshod, reckless and a source of great risk to the public funds partially in his control.

5. I hand you certain papers marked Exhibit A, which show that on Feb. 22, 1892, John B. Webber, United States commissioner of immigration at the port of New York, transmitted to the secretary of the treasury certain bids received in answer to advertisements for the furnishing of instruments, books, hospital clothing and druggists glassware for the use of the medical department of the immigration service at New York, said letter showing that all the bids received were thus transmitted. Said letter recommended that in each case the lowest bid be accepted and the articles purchased, such lowest bids being clearly set forth and recited with the names of the several bidders and the amount of each bid.

Such lowest bids recommended to be accepted aggregated $628.05. On Feb. 24, '92, W. D. Owen as superintendent of immigration caused to be prepared and checked with his initials, and sent to my address for signature a letter addressed to Commissioner Weber authorizing him to accept all the bids that he had received, reciting said bids in full by names and amounts, which amounts aggregated $619.-14, or more than 150 per cent in excess of the aggregate asked for by the commissioner at New York said letter was signed by me on the strength of Superintendent Owen's check, was transmitted to Commissioner Weber and its character only discovered by me upon my arrival in New York a day or two later. Attached to exhibit A is my letter to Superintendent Owen based upon this transaction dated March 1, 1891, and declining thereafter to sign letters from his office authorizing the expenditure of public moneys unless accompanied by the original papers upon which they were based.

I also hand you papers marked exhibited B, which show that on or about the first day of Jan. 1893, W. D. Owen joined Frank L. Larned and other persons in a persistent attempt to put through the department and collect the money upon a false and ficticious voucher for $117.50 for the alleged services of a person not in the employ of the government, and who to Mr. Owen's previous knowledge had not rendered the service for which such voucher was presented. Superintendent Owen's official approval and certificate that said services were rendered are attached to said ficticious voucher, a certified copy whereof forms a part of exhibit A. When said ficticious voucher came to my desk it was stopped and payment prevented. On the 16th of January, the day after it came to my attention, I called upon Mr. Owen in writing for an explanation.

On Jan. 20 Mr. Owen responded in writing, furnishing such explanation which admits the entire transaction and gives no intimation that he did not then regard the voucher as still in force. The original voucher itself is in the possession of the department with Mr. Owens' approval uncanceled, which fact should be considered in connection with his subsequent statement that at a certain stage he had abandoned the attempt to get the voucher allowed and paid. It is left for the proper authority or tribunal to decide whether the transaction in question constitutes a criminal offense under Section 5440, Revised Statutes. In any case the moral standards and fitness for the responsible station of a bureau officer who is capable of engaging in such an attempt, and then submitting such an explanation, are left to the judgment of the secretary.

Ever since W. D. Owen assumed his office in July, 1891, I have been compelled as his superior officer to call his attention very frequently to the blunders and irregularities committed in his office, and for which he was directly responsible. These blunders and irregularities if permitted to go uncorrected would have brought the department into ridicule, entangled the government in annoying complications, and in certain instances as herein shown, would have resulted in the wrongful abstraction of money from the public treasury. Respectfully yours,

A. B. NETTLETON,
Assistant Secretary.

The McKinley Panic.

The senate tariff bill has been in operation just two weeks. Yesterday Abner Boggs hunted Kokomo over for carpenters, to whom he was willing to give employment at good wages. None could be found. The panic of 1893 was under the McKinley law.—Kokomo Dispatch.

Two Louisiana Purchases.

The Democratic party under the leadership of Jefferson purchased Louisiana in 1803. But now there is a new purchase and sale. This time the Republican party has purchased a portion of the state with a sugar bounty.—Muncie Herald.

IS A REVELATION INDEED.

THE OPERATION OF THE WOOL SCHEDULE OF THE NEW TARIFF.

A New Impetus Given to the Sheep Raising Industry—Better Prices For Raw Wool and Cheaper Prices For Clothing and Blankets, With More Work For Employes In the Mills—Free Wool a Blessing to Everybody.

Since the repeal of the McKinley blight and the enactment of the new Democratic revenue tariff the Republicans have ceased to taunt Democrats by the cry of "Democratic times," says the Evansville Courier. The tremendous reduction in all of the necessaries and comforts of life since the new tariff went into operation on Aug. 28 has convinced everybody who has made purchases since then that a Democratic tariff means good times for the consumer however it may affect anybody else. But it also benefits the manufacturer and the wage earner. It enables the mill owner to employ more men at as good, and in some instances at better, wages than they have received under the McKinley curse. Here is a letter which shows that as a result of free wool wages have been restored:

LOWELL MANUFACTURING COMPANY,
95 MILK STREET, BOSTON, SEPT. 21.

Bernard Goldstein, Esq., Milwaukee:

DEAR SIR—In reply to yours of the 18th would say that, in accordance with the understanding the special reduction of wages made to take effect Dec. 26, 1893, was restored Sept. 4, 1894, said understanding being that the wages would be restored if the tariff bill, making wool free, passed.

Yours truly, JOHN HOGG,
Treasurer pro tem.

This is an instance where wages that were reduced under McKinleyism have been restored under the new tariff, for it should be remembered that the McKinley abomination was in full force up to Aug. 28, 1894, the day on which the new tariff became a law.

But this is not all. Free wool has stimulated the manufacture of American fabrics and even those who have stoutly opposed it are now warm in its approval. Here is a striking instance of this kind, taken from a letter written by one of the leading woolen manufacturers of Philadelphia, a Republican, to a prominent dry goods merchant of Pittsburg:

The operation of the new tariff has been a revelation to me. We are making more woolens, because of free wool, of a better quality, are selling more goods and employing more men.

The operations of the new tariff are "a revelation" to this manufacturer because he had been deceived by his party leaders into believing that to make raw wool free would destroy the wool-growing industry in the United States and compel all home manufacturers to rely entirely upon foreign wools for their supply. But it is already apparent that the number of sheep will be increased under the new tariff because the increased demand for wool consequent upon the removal of the tariff from wool and the preparation of American woolen mills to turn out goods fine enough to compete with English and French made cloths in the world's markets, has already strengthened the wool market and will undoubtedly advance the price of wool grown in the United States. Domestic wool is not suitable by itself for the manufacture of the finest grades of goods, but mixed with Spanish wools, which now come in free, it answers every requirement and our woolen mills need no longer hesitate to reach out for the best trade in every part of the world.

The Philadelphia mill owner is firmly convinced after two months' experience with the new tariff that he can compete with English and French goods, not only in the United States, but can successfully invade English and French markets with American "all wool" cloths. No wonder the result of free wool has proved "a revelation" to him. He has been following false prophets and never would have known it had not the new tariff law, with its free wool schedule, taught him by actual experience that the Democratic position has always been right; that he can make better qualities of goods at less cost than those of inferior quality have cost and that the increased demand makes it necessary for him to employ more men.

WEATHER.

THE publication of a telegraphic weather bulletin, together with predictions, began in 1857, in this country.

THE annual rainfall in the Atlantic States is 36 inches; in the Southern, 55; in the Western, 26; in the Pacific, 52.

THE coldest place in the world is Yakutch, Russia; the thermometer sometimes falls to 73 degrees below zero.

THE falling snowflakes bring with them all the floating dust of the air, leaving the atmosphere extremely pure.

IN 1855 extremely cold weather prevailed in the United States. Mercury froze and forest trees were killed by frost.

THE heaviest rain ever recorded in Great Britain was in Argyle, Dec. 7, 1863—seven inches in twenty-four hours.

IN 1656 a hail storm at Norwich, England, wrecked houses and killed many animals that could not reach shelter.

SPAIN, Italy, Sweden, Hanover, Russia, Austria, and Turkey receive daily weather reports from Paris and London.

THE average rainfall of Great Britain is estimated to equal 630,000 gallons per acre every year—almost 3,000 tons.

IN 1544 the winter was so severe in Europe that in Flanders wine was frozen and was cut in blocks and sold by weight.

THE science of meteorology dates from the time of Aristotle, who, so far as known, made the first weather observations.

A WIND moving at forty miles an hour exercises a pressure of nine pounds to the square foot; at 100 miles, of fifty-six pounds.

STORM warnings have been displayed in the principal parts of this country without interruption since 1860; in England since 1861.

REGNAULT and Glaisher's tables allow a tolerably accurate prediction to be made of the amount of dew that will fall in a given night.

Bismarck's Student Days.

Bismarck was a student at Goettingen in 1832 and 1833, where his skill in fence won for him the surname "Achilles the invulnerable." In three terms he fought twenty duels and received only a single wound, of which the scar on his lower jaw near the lip is still perceptible, but as this was caused by his adversary's blade flying from the hilt, it was contrary to the code, so that his reputation for invulnerability remained technically unimpaired. Indeed, the university authorities forbade him to fight certain projected duels on pain of expulsion.

REPUBLICAN RANT.

OUR ILLS ALL CHARGED TO M'KINLEY'S OVERTHROW.

Barefaced Assertions Made by G. O. P. Orators and Rhetorical Dead Marches of Republican Organs—Principles of the Two Parties—Great Saving on Woolens.

McKinleyism and Labor.

During the present campaign all the Republican orators from Reed, Harrison and McKinley down have asserted in every speech they have made, and are still asserting, that the country reached the loftiest height of prosperity under the McKinley law; that under its benign operation wages rose continually; that every man who wished to work had plenty to do and plenty of pay for doing it, and that this blissful state of things continued to grow more blissful even down to February, 1893.

Then the people made the horrible discovery that they had elected not only a Democratic President and a Democratic House, but also a Democratic Senate, and thus removed the last remaining obstacle in the way of accomplishing what they themselves had ordered Congress to do. Thereupon all was changed in the twinkling of an eye. Every enterprise stopped short, wages began to sink, workingmen could find nothing to do, impenetrable gloom settled down upon the face of nature, and—for the rest see any rhetorical dead marches in the Republican papers.

Now, so much of this as relates to labor under McKinleyism is pure fiction. The McKinley law went into effect Oct. 6, 1890. According to Bradstreet's record the number of strikes and lockouts in that month was fifteen, all of them in the protected industries. There were strikes of piano makers, coal miners, boot and shoe factory operatives, cigarmakers, incandescent lamp makers, trunk makers and saddlery workers against reduction of wages. Glass workers struck against boys doing the work of men. Pail manufacturers reduced wages 10 per cent. The failure of a worsted mill in Philadelphia threw 500 persons out of employment, and a shut-down of nine collieries near Pottsville, Pa., threw 3,000 men and boys out of work.

A carefully compiled list of attacks on labor by threatening to reduce wages, by shutting down and in various other ways, shows that some 1,200 of these were made during the two years commencing with October, 1890, in the protected industries alone. The number of these events by months was as follows:

	1890.	1891.
October	19	39
November	24	42
December	51	37
	1891.	1892.
January	83	27
February	63	34
March	59	58
April	41	41
May	70	42
June	88	53
July	46	60
August	42	51
September	37	40
October (four days)	..	59
	575	580
		575
Total		1,155

In this list, be it remembered, there is not a single case of striking for higher wages or of aggression of any kind on the part of employes. In most cases there was either resistance to reduction of wages or loss of employment by shut-down or failure. Here are some sample items:

Oct. 11, 1890. The 130 weavers in Johnson, Cowdin & Co.'s silk mills in Paterson, N. J., strike because of a 10 per cent. reduction of wages. Oct. 15. Kittredge's woolen mills at Dalton, Mass., discontinue operations after running steadily for nearly a quarter of a century. Oct. 16, 1890. The Richland and Nelson miners at Dayton, Tenn., to the number of 1,200, strike against a reduction of wages. Oct. 21, 1890. Leather workers in Brooklyn, N. Y., on strike because their wages had been reduced from $12 to $9 per week.

And so it runs, only from bad to worse, throughout the two years. The recorded facts show reductions of wages, the shutting down of establishments, including silk, cotton and woolen mills and iron works, on account of business depression and other things not indicative of the highest degree of prosperity, or of the full employment at top wages of everybody wishing to work.

These facts the Republican campaigners find it convenient to ignore as they sound the mighty chorus from Chicago to the sea to the effect that everybody was busy, fat, and perfectly happy until the people made the terrorizing discovery that they were in earnest when they voted McKinleyism down in 1890 and again in 1892.—Chicago Herald.

Keep Up the Fight.

That able independent Democratic paper, the New York Herald, eloquently supports the advanced position taken by President Cleveland and Chairman Wilson in favor of keeping up the tariff reform fight till all odious class legislation is repealed. The Herald says:

The first of these Republican citadels that must go is the sugar trust monopoly, which has "grown so great" on four years of Republican "protection." Republican orators and editors are busily trying to insult the intelligence of the people by telling them that the Democratic party, which from Jefferson's time to the present has fought against monopoly, has now espoused it; and they are harping especially upon the "protection" given by the new tariff to the sugar trust. But this casuistry will deceive few. The sugar trust was notoriously the offspring and progeny of Republican tariffs enacted in recent years. The McKinley law, signed by President Harrison in 1890, provided that "all sugars above No. 16 Dutch standard in color shall pay a duty of 5-10 of 1 cent per pound" and an additional "1-10 of 1 cent" per pound on German and other foreign sugars, making a total of 60 cents on every 100 pounds. The new tariff reduced this duty to "1-8 of 1 cent per pound," which, taken with the incidental "protection" afforded by the new ad valorem duty of 40 per cent., makes the total protection to the trust now (as stated by Senator Aldrich, the leader of the Republican "protectionists"), only "42½ hundredths of a cent per pound," or 42½ cents per hundred pounds.

But, even if the Gorman bill had given the trust more plunder than the McKinley bill, this is all the more reason why the people should unite as one man with the Democratic party as the only one which is making or likely to make any effectual effort to break the sugar trust's iron grip on the neck of the nation. Gormanism is Republicanism wearing "the stolen livery of Democracy." But let not Republican leaders fondly dream that they can deceive the people and save the "protected" monopolies which the Reeds and McKinleys have built up. The remnant of "protectionism," surviving in the new tariff, will cost the people at least $1,200,000,000 a year. This will have to be paid as a bounty and tribute to the oppressors and spoliators. The people cannot rest under this burden of slavery. True to their instincts as freemen, they will enthusiastically join in the new campaign so brilliantly opened by Mr. Wilson, knowing well that it must triumph.

For freedom's battle once begun,
Bequeathed by bleeding sire to son,
Though baffled oft, it ever won.

Failure of Reciprocity.

Without a reciprocity clause the McKinley bill would not open a foreign market for another bushel of wheat or a barrel of pork, said James G. Blaine. He had the reciprocity clause inserted to open the markets of the countries south of us to these products. Blaine knew that these were agricultural countries, and were exporters rather than importers of farm products. He, however, hoped with his reciprocity club to obtain concessions in the countries in favor of American products. He knew that his good, protected friend, the manufacturer, would get the kernel of reciprocity, and possibly the farmer, who was getting tired of the husks of protection, might rejoice at sight of the reciprocity shell.

In accordance with this reciprocity clause President Harrison imposed a duty of three cents a pound on coffee from Venezuela and Colombia, because these countries were so mean that they would not play reciprocity with us. This has increased somewhat the price of coffee in our markets and has diverted the trade of these countries to Europe. As we would not take their chief product they could not take our goods in exchange. England laughed at our reciprocity efforts while she profited by our folly. With the removal of this discriminating duty on coffee and of heavy duties on wools our trade with South America is beginning to "pick up." The whole reciprocity scheme has been a dismal failure. The Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin thus sums up the situation:

"The fact that our exports to Brazil have increased much more slowly since the reciprocity policy was instituted than before, and that a direct effect of that policy was to check our trade with the two most northern countries of South America, is sufficient evidence of the failure of the system which only in Cuba has yielded any particularly gratifying results. We are in a position, therefore, to watch with considerable interest the effect of a more liberal customs policy upon our traffic with our sister republics to the south of us, and the fact that Venezuela and Colombia coffee is coming back here, and that a ship load of Argentine wool arrived off the port of Boston before the new tariff law went into effect, suggests the probability of a liberal increase of our export trade."

The Two Parties.

WHAT THE REPUBLICAN PARTY STANDS FOR.

The Republican party, by its traditions and tendencies, the teachings of its leaders, past and present, and its whole history, has a steady momentum toward sectionalism, high government, interference with local rule and local control of elections, extravagant expenditures, heavy taxes, bounties, subsidies and exorbitant protection. "Ideas of governmental meddling and centralization dominate it; class interests hold it firmly to evil courses." These things are incompatible with free and pure government. The American people need none of these things; only a small minority really desires them.

WHAT THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY STANDS FOR.

The Democratic party, by principle and tendency, by the tradition of its elders and its steady momentum, tends to economy, to low taxes, to revenue tariffs, immediate responsibility to the people, and no federal interference with local rule. These are the very essentials of free and pure government. If the people want these things—and surely they need them more than at any other time in their history—that party, and that party alone, is the instrument they must use to secure them. Upon other great issues also the scale turns in its favor. It is as true worthy as its opponent on the monetary question, while its ancient financial traditions are sounder than those of any great and long-lived party we have ever had. And—what is truly a crowning merit—it is, and ever has been, a national party.—Chairman Wilson, in North American Review.

An Independent Opinion.

Harper's Weekly, in speaking of the new tariff law, says:

"In the first place, the law has made certain the replenishment of the treasury, and removed all risk of a further increase in the permanent national debt. Again, it insures the cheapening, to a substantial extent, of a multitude of the necessaries and comforts of life, reducing the cost of living for every household, without weakening the resources of the Government. Clothing of every description, cloths, dress goods, blankets and carpets will be cheaper and better everywhere for its passage. Imported food, wools and lumber, china and glass ware, pocket-knives and table-knives, nearly all the completed goods the use of which is so large a part of civilized life, together with the materials of which they are made, share in the large reductions of duty. These changes alone will certainly, within a few months, make every man's daily earnings more valuable to him than now. But they will do far more than this. They will do much to revive depressed industry and to restore general prosperity. A pretense is made by a few manufacturers of anticipated distress from the reduction of certain protective duties, but for this we can find no foundation in the law. But the brightest feature of this tariff is found in the fact that it is a turning-point in the history of our economic legislation. It signalizes the final stage in the most costly experiment ever tried by a peaceful nation. The experiment has failed. In the new law the nation has turned its face toward justice, toward economical truth, toward lasting prosperity, toward ultimate freedom of trade: and the movement henceforth will be in that direction."

Significant from Maryland.

The Washington County, Maryland, Democrats, at a convention held to elect Congressional delegates, pledged themselves "to unite with faithful Democrats everywhere to continue the fight until the interests of the great masses of the people shall no longer be sacrificed to the special interests of the favored few, but shall finally and fully triumph over the greed and tyranny of monopolies and trusts." On the same day the St. Mary County Democrats adopted the following resolution: "We commend the able, brave, and patriotic administration of President Cleveland, and reaffirm our adherence to the principles of the Chicago platform of 1892, and we urge a further contest in the interest of tariff reform until all the promises of that platform are complied with."

Carpet Industry Booming.

Free wool is having a healthy influence on the carpet industry of the country, as all the coarse grades of wool used in making carpets are imported, scarcely any of it being produced in this country. Strange to relate, since the passage of the tariff bill putting wool on the free list wool has advanced ten cents per pound, thus enhancing the value of this product. The farmers who have held their wool and kept their sheep will be benefited largely by the advance in prices. The largest carpet factories in Philadelphia have resumed operations and are running night and day, and claim they can now compete with the world in carpet manufacture.—National Glass Budget.

The Saving on Woolens.

Mr. Jacob Schoenhof, an appraiser of textile goods in the custom house at New York, estimates that, because of free wool and reduced duties on woolens, the consumers of this country will save $163,000,000 yearly on woolen goods alone. He has prepared statements showing the saving on woolens, worsteds, hosiery, carpets, wool and felt hats, etc. He has prepared samples of different kinds of cloth, and has attached the cost of importing each under the old and the new tariff laws. An all-wool challis (women's dress goods) that formerly cost 65 cents now costs 31 cents. An all-wool cashmere that cost 82 cents now costs 38 cents. On a sample of coatings the saving is $1.16 per yard. What the consumers will save because of reduced duties would purchase our whole wool clip and pay the wages of all workers in woolen mills. Still we expect to hear the McKinley lambs bleat until the November election. After that event the country will have decided that free wool and cheaper and better clothing has benefited all and hurt nobody, and we will hear but little more about "protection to wool."

Enjoying Democratic Times.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat (Rep.) gives very little comfort to its party's calamity-howlers in referring to the business revival in that city. It says: "In this city at least nearly all traces of the panic have disappeared. The number of idle persons, aside from the chronically and constitutionally idle who are always present in every large city, is very little greater than it is in normal years, which is a trustworthy indication that the hard times are virtually ended. In other directions, also, are seen evidences of the business revival in St. Louis. All the great mercantile lines report far greater activity than was known in the last half of 1893, and in some of them the trade at present is fully as extended as as it has been in the average years at this time. Merchants generally in none of the more important branches of trade have any cause any longer to complain of lack of patronage, and they are not complaining."

Ruined Wool Growers.

It makes precious little difference to the farmers of Ohio what E. P. Brooks, or any other good Republican, has to say about free wool ruining the farmers; the fact that wool is steadily advancing in price, is not lost sight of by any means. In this case we get the theory and the condition also, and the Democratic condition seems better for the farmers than the Republican theory. This is tariff reform.—Pomeroy (Ohio) Democrat.

Democratic Prices.

O. P. Nicholson writes to the New York World that he has just purchased some underclothing exactly $2 less than the same identical goods cost him one year ago. He wants to know whether "the foreigner who pays the tax" does not owe him $2 on his last year's garments or whether he owes the foreigner $2 on his latest purchase. This is a problem that should be referred to the "American Protective Tariff League."

The Business Revival.

AND now let our Republican friends quit whining and join the rest of the country in getting down to business.—Rochester Herald.

THROUGHOUT the South the feeling of confidence in a returning prosperity is manifested. The turn of the long lane has been reached.—Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

THE Democratic party agreed to repeal the McKinley bill. That enactment is off the statute book and a fairer law takes its place. Now watch the rising tide of prosperity.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THE new tariff has already been indorsed by the country. The general rise in values since it passed has been rarely equaled in the same length of time in the history of the country. It looks like we are on the threshold of better times.—Florida Times-Union.

DO NOT forget that hundreds of shops and mills were closed up under the McKinley law, throwing thousands of men out of work, and that these same shops and mills are being reopened under the new tariff law.—St. Paul Globe.

THE sacredness of McKinleyism is forever shattered. The tendency to higher duties is, we believe, permanently arrested. The country will learn that the McKinleyites are not the only people who can make tariffs.—Indianapolis News.

THE revival of trade will be followed by a revival of prosperity in the manufacturing centers. The surplus stock which was in the storehouses of the factories has been exhausted, and the mills must be started again to supply demand.—Brooklyn Eagle.

AS TO the lasting revival of the industries incident to the growth of the foreign trade which is expected to result from the new act, time will have to prove this claim. Certainly all the indications thus far are favorable to the conclusion that the country is entering upon an era of substantial business prosperity.—Baltimore Herald.

THERE can be no doubt that the present period is the beginning of a decided change in the tariff policy of the American people. It is the first step in the return to the position occupied by the nation now almost thirty years ago. There has been a long, a weary, and, at times, a discouraging effort to obtain it.—Boston Herald.

IN every part of the country there seems to be a revival of business interests, if not of great proportions, still a movement upward, with brighter prospects. The rush to withdraw goods from the custom-houses is an implication of increased activity in manufacturing and trade interests that will command attention.—Hartford Times.

FOUR years McKinleyism has lived—four years in which the country has been driven rapidly down into the lowest depths of the valley of commercial depression. Now there is an end of it. McKinleyism goes to take its place among the great mistakes, the cruel mistakes of history. The new order of things begins.—Boston Post.

The Lady and the Tiger.

Not long ago a Brockton, Me., man received his monthly pay envelope containing $125. This should have gone to lift a mortgage on his home, but it didn't, for instead of going home to his spouse the man went to Boston and lost it all in a faro game. Then he got beastly drunk and went home. When he sobered up enough to tell his wife what had happened she started for Boston. Getting her bearings, she struck out for the faro den, and finally secured admittance to the innermost den of the tiger. Once here she made things so hot for the proprietors that three days later they gladly settled with her for $300. The man will play no more faro, the mortgage is lifted, and it has been demonstrated that the tiger is no match for the lady.

Her Revenge.

"Father," she said in a voice that was full of tremulous reproach, "you have allowed Hector to pursue James Gimpington clear to the outer fence."

"I have," said the gentleman grimly.

"And you have urged him to nibble the attire of young Henry Gaggles."

"No doubt of it," and the reply was accompanied by a heartless smile, says the Detroit Free Press.

"All these are only instances of a long series of such events. Am I to expect this treatment?"

"Certainly; until I have decided upon your future husband."

"Then," she muttered, while a gleam of triumph shot from her eyes, "I know my course."

"What, girl, will you do?"

"I will encourage the attentions of the chief dog catcher!"

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, OF ROXBURY, MASS.,

Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston. Send postal card for book.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the right quantity is taken.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it. Read the label.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Sold by all Druggists.

FEAST ON THE FISH.

BIRDS OF THE SEA COAST AND THEIR CURIOUS NESTS.

Fishhawks Obtain Their Entire Food Supply from the Water—An Unwritten Law Protects Them—Striking Peculiarities of Their Nests.

Habits of the Hawks.

People who visit the northern coast counties of New Jersey in summer are struck with the curious, bulky nests of the fish-haws, which are so common in that locality. These nests are about three feet across and about two feet deep, and are nothing more or less than a big heap of brush or dead branches. The hawks are protected in these counties by the impression that they bring good luck, so that no one would think of even so much as throwing a stone at one of the big birds, much less shoot at one.

There is no sign of spring so satisfactory to farmers along the coast as the coming of the fish-hawks. The coming and going of these birds is peculiar. You get up some morning in April and they are here. After their young are hatched and grown up it is October, and you get up some morning and find them gone. The same birds come back year after year, and they occupy the same nest, which always needs a bit of rebuilding and occupies the birds for a few weeks.

It is generally believed that there is a law protecting fish-hawks, but it is a mistake. There is an unwritten law and a well-obeyed one of custom. A boy is told that he must not disturb the birds, and he does not. The good treatment that the hawks have received has made them so tame that their nests are built in door yards and by the roadsides, and the naturally timid birds have no fear of mankind. The fish-hawk is found along many of the inland waters of the State, but it is impossible to get near them, and it is a rare thing to find a nest. They are the shyest of birds in these places.

Years ago the fisher folk along the coast used to think that if a fish-hawk built its nest on one's land it was an omen of good luck, and that success would certainly follow him in whatever pursuit he should undertake, and, although there is less of such feeling now, those who own property on which the hawks build welcome them in the spring as an old acquaintance and look anxiously for their coming as soon as the winter breaks.

Fish-hawks get their entire food supply from the water. Their eyes are so constructed that even at great heights they can see fish that swim near the surface, and then dive with lightning speed. The fish is caught in the claws and is taken to the nest of the bird before being eaten. The writer has seen a hawk make a mistake and catch a hard crab, and when the crab got both his big claws fairly at work on the tender part of the bird's legs there was somewhat of shaking and diving in the air to get rid of the crab, but it is not often they get fooled. It is generally all in their favor. A hawk will fly away with a big eel wriggling in its claws that a man could not hold thirty seconds with both hands.

FRIGHTFUL CORRUPTION.

New York's Police Have Levied Nearly $100,000,000 in Thirty Years.

An insight has been gained through the Lexow Investigating Committee into the rottenness of the New York police department, but very few have an adequate idea of the immense amount of blood money that has been levied during the thirty years that this systematic thieving has been going on. Conservatively computed the total is stupendous and far exceeds any other official steal in the history of America. It is not far out of the way to place this gigantic steal at $100,000,000.

The "initiation fee" of disorderly houses was $500 and the monthly contribution $50. The present number of such places in New York is 4,500 and the average life of a house of this class under one proprietor is three years. Thus we have the "initiation fee" for 1,500 houses falling due each year and yielding a corruption fund of $750,000. The regular monthly payments on the 4,500 houses reach $600 a year for each or $2,700,000 for all, giving a total of $3,450,000 a year for disorderly houses.

The amount of money paid by green goods swindlers for police protection was about $33,000 a year, and gamblers paid a yearly tax of $72,000 for the privilege of plying their unholy calling. The price paid by merchants for blocking the sidewalks with their wares was $25 a year, and as there were 2,000 merchants who paid for the privilege the amount turned over to the police annually reached $50,000. The 500 peddlers of the city paid $3 a week or $78,000 a year, and from the 7,000 saloonkeepers $1,750,000 was taken for the privilege extended of violating the excise laws with impunity. At least 1,000 owners of stands, fruitstand-keepers and bootblacks encroached upon the public domain to an extent which the police thought justified an assessment of $25 each, making $25,000 a year.

We have thus reached the enormous sum of $5,500,000 a year, scooped in by the police to fatten the higher criminals who managed the city's affairs.

But this system of corruption has been going on for thirty years. Assuming that thirty years ago the blackmail amounted to only 10 per cent. of what it did last year and that its growth since then has been uniform we would have the amazing total during the period of nearly $100,000,000, or to be exact $97,580,000.

This sum is larger than the bonded debt of all the Western States; the bonded debt of New York alone equals this great figure. And this sum represents what the police of New York have demanded and received as bribes to induce them to break their oaths of office and prey upon instead of protect the city.

DOESN'T BELIEVE IN MICROBES.

An Old Yankee Who Sticks to Sulphur, Molasses and Cider.

The New York Mail and Express Rambler has an old friend in Boston of the name of Jeremiah Nason, who has a fund of quaint philosophy concerning the habits of sheep and men. He lived for many years near Dedham, and is an authority on wool growing and on the weather signs indicating when it is proper to make changes in clothing and to "physic the system."

"I am seventy-two years of age," he used to say, "hale and hearty, and could drive a stage coach to-day as well as I did fifty years ago, if there was only one of 'em to drive. Why am I healthy? Sho! Every spring I take sulphur and molasses for three days. I lay most of my health to that. Never drank any kind of liquor, except now and again a little hard cider, and cider, let me tell you, is a great thing for the stomach. Besides, I never took off my winter clothes until after the 'sheep storm,' and then I never was much of a one to worry. That's what eats a man up—worry. If he wants a lot and can't get it and he goes out into the cold with his pores all open he's just likely to catch a cold and die, but if he will just trust to the good Lord, eat breakfast at daylight, put in a good, honest day's work and go to bed at 10 o'clock with an easy conscience he'll live out the full span.

"I'm no believer in these new-fangled ideas about microbes and the like. I've never seen any of 'em. Why, the way doctors talk you'd think we couldn't eat anything that's safe. Microbes in milk to give you consumption; microbes in water to give you fever; microbes in pork to give you a disease called trickey something or other; microbes in the air to give you small-pox. Well, I want to know! What in the name of common sense and General Jackson are we to eat anyway? I reckon my plan is the best. My children and grandchildren are brought up that way. The only bad habit I have," and the old gentleman carefully pulled a silver snuff box from his pocket, "is taking a pinch of this half a dozen times a day. It's mighty comfortin'."

Press Censorship in Turkey.

The excessive censorship of the press exercised in Turkey is very well illustrated by the recent earthquake in Constantinople. The news was suppressed in every possible way and private telegrams were subjected to even more than the usual rigid scrutiny. A letter received in New York from Syria under date of July 16 says:

"I wish we knew one-half as much as you do about the state of Constantinople. We heard on the 11th that there had been an earthquake there, and up to this time we have had no definite, reliable news. All sorts of rumors are afloat. Reported loss of life is from fifty souls up to 15,000. The fact is that no telegrams are allowed. The wali (governor), it is said, has sent twenty or more telegrams asking for news, but has not received a single reply. Something has happened and that is about all we know."

Theodore Hook.

The fact is that during the twenties and thirties, the years of Hook's fame and fortune, the country was very badly off for novelists, and especially for novelists of modern and contemporary life. Nearly all Scott's best were written, and Miss Austen had ceased to write when Hook began; Dickens had but just appeared, and Bulwer not long, when Hook died. Scott's line was different, Miss Austen had made no school, and though novels were being written in ever-increasing numbers, their writers were for the most part all abroad in the novel proper. They could not get out of the tradition of Fielding and Smollett, itself a survival of the picaresque romance.

Although the life of their heroes and heroines was supposed to be modern and actual, it had to be spiced with adventures and adjusted to a sort of Odyssey, comic or tragic, as the case might be, watered with the tears of sensibility or roused by the guffaws of broad farce. Except Miss Austen, nobody had yet dared with conspicuous genius and success to depict purely ordinary life.

Hook, for all his talent, all his facility, all his experience of the world, was certainly not the man to strike out the new line.

It is perfectly obvious, not merely from his carelessness of style and story, but from consideration of the life he led, that he must almost always have written in a scrambling hurry. He was, in fact, a born improvisatore, and I should imagine that at the "Sayings and Doings" cost him very little more labor or, in proportion, more time than the famous impromptu comediettas which he used to throw off at rich men's dinners by way of payment for the claret and retainer for a further invitation. —Macmillen's Magazine.

The Gold Sweaters.

A startling discovery was made in the Sub-Treasury this morning, and as a result all people are warned against the $20 gold piece, as the "sweater" is in town says the Cincinnati Times Star.

Cashier Stout received a sack containing $5,000 in gold coin from a Bank on Third Street. As usual he weighed each piece before accepting it and found five double eagles each a dollar short. Careful examination shows that they had all been remilled.

Remilling gold coin is the latest trick of the men who find counterfeiting too dangerous. They go to a large city and deposit a sum of money in bank and a few days later draw it out in $20 gold pieces. These they put into a lathe and trim off the milling, which they carefully put on again, gaining at least a dollar's worth of gold in the operation. As the coin is not mutilated, but only slightly reduced in diameter, the coins are readily passed on the stores and in market, where money is not weighed when received.

The wife of the "sweater" makes trifling purchases at the stores with them, and the good money received in exchange is rebanked and drawn out in gold again. Thus the capital is kept turning over at a lively rate, constantly growing, at a slight risk of detection.

A diligent "sweater" can clear from $50 to $75 a day easily. These are the first indications that Cincinnati has been worked, but from now on all double eagles are under suspicion.

The Professor's Chickens.

This may not be new, but it was new to the reporter who overheard it on an East Providence car, Sunday, so it is likely that there are others who have never heard it. The young man who told it was evidently a collegian, as was his companion:

"I heard a good one on Professor ——, of Andover," he said.

"What was it?" queried the other.

"Well, you know, he was married during the winter and went to housekeeping just outside the village. This spring he thought he would add a few hens to his stock; he already had a dog. He set a couple of hens and in time had two large broods of chickens. He was very proud of them, but in a week or so the hens began to die. He called in a neighbor to look at the chickens and offer advice. They were certainly a pretty scaly lot of chickens that the neighbor viewed. They were skinny looking and apparently without ambition.

"'What do you feed them?' asked the neighbor, after a brief survey.

"'Feed them?' responded the professor, as though he didn't hear aright. 'Why I don't feed them anything. I thought the old hens had milk enough for them.'"

SCIATIC RHEUMATISM.

How a Prominent Kentuckian Suffered with It—His Cure a Marvelous One.

Few men in Kentucky are better known than Hon. John M. Rice, of Louisa, Lawrence County, late Circuit Judge of the Sixteenth Judicial District of Kentucky, and few men in that or any other State have passed through a more remarkable experience and live to tell the tale.

About six years ago he was attacked with sciatic rheumatism, which developed so fast that he soon lost all control of his legs. His whole system became deranged and he was indeed a physical wreck. The muscles of his limbs were reduced by atrophy to mere strings, and he felt that his life was gradually wearing away. Eminent physicians were consulted and all known means of relief employed without avail, and it indeed seemed as though Kentucky was to lose one of her most valued citizens.

It was at this time that Judge Rice first heard of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. He promptly applied them to his own case, and as a result he is to-day a well man. The effect of the Pills was marvelous. Judge Rice regained the power of his limbs, his appetite returned, and nature again performed her functions properly. The above case was investigated and vouched for by the Covington Post, and stands as one of the most remarkable cures known in the annals of medicine.

No discovery in medicine has created more discussion, both in medical circles and in the newspapers, than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The many remarkable stories that have been published of the cures effected by these pills have brought them into the greatest prominence both in this country and abroad. They have been analyzed by some of the most eminent chemists and it has been ascertained that they are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, that tired feeling resulting from nervous prostration; all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness.
